Mr. MAVERICK. If he was given a request of that kind, he was given an illegal request. No sheriff should pay any attention to an illegal request; and if he is asked to do something that is illegal, he should refuse to do it.

Mr. COLLINS. This man asked for protection so he might be escorted out of this area.

Mr. MAVERICK. No; I would not say the gentleman is not telling the truth, but the facts do not show that.

Mr. COLLINS. That is what the sheriff states, at any rate.

Mr. MAVERICK. That is not what any of the facts show in the case. This article tells the whole story of this California episode. I have no desire to embarrass any of my colleagues from California, and I do not think California is the worst State in the Union. I served there during the war. I think there has been violation of civil liberties in practically every State of the Union, and I am talking more about the psychological attitude than I am about particular facts anyhow. The facts in the Rorty case, however, are that he was illegally and against his will deported out of the State of California. I did not understand at first; I thought you meant someone else asked for Rorty's deportation. course, Rorty did not ask it.

The story is contained in the New York Post and in the other New York papers. In line with this I am going to mention something that was said the other day by a member of our Cabinet. Mr. Harold L. Ickes stated:

I think it disgraceful that recently Norman Thomas, the Socialist, was prohibited from speaking in Illinois by a tear-gas barrage thrown by police; and of all places, in Abraham Lincoln's home

In freedom of the press, freedom of speech, and free assemblage lies the safeguard of liberty.

Instead of spending excessively for the upkeep of large police forces and bigger and better courts, funds should be spent on the uplift of the people from the slums-

I have many clippings on this which show public opinion: and I think intelligent public opinion and the big majority of the press are exactly right about it. They oppose such gag laws. Let us try to be leaders for calm thought and intelligent action; let us stop this "red" scare.

There will, perhaps, come before this House various and sundry proposed statutes—which are gag laws—and I think this is in line with the same old "red" scare we had in 1920. Let me mention some of them. One of these bills goes on to define a Communist as a person believing in common ownership. Common ownership, for instance, would take in the Tennessee Valley Authority, and, of course, in some of these bills you could drive trucks through them and use them for any purpose you want, and if a man were in favor of the Tennessee Valley Authority he would be a Communist, and then, I am afraid, they would get the Honorable John RANKIN, of Mississippi, and he could not talk about Tupelo, Miss., or public ownership, any more, and they would even get the President of the United States and put him in prison.

Then there is a military bill, and this military bill makes it illegal to influence a soldier in almost any way, and I have an opinion on this subject. It is another bill through which you can drive a 10-ton truck and do anything you want with The bill sounds very patriotic, but it is bound to lead to grave abuses. Our Army and Navy have gotten along 150 years without such laws, and we do not need them now.

Some of these gag laws introduced seem to make it a felony to criticize the Government or any foreign government; at least it might be so construed, and this would also bring on the gravest of abuses.

If a man should come to this country, say from Germany, and complain of the way Hitler had treated him, it would be prison or deportation for him. If some Jew should come here and express an opinion against Hitler, he could be put in jail. If a rebel, a priest, a nun, or any political or religious refugee came from Mexico complaining of that country, it appears from the reading of the statute, that such person could be jailed and fined here for expressing hatred for, and a desire to overthrow, the Mexican Government.

Those are the things which appear to be suggested in these bills.

If the King of England should come here and advocate a monarchy, we would have to put him out, or in jail-or deport him. If Darwin were alive, and came here and attempted to talk about evolution—he would not have to go to Tennessee, but in New York he could be fixed up right there. If Charles Dickens, the great English author, should be alive and visit, and talk as he did on his visit here, it would be jail or deportation.

I have got the laws here, but I am not going to read them for it is too tiresome. I refer to a reading of these lawswe have plenty of laws.

Now, if we have able officers, able generals, able admirals, who have courage and intelligence enough, they can control the Army of the United States and the Navy of the United States. It has been done up until this time. They are not supposed to be a bunch of sissies coming to Congress and begging for the enactment of laws to tell them how to run the Army or execute its discipline. If they do not trust their men, and are afraid of them, it is an indication of lack of ability to command troops.

We have the postal laws making it a felony to send out information which will lead a person to violate the law and the postmaster can stop almost anything he wants.

If the Army and Navy are worrying about Communist literature being sent through the mail, they can stop it through the Postmaster General and send people to the penitentiary and fine them a few thousand dollars. Personally, even if it is true that soldiers and sailors are receiving Communist literature, it will have no effect on them. But, in any event, the military and naval forces have every protection on earth, and if we enact more legislation than is necessary and put into effect repressive measures, we pass control of the Government from a civil over to a military authority. This was obnoxious to the minds of our forefathers and is obnoxious to Americans today. Some of the military bills give all kinds of rights of search and seizure. I think these so-called "rights" are unconstitutional, and it is better not to enact them. If the law goes into effect, in any event, it would put a dangerous power in the hands of the military, which they might use indirectly to persecute whom they pleased among the civilians. According to the war-time interpretation of various military statutes, it was not necessary to show any effect on the persons affectedin this case, soldiers. It was not even necessary to show that a publisher actually sent the so-called "improper mail", and such statements that soldiers were being mistreated, not fed, nor getting proper medical attention were held to be in violation of the law.

In other words, when we enact laws of this kind it leads to all kinds of excesses and abuses and, inasmuch as we have enough laws now, it is better not to enact any more. We have had the same old treason laws for 150 years, and treason is still punishable by death.

All these statutes are written in such a way as to put the person opposing them in an embarrassing position, because the bills are couched in most bizarre language, mentioning assassination and murder, overthrow of government by force, and so on. But excesses will be committed under them. Such laws have been enacted before, the first being the alien and sedition acts, in the early days of our Republic. The excesses were so great they had to be repealed; but there are enough laws on the statute books now to save this country.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAVERICK. Yes.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Is it not a fact that we hear broadcast over the radio that those who believe in an oldage pension and unemployment insurance, as well as those who believe that the Government should purchase the public utilities, are advocating a brand of communism?

Mr. MAVERICK. Of course. They are branded as Communists, but when a man is a Communist one day, he may be something different later on. Governments change; that is what liberty is for. It is not what a man is called. Patriots are often branded by opprobrious names.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAVERICK. I shall yield only on the subject of the freedom of speech. If it involves freedom of speech I yield to the gentleman.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, I decline to be interrupted further on the freedom of my time. I am glad for all persons to have freedom of speech, but not on my time. [Laughter.]

The subject I have talked about today is in my opinion the most serious thing that we have before us. How much serious, fundamental legislation have we passed during this session of Congress? It is easy enough to talk about these 24,500 Communists, which constitute two in every 10,000 population, but what about the 3,000 people out of every 10,000 that constitute the families of the unemployed, and what about all the various sections of our population? I do not mind differing on how this question is to be handled. I do not care what gentlemen on this side—the Democratic—say; and I do not care what they say on the other—the Republican—side—insofar as the subject of freedom of speech is concerned; but I believe that we should not pass these repressive and gag statutes which, however nicely they are couched in language, prohibit the freedom of speech in general. Likewise, let us remember that this is not a military nation and that the Army is not supreme; we have given the Army and Navy protection enough and money enough to run their organizations efficiently and let us tell these officers of the Army and Navy to attend to their own business and to go back and maintain discipline. If we pass any statutes at all on that subject, let us pass statutes to protect labor and the people of this country in organizing for their own rights. Let us stop police brutality, deportations, and illegal actions by officers. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman may be extended for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. In order that I may relate a brief incident that will be a contribution, I think, to his speech.

Mr. MAVERICK. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. The best thing I ever heard in my life, and the most helpful thing with relation to communism and the freedom of speech, was related to me by a friend in Colorado, who is a very able civil engineer and a very conservative man. He said that at one time when in Seattle he went down to the water front, where there is a section of 2 or 3 blocks-and I have been in that section myself—given up to "soap boxers." While strolling along he stopped in front of one of these men on a box who was tearing down the Government and destroying the Constitution. A big Irish cop was standing by. Of course, if there was a cop standing by, he was an Irishman and he was big. In the excitement of listening to what this fellow had to say, uninterrupted by the officer, my friend ran up and grabbed the officer by the arm and said, "Officer, are you standing here listening to such disloyal, anarchistic stuff as that?" He said the big cop looked down at him with a forbearing smile, tapped him on the shoulder, and said, "Get a box, me boy, get a box." [Laughter.]

Mr. MAVERICK. My friend the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] just gave me a clipping to read, and it shows that the gentleman from Pennsylvania and I agree on this subject of the freedom of speech, at least. This is a quotation from Woodrow Wilson which I read:

Woodrow Wilson: "If there is one thing we love more than another in the United States, it is that every man should have the privilege, unmolested and uncriticized, to utter the real convictions of his mind. I believe that the weakness of the American character is that there are no growlers and kickers among us. We have forgotten the very principle of our origin if we have forgotten how to object, how to resist, how to agitate, how to pull down and build up, even to the extent of revolutionary practices, if it be necessary to readjust matters."

[Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, there is little more than can be said on this subject. Although I have not gone into all the statutory details, I have presented the main idea and some of the recent facts concerning the violation of civil liberties. What I desire, I repeat, is to impress upon this House that our duty is to discuss freely and to enact fundamental legislation. It is very necessary that we do fundamental things for the restoration of world trade, for agriculture, for the rejuvenation of business and, in general, putting 11,000,000 men back to work. If we begin to enact hysterical legislation, hunting "reds", and talking about war, we give too much free advertising to the "reds", and talk too much about things which might endanger our international relations. So let me urge again that we always maintain the freedom of speech and press, and the liberty of conscience and religion. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer for printing in the RECORD a few editorials:

[From the Washington Post, Monday, Mar. 4, 1935] COMMUNISM AND JITTERS

From Moscow comes word that the Communist Party is defi-nitely ascending in the United States. In the opinion of the New York correspondent of the official Soviet newspaper, Pravda, the revolutionary party during the past year has succeeded in making substantial advances into the ranks of American workers, particular gains being noted in Negro neighborhoods. The dispatch further indicates that the party has taken the leadership along a broad front in a fight for social insurance and that its ideas are now considered sober and its method practical by the broad masses. The popular fear of the "red" has disappeared, the article concludes Except for the conclusions, this round-about news fibes in some measure with the mounting outcry, particularly legislative, heard daily in this country. The correspondent erred, however, in reporting that the popular fear of the "red" is subsiding. As a matter of fact, the reaction toward communism tends more toward the hysterical.

In these circumstances, it is refreshing to hear the calm words of Representative Maverick, of Texas. Speaking in Congress the other day, he declared that no extraordinary legislation is required, as certain of his colleagues are demanding. The American people have a case of jitters, he said, pointing out that there are only 24,500 Communists in the country and they are all crackpots. Specific assertions that Communist influences are penetrating Specific assertions that Communist influences are penetrating the Army and Navy may not be too blandly dismissed, however. Revolt and sedition in defense lines is a serious business under any circumstances. But certainly hysterical legislation would only add to the danger, if any. A little less drill and a little more attention to teaching buck privates citizenship and history might be the best insurance. Failing this, the guardhouse or kitchen police cannot yet be defunct items of military organization.

In the New York Herald Tribune on March 2, 1935, there appears an editorial entitled "Through Red Spectacles." It explains that the Moscow correspondent is given a report of the advance of communism, especially among the Negroes.

Then the editorial says, "This is very interesting for several reasons, but it is impossible to find it very disturbing."

In the New York Times on the same day it mentions a congressional committee discovering propaganda by American Communists being distributed in tracts in the Army and Navy. The editorial goes on to say the Russians think that the United States is just about to fall before the "red" revolution.

The editorial comments:

This is what comes of overdoing it in the news at home and immensely exaggerating it in foreign reports. To the authorities—Federal, State, and municipal—familiar with the actual status of the agitation and the numbers engaged in it the peril seems almost nonexistent. It is true that a good deal of seditious literature is printed and scattered about where it is thought it will do the most harm. It is also true that some hotherds and scattering are harm. It is also true that some hotheads and scatterbrains are talking glibly, though guardedly, about an impending revolution in this country. But no outburst that the police alone are not able to cope with is in the slightest degree likely to occur anywhere.

In our case also sedition, whether red or any other color, should be punished according to the terms of the law. But it is a thing to go about coolly. We should not give the agitators and incendiaries the satisfaction of knowing that their goings on can even momen-tarily frighten us out of our seven senses.

The following is a portion of a telegraphic article wired the New York Post of Tuesday, March 5, 1935, by James Rorty from San Antonio, Tex., entitled "Imperial Valley Labor Reduced to Peonage; Glassford Declares":

General Glassford went into the Imperial Valley in April 1934 as special conciliator, representing the United States Department of Labor, the United States Department of Agriculture, and the National Labor Board. At the conclusion of his investigation, in a report signed at Brawley, Calif., 14 miles north of El Centro, on June 13, 1934, he wrote:

"After more than 2 months of observation and investigation in Imperial Valley, it is my conviction that a group of growers have exploited a Communist hysteria for the advancement of their own interests; that they have welcomed labor agitation, which they could brand as "red", as a means of sustaining supremacy by mob rule, thereby preserving what is so essential to their profits—cheap labor; that they have succeeded in drawing into their conspiracy certain county officials who have become the principal tools of their machine."

Coming from a former Army officer of high rank and a representative of the Federal Government, this is strong language. Back of it lies the personal experience of General Glassford and his secretary, now Mrs. Glassford, during their 2 months' stay in the valley. Their telephone line was tapped.

They had reason to believe that the confidence that is supposed surround telegraphic communications by Western Union and to surround telegraphic communications by Western Union and Postal Telegraph was violated.

During their brief stay in the valley they lived surrounded by an atmosphere of fear and of espionage. Few persons would talk; those who did insisted that they be not quoted. Those who wrote rarely signed their communications. Mrs. Glassford told me that only after they had left the valley did she feel able to draw a free breath—this from the assistant of a special investigator, acting with the full authority of the Federal Government.

[Editorial from the Baltimore Sun, Mar. 4, 1935] A MAVERICK, FO' SHO'!

A MAVERICK, FO' SHO'!

That an effort is being made to dragoon the Army and Navy into the current "red" hunt is proved by the fact that high officials have urged the House Military Subcommittee to take prompt steps to save American doughboys and gobs from communism. Secretary Swanson declared that "existing law is inadequate to control it."

But evidence that at least one member of the full House Military Committee is not taking orders from the "red" hunt generals is shown by the prompt statement of Representative Maurx Maverick, Texas Democrat, who "ridiculed suggestions that corrective legislation was necessary because, he said, the American people are getting jittery over nothing." After listening to "red" scare statements endorsed by Brig. Gen. Harry E. Knight and others, Representative Maverick remarked that there are only 24,500 Communists in the country, and "they are all crackpots", adding:

"If the colonels and generals had tact, courage, loyalty, and brains enough they would keep the soldiers from disloyalty."

Obviously this Texas Maverick's background is worth looking into. Is he just out of Russia? Is he a cringing pacifist? Well, as it happens, the biographical notes of the latest Congressional Directory reveal that he was born in San Antonio, was educated in Texas and Virginia, served in France as a company commander, Twenty-eight Infantry, First Regular Division, was badly wounded October 4, 1918, cited for "gallantry in action and extremely meritorious service." Silver Star, Purple Heart, etc., etc., etc.

One is hardly surprised, then, to discover that he is the grandson of old Samuel Maverick, Texas patriot, signer of the Texas Declaration of Independence, a cattleman whose rambunctious yearlings wore no man's brand, and hence gave rise to the term "maverick" (see any good dictionary), meaning, in latter-day parlance, a "sho' nuff independent."

The SPEAKER. Under a special order the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Doughton] is recognized for 30 minutes. Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to extend my remarks in the RECORD. The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Also, I ask that I be not interrupted until I have completed my main statement, after which, if I have time, I shall be very glad to yield to any questions.

Several days ago I said I would reply to some of the wild statements that have been made in the last 2 or 3 weeks by my colleague and friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] regarding the trade agreements of the present administration under the 1934 Tariff Act. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] on day before yesterday, I believe, referred to the 1934 Tariff Act, authorizing the President of the United States, under certain conditions, to negotiate trade agreements with foreign countries as in iniquity. I believe as it appeared in the RECORD it appeared as "in equity", but I think the gentleman meant to say and did say "iniquity." I would say in that respect that if the Tariff Act of 1934 is an iniquity, the Smoot-Hawley-Grundy Tariff Act is an abomination that has produced more desolation and more ruination and more economic damnation than any act that has ever been placed on the statute books of the United States.

The penetrating mind and prophetic vision of my good friend as to what may occur in the future is far superior to his memory as to what has occurred in the past under the Smoot-Hawley tariff law.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HARLAN] has, in my estimation, ably answered the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] relative to this matter. I have such a strong feeling, however, in relation to the reciprocal tariff measure that I desire to express a few observations on this subject and to further answer the gentleman from Massachusetts. Anything I may say in favor of the program, of course, will be in answer to the gentleman from Massachusetts, because he apparently opposes every phase of this program, even though his own State is in a position to benefit in exports to Cuba, Brazil, and Belgium as a result of the trade agreements with those countries.

I wish to begin my observations upon the tariff-bargaining program by repeating some statements I made nearly a year ago when the bill was before the House. The events since the passage of the act convince me that my summary of the program was substantially correct. I wish now to first repeat those observations with some minor changes.

OBJECTIVES OF THE TARIFF-BARGAINING PROGRAM

First. To round out the recovery program. This act merely gives the President the authority in foreign trade which the Congress had already vested in him in domestic commerce and trade. The recovery program cannot be fully effective without the execution of the authority granted to the President in the Trade Agreements Act.

Second. To reopen the markets of the world to the products of American farms and factories, or otherwise face the prospect of adopting as permanent the policy of curtailing acreage and of reducing manufacturing capacity in many of our most efficient industries.

Third. To exchange the surpluses which we have built up for surpluses which other countries have accumulated of commodities which we do not produce in sufficient quantity to keep our industries going. Until channels of trade are developed so that these surpluses can move, normal recovery in America cannot take place.

Fourth. To plan our commerce and industry so as to direct our labor and resources into the most profitable channels conducive to American standards of living and efficient and effective production.

Fifth. To provide for the intelligent and enlightened application of the protective principle whereby the maximum opportunity of employment and production may be assured to our industries, large and small alike, as well as to agriculture.

Sixth. To provide for mitigation of those irritating restrictions contained in the Hawley-Smoot-Grundy Tariff Act which have antagonized the rest of the world to our serious injury.

Seventh. To support the President in the only effective method for meeting the current international trade situation. Almost all important commercial powers are following such a program.

Almost all of the nations of the earth have granted their executives authority similar to that granted the Executive of the United States.

Only through reciprocity agreements can America participate in the commercial negotiations for the benefit of American agriculture and industry.

Eighth. To rejuvenate world trade which will increase the purchasing power of foreign countries as well as our own people and thereby provide greater opportunity for the sale of American agricultural and industrial products.

TRADE OF MASSACHUSETTS

Since the gentleman from Massachusetts is an extreme isolationist, I should like to call his attention to the dependence of his own State on foreign trade. I hold in my hand a card entitled "Who Says Isolation?":

[From poster by Massachusetts branch Women's International League for Peace and Freedom]

Materials, imported from: Canada, calfskins; Mexico, cochineal; Central America, cochineal, divi-divi; West Indies, mangrove; Argentina, heavy hides; South America, goat and sheep skins, divi-divi, mangrove; Newfoundland, cod oil; England, Glauber, Epsom salts; Scotland, linen thread; France, horsehide, calfskin; Belgium, flax; Netherlands, calfskin; Germany, Glauber, Epsom salts; Italy, sumac; Baltic shores, amber; South Africa, wattle bark; West Mediterranean, myrobalans; Africa, sandarak; eastern Europe, valonia; Persia, tragacanth; India, heavy hides; China, heavy hides, albumen; Dutch East Indies, buffalo hides; East Indies, gambier, mangrove; Australia, sheepskins, kangaroo; New Zealand, sheepskins.

Are sold to Canada, Mexico, Panama, Jamaica, Cuba, West Indies, Colombia, United Kingdom, Netherlands, China, Philippines. (National Council for Prevention of War, 532 Seventeenth Street, Washington, D. C.)

This card shows that some 20 or 25 materials which go into Massachusetts shoes come from 25 or 30 foreign countries; it further shows that Massachusetts shoes go to at least 11 countries throughout the world. Isolation indeed! It is true that a large percentage of the total production of shoes do not go abroad. Under the infamous tariff act sponsored by the gentleman's party and ably, but disastrously championed by him, that percentage has further dwindled and had it not been for a reversal in spirit toward foreign trade brought about by the Democratic administration, that trade would have all but vanished by now.

Let us look a bit more in detail at the importance of export trade to Massachusetts, the State probably more dependent than any other in the Union on foreign commerce, both imports and exports.

Before the depression during 1929, the value of exports from Masschusetts was $111,531,000. In 1932 the latest year for which export statistics by States are available, exports decreased to $32,256,000, or a loss of 71 percent. How many jobs would a gain of $75,000,000 or $30,000,000 furnish to wage earners in that State? How many workers would this export trade, were it redeemed, take off the streets and off relief rolls? How much happiness would this trade bring to many families of Massachusetts? Let those from that State now opposed to tariff bargaining and some other administrative measures make those calculations. They are responsible for those conditions to some extent.

In reply to the above questions, it may be suggested that in tariff bargaining, some industries of Massachusetts would be injured by imports as a result of concessions made to other countries; that has been the argument of the opposition all along the line. If perchance the revenue duty on coal, petroleum, or some other raw materials needed in Massachusetts were reduced for the benefit of enlarging export trade, how, it may be asked, does Massachusetts stand to lose? It would seem that such reductions in duty for which other countries are willing to make concessions would be a great aid to Massachusetts as well as other New England States. Why does the gentleman from Massachusetts assume that industries of his State are to lose in tariff bargaining? Does he admit that the rates are too high?

Let us look at some of the largest items of export trade from Massachusetts. Take leather, a product of the gentleman's district. In 1929, some $14,000,000 worth went out from that State. This was reduced to $5,000,000 in 1932. It so happens that leather is one of the items of export which has been increased to Cuba as a result of lower duties made by that country in the reciprocal trade agreement. Exports of machinery, rubber manufactures, safety-razor blades, paper and manufactures, and even lard have been increased since the signing of the Cuban agreement. These are all products exported from Massachusetts.

The gentleman may say there is no surplus of lard produced in Massachusetts; but, anyway, it goes through Massachusetts and is exported from the ports of Massachusetts, and thereby gives employment at least to some labor.

Submitted with my remarks is a table showing the value of the first 15 items of export, in order of importance, from Massachusetts. It will be noted that each of these 15 items amounted to more than a million dollars in 1929; only 5 of them exceeded a million dollars in 1932.

From the table it is seen that the decrease in exports of individual items, from 1929 to 1932, ranged from 57 percent to nearly 90 percent.

The falling off in exports under the Smoot-Hawley tariff law of goods produced by factories in the gentleman's own State amounted to 57 to 97 percent. This to me would cause any man in his position to think seriously of such a policy.

These figures indicate that many producers in Massachusetts will gain in a tariff-bargaining program which increases export trade.

Classification	1929	1932	Percent of de- crease (or in- crease) 1929-32
Total exports	$111, 531, 000	$32, 256, 000	71. 1
Leather Machinery Safety-razor blades Rubber and manufactures Paper and manufactures Other machinery, vehicles, and parts Cotton cloth, duck, and tire fabric Leather footwear Other electrical machinery and apparatus. Cotton mill waste. Other iron and steel manufactures Abrasives Lard Optical goods. Books, maps, pictures, etc.	5, 978, 000 5, 512, 000 4, 279, 000 4, 233, 000 3, 606, 000 3, 504, 000 2, 985, 000 2, 985, 000 2, 787, 000 2, 381, 000 1, 772, 000 1, 382, 000	5, 000, 000 3, 017, 000 875, 000 1, 691, 000 781, 000 781, 000 360, 000 820, 000 695, 000 574, 000 574, 000 574, 000	64.8 73.3 85.4 69.3 64.1 81.5 65.3 89.7 75.4 73.3 76.1 70.8 67.7 58.8

Official data.

A few typical newspaper excerpts from Massachusetts indicate that the people of that enlightened State do not share the opinion of some of its representatives in Congress, particularly those who continue to oppose the tariff bargaining program, in spite of its favorable reception and admitted benefits to the country.

The Courier Citizen, Lowell, Mass., after reciting the benefits that have already resulted from the treaty, says:

The advantage to our export trade is likely to exceed by far any loss that special industries may suffer. Benefits to our shipping are expected to be equally great.

The Boston Daily Globe, of Boston, Mass., states:

Nevertheless, it is heartening to learn that within the month elapsed since the new reciprocal treaty between the two countries went into operation its benefits have proved greater than the fondest champions of a new trade relationship expected. The figures tell the story with emphasis.

HOW TARIFF AGREEMENTS ARE MADE

A great deal of misinformation regarding the manner of negotiating the reciprocal tariff agreements is being disseminated. Some of it is willfully propagated with ulterior motives, and some of it is disseminated solely because of lack of complete knowledge of the situation.

There has been a great deal said about tariff agreements being made in star-chamber proceedings and in the dark. I will give you the history of how they are made, in order to correct such erroneous statements.

An example of apparently deliberate misstatement is that these agreements are concocted by the Department of State, in secret, with foreign countries, and then, when completed, perfunctorily shown to the Committee on Foreign Trade Agreements. The gentleman from Massachusetts has repeated this notion from time to time.

Nothing could be further from the fact. That is a pretty bold statement. In the first place, the Committee on Foreign Trade Agreements is composed of representatives not only of the Department of State but also of the Treasury, Agriculture, and Commerce Departments, the Tariff Commission, and of the office of the Special Adviser to the President on Foreign Trade. The representatives of a number of these departments or agencies on the committee are not fully in accord with the tariff program of the administration, and thus we can rest assured that all points of view are considered on each and every item involved in a trade agreement. What could be fairer than this?

In this committee, all questions relating to the agreements are fully discussed. When it is learned, through the usual diplomatic channels, that a foreign country wishes to enter into a reciprocal tariff agreement with the United States, formal notice of intention to negotiate such an agreement is given by the Department of State, to which the world can have access, so that everyone can have knowledge. At the same time, dates are set for the presentation of views by those interested in the commerce between the two countries to the Committee for Reciprocity Information, which has been set up for that purpose. A final date is set for the filing of briefs and another for a public hearing, which is usually a week later than the limit for filing briefs.

Meanwhile, a subcommittee, called a country committee, is formed to make a thorough and expert study of the trade between the United States and the country concerned. On this subcommittee, as on the parent committee, are representatives of the different departments. This committee uses all available material and examines with the utmost care all the briefs and testimony submitted to the Committee for Reciprocity Information. When the study, which requires weeks, has been completed, a report is made to the full committee. In the formulation of this country's case, the Department of Commerce suggests what concessions should be asked of the other country, and the Tariff Commission suggests what concessions can be made by us without injury to domestic industries. Thus, not only is the fullest opportunity given to everyone to be heard, but every aspect of the question is given most careful consideration by every department of the Government concerned.

While the United States is preparing its case, the other country is doing the same for itself according to its own methods. When both are ready, actual negotiations begin, and through these the final agreement is reached.

Nothing could be less captious and summary than the process of making these agreements. Notice this-instead of being framed hastily in the dark, they are the result of painstaking labors by experts with open minds who represent all parts of the Government.

In his discussion of the Cuban agreement (Record, p. 592, Jan. 17), the gentleman from Massachusetts spoke of potatoes as being on the losing end of the Cuban agreement. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. Brewster] whose State exported the greatest quantity of potatoes in recent history as a result of the Cuban agreement, also has waxed warmly and wrathfully against trade agreements, seemingly against increasing exports of potatoes from his own State.

The following excerpt from the Habana Post (Wednesday, Oct. 17, 1934) indicates how at least some Maine farmers felt about the agreement with Cuba:

MAINE FARMERS GET CUBAN TRADE-ISLAND BUYING MORE POTATOES FROM UNITED STATES, LESS FROM CANADA

Houlton, Maine, October 16 .- An unprecedented demand from Cuba for Maine potatoes brought encouragement today to the distressed planters in Aroostook County, Maine's vast potato

With their product bringing only 50 cents a barrel, less than the cost of raising, and 15 percent of the crop snowed under by last Friday's storm, the outlook heretofore this season has been gloomy indeed

But the central potato inspection office announced today that a Cuban tariff on Canadian potatoes and a prospective duty on American exports to become effective November I has resulted in a sudden demand for 80,000 sacks of Maine "spuds."

Sixty-two carloads are now being loaded on board a vessel at Searsport, and buyers now in the county have orders for 100 carloads more.

The rush of export business prompted Commissioner of Agriculture Frank P. Washburn to increase the size of the inspection staff here. Washburn said the demand was the outstanding export business for Aroostook County in the past few years, and expressed the hope that it might be retained under the new tariff arrangements.

Last year Cuba bought most of its potatoes in Canada. While the temporary advantage which American producers now enjoy as a result of the tariff on Canadian exports will be reduced after November 1, the duty on shipments from the United States is expected to be less than that on exports from the Dominion.

The gentleman from Maine will probably say that the reduced seasonal rates of duty on Cuban potatoes more than offset any benefit to be derived from Cuba's reductions. Tariff hogs, of course, are never satisfied.

Recent official dispatches state that there is little possibility of potatoes being exported from Cuba in any substantial quantities during 1935. The imports from Cuba in 1934 were not enough to supply the city of Washington with potatoes for one day—a mere pittance of 157,400 pounds. Those opposed to any liberality in trade are forever filling the roads full of ghosts which in reality are not seen.

HEARINGS ON TARIFF MAKING

The gentleman from Massachusetts states that interested parties appearing before the Committee for Reciprocity Information are having to "shoot in the dark" in presenting their views. They do not have to "shoot in the dark" any more than they do when they appear before the Ways and Means Committee before a tariff bill is introduced in the House.

I respectfully submit that everyone appearing before the Ways and Means Committee in 1928-29, before the Hawley-Smoot bill had been introduced into the House, had to "shoot in the dark", just as they do before the Committee for Reciprocity Information. In the hearings in 1928-29 they were preparing for Mr. Hoover's limited tariff revision. Limited to what, I ask the gentleman from Massachusetts? Limited to "everybody's feet in the trough!" That is the method the Republican Party applies in its frequent revision of tariffs, the grand old logrolling scheme where the largest contributors to the party campaign fund collect tariff graft in proportion, as was expressed by Mr. Grundy. This method is not now evident in making reciprocal tariff agreements. The opposition is bewailing the fact that such methods of tariff making are past, and we hope past forever, from the American legislative scene.

When questioned by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cochran] on February 5 on the floor of the House, the gentleman from Massachusetts evaded the issue as to recent methods of fixing tariffs by legislation. He knows full well that the committee works behind closed doors after the hearings until the bill reaches the floor. That does not prevent interested lobbyists from getting the ear of certain people. Their tactics are not working at present.

If some of the special interests have not received what they asked for or have been promised, the Halls of Congress swarm with lobbyists. They set about to see that they obtain tariff grafts in proportion to their campaign funds or ability to manufacture propaganda. This is really the matter that is hurting the gentleman from Massachusetts and those schooled in his tariff philosophy. They do not like to see the old tariff graft system pass away. It was too rich in political favoritism. The G. O. P. can no longer project itself into power through tariff lobbying under the present scheme. Thus we may expect to hear the continued lamentations and swan song of the gentleman from Massachusetts. He cannot become adjusted to the new order, and therefore spreads his discontent. He continues his campaign of fear from week to week. He does not seem to be interested in letting business settle down; he does not want business confidence as long as his party is not in power.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from North Carolina be extended 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. DOUGHTON. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway], who now seems so concerned about the rights of the representatives of the people to enact tariff levies, utterly disregarded the rights of the Members of the House during the consideration of the Hawley-Smoot-Grundy bill. Let us review the record in this respect and see what opportunity was afforded the representatives of the people to have a voice in the enactment of that bill. In all 19 hours and 6 minutes were given for the consideration of this bill, which contained 434 pages. The fact of record is that only 82 lines out of 10,681 contained in the bill were read under the 5-minute rule; of the 183 sections contained in the bill only a fraction of one of them was read and considered.

The tactics employed by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway] and his Republican colleagues on the Ways and Means Committee absolutely denied representation to the other Members of the House in the framing of the Hawley-Smoot-Grundy bill. In this connection let me quote what a distinguished ex-Member of the House from Maine, Mr. Beedy, a member of the gentleman's party, had to say during the consideration of this bill. Mr. Beedy stated:

The relation between the Ways and Means Committee and the Members of the House which exists now is something akin to that of the king and his subjects.

Of course, he had reference only to the Republican members of that committee. Just before he made this statement the same gentleman, who frequently manifested the spirit of a free man, said:

I want to suggest there are a good many farmers in New England who are apparently forgotten by the Ways and Means Committee.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] speaks of our allowing foreigners to dictate what rates of duty we shall levy on imports into this country, and speaks of the star-chamber methods of tariff making now being practiced, as he alleges, in the making of trade agreements. The gentleman from Massachusetts would have us return to the old logrolling method of enacting tariffs and to the star-chamber methods he and his party have employed in tariff legislation. Would the gentleman have us return to the practice of having the secretary of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association in attendance at the executive sessions of the committee, dictating the rates that should be levied? Does the gentleman want us to return to the method of tariff making whereby those seeking special privilege wrote in their own rates, with no regard whatever to what effect it would have on the consuming public?

Speaking of star-chamber methods, let us review the star-chamber methods employed by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway] and his colleagues on the Ways and Means Committee at the time the nefarious Hawley-Smoot-Grundy Act was being written. Under the steam-roller tactics resorted to by the gentleman from Massachusetts and the other Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee, the minority members were driven from the committee room while the bill was being framed, and then by a gag-rule process were not permitted even to offer an amendment during the consideration of the bill in the House.

Under the rule adopted, and under which the House considered the Hawley-Smoot-Grundy tariff bill framed in starchamber sessions above referred to, it was provided—

That the bill shall be considered for amendment under the 5-minute rule, but committee amendments to any part of the bill shall be in order at any time; that consideration of the bill for amendment shall continue until Tuesday, May 28, 1929, at 3 o'clock p. m., at which time the bill, with all amendments that shall have been adopted by the Committee of the Whole, shall be reported to the House, whereupon the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and all amendments to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

FALLACY OF SELF-CONTAINMENT

There has been so much said recently as to the importance of the home market and how we are independent of foreign countries, I wish to go into the fallacy of self-containment in some detail.

The gentleman from Massachusetts keeps harping on the home market as taking 90 percent of the production. A school child in the South realizes the fallacy of such a statement when applied to cotton. This is the doctrine of the self-contained school.

It is a common impression that the United States produces nearly everything that it requires and is thus very largely self-sufficient. Those opposed to the reciprocal tariff act are making much of this point. They are going to considerable pains to stress the self-containment doctrine—a defensive alibi for legislation the Republicans sponsored which has almost destroyed American foreign trade. They take the position that we have largely lost our export trade and that it was never important—not worth the attempt to regain through any method of tariff bargaining.

Furthermore, it has been suggested that we need to import few products; that we are so self-contained and that about the only product we really need to import during peace times is rubber. We are told that synthetic rubber is being made, of course, at a much higher price than the natural imported product, but that we shall soon be self-sufficient |

The fallacy of this doctrine is obvious to anyone who is capable of analyzing it. Those who take this position of self-sufficiency do not understand the fundamentals of trade between different regions, areas, sections, States, or nations. These bases of trade are the factors underlying the law of comparative costs-an economic law which the reciprocal tariff act takes into consideration, a law which the Republicans either cannot or will not understand.

It may be well to once more briefly review these fundamental bases of trade, in the hope that our friends on the other side may have a better understanding as to what we are attempting to do in carrying out this important measure. These elemental reasons for trade may be roughly divided into three categories.

1. DIFFERENCES IN RACIAL CHARACTERISTICS

Every race of people produces articles of its particular civilization. Massachusetts produces a number of excellent products desired by other countries; for example, boots and shoes, machinery, and electrical apparatus, and trade is thereby originated. Certain artistic goods of Italy, the brass articles of Chinese handicraft, and the carvings from India illustrate this point. The American Indians were producing articles characteristic of their civilization when they were discovered in the new world. Immediately, these articles served as a basis of trade between the white man and the redskin. It is not necessary to further stress this point. Examples will occur to anyone-even to Republicans-who reflect upon this basis of trade. The administration's tariff program aims to make such trade possible. It is foolish for the opposition to whine that trade of this nature will unbalance any domestic industry.

2. DIFFERENCES IN INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT

Since the first half of the nineteenth century, the differences in industrial development have been important factors in the development of foreign trade between nations, or between different sections of the same country. This basis of trade may be illustrated in the difference in the occupations of, say, a New England mechanic and a western herdsman. This difference is largely a matter of the density of population or difference in industrial development. The sparsely populated area calls upon nature or the extractive industries for a living, while the densely populated country must depend on the skill of its workers to add value to raw materials. The difference in industrial development is not always as clearly distinguished as between the New England worker and western rancher, or between the agricultural and the industrialized sections of a country.

Even between highly developed industrial countries there is a sort of international division of labor. For example, the United States imports considerable quantities of cotton cloth and also exports substantial amounts. These cotton cloths are largely of a different class or grade, the imports being of the finest countable cloths, the exports of the coarser grades. The United States also exports certain chemicals to Germany in spite of the fact that that country has a reputation of being one of the world's most efficient chemical producers. Many other examples of a similar nature could be cited. Much profitable trade has its origin in the differences and unequal industrial development of various countries. Those opposed to the present tariff program would further wreck this fast-vanishing trade.

3. DIFFERENCES IN NATURAL RESOURCES

The differences in natural resources are the most fundamental basis of trade. It is true that the other two bases. just mentioned, tend to equalize or even up over a period of time. Those who maintain that the United States is and should be self-contained must hold that this equalizing process has already taken place. They go further and claim that the differences in natural resources are not important. They would even rob us of our morning cup of coffee, or at least make us drink it without sugar, two important products upon these differences in natural resources. Within our own country we know that cotton will not grow in the Spring Wheat Belt, semitropical fruit will not thrive in New England, nor will the fine fur-bearing animals of Alaska flourish in the Southern States. This basis of commerce is frequently referred to as North-South trade. The difference in temperature, however, is only one phase of the differences in natural resources. Differences in rainfall, in the topography, fertility of the soil, nearness to bodies of water, and so on, play an important part in bringing about trade between areas, regions, sections, States, or nations,

Former President Hoover apparently had this kind of trade in mind when he said in his Boston speech of October 15, 1928-and I hope those on the other side of the House. who still see some hope in Mr. Hoover, may note well these Without continued interchange of tropical products with those of the Temperate Zone, whole sections of the world, including our own country, must stagnate and degenerate in civilization. We could country, must stagnate and degenerate in civilization. We could not run an automobile, we could not operate a dynamo, or use a telephone were we without imported raw materials from the Tropics. In fact, the whole structure of our advancing civilization would crumble and the great mass of mankind would travel back-ward if the foreign trade of the world were to cease.

Under our present depressed conditions, with the falling off of foreign trade, we admit that Mr. Hoover was somewhat of a prophet. We have been traveling backward. He apparently forgot his own prophecy, however, when later as President he signed the infamous Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, which we are attempting to correct in a perfectly logical and reasonable manner.

Let us once more examine some of the more necessary articles of import trade of the United States. During the World War the War Department found that it was necessary to import 30 commodities in substantial quantities in order to carry on war. That Department classified them as strategic products. Some were not produced in the United States at all; others were not produced in sufficient quantities even for peace-time purposes.

Some may ask why, if the Smoot-Hawley-Grundy Tariff Act is so nefarious and has produced such adverse effects, it is not repealed. Of course, everyone knows that foreign countries, copying our example, are beating us at our own game, and have erected trade barriers, embargo restrictions, and countervailing duties until now their rates in many instances are even higher than ours; and unless we can get them reduced by international agreements, we cannot lower our own exorbitant high tariff rates.

The 30 commodities classified by the War Department were antimony, camphor, chromium, coffee, cork, flaxseed, graphite, hemp, hides, iodide, jute, manganese, manila fiber, mica, nickel, nux vomica, opium, platinum, potassium salts, quicksilver, quinine, rubber, shellac, silk, sodium nitrate, sugar, tin, tungsten, vanadium, and wool.

All of these articles are necessary. They are articles of import, without which we could not possibly have carried on our part in the great World War.

Some of these articles are now produced in the United States in larger quantities than during the war, substitutes are manufactured for some of them, but substantial quantities of imports of most of these are still needed in our industrial and commercial life. Chromium, for example, is indispensable to the steel industry and to industries making firearms, airplanes, motor cars, cutlery, and others. Manganese is absolutely essential for the production of open-hearth steel. Nickel has many uses, hundreds of alloys being made from it. Tungsten is also required for steel, particularly tool steel. The steel industry, it has frequently been pointed out, imports in varying quantities no less than 40 commodities from some 57 different countries.

Raymond B. Fosdick, a well-known statesman, summed up the fallacy of the self-containment doctrine in the following succinct manner:

A country that could not make a locomotive, an automobile, or whose trade originates from differences in natural resources.

It is probably true that the trade of the world, owing to certain equalizing tendencies, must more and more depend

A country that could not make a focundative, an automobile, of an airplane without material from abroad can scarcely be called self-contained. A country that could not even carry on war without the aid of 30 essential commodities from other countries cannot boast of its national independence. By the same token, a country whose excess wheat and cotton are rotting in fields and storehouses because its foreign market has gone to pieces is not in position to talk in terms of Washington's Farewell Address.

What would have become of the South if our exports of cotton and tobacco were cut off? What would have become of the industries of New England and the industries of other sections of the country if the purchasing power of the South, made possible by the production and sale of cotton. had been cut off-as would be the case if we followed the nationalistic system and concluded we were self-containedand our foreign markets forever lost? It is not only the lifeblood of the South but essential to New England industries and to the industries in every section of this great country.

Mr. TREADWAY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. DOUGHTON. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. TREADWAY. The gentleman has asked me several questions in the course of his address, which I greatly enjoy listening to.

Mr. DOUGHTON. I am glad of that. Mr. TREADWAY. I would ask the gentleman when it is agreeable to him to have me reply to the numerous questions which he has asked me. I shall be glad to take those questions up at his convenience at a later date.

Mr. DOUGHTON. May I say in reply the gentleman did not consult me as to my convienience when he made his five or six speeches on the floor of the House. He knows that the courtesy of the Members of the House will grant him permission at any time to answer the speech made by myself or anyone else.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman be continued until he completes his speech.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. DOUGHTON. I thank my friend for his courtesy.

NECESSITY FOR FOREIGN MARKETS

Those advocating a self-contained United States argue that not more than 10 percent of our production is shipped abroad and that, therefore, we are 90 percent self-contained, implying that it will be only a matter of time until we shall be 100 percent. The gentleman from Massachusetts keeps reverting to this statement.

The use of this 10-percent general average for this purpose is fallacious. The vital organs of the body weigh less than 10 percent of the whole; could we gradually remove the heart, lungs, and so forth, and go on functioning as if nothing had happened? As a matter of fact, foreign markets are of vital importance to many basic American industries. A much greater percentage of the production is shipped abroad in many instances.

Cut off all our foreign trade and take that business from the manufacturers and producers in the United States, and you will find those people out of employment and they will be placed on the relief rolls. This would result if we lost our foreign markets. Imagine the misery, sorrow, and the destitution which would follow.

In 1929, for example, nearly 55 percent of our cotton, more than 40 percent of our tobacco, 33 percent of our lard, and about 18 percent of our wheat were exported. These relatively large percentages are not limited to agricultural products. More than 40 percent of the typewriters, 29 percent of the printing machinery, 28 percent of the sewing machines, 23 percent of the agricultural machinery, 21 percent of the locomotives, and 14 percent of the passenger automobiles were sent abroad in the same year.

In such lines of production as those noted above, and others, the loss of export trade is a matter of great concern. The administration has set about to correct this situation. The decline in the foreign demand for cotton, it has been reliably estimated, might readily make the difference between 16- and 6-cent cotton.

In other words, were we to lose our export trade in cotton, I doubt if it would sell for 6 cents a pound, and 6-cent cotton means devastation and ruination of the South, which would in turn be reflected in every part of the American Union.

It is a fundamental principle that the price of export surplus in some of the above lines may determine the price of the entire home product. Whether it is 10 percent or 50 percent of the production, the existence of the outlet may be the balance wheel or "margin of safety" for a nation's industries.

Those who point to our much-vaunted self-sufficiency base their ideas upon a fundamental misconception of the workings of industry. The large and thriving domestic markets generally depend upon foreign markets for a measure of their prosperity. To repeat, it is misleading to argue that since our export trade as a whole constitutes only 10 percent of the total trade, it is relatively unimportant. The effect of the change upon the fundamental conditions in each industry is the important point. A 10-percent loss of business does not indicate that the remaining 90 percent of the total trade is left in first-class condition: it usually means the opposite. The last 10 percent of production, in many lines, means the difference between a profit and a loss in the whole business.

The conclusion that the export trade of the United States, because it is no more than 10 percent of the total, is not justifiable. The Honorable Cordell Hull, while he was in the Senate, had the following to say regarding this fallacious

Whether or not you agree with Cordell Hull. Secretary of State, a former Member of this body and of the United States Senate, you all recognize his outstanding ability and his high and patriotic determination to better our present economic conditions.

No economic falsehood ever deceived as many credulous people as the stock phrase that America only exports about 10 percent of her production and that home consumption of the 90 percent completely controls our economic situation. In the first place, instead of all American industries exporting 10 percent each of their production, a few dozen of our greatest industries, on the prosperity of which the prosperity of the entire Nation absolutely depends, are obliged to export not 10 percent but a large proportion of their production. tion of their production.

If this fallacy of self-sufficiency had not received such wide-spread attention, sometimes falsely disseminated by propagandists, it would not be necessary to further labor the point, to show how essential it is for opening markets for our commodities produced in abundance; to make arrangements for receiving those products essential to our domestic economy-numerous products which would have little effect in unbalancing any domestic industry, a number used in the industries of Massachusetts.

The export figures do not tell the whole story about the interrelation of industries. For example, the conditions of the automobile industry are reflected in a number of other industries whose materials it purchases in large quantities. This industry consumes in its production, to mention only a few, 19 percent of the steel of the United States. and has largely accounted for the recent activity of that industry. The automobile industry uses about 68 percent of the alloy steel and varying percentages of other steel products, 55 percent of the malleable iron, 23.5 percent of the aluminum, 15 percent of the copper, 33 percent of the lead, 7 percent of the zinc, 11 percent of the tin, 24 percent of the nickel, about 7 percent of the cotton, 54 percent of the upholstery leather, 14 percent of the hardwood lumber, 40 percent of the plate glass, 73 percent of the rubber, and 85 percent of the gasoline produced in the United States.

If the conditions of the automobile industry, which furnishes employment directly or indirectly for some 4,000,000 people, could regain a substantial portion of the foreign market which took more than $500,000,000 worth in 1929, the effect on American industry in general is self-evident. In all the above industries, as well as in others, additional employment would result. It may be added that the automobile industry utilizes products from every State in the Union. Whatever retards this important industry affects numerous other industries. By the same logic any improvement in the conditions of such an industry has far-reaching effects in the industries noted above. Thus the fallacious notion that 10 percent of such an industry may be lopped off without evil effects becomes obvious.

We on this side of the House are just as anxious for our country to be self-sufficient as those on the other side if it can be done at a reasonable cost. During the past 10 or 12 years we have had to realize that our economy is inextricably interwoven with that of other countries. As has been said on other occasions, we are faced with a reality and not a theory, a reality which the Republicans have ignored during the past 10 or 12 years.

There is one other point brought up by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] on the floor on February 20 which I desire to comment upon. The gentleman belabors himself to show that there is no relationship between branch factories going abroad and the last Republican tariff. He has very obligingly placed in the RECORD (p. 234) of that date the number of branch factories moving into Canada for many years past. Of course, he could not see any connection between the fact that, in 1928, only 14 branch plants went into Canada and the greatly increased number which have been going into Canada since that time. For example, in 1929, 38 American branch plants located in Canada. It will be recalled that by the middle of 1929 the nature and extent of the tariff increases in the Hawley-Smoot Act were fairly well determined. Canada and other countries promised retaliation if the act should be passed in its 1929 form. This threat of retaliation drove American plants across the border. The number of plants going into Canada since 1929 has been more than twice as great as before the Tariff Act of 1930 was being considered and went into effect.

Of course, no one will expect the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway] to draw such a conclusion. Everyone else who has given any serious study to the problem realizes that a continued high-tariff system for the world, with the self-sufficiency doctrine, will drive American industries abroad. The gentleman's party must assume considerable responsibility in the world nationalistic drive. Instead of producing at home, using materials and employing domestic labor in the vicinity in which the plants are located, and exporting surpluses, large and ably financed United States industries will start a branch plant in other countries behind tariff walls. I do not here maintain that the tariff is the only reason that these industries have located in foreign countries. There are various other reasons, but the intense nationalism advocated by the gentleman from Massachusetts and his colleagues has been an important factor.

THE BELGIAN AGREEMENT

On March 4 the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway] dwelt in some detail on one side of the Belgian trade agreement. That is to be expected, since Republicans can only see one side of foreign trade. The value of the exports on which we obtained concessions from Belgium amounted to more than $16,000,000 in 1933, or about one-third of our exports to that country. We granted them concessions on imports amounting to less than $6,000,000, or one-fourth of the imports from that source for the same year. Of course, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway] can see no good in any trade agreement whatever, even if the United States gains two or three times as much as the other country involved.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway] went into a rage about the comparatively small reduction made in the duty on cement. The reduction in the Belgian agreement was from 6 to 4.5 cents per 100 pounds. Even in time of free trade in cement—that is, before the Tariff Act of 1930, imports were insignificant. Imports of cement do not ordinarily go beyond trucking distance from the port of importation under any conditions.

The people of this country will long remember the predicament in which they found themselves after 12 years of control of these carping critics who are doing everything possible to defeat the new-deal policies of the present administration.

They will not lose sight of the distress, suffering, and misery caused by the Smoot-Hawley-Grundy tariff law, and other policies adopted during the reign of special privileges.

In retrospect, let us visualize, lest we forget, the situation that existed in America on March 4, 1933, the day that President Roosevelt assumed the duties of the Presidency. At that time the economic barometer of the country registered the lowest mark in all our history. It was the zero hour in the life of the Nation. The financial system had collapsed, credit had been destroyed, industry had become paralyzed, agriculture had reached the brink of bankruptcy, and the farmers were in the depths of despair and were being forced to dispose of the fruits of their toil at ruinous prices. Millions of farmers had lost their homes, through no fault of their own, as a result of tax sales and mortgage foreclosures. Fifteen million working people were out of employment and unable to procure support for themselves and their dependents, making an army of around 45,000,000 needy and suffering people, with all the evils attending such conditions. Actual starvation stared many in the face and terror had seized the public mind.

Conditions were so serious that many of the States had already closed all State banks by official mandate and those that were not closed, had lost, or were rapidly losing, the confidence of the public. Old financial institutions that had weathered all previous storms were headed for ruin at a velocity that bewildered the mind and staggered the imagination. All lines of business were at the lowest ebb in the history of the Republic. The old order had failed utterly. The attempt to restore prosperity by dumping millions of dollars into failing banks, in which people had no confidence, defunct corporations, and big business generally had completely failed.

The last 2 years of the Hoover administration will go down in history as the darkest and most devastating period of American life.

It appears to me that those who were responsible, or who were in control, when these perilous times were brought upon the country could well afford to refrain from so much criticism, at least until the policies being tried, or that will be tried, to restore or rescue the country from the awful plight in which they left it, can be tried out.

Former President Hoover has more adequately defined the conditions which the present administration inherited from its predecessor than any other person. In his Cleveland, Ohio, speech in 1930, he referred to these conditions as an "economic pestilence", and in his speech of acceptance in 1932, as an "unparalleled calamity in the history of our Nation."

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway] stated in his speech this week, referring to the debate he had with the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Harlan] that he would endeavor to have the last word on the subject. I do not blame the gentleman from Massachusetts for this, as his speeches are so barren of facts and so pregnant with errors and misstatements that he must continue to explain and defend the best he can in support of a weak case.

Truth once stated, stands of its own strength, but deception and error must continuously be buttressed.

I shall not leave the work of my committee and my other important duties to take the time of the House every 2 or 3 days, or each week, in defense of the reciprocal tariff act of 1934, or the policies of the present administration. However, I felt that inasmuch as I introduced this bill in the House I should give some attention to the attacks made upon it.

As to what may be the effect of the 1934 act is a matter of opinion and guesswork, but the disastrous results following the 1930 Smoot-Hawley-Grundy Tariff Act is a matter of knowledge that will not fade out of the minds of the American people for many generations.

In spite of the almost daily outpourings of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway] and other vocal opposition, the administration has taken a step forward in carrying out the basic objectives of a new foreign trade policy, as expressed in the Reciprocal Tariff Act.

I desire to end my remarks by quoting part of the message of the President in submitting the tariff legislation to the Congress. He said, in part:

You and I know that the world does not stand still; that trade movements and relations once interrupted can, with the utmost difficulty, be restored; that even in tranquil and prosperous times difficulty, be restored; that even in tranquil and prosperous times there is a constant shifting of trade channels. * * *

If the American Government is not in a position to make fair offers for fair opportunities, its trade will be superseded. If it is not in a position at a given moment rapidly to alter the terms on which it is willing to deal with other countries, it cannot adequately protect its trade against discriminations and against bargains injurious to its interest. Furthermore a promise to bargains injurious to its interest. Furthermore a promise to which prompt effect cannot be given is not an inducement which can pass current at par in commercial negotiations. * * * The exercise of the authority which I propose must be carefully weighed in the light of the latest information so as to give assurance that no sound and important American interest will be injuriously disturbed. The adjustment of our foreign trade relations must rest on the premise of undertaking to benefit and not to injure such interests. In a time of difficulty and unemployment such as this, the highest consideration of the position of the different branches of American production is required. * *

[Applause.]

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, following the reading of the Journal and the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, I may be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, Monday is going to be a busy day, I imagine. What does the gentleman want to talk about?

Mr. KNUTSON. I wish to speak on the state of the Union.

Mr. CULLEN. That is a broad subject.

Mr. KNUTSON. Well, this is a broad country.

Mr. CULLEN. If it is on the tariff, I have no objection.

Mr. KNUTSON. It will be on the tariff.

Mr. CULLEN. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

THE IRVING SCHAM PLAN FOR REEMPLOYMENT

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a short statement of a constituent of mine on a proposed plan of recovery. It just consists of a half page.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, of course, I am one of those who do not believe in clogging up the RECORD with a lot of immaterial stuff which does not give information to the Members of the House. If this has reference to a speech which the gentleman himself made, I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following short statement of a constituent of mine on a proposed plan of

The problem of putting America back to work nears a solution with the adoption of the following plan submitted herewith.

As there are approximately 5,000,000 men out of work at the present time who are solely dependent upon relief, I propose:

1. That every person receiving money through relief be classified according to profession, trade, or vocation.

2. That these unemployed persons be placed for 6 months (or a longer period, if necessary) at a job to which they are fitted; their salary to be determined by the N. R. A. wage existing in each respective territory and paid by the Government.

a. Only N. R. A. approved concerns are to receive extra help.

b. Regular employees must not be discharged unless a tangible

b. Regular employees must not be discharged unless a tangible reason exists.

3. That the present relief commission be placed in charge of classifying, and placing the unemployed in N. R. A. approved shops, business houses, etc.

Let'us take a specific case of both a manufacturing concern and a business house:

A man is placed in my shoe store. I do not need him to wait on trade, consequently, I keep him busy by dusting boxes, clean-ing up, and doing odd jobs.

Now, the existing condition that has come about putting everyone back to work has increased my business. At the end of 6 months, the Government, according to this plan, ceases paying this man. But, my business, having increased necessitates keeping this man to wait on trade. He is already an experienced shoe salesman from past employment. There is no alternative; I put this man to work this man to work

2. Now let us take the case of a manufacturer: In each locality each manufacturer will receive an allotted number of men according to the unemployment condition of the locality and determined by the commission set aside to classify those on relief.

It being absolute folly for a manufacturer to create an over-

It being absolute folly for a manufacturer to create an oversupply, he puts his Government-paid men to work doing the numerous odd jobs that can be done in any plant.

With the elapse of a short period of time an increased demand is created for his products, due to an inevitable increase in business conditions. With a flood of orders for his commodities, he uses his Government-paid men for the increased production that has been brought about by a marked gain in the business trend ss trend.

At the end of the allotted period the manufacturer will have regular place on the pay roll for every man placed in his emby the Government

With the adoption of this plan every newspaper and periodical in the United States would be eager to carry the screaming headlines: America Goes Back to Work.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman from Florida will not insist upon his request. This is Calendar Wednesday, and we hope to get on call, and we have now taken up 2 hours.

Mr. GREEN. I shall be pleased to ask for the 1 minute later on.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee is anxious to get the floor with some bills, and I think probably it would be well to allow the bills to come up as soon as possible.

Mr. GREEN. I shall withdraw the request and submit it

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 15 minutes following the remarks of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Forn] this afternoon.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. The gentleman means after the Committee on the Judiciary is through?

Mr. HOOK. Yes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I have no concern about that. Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I shall have to object. There are other committees on call.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the regular order. The SPEAKER. The regular order is recognition of the Commissioner from the Philippines [Mr. DELGADO] to address the House for 15 minutes.

Mr. DELGADO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay a welldeserved tribute to a typical American, a man who, in the comparatively short space of 40 years, has risen from a cabin to the Governor General's palace in Manila, and to testify to his contribution to the greatest task, the grandest task that a great and mighty Nation has ever undertaken for the benefit of a young and small but hopeful country.

I have no set speech prepared, although I have jotted down a few notes, because I should like to let the sentiments of my heart flow freely this afternoon. Therefore, I plead for your indulgence if there should be lack of coherence or lack of elegance in my expressions.

Mr. Speaker, I know I would not be representing the true feelings of the 14,000,000 souls whom I have the honor to represent here, were I not to preface my first effort in this, the greatest of all popular assemblies in the world, with a reiteration of the loyalty and gratefulness of the Filipino people to America and to you, gentlemen. [Applause.]

I can say with absolute certainty that this loyalty and devotion is inspired neither by fear nor by mercenary motives, but by that lofty feeling—one of God's greatest gifts to the human heart—the purest sense of gratitude for favors past and present. [Applause.]

Also, I wish to be permitted to digress for a few moments from my subject and indulge in some personal reminiscences so that I may the better illustrate why I feel that my first | words now should be devoted to what America has done for the Philippines and for me.

Mr. Speaker, it has been my privilege to be one of the first 100 students sent by the Philippine government to the United States, in 1903, upon the initiative of that illustrious American, Gov. William Howard Taft. I have gone through some of the finest schools and colleges here. I have worked as a common laborer in one of your tin-can factories, and I have sold scopes and pictures out in northern Ohio and southern Michigan, in that rich farming country, and I have a living witness in this very Congress of some of my activities of that time. I refer to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KNIFFIN], who still remembers how I worked on his kindly grandfather in the summer of 1907, to persuade him to buy a scope and a few pictures from me, so that I might further pursue my studies in this country. I am not ashamed of these humble incidents of my student days in this country; on the contrary, I am proud to say that the greatest of all lessons I have learned here from a stay of over 5 years as a student, was the experience I gained as a common laborer in a tin-can factory and as a peddler of scopes and stereopticon views. They are among the most cherished memories I have held down to this

So I feel that I have come to learn your likes and dislikes, have acquired from my association with you many good habits and some not so very good; but I am equally proud of each and every one of them. [Laughter and applause.]

Therefore it is most fitting, Mr. Speaker, that my first effort in this body should be one of thanksgiving and appreciation of what you have done for my country, for my people, and for me personally, because I yield to no one of my countrymen in attachment and devotion to this country, which I have regarded, now regard, and shall always regard as my second home, because of the many favors I have received here. [Applause.]

How can I more appropriately express that thankfulness for and appreciation of your benefactions than by telling you of the magnificent and able stewardship of your highest representative in the Philippines? First of all, he has translated into action your enactments, your desires, your orders, even your idealism in regard to the Philippines. In other words, he brought to our beautiful oriental isles the spirit of true Americanism as first enunciated in the policy laid down by McKinley and subsequently followed by all the Presidents of the United States and by all the Congresses, and which I know will be followed by this Congress and all future Congresses. [Applause.]

Governor Murphy has signally succeeded in bringing into the hearts of the Filipinos the conviction that nothing but altruism has moved this country and its great people in undertaking the task that is about to come to a glorious completion.

There have been 11 Governors General in the Philippines since the American occupation, and it is a privilege, gentlemen, for me to be able to state that each and every one of them represented the very best type of American manhood and statesmanship. [Applause.]

Every one of the 10 illustrious predecessors of Governor Murphy-Taft, Wright, Ide, Smith, Forbes, Harrison, Wood, Stimson, Davis, and Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.-had contributed, during his administration, to the progress and wellbeing of the country over which he ruled, and the sum total of their contributions stands as a living monument there of America's unparalleled altruistic colonial policy. I regret that time does not permit, nor does the occasion warrant, an enumeration of the great accomplishments of each of these able administrators.

However, the mention of the creditable part taken by some of them in the formation and development of the Philippine government is inevitable, for there are three epochal periods in the development of democratic government in the Philippines which stand in bold relief as the turning points in each step taken toward the establishment of a truly popular government there. It was under Mr. Taft, the first civil Governor, that the foundations of that government were laid, for it was he who first carried out the instructions of President McKinley and later put into actual operation the plan embodied in the first Philippine bill enacted by the Fiftyseventh Congress in 1902. The era of real participation by the Filipino people in the operation of their government was ushered in by Governor General Harrison. He was the first to carry into execution the provisions of the Jones law (Public Act 240) enacted by the Sixty-fourth Congress in 1916. But it remained for Mr. Murphy, the present American Governor General in the Philippines, to combine the achievements of his predecessors and add greatly to the solidity of the edifice wherein the new Commonwealth government provided for in the Tydings-McDuffie Act. passed by the last Congress, shall be safely lodged.

To Governor General Murphy belongs, therefore, the credit of bringing to a happy culmination a great task greatly performed.

That Governor Murphy performed this most difficult function in the manner in which I know each and every one of you would wish and expect him to perform is abundantly shown by the unanimous praise made of his administration by all the different elements in the Philippines.

The leaders of all political parties have supported his administration and have lauded his accomplishments. I am sure I can do no better, to give an idea of this general approval, than to request, as I do, Mr. Speaker, unanimous consent to incorporate and make a part of my remarks the speech delivered by the President of the Philippine Senate, Hon. Manuel L. Quezon, the outstanding leader of the Filipino people, at the farewell banquet tendered Governor Murphy before his departure from Manila. I quote:

Two days ago, at a banquet given in my honor by the Philippine Columbian Association, the president of the association, in the course of his remarks, gave me the impression that the banquet was given in his honor and not in mine. I hope that you did not get the impression, after listening to my friend Mr. Luz here, that this banquet is the result of a conspiracy between him and me to launch publicly my candidacy for the presidency of the Commonwealth. wealth and admiration for you, both as a man and as a Governor.

Gentlemen, this is a great occasion and a happy one; a great occasion because it is a banquet given by a great people to a great man. And a happy one for you, Mr. Governor, and for us, your friends, for this is a very sincere demonstration of affection and admiration for you, both as a man and as a Governor.

Governor General Murphy was appointed Governor General of the Philippine Islands at a most critical period in Philippine history. The Congress of the United States had just enacted a law determining the future relations between the United States and the Philippines. And this act was to be submitted to the Filipino people for their acceptance or rejection, and it was a question for the Governor General to decide what part, if any, he was to take. It was important that the decision of the Filipino people should be right, but from the standpoint of the United States, the question was not whether the decision of the Filipino people was to be right, but whether that decision was to be the result of an absolutely free determination on the part of our people; and Governor Murphy at once saw where his duty lay. There was an act approved by Congress. In the passage of that act, leaders of his own party had taken a very important part. The temptation must have been great for him to so act, at least indirectly, as to facilitate the acceptance by the Filipino people of that act of Congress, his own Congress, an act in which his friends and political associates had been interested. ates had been interested.

But Governor Murphy saw his duty, saw that his duty was to keep neutral in the controversy that was going on amongst the Filipino leaders. He saw that it was in the interest of the Filipino people as well as the United States that the determination as to whether the act should be accepted or not should be freely made by the people of the Philippine Islands themselves. So Governor Murphy, from the minute that he arrived on these shores, has allowed no one to have any misgivings as to where he would stand in this controversy. He told our nearly multily and told every in this controversy. He told our people, publicly, and told every one of us, those of us who were taking a very active part in the controversy, that he had made up his mind to be neutral, and that he was going to allow no one to use his office, directly or indirectly, to influence the decision of the Philippine Legislature in accepting or rejecting that law.

or rejecting that law.

I want to say to you gentlemen that from that time on, I have admired Governor Murphy. He kept his word. He was neutral and he remained neutral until the legislature had spoken. And after the legislature had spoken, he still remained neutral until the question was again decided by the Congress of the United States and passed upon by the Philippine Legislature. Then, when the legislature had taken action he was ready to cooperate with it so that the necessary steps might be taken to carry out the provisions of the law as accepted by our legislature. No Governor General has, in my opinion, interpreted both the letter and the spirit of the Jones law better than the present Governor General has. He remained neutral in the last elections. He allowed no public official to use the prerogatives of his office in influencing the results of the elections. But when the results were known, he at once accepted them as final and consulted in the affairs of this Government with the leader of the party that had won the election.

When Governor General Murphy arrived in the Philippines it was not only the question of the acceptance or rejection of the law by the people of these islands that confronted him. There were, in addition, the everyday problems that any government has to meet. And at that particular time, as it is still now, the most important problem before the Philippine government is the balancing of its budget. Before the Governor General arrived the Philippine Legislature already had in its previous session balanced our budget, so that he did not find here a bankrupt government. On the contrary, he found a government on a sound financial condition, unlike the state of many of the governments on earth today. Governor Murphy not only continued this policy of keeping our budget balanced—the insular budget—but he went forward and encouraged every provincial government to also keep their expenditures within their income.

Moreover, during the short period that he has been at the head of this government the surplus of the government has increased. I believe sincerely that if Governor Murphy had done nothing else in the Philippines this alone would give him credit for being one of the best executives in the world today.

But he has done more than that. Within the resources of our government he has interested himself in giving our people new services. His heart is with the helpless, with the poor, with the needy. And so he has given a large part of his time to the consideration of our social problems, and he has started and worked along these lines which, I hope if continued by the government which is to succeed the present government, will make this country very soon one of the most progressive governments upon the face of the earth.

I have had occasion to know Governor Manual Late.

the face of the earth.

I have had occasion to know Governor Murphy intimately. It has been one of the happiest moments of my life to have met our Governor at this particular time. My conferences with him on public questions have not only been pleasant on all occasions, but have been very instructive and inspiring. I am sure that I am paying him inadequate tribute when I say that he has but one purpose, and that is to serve the best interests of the people of the Philippine Islands in everything he does and at every moment.

I am not now endorsing everything that has been done by the Governor. As a matter of fact, we have had some disagreements and I have been vain enough to think that when he had not agreed with me, he was wrong and I was right. But what I want to make public now is, that whether the Governor has agreed with me or not, I know that whenever he has made a decision, he has done it because he thought it was right, because he thought it was just, because he thought it was honest, because he thought it was for the best for the government and people of the Philippine Islands.

The Governor is going to America. He himself has said that he is going to America because the President of the United States desires to confer with him. I shall refrain from surmising about the subject or subjects of that conference. But I feel perfectly safe in saying that the Governor General, in that conference with the President, will give him the best information as to the conditions prevailing in the Phillippine Islands; will tell the President what he honestly believes to be the wishes of our people, and will do what he can to promote our best interests.

and will do what he can to promote our best interests.

In this connection I wish to take advantage of this opportunity to say one thing to the people of these islands, and that is, that everybody should settle down to work upon the assumption that nothing will happen that will stop the program as agreed upon between the Congress of the United States on the one hand, and the Filipino people on the other, when the act approved by Congress was accepted by the Philippine Legislature. We will gain nothing by deluding ourseives into believing that something may happen or will happen that will change the course of events that will necessarily follow the acceptance on the part of the legislature of the law enacted by Congress.

Let no one think that the government of the Commonwealth

Let no one think that the government of the Commonwealth will not be established. The government of the Commonwealth will be established just as soon as the constitutional processes as determined in the McDuffie-Tydings law have taken place. The only thing left undone is to improve the provisions of that law, if they can be improved, in the interest both of the United States and of the Philippines. I do not know whether the trip of the Governor has any connection whatever with the provisions of this law. Nor do I know whether at the next session of Congress there is any plan or idea of reconsidering some or any of the provisions of that law. But this, as I said, I am prepared to state: If and when the opportunity should present itself for improving those provisions as they affect the Philippine Islands and the Filipino people, I have no doubt that the Governor General will do his best to help us. And knowing this, I feel Mr. Governor, that we are not doing enough for you. I feel that every evidence of affection and confidence in you that the people of the Philippine Islands may give you before your departure, is not sufficiently expressive of the feelings they have in their hearts.

Personally, I want to say that I have no better friend in this world than you. And I want to add that I have not admired any man more than I admire you. Gentlemen, I want to offer a toast for the health of the Governor, his happy trip and quick return to the Philippine Islands.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Commissioner from the Philippines asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks so as to include a speech delivered upon the occasion of the farewell banquet tendered Governor Murphy in Manila and newspaper and other comments. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DELGADO. Business men in the Philippines—American, foreign, and Filipino—all praise the administration of Governor Murphy.

The press, which, in the Philippines as here, is ever vigilant of the conduct of public men, have also unanimously praised Governor Murphy's administration. And their appraisal of his accomplishments have been so just and fair, that Senator Hayden has seen fit to have printed in the Congressional Record (Feb. 21, 1935) an editorial of the Tribune of Manila, which is an organ of the opposition party in the Philippines. The Herald of Manila, in its issue of January 23, 1935, said the following:

The peace and contentment of the people in general—that is Governor General Murphy's definition of governmental stability. It is, in fact, the only test of good government. We have been peaceful, and we have been contented. Why? Because we have lived within our income, have remained united in spite of our political antagonisms, have advanced educationally, have improved in health, and have enjoyed the full measure of our democratic rights.

Of Governor Murphy, personally, the same paper said:

Here indeed is a noble man, gifted with the culture of truth and possessing a character that refuses to step out of itself in the interest of expediency. All those who have known him here know that he has worn no mask, that he is what he is rather than what he might be represented to be. There is, in other words, not the least trace of sham and pretense in his personality and his mind.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the Commissioner from the Philippines has expired.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. DELGADO. Mr. Speaker, I regret exceedingly that time will not permit an adequate enumeration of the accomplishments of Governor Murphy in the Philippines; but I may say, in the briefest way possible, that Governor Murphy has brought financial stability to the Philippine government to the extent that we have not only lived within our income during the 2 years of his administration but he has laid the foundations for the government's financial security in the future.

A long speech can be delivered on each of Governor Murphy's splendid achievements in the Philippines. If I had enough time, I could describe to you at length his systematic plan to solve many social problems in our country. In an admirable spirit of helpfulness he eradicated, in the short span of less than 2 years, the unhealthy slum districts in the city of Manila and he raised to an unprecedented degree of efficiency our hospital standards and health service. The Philippine government under him has always been ready to extend relief to needy families. Not even the unfortunates behind the prison bars were overlooked. The indeterminate sentence and parole systems were instituted that hope for social rehabilitation may still be theirs.

He brought with him that sympathy, that understanding of Filipino aspiration and ideals that have caused the people out there fully to realize the truth of that famous Jeffersonian principle—" that no government can be just unless its powers are derived from the consent of the governed"; and, last but not least, because of his faith in the Filipinos, because of his sympathy with our ideals and aspirations, he has revived good will and has made each and every one of our people feel, as never before, that America can always be depended upon for its justice, for its equity, for its fairness. These were his reassuring words:

This country is not going to ruin. This civilization is not going to crumble. There is not any necessity for this nation to slip back. This is not a political task; it is a task of service, through and through, and we must have courage to meet it. * * * I likewise predict that there will be nothing to fear in the future for the Philippine Islands.

Mr. Speaker, if the present administration had done for the Philippines no more than to send Governor Murphy to the Philippines—and there are many other things that it has done—we feel that the Filipinos have enough to thank for. Governor Murphy's policies, not unlike the new deal here, have brought faith and confidence, new hopes to our people, which have moved them to go on and face all the problems that beset our country with confidence, with trust in God, and trust in the idealism of this Nation, which will send us onward to the goal we have set for ourselves long ago.

Again I wish to thank you for all you have done in the Philippines and will close by saying that the Philippines are the vanguard of Christianity in the Far East. They represent a civilization founded on three centuries and a half of Spanish influence. With the fine superstructure that America has built over that foundation along the lines of twentieth century Anglo-Saxon ideas of progress and human betterment, we believe that we shall forever remain the outpost of Christianity and of western civilization in the Far East, and the supporters of everything you stand for and the principles that you taught us and you so well love. [Applause.]

CALENDAR WEDNESDAY

The SPEAKER. Today is Calendar Wednesday and the Clerk will call the committees.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, before the calendar is called I make the point of order that there is no quorum present. There are bills of importance to come up and I think the Membership of the House should be here.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I wish the gentleman would not do that.

Mr. BLANTON. I regret that my duty compels me to do it. There is one bill on the calendar that sets a very bad precedent, and it is something that just now, with the present national atmosphere, could not be properly explained to the country. I think the Members ought to be here when the bill is taken up. I refer to the bill to pay a pension of $20,000 a year for life to Justices of the Supreme Court after they have reached 70 years of age.

Mr. DUFFEY of Ohio. That is not the intent or the language of the bill.

Mr. BLANTON. That is just what it means and it ought not to pass. And if we can get the Members here so they will understand it, they will not pass it.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. It is a good bill and we ought to pass it and we are going to pass it.

Mr. CULLEN. I hope the gentleman will not press his point of order.

Mr. BLANTON. I feel compelled to make the point of order from a sense of duty. The Membership ought to know when a bill of that kind is coming up, and ought to be here during the debate, and I insist upon my point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. (After counting.) One hundred and eight members present, not a quorum.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House. The motion was agreed to.

The doors were closed.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 22]

	[1001	1 NO. 22]
Andresen	Claiborne	Fish	Johnson, W. Va
Bacharach	Clark, Idaho	Flannagan	Kahn
Bankhead	Coffee	Fulmer	Keller
Beam	Colmer	Gambrill	Kinger
Bell	Cooley	Gasque	Kleberg
Biermann	Cooper, Ohio	Gilchrist	Kramer
Boehne	Cummings	Gillette	Lambertson
Boileau	DeRouen	Goldsborough	Lamneck
Brooks	Disney	Goodwin	Larrabee
Buckley, N.Y.	Duffy, N. Y.	Greenway	Lea, Calif.
Bulwinkle	Dunn, Miss.	Hamlin	Lee, Qkla.
Carden	Eckert	Hancock, N. C.	Lewis, Md.
Casey	Fernandez	Hart	Lloyd

McGehee	Meeks	Robinson, Utah	Shannon
McLaughlin	Montet	Rogers, N. H.	Thom
McLean	Nelson	Romjue	Thomason
McSwain	O'Brien	Schaefer	Thompson
Maloney	Peyser	Schneider	Tobey
May	Pierce	Schuetz	White

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and fifty-five Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to. The doors were opened.

N. R. A.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, the National Industrial Recovery Act was passed June 6, 1933. No time was lost to put the small business man under the lash of the dictator. Men who had their backs to the wall struggling to keep their men employed were driven into bankruptcy; others were fined heavily; others were imprisoned.

It is interesting to observe how tenderly some of the favorite monopolistic corporations and their officers were treated by the master dictator. Take the cigarette manufacturers as an example. Time and again during the past year, the newspapermen at the White House conference have inquired what progress was being made with the proposed cigarette code, only to be told that it had not appeared in the wire basket. Now, after a period of 20 months since the enactment of the N. R. A., the cigarette code appears.

The history of the transactions of some of the large tobacco companies who have been basking in the sunshine of political favor is not without interest to those who have felt the blade of the dictator's ax. I am informed that the president of the American Tobacco Co., Mr. George Washington Hill, was paid $825,000 for his year's work in 1931. He received about $16,000 per week. His workers received less than $14 per week.

The four big tobacco companies showed earnings of 10.1 percent on their invested capital. These companies during the 12 succeeding years reinvested $270,000,000, or about one-fourth of their profits, in further mechanization, an amount far in excess of what they paid out in wages. This large expenditure in mechanization only added to the problems of unemployment. It is interesting to note that by 1931 their earnings amounted to 16.3 percent on their augmented investment, or 25.5 percent on their 1920 investment.

Testimony given before a subcommittee of the Ways and Means Committee in 1934 reveals an astounding situation as to the profits of the so-called "Big Four." What does the testimony disclose? It shows that during the year 1931, the year of the depression, the aggregate net profits were $110,-000,000, which was 30 percent greater than the aggregate net profit for 1929. The testimony further shows that during a period when the tobacco growers were unable to realize the cost of production, the manufacturers' profits were $147,000,000, or 69 percent, while the growers received only $66,000,000, or 31 percent.

Does any fair-minded person doubt for one minute that the key position which Mr. Clay Williams has held until his resignation today has been to the financial advantage of the Big Four monopoly and to the distinct disadvantage of the small tobacco manufacturers?

The wage earners of the industry received in 1931 only 1.9 percent of what the companies received for their products. Furthermore, let me call attention to the fact that to raise the wages of their cigarette workers 10 percent would cost the owners only a little over 1 percent of the more than $100,000,000 they make in profits each year.

Now as to the cigarette code. Mr. Clay Williams, vice chairman of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., one of the so-called "Big Four" which completely controls the tobacco business of the country, opposed any codification under N. R. A. which might involve the slightest raise in wages. Mr.

Williams is chairman of the National Recovery Board and as such he has had tremendous influence in forming codes affecting his business. Even though 90 percent of American business had been placed under codes, yet the Reynolds Tobacco Co., until within a few days ago, has escaped codification. I may add that while Mr. Clay Williams opposed the labor policies of the N. R. A., he did not oppose its priceraising tendencies.

Furthermore, to offset a $10,000,000 increase in costs due to the operation of the A. A. A. processing tax and the President's reemployment agreement, the cigarette industry raised its wholesale price by $60,000,000. All that it did to meet these new burdens was to multiply the added cost by 6 and pass them on to the consumer. This clever piece of manipulation added a clear $50,000,000 to its profits in the first year under the new deal.

The administration now asks Congress to extend the life of the N. R. A. The favored few, those who enjoy monopolistic privileges under the N. R. A., those who control and direct its policies now join the administration in urging Congress to extend the life of the National Industrial Recovery Act. Two years more of political favor will enable the large industries to drive their few surviving competitors into insolvency. This will give them a free hand to further exploit the public.

ATTENDANCE ON COMMITTEE

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, the members of the Committee on Agriculture are in session on business authorized by the House and could not answer to their names on the quorum call.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The majority members of the Committee on Agriculture received permission to sit this afternoon and may have been absent during this roll call.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the first committee on the calendar.

The Clerk proceeded to call the committees.

RETIREMENT OF SUPREME COURT JUSTICES

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas (when the Committee on the Judiciary was called). Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 5161) to amend section 260 of the Judicial Code (U.S.C., title 28, sec. 375), as heretofore amended.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 260 of the Judicial Code (U. S. C., title 28, sec. 375), as heretofore amended by the Act of March 1, 1929 (45 Stat. L., ch. 419, p. 1422), is hereby amended by adding at the end of the first paragraph thereof the following: "And, instead of resigning, any Justice of the Supreme Court, who is qualified to resign under the foregoing provisions, may retire, upon the salary of which he is then in receipt, from regular active service on the bench, and the President shall thereupon be authorized to appoint a successor; but a Justice so retiring may nevertheless be called upon by the Chief Justice and be by him authorized to perform such judicial duties, in any judicial circuit, including those of a circuit justice in such circuit, as such retired justice may be willing to undertake."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sum-NERS] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, this is a very important bill. It is a bill with regard to which a great deal of misinformation has been spread about. Some statements have been made that are not correct.

This bill proposes to deal with the personnel of the Supreme Court of the United States. In a sentence, this bill does this, and nothing more, and any statement to the contrary is wrong. This bill gives to the Justices of the Supreme Court exactly the arrangement with regard to resignation and retirement that is now given by the laws of this country to every other Federal judge in the United States. Now, that is one point. I am going to repeat it. This bill proposed to give to the justices of the Supreme Court exactly that arrangement given by existing law with regard to all of the other Federal justices and judges in this country. That is one proposition.

Let me state another proposition. The statement has been made that this proposes a pension to Federal judges, and that is not correct. Federal judges hold office under the Constitution of the United States during life, subject to good behavior. They do not have to quit except when death makes them separate themselves from the bench. That is another proposition. If anybody says I am not stating the facts correctly, I will yield to be corrected.

This is the third proposition: In the experience of this country it is found valuable to give to other justices who reach retirement age the privilege of retiring without having to resign. It may be that we in this Congress have a superior sort of character to that of the Justices sitting over there, but it has been found from human experience that when a man begins to slow up a little bit he would like not to quit entirely. He would not like to check out entirely. Recognizing that with regard to the circuit court justices and district court judges, we provided many years ago that when they begin to slow up, if they want to, instead of resigning they may retire. When they retire they are subject to incidental service by assignment.

With regard to the Justices of the Supreme Court, it has been deemed advisable, for reasons that are perfectly apparent, that when they get where they feel they cannot do a full day's work, instead of hanging on they may retire. That is the reason for this bill. The position they occupy requires full vigor, mentally and physically. I know there will be a great deal said about men in high places cashing out when they reach the point where they cannot do a full day's work. Maybe we all ought to have been made so that if we were getting $18,000 or $20,000 a year, we would just check out and quit when we reached the slowing up point, but the thing which should determine our judgment as to what human beings will do is common sense, experience, and observation. We know that human beings do not act that way. I would not risk many of the Members in this House who criticize Supreme Court Justices for not quitting. I would not risk them to get out of here and surrender their salaries because they are sick or getting a bit old.

So this bill gives this arrangement, that when the Justices of the Supreme Court have served 10 years and have reached the age of 70, instead of resigning they may retire. They are then subject to assignment in the circuits by the Chief Justice of the United States, to do incidental service.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield for a question if it will be illuminating.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I am interested in the gentleman's statement that under the terms of the pending bill that after resignation of a member of the Supreme Court, the former member would be subject to call of the Chief Justice to be assigned to the circuit court?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes; but not as a regular judge. Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. But he would not be forced to accept such assignment unless he wanted to?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is right. The same provision is made with regard to the justices of the circuit court of appeals and with regard to the district justices when they shall have reached that age.

Now I will yield for questions, if some gentleman does not understand. I do not want to make a speech.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. MOTT. At the present time no legislation can be passed decreasing the salary of a judge while he is in office. Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. You cannot decrease it.

Mr. MOTT. But you can decrease a judge's retirement pay after he has resigned.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is right; I was going to make that statement.

Mr. MOTT. Now, if this bill is passed and instead of resigning a judge simply retires from active service on the Bench, which is to all intents and purposes the same thing as resigning, then it would be quite possible for a judge in effect to resign and the Congress could never pass any legislation lowering his salary.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is right.

Mr. MOTT. And that, I take it, is the real purpose of this bill.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I would not like to say that; but I will say, and I say it very candidly, that my judgment is that if Justices feel perfectly secure in the continuation | of the salary which they may hold, they would be more disposed to retire. Do not forget they have a cinch on that salary as long as they live. Does the gentleman understand that?

Mr. MOTT. Yes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is merely a matter of horse sense, a point to start from. We cannot take it from these judges by any law that we can enact.

Mr. MOTT. The gentleman does not mean that the Congress cannot reduce the judge's pension upon his resignation?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. No; but I am talking about the judge who does not have to resign.

Mr. MOTT. That is true.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I mean that we are just using horse sense here. People have common sense, let us use it.

Mr. MOTT. In other words, the purpose of the bill is to make the judge's retirement pay secure in any event, so that Congress in the future will have no jurisdiction over that Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is one of the effects of the bill.

Mr. MOTT. I am glad the gentleman has so thoroughly and fully explained it.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Sure; everybody knows that; and there is something rather important in that, too, perhaps. As long as a judge can hold office during life and get paid during life this sort of bill is common sense. I believe everybody in this House is bound to recognize it. If it were a question of initial legislation and legislative control over the salary of Justices after they reach the age of 70 years, we would confront a different proposition, but we have no constitutional control over their salaries during their lifetime, absolutely none on earth. Now, there may be some good in that, I am not sure about it, there is a good deal of weight on each side. For a long time we have held rather strongly for an independent judiciary in this country. There have been a long line of Anglo-Saxon practical experiences in trying to control the judges of this country and it has not been a happy experience.

When a man goes on the Supreme Court Bench he ought to take the veil insofar as any purpose to make a dollar from that time on is concerned. He ought not to have one minute's thought about a dollar. These men hold key places, and we should not quibble about $15,000 or $20,000 in making certain the independent uncontrolled judgment of the men whose opinion influences the Constitution of this country. It is as nothing. I am not sure that it is not a good thing for a judge who is a member of the Supreme Court to know that from the moment of his appointment on until God calls him to his reward he will not have to think a minute about a dollar-will keep himself free from every financial interest and involvement. [Applause.] Now, what are you going to do about it?

Mr. MILLARD. Pass it.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes; that is right.

Mr. EKWALL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. EKWALL. I do not presume that any Justice of the Supreme Court would hesitate to resign if he felt that he had gotten to the point where he could not perform his duties. Does the gentleman think so?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. No; but I think he would feel a whole lot better and more able to stay on the Bench if he did not have to worry about the future. I am telling the truth. I think the same thing about the gentleman who asked me this question, and I do not even know him. This is purely impersonal, understand. I think were the gentleman a Justice of the Supreme Court, and not quite up to par, he would feel a little less incapacitated and a little more willing to keep on the Bench if he was afraid his salary might be cut off entirely if he should quit. There is nothing personal about this, understand.

Mr. EKWALL. I understand, but does not the gentleman feel that the Justices of the Supreme Court are going to be willing to rely on the fairness of the coming Congresses and that they will be willing to take their chances along that line?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I will say to the gentleman that there is nothing in this bill which, if passed, would prevent a Federal judge resigning instead of retiring if he wants to. Does that answer the question? The gentleman is not dealing with theory. Nothing under this bill prevents any Justice who is willing to resign from resigning and subjecting himself to the legislative judgment.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. MOTT. The gentleman will admit, I suppose, that if this bill is passed, no Supreme Court Justice ever will resign in the future; they will all retire.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I think that is true. Bear in mind this, that it is only within the last few years that it has occurred to anybody that Congress would disturb the salary of the justices of the Federal courts after they resigned.

Justice Holmes, just deceased, was the only Justice of the Supreme Court in the history of this Nation whose salary has ever been disturbed during his lifetime. May I make this further statement: I do not care what you do with this bill. I am simply making a statement here in explanation. I have no interest in it whatever which is not shared by each

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. May we be assured that there is no purpose anywhere—and I am not referring to the gentleman who is now occupying the floor—to use this bill as a means of changing the complexion of the present Supreme Court of the United States?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Of course, I cannot answer that question.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. It would have the effect of facilitating such a change if such change were desired?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Possibly so. I understand there is a good deal of apprehension in certain quarters with respect

Mr. DUFFEY of Ohio. It is entirely optional with the present judges of the Supreme Court.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. In using their discretion about resigning or retiring, they would be more likely to exercise that discretion if they were assured that their present salaries would be continued for the rest of their lives?

Mr. DUFFEY of Ohio. Why not? Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Then, the purpose of the legislation is to make it easier for the judges to exercise that discretion?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. May I answer the gentleman in this way?

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. The Members of the House have a right to know what the purpose is.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I am going to state it exactly. May I direct attention to the section of which this bill is amendatory:

When any judge of any court of the United States, appointed to hold his office during good behavior, resigns his office after having held a commission or commissions as judge of any such court or courts at least 10 years, continuously or otherwise, and having attained the age of 70 years, he shall, during the residue of his natural life, receive the salary which is payable at the time of his resignation for the office that he held at the time of his resignation.

That applies to all justices with this exception:

But, instead of resigning, any judge other than a Justice of the Supreme Court, who is qualified to resign under the foregoing provisions, may retire, upon the salary of which he is then in receipt, from regular active service on the bench, and the President shall thereupon be authorized to appoint a successor; but a judge so retiring may nevertheless be called upon by the senior circuit judge of that circuit and be by him authorized to perform such judicial duties—

You will observe that the provision of the law of which this proposed bill is amendatory provides that any judge or justice of the United States may resign or may retire, except Justices of the Supreme Court, whenever they shall have served 10 years and shall have reached the age of 70. This bill proposes to make identical that arrangement with reference to the Supreme Court, and nothing more.

Mr. EKWALL. How many Justices are there who would be eligible if this bill passes?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Three, at least.

Mr. EKWALL. May I make the statement that I was on the bench about 13 years and resigned to come to Congress. I voluntarily paid back to the State over $2,000 of my salary as a good citizen in order to help the State. I am sure the Justices of the Supreme Court are perfectly willing to take their chances with the people of the United States, as represented by the Members of Congress, and I am sure that none of them will be harmed to any great extent if this bill does not pass. It seems to me it is rather discriminatory and personally I can see no reason for the passage of the bill.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. May I say to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Ekwall] if he is correct in his conclusions they will all do that because we are not cutting them off from the chance.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman state the circumstances under which a Justice of the Supreme Court may withdraw and how his future income may be governed by congressional action?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. He may resign now and his salary can be cut off entirely.

Mr. HEALEY. That depends on the action of Congress?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes. The judges of the Supreme Court of the United States are the only Federal judges that do not have the privilege of retiring instead of resigning.

Mr. CELLER. In other words, we endow the judges of the Supreme Court of the United States by this bill with the same privilege that we have already endowed the district judges and circuit judges, which has not been deemed a discrimination.

Mr. McFARLANE. Under existing law, so that we will understand just what the effect of this bill is, when a Justice of the Supreme Court resigns, his salary is automatically

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Congress can cut it off.

Mr. McFARLANE. Well, under existing law, has it ever been done?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Congress may pass any bill it wants. We cut Justice Holmes' salary in half. I believe.

Mr. McFARLANE. Does it make any difference whether he resigns or retires?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. If he retires, it cannot be done. The circuit court of appeals judges have the privilege of retiring and not resigning, and their salaries cannot be disturbed.

Mr. McFARLANE. Can a Supreme Court judge now retire

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. They may resign at full pay, but it may be cut off at any time. It is subject to congressional action. It takes the thing out of the constitutionalguaranty status and makes it subject to congressional action.

Mr. MONTAGUE. A Justice of the Supreme Court cannot retire. He must resign.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is right.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Can the gentleman advise us what the reason was for not including Supreme Court Justices in the original act which gave these other judges the right to

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I think I can. I think this proposed arrangement is a thing thought out after that. The district judges and the justices of the circuit court of appeals, of course, do not hold a place of such tremendous, strategic importance as the Supreme Court Justices. For instance, it was thought that the justices of the circuit court of appeals could retire and be subject to assignment and still be justices.

May I make this statement? The Justices of the Supreme Court have two jobs. One is sitting in that room yonder, under the Constitution, and the other is going on circuit. Under this bill, when they retire, they retain the power of being sent on circuit. I think this is a thing that was thought out after the law granting privilege to the other Federal judges to retire was passed. The President may assign a district judge to perform a certain duty-

Mr. DUFFEY of Ohio. The Presiding Justice.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. My colleague is correct about that, of course. They may be assigned by the Presiding Justice, but it would be impracticable, it would be dangerous, if we had two or three retired Justices over here, for the Chief Justice, in a close case, to have the power of picking one of them out of two or three men to sit in the case. The Chief Justice, however impartial, could not afford to exercise such a power. You can all readily understand that. So it is deemed advisable to remove these judges who retire from opportunity to sit on the Supreme Court Bench.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. MOTT. As a matter of fact, the practice of Justices of the United States Supreme Court going on circuit has long ceased to exist.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is right.

Mr. MOTT. How many years ago was it when the last Supreme Court Justice went on circuit?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I do not know. They do not go on circuit now.

Mr. MOTT. And probably never will again.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. If this bill is passed, they will not go on circuit in the ordinary sense.

Mr. MOTT. They will not, anyway, will they?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. They do not, and under this bill they would not in the ordinary sense, but it is believed that they frequently could be assigned to the circuit to do specific service—understand?
Mr. MOTT. I think I understand.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I mean you understand the statement? I do not ask you to believe it.

Mr. MOTT. In the gentleman's opinion is it likely in the future that any Supreme Court Justice will ever go out on the circuit?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I believe so. In my judgment, for instance, where you have a situation where one of the justices of the circuit is sick, or something of that sort, I think he would be sent out.

Mr. DRISCOLL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. DRISCOLL. Is not this the situation? If we pass this bill, the man who retired remains a judge?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is right.

Mr. DRISCOLL. And draws a judge's salary?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is right.

Mr. DRISCOLL. But his place on the active Bench of the Supreme Court may be filled by appointment?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is right.

Mr. DRISCOLL. And by reason of his retirement, his compensation continues, under the statement in the Constitution that judges shall receive a compensation which shall not be diminished during their term of office?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is right.

Mr. DRISCOLL. That is the purpose of the bill? Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is the effect of it.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Is there any other system of retirement in our courts or in our Government service wherein a man is retired with full pay?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I do not think so. I think the Federal Bench is the only place where a man is guaranteed full pay during life.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Is not this a rather dangerous precedent for the Government to set?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I do not think so. You have set it. The Constitution has set it. That is what I have been trying to get fixed in the minds of the Members here. You do not set anything by this bill. These men have a cinch on this salary for life under the Constitution. Congress cannot disturb it. Why in the world you keep asking that question I do not understand. You do not set anything here. The Constitution gives it to them and they have got it. You are not taking any salary from them and you are not giving any salary to them. They have their salaries for life. The Constitution gives it to them and Congress cannot take it from them. Why can we not accept that proposition and go on and talk about something else?

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. GREEN. I was very much interested in the statement of the gentleman across the aisle. It was quite noticeable that during our economy drive here, when everybody from President to charwoman took their 15 percent cut, only a half dozen or less, I understand, Federal judges would permit their salaries to be cut one penny.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yet you have nine men on the Federal Bench and you cannot cut their salaries, because the Constitution stands between you.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman from Texas 7 minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, in my 7 minutes I want to tell my colleagues something that my good colleague from Texas has not told.

In the first place, as some of you may know, Supreme Court Justices draw $20,000 a year. The Chief Justice draws $500 additional as Chief Justice, or $20,500 a year. While they hold their offices for life, subject to good behavior, they cease to hold their office when they resign. And when they resign their salary stops, and they then receive only such amount as Congress sees fit to allow. In other words, after they resign, Congress holds the purse strings and controls the situation.

If you pass this bill, Congress no longer will control the situation; and they can retire after reaching 70, having served 10 years, at $20,000 per year for life.

Under the Constitution and laws of this country there are only nine Supreme Court Justices. Under this bill, whenever a Justice reaches the age of 70 and has served 10 years, he can retire on $20,000 per year for life, and you would soon have more retired Supreme Court judges drawing $20,000 per year for life than the nine active judges on the Supreme Bench.

After being appointed, most of them would not have to wait long before retiring on $20,000 per year for life, as most of them are over 60 years of age when appointed. I guarantee that if this bill passes and it should inveigle two Justices to retire from the Supreme Bench on $20,000 a year for life—I guarantee that the men whom the President will appoint will be over 60 years of age. Then they will not have to wait long until they reach the retirement age and can retire for life on $20,000 a year.

This morning we heard a deserved eulogy to a great man, one of the great Justices of our High Court, by the gentleman from Indiana, on Justice Holmes, who passed away yesterday, and whose passing grieved us.

Tomorrow Justice Holmes would have been 94 years old—24 years after the retirement age fixed in this bill. The eulogist this morning showed you some of the most important decisions rendered by that great jurist, after he was 70 years of age; when he had reached the years of experience, when he had reached the years of ripe judgment, we had the great decisions rendered by that great jurist.

My friend and colleague from Texas [Mr. Sumners] says that you cannot call this a pension. Why can you not? What is it but a pension? When you strip away the technical language and analyze it in plain everyday language, it simply means that every judge of the Supreme Court upon reaching the age of 70 years, having served as many as 10 years, may retire on a pension, or retired pay, or a gratuity, of $20,000 per year for life. Because under this bill he cannot be compelled to do 1 hour of work after he retires and while he is drawing his $20,000 per year gratuity. What is that but a pension? It is a pension pure and simple. Under this bill Mr. Holmes would have drawn this $20,000 per year for 24 years after he had reached the age of 70, for he would have reached his ninety-fourth birthday tomorrow.

When a Justice of the Supreme Court holds his position for life, he does so by continuing to be a judge for life. When he ceases to be a judge his job stops and his salary stops. And when he ceases to be a judge, he is not entitled to a dollar under the Constitution; but, under this bill it would permit him to retire at 70 years of age and receive $20,000 a year for the rest of his life, which might be a quarter of a century, and during that quarter of a century he need not render any service to the Government for the $500,000 he receives in retired pay.

We have a distinguished colleague in service in this House, who actively serves with dignity and with great ability, who comes from Connecticut [Mr. Merritt], and if we had forced him to retire at 70 years of age he would have retired 11 years ago, for he is 81 years old, yet he is still one of the active, ablest, and most valuable men in this House. [Applause.] His retirement from this Congress would be a distinct loss to the country.

The many years of service performed in this House by "Uncle Joe" Cannon that were most valuable to this Nation were the years he served after he was 70 years of age.

I want to say to you again that when you permit a Justice of the Supreme Court to retire at 70 years of age on a salary of $20,000 a year for life it is a pension. Why is it not a pension? If he draws a salary when he is not rendering any service, it is a gratuity; it is a pension from this Government.

I am not willing to pay just $30 per month to the good women of this country and the aged men who have lived honorable citizens in the United States and been of value to their Government for over three score years, as provided in the bill that is to be brought in and passed by a committee in a few days and discriminate against them by passing this bill authorizing a Justice to retire at 70 years of age and draw a pension of $20,000 a year for life. Are you willing to make such discrimination? I am not.

While everybody else has to pay an income tax, no Federal judge has to pay one dollar. Supreme Court Justices draw $20,000 per year, yet do not pay one penny income tax.

Mr. Justice Holmes, if he had been retired at the age of 70, would have drawn a pension from this Government of $20,000 a year for 24 long years, or the sum of $480,000, and would not have had to pay one dollar income tax.

I do not think there is a man in the Nation who has a keener mind than my friend from Texas [Mr. Sumners]. I think he is one of the valuable men of this House and I would like to follow him. I think he is an ornament to the great Judiciary Committee, of which he is the Chairman. I would like to be able to follow him and support his bill, but it is a bad precedent to establish at this time, as I have said, when the country is out of gear, when people are in a condition of unrest, when there is not a proper state of mind in the people scattered throughout the United States. It is an improper time to pension certain men at $20,000 a year for life after they reach 70 years of age, and then allow other good men and women all over the United States, just as worthy and deserving, only $30 per month, when all are of equal importance under the law.

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. No; I am sorry. I do not want gentlemen to intersperse my 7-minute speech with inane witti-

Mr. CELLER. He gets the same amount if he resigns. We give them that privilege now.

Mr. BLANTON. No; he would not, if he resigned.

Mr. CELLER. Certainly he does.

Mr. BLANTON. No; the gentleman is entirely mistaken.

Mr. CELLER. What does he get?

Mr. BLANTON. Only what Congress sees fit to give him. Whenever he resigns, he ceases to be a judge. The purpose of this bill is to assure him that he will thereafter get $20,000 per year for life if he will retire at the age of 70 years. When he resigns now he gets only what Congress sees fit to give him. It behooves all of us to watch these bills closely and not let them pass. I objected and stopped this bill last Monday on the Consent Calendar. Many such bills come from committees with a unanimous report. And when the committee calls them up on Calendar Wednesday they are hard to kill, because the committee controls all time in debate. But we must watch them closely and kill the bad bills.

Oh, I know that in a generous atmosphere here, when we had a Treasury full of money, Congress has been in the mood of passing bills and paying a pension of $5,000 a year to Presidents' widows. I have fought against all such bills. That ought not to have existed, and we ought to stop it, and we ought to kill this bill here today. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Justice Holmes could have resigned twenty-odd years ago. If he had resigned he would have drawn his full salary up until 2 or 3 years ago when Congress first began to reduce during life the pay of the resigned judges. When Justice Holmes resigned he did not have the slightest idea that Congress was going to cut his salary. You can take that from me. I do not care what you do with this bill, but if you want vigorous judges on the Federal Bench you had better pass it. I speak as a matter of general policy and with no reference to the present occupants.

I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PERKINS.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, if noise could make the worse appear the better reason, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] should succeed in deceiving us all. Does the gentleman from Texas think that we are so simple and innocent that we do not now know that judges can retire or resign and receive the same compensation they received when they sat?

Mr. CELLER. That is $20,000 a year less 5 percent?

Mr. PERKINS. Yes. There is no question about that, and the whole weight and sound argument of the gentleman from Texas depends on deceiving us all a little bit, so that we will think that we are now passing a pension bill. We are not passing any pension bill at all.

Mr. DUFFEY of Ohio. The gentleman means Mr. BLAN-TON of Texas?

Mr. PERKINS. Oh, yes. There is only one gentleman from Texas where noise is concerned.

Mr. BLANTON. Unless one can make a noise, he could not be heard in this forum. Since the gentleman is so unkind and uncouth, will he yield to me.

Mr. PERKINS. I would not be unkind and uncouth to the gentleman, and I am not. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BLANTON. Does not the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Perkins] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler] know that Mr. Justice Holmes has not for a number of years drawn $20,000, and do they not know that when a Justice resigns it is left entirely to Congress as to what he shall receive?

Mr. PERKINS. Yes, of course. Mr. BLANTON. The Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary [Mr. Sumners of Texas] will tell the gentleman

Mr. PERKINS. Yes. Mr. Speaker, the Constitution of the United States guarantees to Justices the position during life but it does not guarantee to them health, and when a judge reaches the position where he feels he would like to resign or let up a little on his work, we all know it is human for him to continue, just the same as we do as Members of Congress, when some of us should be thinking of retiring.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Can the gentleman tell us any reason why a Supreme Court Justice should not have the same right as a district judge?

Mr. PERKINS. There is no reason why they should not.

Mr. HOEPPEL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. PERKINS. Yes.

Mr. HOEPPEL. Did the gentleman sign the petition to bring the Townsend pension plan to a vote?

Mr. PERKINS. I have not signed that petition.

Mr. HOEPPEL. In that there is a proper pension plan for a Supreme Court Justice. [Laughter.]

Mr. PERKINS. There is absolutely no reason why Justices of the Supreme Court should not be on the same basis as judges of the district courts. As far as we are able to ascertain, there was no reason why in the original law these words were placed "other than the Justices of the Supreme Court." We know that if there is any position in the whole country that should be absolutely free from any worry or disturbance or any thought of future existence, it is that of a judge of the Supreme Court of the United States, and the mere fact that he may draw a pension, if you will, or retirement pay, or whatever it is called, during the rest of his life, ought not to weigh the slightest bit when you think of the importance of the decisions being handed down from day to day.

Mr. SHORT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PERKINS. If the gentleman does not ask me anything about the Townsend plan, I will yield.

Mr. SHORT. I certainly would not charge that it is the motive or purpose of this bill, but will not the effect be to provide a place or a berth on the Supreme Court Bench for the distinguished Senator from Arkansas who will be replaced by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana next year? [Laughter.]

That might be an argument in favor of Mr. PERKINS. passing the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Ekwall].

Mr. EKWALL. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me there is no particularly good purpose to be served by this bill. As I stated a few moments ago, I was on the circuit bench of Oregon for a number of years, and during the financial emergency in my State, although I had such constitutional protection as precluded the possibility of my salary being reduced during my term of office, I voluntarily, in order to help out, paid back several thousand dollars to my State. I was glad to do it, although my salary was $6,500 a year and not $20,000. There is nothing so sacred about the Bench that judges should be precluded from sharing in such reductions in times of emergency and stress the same as any other employees of the Government.

I have the highest respect in the world for the splendid gentleman on the Supreme Court Bench. I do not believe it would be possible to get nine finer or more competent justices in the entire country than we have, but I believe that they should, under our democratic form of government, take their chances with Congress, a coordinate branch of our Government.

I do not believe the gentlemen of the Supreme Court care particularly whether this bill is passed or not. As a matter of fact, when a judge has been on the Bench for at least 10 years at a salary of $20,000 a year, he has a reasonable opportunity to put something aside for the day when retirement becomes necessary. It seems to me they have all the protection they should need now, and that if the necessity comes they should and, I believe will gladly, take a reasonable reduction. Personally, I do not believe these gentlemen would ask for the passage of this bill if they had a voice in the matter on this floor, and I think we should vote the bill down. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. Ekwall] has expired.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, this debate is going to close if my motion for the previous question is sustained. I believe we have heard about all there is to it. I hope when you come to vote you will just take this practical consideration of the question: The Supreme Court is a very important place. Prior to this bill we provided that justices of the circuit courts and district courts, upon reaching 70 years of age, with 10 years of continuous service, might retire instead of resigning. I call your attention to the fact that since the enactment of that legislation there has not been any proposition that I know of to change it. Now, we come with the same proposition exactly with reference to the Justices of the Supreme Court, providing that when those men shall have reached the age of 70 years and shall have had 10 years of service, it could be possible, if they are not well or able to do a full day's work, but may be able to do some work, to assign them to positions which they can perform, and make it possible for a man more vigorous to be put on the Supreme Bench, if those Justices are willing and want to retire.

Now, just this concluding thought: We have a concrete example of what we may expect to happen. Mr. Justice Holmes, according to the statement of my colleague from Texas, for 20 years could have resigned on full pay; but he served his country without resigning, and there is no reason for any man in this House to say that a single man on the Supreme Court, if able to serve, would be unwilling to serve. Such men do not occupy that Court.

Now, what is the converse of the proposition? It is that a man on that Court who feels he is slowing up ought to have the privilege of being given lighter work. It is not for the judges. From the arguments we hear one would imagine this is all for the judges. I am ashamed of a man who would make that sort of a statement on the floor of this House. [Applause.] It is for the courts of the United States. It is for the Supreme Court of the United States, for the people of the United States that this legislation is proposed. Will any man stand on the floor of this House and say that he does not believe we ought to have men who are vigorous mentally and physically that this country can follow? They talk about a pension. I say you are putting a pension on a man staying there when he should come off. This is not trying to buy anybody to leave by refusing to pass this bill. You are trying to have somebody stay there who ought not be there. I am not speaking of the present Justices. I am discussing this matter purely as a matter of public policy.

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMMERS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. McFARLANE. Would the gentleman intimate that the men on the Supreme Court are taking the Government's money when they are not able to perform the work?

Mr. SUMMERS of Texas. No.

Mr. McFARLANE. That is what the gentleman indicated. Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I say there are many of us fellows sitting here taking the Government's money that are not able to do the work, too. [Laughter and applause.] It cannot be measured on that score.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. No. If it were measured on that score, the gentleman and I would pack our grips and get back to Texas tonight.

Mr. McFARLANE. Maybe we should.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. You and I both.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. We understand clearly, do we, that all Federal judges below the Justices of the Supreme Court can now retire and enjoy their active salaries?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Just the same as is proposed in the pending bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. The question I want to ask. based upon this assumption, is, What was the origin of this distinction between Justices of the Supreme Court and justices of the inferior courts? There appears to be a discrimination against the Justices of the Supreme Court.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. It was a discrimination.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. What caused it? Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I am trying to tell the gentleman, because it was more difficult I imagine—I did not write that bill-but I imagine it was more difficult to arrange to give the Supreme Court Justices some work than it was difficult to find assignment for the other justices. Since then it has been concluded, I imagine, that they could be given assignments to the circuits.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, I would remind the gentleman from Texas that he promised to yield to me 3 minutes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I looked for the gentleman, but could not find him.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Texas hisist upon his motion?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I am going to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon, because I promised it to him.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, first I want to say that I admire the very frank way in which the gentleman from Texas has presented this bill; and I want to say, too, that from the angle from which the gentleman views this problem there is considerable merit in his contention. In my opinion, however, there are objections to this bill which far outweigh any of the merits claimed for it by the distinguished Chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

There are two serious questions that I think the House should consider when they vote upon this bill. The first is the loss of jurisdiction by Congress of a proper, legitimate subject of legislation which will necessarily follow the passage of this bill. The second is the power and opportunity which the bill will afford the executive department of the Government for determining the political and economic complexion of the judicial branch of the Government. We all admit, no matter what side of the aisle we are on, that these two branches of our Government as well as the legislative branch, ought to be kept separate and that executive influence ought to be exerted on the other two branches as little as possible.

There is only one legitimate purpose to this bill and that, I think, will be admitted by everyone; it is to secure the retirement pay of Justices of the United States Supreme Court by taking away the jurisdiction of the Congress to lower their pensions after they have retired from active service on the Bench. Retiring under the provisions of this bill amounts, for all practical purposes, to resigning. Upon the resignation of a Justice, under existing law, Congress may fix his retirement pay. Upon the retirement of a Justice under this bill, Congress would be precluded by the constitutional prohibition from either fixing or interfering with his retirement pay. Under this bill a retired Justice will draw his full salary of $20,000 for life, and no Congress in the future can pass any law decreasing it. That is the sole estensible purpose of the bill.

Under ordinary circumstances, a Justice of the Supreme Court may not be inclined to resign when he knows that his retirement pay may be put in jeopardy by enactment of some future Congress, but that is not a sufficient reason for the Congress surrendering jurisdiction. This may be one reason why some Justices stay on the Bench after the time when, by reason of age, they ought to resign. But that is a matter with which Congress has nothing to do. Personally. I think that when a Supreme Court Justice has drawn a salary of $20,000 per year for 10 or 20 or 30 years, and the time comes he thinks he ought to retire, that he should do so without insisting that Congress give up its right to determine the amount of his retirement pay.

I believe Congress should retain its jurisdiction over the pensions, not only of the Justices of the Supreme Court but of every Federal officer. I think it was a mistake to pass this kind of a retirement pay law with respect to district judges and circuit judges.

Now, let me discuss just for a moment my second objection to this bill, and that is that under it the Chief Executive may be placed in a position to change the personnel of the Supreme Court under circumstances never intended by the Constitution.

We do not need to tax our imaginations to visualize a situation under which the Chief Executive might want to make a new appointment to the Supreme Bench, an appointment which he could not make while the Bench was full. The gentleman from Texas has already told you how

Spence Stack

Steagall

Sullivan

Sweeney

Truax Umstead Underwood

Utterback Vinson, Ga.

Vinson, Kv.

Walter Warren

Weaver West

Wilcox

Williams

Wilson, La.

Zioncheck

Zimmerman

Terry

Sumners, Tex.

unwilling Supreme Court Justices are to resign so long as Congress has the right to fix or change the amount of their pensions, and how willing they would be to retire under this bill when the proper time for retirement comes, because the bill guarantees full pay for life after retirement.

Now, please do not misunderstand me, for I am not impugning the motives of anybody. But I simply say, and I submit it for your thoughtful consideration, that under this bill, which offers every inducement for retirement when the proper age for retirement comes, retirements from the Supreme Bench will become the usual instead of the unusual thing with those eligible for retirement, and consequently the Chief Executive will be placed in a position to fill vacancies on the Supreme Bench at much more frequent intervals than the Constitution ever contemplated.

I am not referring to any present particular situation on the Supreme Bench. I am speaking broadly of the bill, and am simply pointing out this feature of it as showing its possibilities in the direction of enlarged Executive prerogatives.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Texas yield for a parliamentary inquiry? Mr. SUMNERS of Texas.

I yeld.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York. If the previous question were defeated, could an amendment be offered which would reduce the retirement salary to two-thirds of the active salary?

The SPEAKER. Any germane amendment would be in order if the previous question were voted down.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. If the Chair will permit, the gentleman may not be technically confused, but he would be practically confused, because if these judges are retired instead of being allowed to resign-I want to be very candid with the House-they are still judges and under the Constitution they cannot be disturbed in their salary.

Mr. MOTT. If the gentleman will permit, the gentleman's amendment would be good as to any Justice appointed in the future, would it not?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. No; not at all.

I make just this statement to my friends and then shall move the previous question. I have much respect for my good friend, but in the matter of the jurisdiction of Congress, everybody knows that Congress has no more jurisdiction over the salary of these Justices than it has over the territory of the moon.

Mr. MOTT. I was not talking about salary; I was talking about retirement pay in event they voluntarily desired to retire and accept a stipulated retirement pay.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I know, but Congress has no jurisdiction over their salary; you cannot disturb them; you cannot make them get off the Bench.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, on the passage of the bill I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 144, nays 210, not voting 77, as follows:

[Roll No. 231

YEAS-144
Adair	Cary	Cravens	Dorsey
Barden	Celler	Cross, Tex.	Doughton
Berlin	Chandler	Crosser, Ohio	Driscoll
Bland	Chapman	Cullen	Duffey, Ohio
Bloom	Citron	Daly	Duffy, N. Y.
Boland	Clark, N. C.	Dear	Duncan
Boylan	Cochran	Delaney	Eagle
Brennan	Colden	Dempsey	Ellenbogen
Brown, Mich.	Cole, Md.	Dickstein	Evans
Buck	Collins	Dingell	Ferguson
Bulwinkle	Connery	Disney	Fitzpatrick
Carmichael	Cooper, Tenn.	Dobbins	Frey
Cartwright	Corning	Dockweiler	Fuller

Gassaway Goldsborough Greenwood Greever Gregory Hancock, N. Y Hancock, N. C. Harlan Harter Healey Hennings Hess Hill. Ala Hobbs Hollister Johnson Tex Kee Kennedy, Md. Lambeth

Allen Amlie

Arends Ayers Bacon

Binderup

Blackney

Blanton

Boehne

Boilean Bolton

Brewster

Brunner

Burdick

Burnham

Carlson Carpenter

Castellow Cavicchia

Church

Cole, N. Y. Costello Cox

Crawford

Crowe Crowther

Crosby

Culkin

Darden Darrow

Deen Dies Dietrich

Ditter

Driver

Eckert

Ekwall

Dondero

Dunn, Pa.

Edmiston Eicher

Christianson

Carter

Cannon, Mo. Cannon, Wis.

Caldwell

Buckbee Buckler, Minn.

Andrew, Mass.

Andrews, N. Y.

Lesinski Lewis, Colo. McAndrews McCormack McGrath McKeough McLaughlin McMillan McReynolds Martin, Colo. Mason Massingale May Meeks Merritt, N. Y. Michener Mitchell, III. Monaghan Montague Nelson Norton

O'Connell O'Connor O'Day O'Leary O'Neal Palmisano Perkins Peterson, Fla. Quinn Ramsay Ramspeck Rayburn Rogers, N. H. Russell Sanders, La. Schulte Scrugham Shanley Sirovich Sisson Smith, Conn. Smith, W. Va. Somers, N. Y.

NAVS-210

Kopplemann Kvale Lamneck Engel Englebright Faddis Lehlbach Lemke Farley Fenerty Flesinger Lewis, Md. Fish Fletcher Luckey Focht Ludlow Ford, Calif. Ford, Miss. Lundeen McClellan Gavagan Gearhart McGehee McLeod Maas Gehrmann Gifford Gildea Mahon Mapes Marcantonio Gingery Goodwin Martin, Mass. Maverick Granfield Gray, Ind. Merritt, Conn. Millard Gray, Pa. Griswold Miller Guyer Mitchell, Tenn. Gwynne Halleck Moran Moritz Hamlin Higgins, Conn. Mott Murdock Higgins, Mass. Hildebrandt Nichols Oliver Hill, Knute Hill, Samuel B. Owen Parks Hoeppel Hoffman Parsons Patman Holmes Patterson Hook Patton Hope Huddleston Pearson Peterson, Ga. Pettengill Hull Imhoff Pittenger Plumley Jacobsen Jenkins, Ohio Polk Powers Rabaut Johnson, Okla. Keller Kelly Randolph Kennedy, N. Y. Kenney Kimball Ransley Reece Reed, Ill. Kinzer Reed, N. Y. Kloeb Kniffin Reilly Knutson Rich Richards Kocialkowski

Richardson Robertson Rogers, Mass. Rogers, Okla. Rudd Sadowski Sanders, Tex. Sandlin Scott Sears Secrest Seger Short Smith, Wash. South Starnes Stefan Stewart Stubbs Sutphin Tarver Taylor, S. C. Taylor, Tenn. Thomas Thomason Thompson Thurston Tinkham Tobey Tonry Treadway Turner Turpin Wadsworth Wallgren Wearin Welch Whelchel White Whittington Wigglesworth Wilson, Pa. Withrow Wolcott Wolfenden Wolverton Wood Woodruff

NOT VOTING-77

ertson

Andresen	Cooper, Ohio	Jones
Arnold	Cummings	Kahn
Ashbrook	DeRouen	Kramer
Bacharach	Doutrich	Lambertso
Bankhead	Doxey	Larrabee
Beam	Drewry	Lea, Calif.
Beiter	Dunn, Miss,	Lee, Okla.
Bell	Fernandez	Lloyd
Biermann	Flannagan	McGroarty
Brooks	Fulmer	McLean
Buchanan	Gambrill	McSwain
Buckley, N. Y.	Gasque	Maloney
Burch	Gilchrist	Mansfield
Carden	Gillette	Marshall
Casey	Greenway	Mead
Claiborne	Haines	Montet
Clark, Idaho	Hartley	O'Brien
Coffee	Houston	O'Malley
Colmer	Jenckes, Ind.	Peyser
Cooley	Johnson, W. Va.	Pfeifer
0- 41- 1-11

So the bill was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs: Mr. Biermann (for) with Mr. Doutrich (against).

Pierce Robinson, Utah Robsion, Ky. Romjue Ryan Sabath Schaefer Schneider Schuetz Shannon Smith. Va. Snyder Taber Taylor, Colo. Thom Werner Woodrum

Young

General pairs:

General pairs:

Mr. Bankhead with Mr. Cooper of Ohlo,
Mr. Mead with Mr. McLean.
Mr. Drewry with Mr. Glichrist.
Mr. Romjue with Mr. Robsion of Kentucky.
Mr. Doxey with Mr. Taber.
Mr. McSwain with Mr. Andresen.
Mr. Woodrum with Mr. Hartley.
Mr. Taylor of Colorado with Mrs. Kahn.
Mr. Lea of California with Mr. Marshall,
Mr. Arnold with Mr. Lambertson.
Mr. Buchanan with Mr. Schneider.
Mr. Mansfield with Mr. Thom.
Mr. DeRouen with Mrs. Greenway.
Mr. Burch with Mr. Werner.
Mr. Montet with Mr. Houston.
Mr. Sabath with Mr. Houston.
Mr. Sabath with Mr. Cooley.
Mr. Smith of Virginia with Mr. Snyder.
Mr. Johnson of West Virginia with Mr. O'Brien.
Mr. Fulmer with Mr. Brooks.
Mr. Gasque with Mr. Lloyd.
Mr. Haines with Mr. Ashbrook.
Mr. Jones with Mr. Coffee.
Mr. Beiter with Mr. Ciark of Idaho.
Mr. Maloney with Mr. Pierce.
Mr. Gambrill with Mr. Dunn of Mississippl.
Mrs. Jenckes of Indiana with Mr. Gillette.
Mr. Schaefer with Mr. Pfeifer.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Schuetz.
Mr. Larrabee with Mr. Colmer.
Mr. Kramer with Mr. O'Malley.
Mr. Claiborne with Mr. Colmer.
Mr. Kramer with Mr. Dwalley of New York.
Mr. Robinson of Utah with Mr. McGroarty.
Mr. Cummings with Mr. Ryan. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. On motion by Mr. BLANTON, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was rejected was laid on the table.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED

Bills of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 147. An act to alter the amount apportioned to certain States for public employment offices affiliated with the United States Employment Service; to the Committee on Labor.

S. 209. An act for the relief of Carmine Sforza; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 236. An act for the relief of the heirs of Burton Stearns Adams, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 243. An act for the relief of Curtis Jett; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 279. An act to extend the time for the refunding of certain taxes erroneously collected from certain building and loan associations; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 428. An act authorizing adjustment of the claim of Korber Realty, Inc.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 535. An act for the relief of William Cornwell and others; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 537. An act for the relief of C. O. Meyer; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 713. An act granting jurisdiction to the Court of Claims to hear the case of David A. Wright; to the Committee on War Claims.

S. 741. An act for the relief of the Union Shipping & Trading Co., Ltd.; to the Committee on War Claims.

S. 857. An act to authorize the Department of Labor to continue to make special statistical studies upon payment of the cost thereof, and for other purposes; to the Committee on

S. 872. An act for the allowance of certain claims for extra labor above the legal day of 8 hours at the several navy yards and shore stations certified by the Court of Claims; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 937. An act for the relief of the J. M. Dooley Fireproof Warehouse Corporation, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 998. An act to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of George Lawley & Son Corporation, of Boston, Mass.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1037. An act authorizing adjustment of the claims of Sanford A. McAlister and Eliza L. McAlister; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1038. An act authorizing adjustment of the claim of Elda Geer; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1056. An act authorizing adjustment of the claim of Schutee & Koerting Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1180. An act to amend section 4865 of the Revised Statutes, as amended; to the Committee on Education.

S. 1266. An act for the relief of Robert E. Masters; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1360. An act for the relief of Teresa de Prevost; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1392. An act conferring upon the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, southern division, jurisdiction of the claim of Minnia C. de Back against the Alaska Railroad; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1472. An act for the relief of the First Camden National Bank & Trust Co., of Camden, N. J.; to the Committee on

S. J. Res. 21. Joint resolution authorizing the President to proclaim October 11 of each year General Pulaski's Memorial Day, for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

COMPACTS BETWEEN STATES

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Joint Resolution No. 146, to authorize the several States to negotiate compacts or agreements to promote greater uniformity in the laws of such States affecting labor and industries.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to the several States to negotiate and enter into compacts or agree-ments among them or any of them providing for greater uni-formity in the laws of the several States affecting the relation of employers and employees.

SEC. 2. Upon the request of the States negotiating under this act the President may designate a representative to attend upon such negotiations

SEC. 3. No such compact or agreement shall be binding or obligatory upon any State a party thereto unless and until it has been approved by the legislatures of each of the States whose assent is contemplated by the terms of the compact or agreement and by the Congress.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, it was suggested to me a moment ago that probably the Judiciary Committee ought not to call up other bills at this time; however, I go on the theory that this House cannot be wrong all the time. so we called up another one.

I want to make only a very brief statement with regard to the character of this resolution. We have a provision in the Constitution which prohibits States from entering into contracts without the consent of Congress. This resolution is permissive only. When the Constitution was framed, there was concern evidently that the States might enter into compacts with each other and break up the Union. Therefore this provision was incorporated in the Constitution that no compact among the States would be effective unless approved by the Congress.

Under the provisions of this bill, whatever is agreed to by the different States must be brought back to Congress for approval. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HEALEY] made the report for our committee; therefore, I yield the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HEALEY] such time as he may require.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Speaker, at the outset may I say that this measure was before the Seventy-third Congress and passed? It was too late in the session of the Congress, however, for the Senate to consider it.

The object of this resolution is to permit the several States or any of them to enter into compacts with reference to labor laws or regulatory industrial laws governing the relationship of employer and employee. The Constitution provides that any compact entered into between States must have the consent of Congress. This particular resolution provides that the Congress give consent to the various States to enter into compacts or agreements providing for greater uniformity in the laws of the several States affecting the relation of employer and employee. There is not anything obligatory or compulsory about this resolution. It is merely a permissive proposition.

Any compact drawn up between one or more States would probably be drawn up for a term of years and would undoubtedly provide a reservation permitting any one of the parties to the compact to withdraw under certain conditions; any compact entered into between the States would, after ratification by the legislatures of the States involved, require final approval of Congress thereafter.

Mr. Speaker, I understand this movement had its origin back sometime in 1931, when the now President of the United States was Governor of the State of New York, and several of the States, through their representatives or commissioners, held a conference in the State of New York. After discussion on this matter, a movement was started to bring about a greater uniformity of laws governing the relationship of employer and employee. Later in 1933 a similar conference was held in Massachusetts. This resolution is the result of a conference held by seven States, five New England States and New York and Pennsylvania.

Of course, in the highly industrialized States the labor laws and the industrial regulations are more severe than in the States which have only recently become industrialized. During the depression this situation has been accentuated. We have had a migration of factories from State to State, seeking the States that had the most lenient labor conditions. Obviously that puts the State with the more severe regulatory laws at a disadvantage. It will have a tendency to lower the standards in that State in its desire or necessity to try to compete with States that have lenient labor regulations. The result will be that the State having the lenient regulations will further lower its standards, and our whole economic situation will be affected thereby.

This legislation merely provides the opportunity for the States to get together to make agreements concerning labor laws, and then the resolution provides, if the States so desire. they may ask the President of the United States to assign a representative to meet with them while these agreements are being negotiated.

Mr. CULKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HEALEY. I yield to the gentleman from New York. Mr. CULKIN. Do these compacts or agreements between the representatives of the different States have to go back to the legislatures of those States?

Mr. HEALEY. Yes. They will have to be ratified by the legislatures of the various States affected.

Mr. CULKIN. In other words, ultimately the agreement between the representatives of those States will be written into the statute laws of the States affected?

Mr. HEALEY. That, in my opinion, will be the ultimate result, after the respective State legislatures ratify any such compact and Congress subsequently approves.

Mr. CULKIN. And this is simply a preliminary step looking to that end.

Mr. HEALEY. Of course, this is a preliminary step. If they enter into a compact, the legislatures of the various States will have to enact legislation which will take care of the situation, and then the whole matter is brought back to Congress for its approval.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HEALEY. I yield.

Mr. BOILEAU. I notice in reading the resolution it states that the agreement must be approved by the State legislatures.

Mr. HEALEY. Yes; that is true.
Mr. BOILEAU. It does not say anything about approval by the Governors. Is it the gentleman's understanding that the language "approved by the legislatures" practically assumes the enactment of the law and approval by the Governors of the States?

Mr. HEALEY. That would be determined by the provisions of the constitutions of the States involved. I think the Governors of the States affected would be authorized to delegate representatives to draw up these compacts, to sit in at these deliberations, and such representatives would bring back the compact, if they had agreed upon it, and the legislature would then act.

Mr. BOILEAU. And that compact must be approved by the legislatures?

Mr. HEALEY. Yes.

Mr. BOILEAU. And does not the gentleman also anticipate it would have to be approved by the Governors?

Mr. HEALEY. I assume that would follow, depending on the constitutions of the States involved.

Mr. CULKIN. I have assumed that is the language, although I have not had an opportunity to go into that phase of the matter

Mr. HEALEY. The arrangement provides for approval by the legislatures of the various States affected.

Mr. BOILEAU. Assuming that the legislature approved it and the Governor did not sign it-

Mr. HEALEY. The State constitution would control that situation.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HEALEY. Yes.

Mr. MOTT. Is it proposed under this bill for certain persons to be delegated by the Governor to actually make a compact or a contract which, upon ratification by the legislatures, will be binding?

Mr. HEALEY. No. It would not be binding until after ratification by the legislatures of the States affected and after the consent of Congress.

Mr. MOTT. Let me carry that a little further. Suppose the commission delegated by the Governors of two States actually made a compact on a certain subject and it was approved by the legislatures, would that in itself have the effect of law?

Mr. HEALEY. Not until final action by Congress.

Mr. MOTT. I mean, under this bill.

Mr. HEALEY. Under this bill, it will be necessary for the ratification by the various legislatures affected of the agreement and then it would necessitate the consent of Congress.

Mr. MOTT. Under this bill? Mr. HEALEY. Under this bill.

Mr. MOTT. This bill, I understood, gives permission in advance.

Mr. HEALEY. It gives permission to enter into negotiations and when the negotiations are completed and a compact is agreed upon, it will require the final consent of Congress.

Mr. MOTT. Is there any law or series of laws on a particular subject that the legislatures of two States can enact without authority of this bill or without violating the provisions of the Constitution? In other words, would it not be possible to do the same thing at present without this law?

Mr. HEALEY. No compact or agreement can be entered into between the various States without the approval of Congress, under the Constitution.

Mr. MOTT. I understand that, but why is a compact or contract necessary?

Mr. HEALEY. In order to be a binding agreement.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HEALEY. Yes.

Mr. MICHENER. Fundamentally, under the Constitution, no State can enter into an agreement with one or more States without the consent of Congress.

Mr. MOTT. I understand that. I may say to the gentleman that we are doing that in the States of Oregon and Washington in regard to legislation on fisheries without any violation of the Constitution and without any trouble what-

Mr. HEALEY. You have an understanding in that case. Mr. MOTT. After the legislatures meet, they simply send conferees from one State or the other and they decide upon what fisheries legislation ought to be put into effect on the rivers separating the States.

Mr. MICHENER. That is a gentleman's agreement.

Mr. HEALEY. You have an understanding, but not a binding agreement.

Mr. MOTT. It is not a binding agreement, and we do not need it. We just go ahead and pass the legislation we want to, and the other State does the same thing.

Mr. MICHENER. In this case there will be something binding.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HEALEY. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri. Mr. WOOD. This is a very unique legislative proposal. I should like to ask the gentleman, in case a group of States had entered into a compact and then the Congress had to approve the compact, say, on child-labor legislation or restricting the hours of labor of women, and the Congress would approve the compact entered into by and between a number of States, then in accordance with this proposed legislation, if passed, would any State have the right, after Congress had approved this compact, or would any of the States that are parties to the compact, have the authority in succeeding sessions of the legislature to enact legislation that was not in conformity with the compact?

Suppose it was the 8-hour day for women in 7 or 8 States, then would any State which had a part in that compact have the right at the next session of the legislature to enact legislation that would either increase or decrease the restriction?

Mr. HEALEY. If States entered into a compact that would be binding on them, then, in my opinion, no future legislature could enact laws which would in effect destroy the

Mr. WOOD. I am not an attorney, but I seriously question the constitutionality of it, because it interferes with State rights. I think it is a very dangerous piece of legislation.

Mr. McCORMACK. Will the gentleman yield? I am the author of this bill, and I want to say that there seems to be a complete misunderstanding. The gentleman is no more a friend of labor than I am, and I do not want him to go off half-cocked.

Mr. WOOD. I am not going off half-cocked. I simply wanted to know who is the sponsor of the bill, and I want to know what the effect of the bill would be.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. HEALEY. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DONDERO. Is there anything in the bill that would permit a State to withdraw from the compact?

Mr. HEALEY. That would be according to the agreement entered into. If the agreement provided for a length of time for the compact to be enforced, it probably would provide a method of withdrawal.

Mr. MICHENER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HEALEY. I yield.

Mr. MICHENER. There is nothing in this except that if these States want to enter into an agreement they submit the request to Congress that they may be permitted to get together and work out the agreement, and after they work it out they bring it back to Congress and Congress determines whether or not it wants to give its consent to the compact.

Mr. HEALEY. That is true.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HEALEY. I yield.

Mr. LEHLBACH. The gentleman has stated that if the legislation passed by the States is in derogation of the compact that it would be invalid.

Mr. HEALEY. I did not intend such a flat statement, but it is my opinion that subsequent legislation would not have the effect of vitiating the agreement.

Mr. LEHLBACH. If the legislature of a State that was a party to the compact passes legislation contravening the terms of the compact, how could the terms be enforced?

Mr. HEALEY. That will be a question for the courts to

Mr. BOILEAU. It seems to me that if the agreement becomes binding we will be setting up an organic law which is more organic than the Constitution as method of amendment.

Mr. HEALEY. I think the gentleman should understand that these agreements may provide methods of amendment and also for withdrawal. I am satisfied that the agreements will not be entered into unless they provide some measure to take care of the matter the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Boileau] has in mind.

Mr. PERKINS. Is it not true that this resolution does not really confer any power upon the States that they have not at the present time?

Mr. HEALEY. That is true.
Mr. PERKINS. And is it not also true that the purpose of this is really expressed in section 2, that the President may designate a representative of the Federal Government to cooperate in the making of their compact?

Mr. HEALEY. That is true.

Mr. PERKINS. In answer to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Boileau], if two States now enter into a treaty, unless it is provided in the treaty that they can withdraw therefrom, they are bound, so this confers no other power. The States have now the power to enter into treaties with each other, and those treaties are not binding until approved by the Congress.

Mr. HEALEY. That is true.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HEALEY. Yes.

Mr. DINGELL. Why is the bill limited specifically to labor compacts?

Mr. HEALEY. Of course other matters may be later dealt with by proper legislation. There have been many cases where States have entered into compacts concerning boundary lines and other matters. This, I believe, is the first time that legislation has been introduced affecting labor questions.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LEHLBACH. It is evident that this is a matter that is not very well understood by the Members present. I make the point of order that there is no quorum present. I think the Members of the House ought to be present.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from New Jersey withhold his point of order?

Mr. LEHLBACH. The gentleman from New York moves that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. McCORMACK. There is some question I think can be explained very easily. I hope the gentleman will not press his point of order. I certainly would not do it with reference to him.

Mr. LEHLBACH. In view of my consideration and esteem for the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. HEALEY. I am going to yield to the author of the bill now.

Mr. DINGELL. Has the committee taken into consideration the possibility of authorizing compacts pertaining to certain features of social legislation where it might be of advantage between States to enter into a compact?

Mr. HEALEY. The committee considered only the matters that are contained in this bill.

Mr. DINGELL. Does the gentleman realize that we are going to have all of these pensions and unemployment insurance?

Mr. DUFFEY of Ohio. The several States of the Union now have the right to enter into compacts, which must be submitted to the Congress, under our Federal Constitution.

Mr. DINGELL. Why in this instance provide for this special thing?

Mr. HEALEY. This is a simple proposition. We are encouraging negotiations of compacts by the various States to the end that the standard of living may be generally

Mr. DINGELL. I have no objection to it, but I wondered about the underlying cause or reason for it.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I want to address myself to my friend from Missouri [Mr. Wood]. It is to convey to the gentleman what the resolution contains. eral States now have the right to enter into negotiations and compacts. This is nothing new. This bill does not and cannot change existing constitutional law. The procedure is for the legislatures of two or more States to pass special acts authorizing commissioners to be appointed to enter into negotiations with each other on a particular question. In the past the usual subject has been a matter of boundary line or such as the Port Authority of New York City, where New Jersey and New York have entered into a compact respecting New York Harbor. New York Harbor is in two States, and they had to do that, in order that the use of the harbor might be consistent with the best interests of the two States, and the cities bordering thereon. In the past these compacts have been confined to such limited questions. Back a few years ago five of the six New England States, New York, and Pennsylvania entered into negotiations respecting a pact relating to some of the problems pertaining to employer and employee, to try to bring about uniform laws in those States with reference to the subject considered and with reference to which there was community of interest. That right exists now under the Constitution. However, when negotiations are concluded this compact must go back to the legislatures of the several States, to have it ratified, and having been ratified, then the States have to come to Congress and Congress has to in turn ratify the compact. This resolution does not change the law at all. The only thing it does is to enable such States on matters relating to employer and employee to ask the Federal Government to send a representative to sit in on the negotiations. That is what this resolution means. It means nothing more. It means nothing less.

Mr. WOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. WOOD. The gentleman says this does not change the present law whatsoever.

Mr. McCORMACK. The present constitutional law.

Mr. WOOD. Then why the introduction of this bill? I will have to disagree with the gentleman. It has just been explained if a group of States should enter into a compact it would have to be ratified by Congress, and that after Congress had ratified this compact, no State would have authority, in a subsequent session of the general assembly, to propose legislation that was not in accord with this pact.

Mr. McCORMACK. This is what happens: Each State, of course, in its compact reserves to itself certain rights. It makes reservations. This is nothing new.

Mr. WOOD. Is not the gentleman willing to trust this to the States? Is it necessary to have Congress ratify these pacts and tie the hands of the States so that they cannot, after entering into the pact, suggests legislation not in conformity with the pact?

Mr. McCORMACK. We do not change the existing law now. The present Constitution requires that. There is no change in this resolution.

Mr. WOOD. Then why the introduction of this bill?

Mr. McCORMACK. The introduction of this bill is to inspire.

Mr. WOOD. Oh, that is it?

Mr. McCORMACK. Yes. The introduction of this bill is to enable States entering into negotiations on matters relating to employer and employee, to ask the Federal Government simply to send a representative there to confer, so that they may sit in on the negotiations. What is wrong with that? This compact has to go to Congress sooner or later. It is proper to have representatives of the Federal Government sit in if the States request it.

Mr. CHURCH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. CHURCH. The gentleman says it must come back to Congress. Where are the words in this bill which require that?

Mr. McCORMACK. To begin with, the Constitution requires it. Section 3 of this bill provides:

No such compact or agreement shall be binding or obligatory upon any State a party thereto unless and until it has been approved by the legislatures of each of the States whose assent is contemplated by the terms of the compact or agreement and by the Congress.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack] has expired.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman from Massachusetts 2 additional minutes.

Mr. WOOD. I should like to ask the gentleman a ques-

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Is section 3 part of the law now? Mr. McCORMACK. It is a part of the constitutional law, yes. If several States, through their legislatures. authorize commissioners on a particular subject, when they meet they can simply say to the Department of Labor, "We should like to have you send a representative here."

Now, my friend spoke about social legislation. This is related to employer and employee. Several industrial States might have many things in common with one another. It is a great legislative field whereby in the future State rights can be preserved against encroachment by the Federal Government. They may negotiate a compact to arrive at uniform agreement as to what the law of each State shall be with relation to a particular subject with proper reservations.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Does this bill provide that a Federal representative will not be sent to the States unless asked for by the States?

Mr. McCORMACK. Exactly. Mr. WOODRUFF. Then, the bill ought to become a law. Mr. McCORMACK. Exactly. That is the only thing in this bill. The only purpose is to permit it. It does not change the existing law one iota. This does not stop the several States from having negotiations and entering into a compact on a social matter. It does not stop agricultural States from considering agricultural problems. As far as this bill is concerned, it permits, upon request, a Federal representative to attend.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack] has again expired.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the passage of the joint resolution.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Wood) there were—ayes 36, noes 53.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that it is obvious from the vote on the previous question that Members desire further discussion, I make the point of order of no quorum.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.), the House, pursuant to its order heretofore entered, adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, March 7, 1935, at 11 o'clock a. m.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The Subcommittee on Judiciary of the Committee on the District of Columbia meets Thursday, March 7, at 10: 30 a.m., room 345, old House Office Building, to consider bills (H. R. 5809 and H. R. 5850) providing for amendment of the liquor law.

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION

Continue hearings Thursday, March 7, 10 a.m., room 445, old House Office Building, on bills providing for restriction of habitual commuting of aliens from foreign contiguous territory.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

251. A communication from the President of the United | REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND States, transmitting schedules of claims amounting to $381,945.63, allowed by the General Accounting Office, as covered by certificates of settlement, the numbers of which are shown in the first columns of such schedules, under appropriations the balance of which have been carried to the surplus fund under the provisions of section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874 (U.S.C., title 31, sec. 713), and for the services of the several departments and independent offices (H. Doc. No. 122); to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

252. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a list of judgments rendered by the Court of Claims and which require an appropriation for their payment, amounting to $165,803.06 (H. Doc. No. 123); to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

253. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting three supplemental estimates of appropriations for the Post Office Department to provide additional funds for clerks and carriers at first- and secondclass post offices and for stationery, etc., for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, aggregating $3,049,000 (H. Doc. No. 131); to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

254. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting records of judgments rendered against the Government by the United States district courts, which require an appropriation for their payment of $181,150.74 (H. Doc. No. 124); to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

255. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a deficiency estimate of appropriation submitted by the War Department to pay a claim of the Colt's Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Co. certified by the Comptroller General of the United States in the sum of $7,082.54 (H. Doc. No. 130); to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

256. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting schedules of claims allowed by the General Accounting Office pursuant to certain private acts of the Seventy-third Congress, amounting to $1,784.92 (H. Doc. No. 125); to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

257. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the payment of claims allowed and certified by the General Accounting Office for interest on amounts withheld from claimants by the Comptroller General of the United States in the sum of $4,015.62 (H. Doc. No. 126); to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

258. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting estimates of appropriations submitted by the several executive departments and independent offices to pay claims for damages to privately owned property, in the sum of $43,695.67, which have been considered and adjusted under the provisions of the act of December 28, 1922 (H. Doc. No. 127); to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

259. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting schedules of claims allowed by the General Accounting Office, as shown by certificates of settlement forwarded to the Treasury Department for payment, covering judgments rendered by the United States district courts against collectors of customs, amounting to $29,601.23 (H. Doc. No. 128); to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

260. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting an estimate of appropriations submitted by the Navy Department to pay claims for damages by collisions with naval vessels in the sums of $3,777.02 (H. Doc. No. 129); to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. BLOOM: Committee on Foreign Affairs. H. R. 4901. A bill to authorize appropriations to pay the annual share of the United States as an adhering member of the International Council of Scientific Unions and associated unions; without amendment (Rept. No. 307). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DRIVER: Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. H. R. 6290. A bill to authorize acquisition of land to provide appropriate means of access to the post-office building at Jonesboro, Ark.; without amendment (Rept. No. 308). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. HILDEBRANDT: Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. H. R. 5540. A bill excepting the imposition of demurrage charged on collect-on-delivery parcels exchanged between the continental and istand possessions; with amendment (Rept. No. 310). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. KELLER: Committee on the Library. H. R. 6371. A bill to authorize an increase in the annual appropriation for books for the adult blind; without amendment (Rept. No. 311). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. BEITER: Committee on War Claims. H. R. 2706. A bill to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the Velie Motors Corporation; without amendment (Rept. No. 305). Referred to the Committe of the Whole House.

Mr. BEITER: Committee on War Claims. H. R. 3101. A bill to confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claim of A. C. Messler Co.; without amendment (Rept. No. 306). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. HARTER: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 1963. A bill for the relief of Edgar H. Taber; without amendment (Rept. No. 309). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. SWEENEY: Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. H. R. 4036. A bill for the relief of Ralph C. Irwin; without amendment (Rept. No. 312). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6260) for the relief of Theodore John Campbell; Committee on Military Affairs discharged, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

A bill (H. R. 5633) for the relief of Sarah Abbott; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CONNERY: A bill (H. R. 6450) to accord labor proper opportunity for protection of rights granted by the Congress, and for other purposes; to the Committee on

By Mr. HARLAN (by request): A bill (H. R. 6451) providing for the taxation of receipts of street railroad companies. gas companies, electric and telephone companies in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. HOBBS: A bill (H. R. 6452) making it unlawful to use the mails to solicit or effect insurance or collect and transmit insurance premiums in any State without complying with the insurance laws thereof; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. WEST: A bill (H. R. 6453) to amend the act of May 13, 1924, entitled "An act providing for a study regarding the equitable use of the waters of the Rio Grande", as amended by the public resolution of March 3, 1927; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. COCHRAN: A bill (H. R. 6454) to provide for the payment of veterans' adjusted-service certificates in bonds of the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FERGUSON: A bill (H. R. 6455) to provide for the control of flood waters in the United States by creating a permanent Soil Erosion Service; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. FORD of California: A bill (H. R. 6456) authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make direct loans for emergency relief of mortgage indebtedness on residential property, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. GOODWIN: A bill (H. R. 6457) to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the city of Hudson, N. Y.; to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. HILDEBRANDT: A bill (H. R. 6458) to equalize employment conditions of substitute postal employees, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. MEAD: A bill (H. R. 6459) to regulate the procedure for the award of contracts by the Post Office Department; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. MERRITT of New York: A bill (H. R. 6460) providing for commercial and industrial loans to small industries by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. MORITZ: A bill (H. R. 6461) to increase the salaries of chief clerks and clerks, employees of the railroad companies; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. RANDOLPH (by request): A bill (H. R. 6462) to improve the Government service, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. WADSWORTH: A bill (H. R. 6463) to make further provision concerning the method of amending the Constitution of the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WELCH: A bill (H. R. 6464) to provide means by which certain Filipinos can emigrate from the United States; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. DEROUEN: A bill (H. R. 6465) to accept the cession by the State of Arkansas of jurisdiction over all lands now or hereafter included within the Hot Springs National Park, Ark., and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6466) to modify the homestead laws and to repeal certain provisions thereof; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. DOBBINS: A bill (H. R. 6467) to classify certain positions in the Railway Mail Service, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma (by departmental request): A bill (H. R. 6468) to promote the development of Indian arts and crafts and to create a board to assist therein, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. GASQUE: A bill (H. R. 6469) granting uniform pensions to widows, children, and dependent parents of persons who served the United States in time of peace or war, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mrs. NORTON (by request): A bill (H. R. 6470) to provide for the construction of an office building for the recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also (by request), a bill (H. R. 6471) to amend an act of Congress entitled "An act to establish a Code of Law for the District of Columbia", approved March 3, 1901, as amended, by adding three new sections to be numbered 802 (a), 802 (b), and 802 (c), respectively; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. PETTENGILL: A bill (H. R. 6472) to prohibit and to prevent the trade practices known as "compulsory blockbooking" and "blind selling" in the leasing of motionpicture films in interstate and foreign commerce; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SANDERS of Louisiana: A bill (H. R. 6473) to provide for the construction of a post-office building in Covington, La.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6474) to provide for the construction of a post-office building in Donaldsonville, La.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. FULMER: A bill (H. R. 6475) to provide for the establishment of subsistence homesteads for persons with low income, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. PARSONS: A bill (H. R. 6476) to amend the act of May 18, 1934, providing punishment for killing or assaulting Federal officers; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. COLDEN: Resolution (H. Res. 151) to authorize and empower the Secretary of the Navy to appoint a commission to investigate the necessity of a naval establishment in the Los Angeles, Long Beach, and San Diego areas of California: to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. CULKIN: Resolution (H. Res. 152) directing the Administrator of the Public Works Administration to furnish certain information to the House of Representatives; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEMKE: Resolution (H. Res. 153) to make H. R. 4298, a bill to amend title I of an act entitled "Agricultural Adjustment Act" (Public, No. 10, 73d Cong.), and to provide additional relief by securing to the farmers a minimum price for agricultural commodities of not less than the cost of production thereof, and for other purposes, a special order of business; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Resolution (H. Res. 154) for the appointment of a select committee of the House to investigate special Indian problems; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. KELLER: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 195) to provide for the reappointment of Frederic A. Delano as a member of the Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania: Joint Resolution (H. J. Res. 196) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for proposing and ratifying amendments to the Constitution of the United States by the direct voice of the people; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DIMOND: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 197) authorizing a preliminary examination or survey of Skagway Harbor, Alaska; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. BACON: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 198) accepting the invitation of the Government of France to the United States to participate in the International Exposition of Paris—Applied Arts and Technique in Modern Life, to be held in Paris, France, in 1937; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

MEMORIAL

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, a memorial was presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Oklahoma, memorializing Congress to amend the Bankhead Cotton Control Act; to the Committee on Agriculture

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

Tracey O'Brien Potter; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BEAM: A bill (H. R. 6478) for the relief of James W. Blair; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CANNON of Wisconsin: A bill (H. R. 6479) for the relief of Paul Brinza, father of the late Anton Brinza; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6480) for the relief of Vincent Brenner; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6481) for the relief of Andrew Brenner; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CHURCH: A bill (H. R. 6482) granting the Distinguished Service Medal to Albert W. J. Johnsen; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HILDEBRANDT: A bill (H. R. 6483) for the relief of George C. Widlon; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HOOK: A bill (H. R. 6484) to provide for a basic data survey of the natural resources of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan; to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

By Mr. JOHNSON of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 6485) granting a pension to Clara L. Dolman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KNIFFIN: A bill (H. R. 6486) granting an increase of pension to Sarah Marks; to the Committee on Invalid

By Mr. SUTPHIN: A bill (H. R. 6487) for the relief of the High Clothing Co., Inc.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. LESINSKI: A bill (H. R. 6488) for the relief of Wayne M. Cotner; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. McSWAIN: A bill (H. R. 6489) for the relief of J. A. Cobb: to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6490) for the relief of William Marion Wilcox; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6491) for the relief of Frank Roland; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. PATTERSON: A bill (H. R. 6492) for the relief of S. K. Plum; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6493) granting a pension to Mary J. Whistler; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. PIERCE: A bill (H. R. 6494) for the relief of certain counties in the State of Oregon; to the Committee on

By Mr. RANDOLPH: A bill (H. R. 6495) for the relief of Frederick Strahin; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SOUTH: A bill (H. R. 6496) authorizing the Secretary of War to award a posthumous Distinguished Service Cross to John H. Stafford; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WEAVER: A bill (H. R. 6497) granting a pension to Mrs. William B. Raper, widow of William B. Raper; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6498) authorizing the United States Employees' Compensation Commission to consider the claim of O. G. Anderson; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2728. By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Petition of R. M. Savage and numerous other citizens of Piedmont, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2729. Also, petition of Jack Rudulph and numerous other citizens of Benton, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2730. Also, petition of J. C. Smith and numerous other citizens of Troy, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2731, Also, petition of G. W. Faulk and numerous other citizens of Tennille, Troy, and Banks, Ala., favoring House

By Mr. ASHBROOK: A bill (H. R. 6477) for the relief of | bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2732. Also, petition of O. E. Grover and numerous other citizens of Glenwood, Andalusia, and Opp, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2733. Also, petition of Flemming Tibbs and numerous other citizens of Madison, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2734. Also, petition of Rev. J. E. Davis and numerous other citizens of Carbon Hill and Glen Allen, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2735. Also, petition of J. A. Stricklin and numerous other citizens of Carbon Hill, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2736. Also, petition of G. W. Benson and numerous other citizens of Jasper, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2737. Also, petition of John McClesky and numerous other citizens of Jasper, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2738. Also, petition of R. H. Lovelace and numerous other citizens of Florence, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2739. Also, petition of Web Richardson and numerous other citizens of Russellville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2740. Also, petition of Lee J. Luker and numerous other citizens of Decatur, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2741. Also, petition of J. M. Vest and numerous other citizens of Hartselle, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2742. Also, petition of Albert Richardson and numerous other citizens of Rehoboth, Alberta, and Gastonburg, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2743. Also, petition of Robert Smith and numerous other citizens of Nashville, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2744. Also, petition of F. H. Helm and numerous other citizens of Gates, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2745. Also, petition of Mack Weatherall and numerous other citizens of New Albany and Etta, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2746. Also, petition of Alfred J. Henry and numerous other citizens of Pascagoula, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2747. Also, petition of H. Nicholas and numerous other citizens of Harperville, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2748. Also, petition of Lim Cherry and numerous other citizens of McClain, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2749. Also, petition of G. W. Lloyd and numerous other citizens of Picayune, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2750. Also, petition of Charles Grigge and numerous other citizens of Itta Bena, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2751. Also, petition of Mitchel Stafford and numerous other eitizens of Clarksdale and Duncan, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2752. Also, petition of Josh Payton and numerous other citizens of Carrollton, Coila, and Greenwood, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2753. Also, petition of J. C. Jones and numerous other citizens of Grenada and Duck Hill, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2754. Also, petition of F. R. Taylor and numerous other citizens of Oakdale, Hattiesburg, and Hawthorne, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2755. Also, petition of H. C. McKenzie and numerous other citizens of Barnett, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2756. Also, petition of L. D. McNiece and numerous other citizens of Tremont and Smithville, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2757. Also, petition of Willis Howell and numerous other citizens of Utica, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2758. Also, petition of G. W. Davis and numerous other citizens of New Albany, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2759. Also, petition of John Bryat and numerous other citizens of Greenwood, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2760. Also, petition of Mellatha Hooker and numerous other citizens of Lexington, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2761. Also, petition of Dennis Buskin and numerous other citizens of Buena Vista and Houston, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2762. Also, petition of Taris Stockton and numerous other citizens of Bland, Loves Prairie, and Belle, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2763. Also, petition of John Transue and numerous other citizens of Orrick, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2764. Also, petition of Lawrence Ringland and numerous other citizens of Laclede and Brookfield, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pension of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2765. Also, petition of Harry Daniel and numerous other citizens of Scott and Grady, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2766. Also, petition of Miles Vance and numerous other citizens of Parkdale, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROSERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2767. Also, petition of G. B. Clardy and numerous other citizens of Millport and Ethelsville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocks, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2763. Also, petition of M. L. Sales and numerous other citizens of Andalusia and Gantt, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2769. Also, petition of J. E. Barnes and numerous other citizens of Pigeon Creek, Camden, and Monroeville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2770. Also, petition of J. W. Myrick and numerous other citizens of Deatsville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2771. Also, petition of J. J. Henderson and numerous other citizens of Speigener, Mount Creek, and Montgomery, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2772. Also, petition of Earl Kuykendall and numerous other citizens of Alpharetta and Woodstock, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2773. Also, petition of H. A. Reddoch and numerous other citizens of Troy, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2774. Also, petition of Thomas Mitchel, and numerous other citizens of Brantley, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2775. Also, petition of W. H. Hutchcraft and numerous other citizens of Flomaton and Pollard, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2776. Also, petition of T. J. Brown and numerous other citizens of Peterson, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on | Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Com-Ways and Means.

2777. Also, petition of Charles Troddy and numerous other citizens of Timpson and Tenaha, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2778. Also, petition of John Legate and numerous other citizens of Cerro Gordo, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2779. Also, petition of D. A. Ivey and numerous other citizens of Fairfield and Chandler, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2780. Also, petition of Emmitt Russell and numerous other citizens of Eustace, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2781. Also, petition of J. M. Denison and numerous other citizens of McKinney, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2782. Also, petition of Emmitt Gray and numerous other citizens of Telephone, Honey Grove, and Windom, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2783. Also, petition of C. Halliburton and numerous other citizens of Dilworth and Moulton, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2784. Also, petition of Roger Reid and numerous other citizens of Wortham, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2785. Also, petition of C. E. Casey and numerous other citizens of Tom Ball and Shepherd, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2786. Also, petition of J. H. Moore and numerous other citizens of Warren, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2787. Also, petition of Paul Boldware and numerous other citizens of Karnack, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2788. Also, petition of W. D. Murphy and numerous other citizens of Kirbyville, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2789. Also, petition of J. C. Mater and numerous other citizens of Seymour, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2790. Also, petition of Will Smith and numerous other citizens of Holly Bluff, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2791. Also, petition of Charley Block and numerous other citizens of Pace and Clarksdale, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct mittee on Ways and Means.

2792. Also, petition of Robert Criss and numerous other citizens of Alligator, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2793. Also, petition of Harrison Strong and numerous other citizens of West Point, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2794. Also, petition of William Baldin and numerous other citizens of Shaw, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2795. Also, petition of Frank Stemmons and numerous other citizens of Fayette and Rocheport, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2796. Also, petition of W. T. Ghess and numerous other citizens of Lilbourn, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2797. Also, petition of Elder E. L. Ganes and numerous other citizens of Joplin, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2798. Also, petition of W. M. Ballinger and numerous other citizens of Cape Girardeau, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2799. Also, petition of R. E. Lewis and numerous other citizens of Rolla and Dillon, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2800. Also, petition of Walter Dean and numerous other citizens of Hindman, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2801. Also, petition of Robert Moore and numerous other citizens of Hanson and Slaughters, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2802. Also, petition of Moorman Payne and numerous other citizens of Sample, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2803. Also, petition of James Allen and numerous other citizens of Jefferson County, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2804. Also, petition of Albert Ferguson and numerous other citizens of Jenkins, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2805. Also, petition of George Everheart and numerous other citizens of Morganfield, Waverly, and Spotsville, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2806. Also, petition of Frank E. Jordan and numerous other citizens of Topeka, Kans., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2807. Also, petition of Phillip Taylor and numerous other citizens of Cairo, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2808. Also, petition of Rudolph Weiss and numerous other citizens of Granite City, III., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2809. Also, petition of E. Davis and numerous other citizens of Murphysboro, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2810. Also, petition of Nat Hinton and numerous other citizens of Harvey, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2811. Also, petition of Everett Shoemaker and numerous other citizens of Alvin, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2812. Also, petition of M. Durden and numerous other citizens of Sandersville, Linton, and Mitchell, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2813. Also, petition of W. C. Burdine and numerous other citizens of Ball Ground, Dawsonville, and Gainesville, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2814. Also, petition of W. L. Wheeler and numerous other citizens of Lawrenceville and Decatur, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2815. Also, petition of W. E. Coley and numerous other citizens of Savannah, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2816. Also, petition of Frank Washington and numerous other citizens of Altheimer, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2817. Also, petition of James Ricks and numerous other citizens of Sherrill, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2818. Also, petition of A. N. Retter and numerous other citizens of Little Rock, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2819. Also, petition of James Scales and numerous other citizens of McGehee, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2820. Also, petition of R. F. Meeks and numerous other citizens of Hamburg, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2821. Also, petition of Allen Wills and numerous other citizens of Dermott, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2822. Also, petition of J. R. Bland and numerous other citizens of Havana, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2823. Also, petition of Wiley McRae and numerous other citizens of Waldo, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee of Ways and Means.

2824. Also, petition of Benjamin Wright and numerous other citizens of Waldo, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2825. Also, petition of J. J. Wilson and numerous other citizens of Bassett, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2826. Also, petition of C. H. O'Bryan and numerous other citizens of Cloverdale, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2827. Also, petition of C. Holmes and numerous other citizens of Jefferson County, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2828. Also, petition of Will Dale and numerous other citizens of Brickeys, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2829. Also, petition of W. L. Williams and numerous other citizens of Hodges and Hamilton, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2830. Also, petition of B. Colter and numerous other citizens of Huntsville and New Market, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2831. Also, petition of J. S. Carr and numerous other citizens of Russellville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2832. Also, petition of Elmo White and numerous other citizens of Anderson, Athens, and Rogersville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2833. Also, petition of W. A. Kennedy and numerous other citizens of Fairfax and Girard, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2834. Also, petition of Howard Malone and numerous other citizens of Athens, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2835. Also, petition of J. R. Stone and numerous other citizens of Troy, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2836. Also, petition of Clarence Walker and numerous other citizens of Pinson, Remlap, and Oneonta, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2837. Also, petition of Tom Wooten and numerous other citizens of Florence, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2838. Also, petition of Ben Padgett and numerous other citizens of Davidson, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2839. Also, petition of Everett Bolling and numerous other citizens of Wise and Big Laurel, Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2840. Also, petition of Harry Stevenson and numerous other citizens of Norton and Harrisonburg, Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2841. Also, petition of J. E. Reagle and numerous other citizens of Blencoe, Iowa, favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2842. Also, petition of William Gallaher and numerous other citizens of Moundsville, W. Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2843. Also, petition of J. W. Bailey and numerous other citizens of Cyclone, W. Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2844. Also, petition of Hugh G. Keenan and numerous other citizens of Knob Fork and Littleton, W. Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2845. Also, petition of E. L. Bean and numerous other citizens of Rock Oak and Stephen City, W. Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2846. Also, petition of Roy Carter and numerous other citizens of Starke and Lawtey, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2847. Also, petition of W. M. Hughes and numerous other citizens of Grand Ridge, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2848. Also, petition of Vernon Allison and numerous other citizens of Chandler and Phoenix, Ariz., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2849. Also, petition of N. D. Vigil and numerous other citizens of Arroyo and Taos, N. Mex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2850. Also, petition of W. A. Armstrong and numerous other citizens of Gray Court, Pelzer, and Laurens, S. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2851. Also, petition of D. H. New and numerous other citi-

eral old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2852. Also, petition of L. J. Spear and numerous other citizens of Laplace, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2853. Also, petition of Manuel Harper and numerous other citizens of Dry Creek and Sugartown, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2854. Also, petition of Louis Blanchard and numerous other citizens of Marrero, Westwego, and Larose, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month: to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2855. Also, petition of J. W. Thames and numerous other citizens of Dry Prong and Pollock, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2856. Also, petition of Sonny Williams and numerous other citizens of Bastrop, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2857. Also, petition of E. M. Pettygrew and numerous other citizens of Shreveport and Robson, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2858. Also, petition of C. Moore and numerous other citizens of Idabel, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2859. Also, petition of John Edwards and numerous other citizens of Wagoner, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2860. Also, petition of G. W. Walker and numerous other citizens of McAlester, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2861. Also, petition of R. H. Mann and numerous other citizens of Sulphur and Big Canyon, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2862. Also, petition of J. H. Williams and numerous other citizens of Yadkinville, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2863. Also, petition of G. O. Edwards and numerous other citizens of Furches and Stratford, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2864. Also, petition of J. S. Griffin and numerous other citizens of Cerro Gordo, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2865. Also, petition of John Phipps and numerous other citizens of Nashville, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2866. Also, petition of Frank Brasul and numerous other zens of Troy and Bradley, S. C., favoring House bill 2856, citizens of Coalmont and Pelham, Tenn., favoring House bill by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Fed- 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2867. Also, petition of John Richardson and numerous other citizens of Smyrna, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2868. Also, petition of C. A. Barlow and numerous other citizens of Jonesboro, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2869. Also, petition of Easau Roberson and numerous other citizens of Memphis, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2870. Also, petition of Edward Tucker and numerous other citizens of Kerrville and Lucy, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2871. Also, petition of Paul Freeman and numerous other citizens of Jackson, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2872. Also, petition of Louis Palmer and numerous other citizens of Montgomery, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2873. Also, petition of Simon Hudson and numerous other citizens of Whiteville and Bolivar, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2874. Also, petition of John D. Lasater and numerous other citizens of Nashville and Dickson, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2875. Also, petition of Clifton Smith and numerous other citizens of Clarksville and Memphis, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2876. Also, petition of Joe Buford and numerous other citizens of Humboldt, Alamo, and Gadsden, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2877. Also, petition of Henry Ross and numerous other citizens of Adams, Springfield, and Cedar Hill, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2878. Also, petition of J. J. Rutledge and numerous other citizens of Taft, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2879. Also, petition of Charles Roundtree and numerous other citizens of Halls, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2880. Also, petition of Leonard Jones and numerous other citizens of East Chattanooga and Jasper, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2881. Also, petition of C. A. Goodwin and numerous other citizens of Chattanooga, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2882. Also, petition of John H. Clark and numerous other citizens of North Little Rock, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2883. Also, petition of George Hayner and numerous other citizens of Tinsman, Hampton, and Woodbury, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2884. Also, petition of W. Hampton and numerous other citizens of Parkin and Earle, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2885. Also, petition of Jim Averton and numerous other citizens of Forrest City, Round Pond, and Widener, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2886. Also, petition of George Webster and numerous other citizens of Lexa and Rondo, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2887. Also, a petition of Sam Gordon and numerous other citizens of Crawfordsville, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2888. Also, petition of B. C. Clark and numerous other citizens of Dumas, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2889. Also, petition of Louis Ollis and numerous other citizens of Wynne, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2890. Also, petition of Henry Perry and numerous other citizens of Arkadelphia, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2891. Also, petition of H. D. Davidson and numerous other citizens of Centerville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2892. Also, petition of Hugh Johnson and numerous other citizens of Batesville, Eufaula, and Comer, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2893. Also, petition of Jim Harper and numerous other citizens of Brundidge, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rockes, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2894. Also, petition of Tom Roberson and numerous other citizens of Courtland and Town Creek, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2895. Also, petition of Booker J. Curry and numerous other citizens of Selma, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2896. Also, petition of Joseph Matthews and numerous other citizens of Dixiana, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on | Ways and Means.

2897. Also, petition of J. T. Allen and numerous other citizens of Atmore, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2898. Also, petition of Edgar Darby and numerous other citizens of Florence, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2899. Also, petition of Wright J. Smith and numerous other citizens of Bessemer, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2900. Also, petition of Walter Hickerson and numerous other citizens of Murfreesboro, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2901. Also, petition of M. J. Watkins and numerous other citizens of Finger, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2902. Also, petition of R. W. Richardson and numerous other citizens of Mason, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2903. Also, petition of Preston Owens and numerous other citizens of Moscow, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2904. Also, petition of John Woody and numerous other citizens of Union City, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on 2905. Also, petition of R. L. Sneed and numerous other citizens of Milton and Lascassas, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2906. Also, petition of Chester Carr and numerous other citizens of Jackson and Bemis, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2907. Also, petition of U. O. Collier and numerous other citizens of Nashville, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2908. Also, petition of Hayes Watson and numerous other citizens of Cumberland Gap, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2909. Also, petition of Van H. Williams and numerous other citizens of Manchester, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2910. Also, petition of E. D. Lovins and numerous other citizens of Dyersburg and Friendship, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $40 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2911. Also, petition of Mose Blandon and numerous other citizens of Ripley and Halls, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Fed- bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for eral old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2912. Also petition of A. C. Schroeder and numerous other citizens of Red River, Gresham, and Embarrass, Wis., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2913. Also, petition of Richard W. Peterson and numerous other citizens of Shawano, Wis., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month, to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2914. Also, petition of M. H. Cifers and numerous other citizens of Nickelsville, Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2915. Also, petition of Oliver Part and numerous other citizens of West Point, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2916. Also, petition of Mark Strong and numerous other citizens of West Point, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2917. Also, petition of George Harris and numerous other citizens of Scott, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2918. Also, petition of Will Rubin and numerous other citizens of Mendenhall, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2919. Also, petition of Will James and numerous other citizens of Scott, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2920. Also, petition of Dock Carter and numerous other citizens of Louisville and High Point, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2921. Also, petition of I. G. Herrin and numerous other citizens of Bragg City, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2922. Also, petition of Frank Smith and numerous other citizens of Hunter, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2923. Also, petition of Cornelus Augustus and numerous other citizens of St. Louis, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2924. Also, petition of Alvin Heitman and numerous other citizens of Jenning and St. Louis, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2925. Also, petition of James F. Irvin and numerous other citizens of Goldonna, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2926. Also, petition of Paul Harries and numerous other citizens of McDade, Sligo, and Doyline, La., favoring House direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the | pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways Committee on Ways and Means.

2927. Also, petition of Ben Fredici and numerous other citizens of Clarence and Dry Prong, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2928. Also, petition of A. C. Smith and numerous other citizens of Robeline, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2929. Also, petition of Walter Delphin and numerous other citizens of Natchez and Natchitoches, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2930. Also, petition of Noah Pierre and numerous other citizens of Folsom and Osceola, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2931. Also, petition of Jordan Freeman and numerous other citizens of Violet, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2932. Also, petition of William Miller and numerous other citizens of Lutcher, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2933. Also, petition of Landris Louviere and numerous other citizens of Matthews and Raceland, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2934. Also, petition of John Littleton and numerous other citizens of Keatchie, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means 2935. Also, petition of W. W. Fleenor and numerous other citizens of Millstone, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2936. Also, petition of Joe Barrow and numerous other citizens of Knight and Hamlin, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2937. Also, petition of V. M. Shelton and numerous other citizens of Belton, Dunmor, and Beech Creek, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2938. Also, petition of Calvin H. Jackson and numerous other citizens of Magazine, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2939. Also, petition of Sidney Goodman and numerous other citizens of Adolphus, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2940. Also, petition of Jeff Parmley and numerous other citizens of Parnell, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2941. Also, petition of J. C. Page and numerous other citizens of Canton, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age and Means.

2942. Also, petition of J. E. Francis and numerous other citizens of Tennille, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2943. Also, petition of W. P. Henderson and numerous other citizens of Gainesville, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2944. Also, petition of John Burks and numerous other citizens of Hillsboro and Harperville, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2945. Also, petition of Eddman Montgomery and numerous other citizens of Cocoa, Fla., favoring House bill 2356, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2946. Also, petition of Newton Pitts and numerous other citizens of Williston, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2947. Also, petition of Benny Burns and numerous other citizens of Greensboro, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2948. Also, petition of George King and numerous other citizens of Century, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means 2949. Also, petition of G. C. Hudson and numerous other citizens of Marie and Osceola, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2950. Also, petition of G. W. Ellis and other citizens of North Little Rock, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2951. Also, petition of W. L. Sanders and numerous other citizens of Burdette, Luxora, and Blytheville, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2952. Also, petition of Earnest Taylor and numerous other citizens of De Valls Bluff, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2953. Also, petition of W. M. Kleckley and numerous other citizens of Pine Bluff, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2954. Also, petition of Warner Gossett and numerous other citizens of Camden, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2955. Also, petition of Lewis Sharpe and numerous other citizens of Hawes and Crossett, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2956. Also, petition of Filmore Copley and numerous other citizens of Dunlow and Missouri Branch, W. Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2957. Also, petition of L. Shelton and numerous other citizens of West Hamlin, W. Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2958. Also, petition of J. D. Bates and numerous other citizens of Rice, Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2959. Also, petition of John Welsh and numerous other citizens of Buck Grove, Iowa, favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2960. Also, petition of Henry C. Murphy and numerous other citizens of Jerseyville, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2961. Also, petition of Floyd Jones and numerous other citizens of Jasper and Parrish, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2962. Also, petition of L. R. Ashmore and numerous other citizens of Kenton and Rutherford, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2963. Also, petition of R. A. Brasher and numerous other citizens of Decaturville, Bath Spring, and Parsons, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2964. Also, petition of W. E. Lord and numerous other citizens of Nashville, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2965. Also, petition of E. E. Parker and numerous other citizens of Shelbyville, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2966. Also, petition of Hurmon Bell and numerous other citizens of Center and Timpson, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2967. Also, petition of Howard Lyemons and numerous other citizens of San Antonio, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2968. Also, petition of Edward Strouther and numerous other citizens of Tell and Estelline, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2969. Also, petition of Preston McGowen and numerous other citizens of Blanchard and Livingston, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2970. Also, petition of J. W. Gibson and numerous other citizens of Midway and Madisonville, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2971. Also, petition of Chester Fowler and numerous other citizens of Colmesneil and Emilee, Tex., favoring House bill for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; | Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2972. Also, petition of J. N. Rusamand and numerous other citizens of Elkhart and Palestine, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2973. Also, petition of D. W. Williamson and numerous other citizens of Teague, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2974. Also, petition of Joe Glenn and numerous other citizens of Pineland and Silsbee, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2975. Also, petition of A. Albert and numerous other citizens of Cold Springs, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2976. Also, petition of L. E. Smith and numerous other citizens of Victoria, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2977. Also, petition of David Cowe and numerous other citizens of Beaumont, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2978. Also, petition of James Hollie and numerous other citizens of Washington and Brenham, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2979. Also, petition of Buck Powell and numerous other citizens of Hillview and White Hall, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2980. Also, petition of James Clark and numerous other citizens of Venice, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2981. Also, petition of James Wellington and numerous other citizens of Mounds, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2982. Also, petition of J. S. Candill and numerous other citizens of Sophia, W. Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2983. Also, petition of Ramon Mascarenaz and numerous other citizens of Vadito, N. Mex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2984. Also, petition of E. Aragon and numerous other citizens of Cordova, N. Mex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2985. Also, petition of Bob Burgess and numerous other citizens of Buncombe County, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2986. Also, petition of E. H. Butler and numerous other citizens of Canadian, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Con-2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct | gressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2987. Also, petition of Jim Montgomery and numerous other citizens of Lewisville, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2988. Also, petition of Dan Williams and numerous other citizens of Hillister, Woodville, and Georges Creek, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2989. Also, petition of J. T. Wilbourn and numerous other citizens of Commerce, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2990. Also, petition of Ezra Stout and numerous other citizens of McKinney, Renner, and Dallas, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2991. Also, petition of Jackson Busby and numerous other citizens of Kountze, Honey Island, and Woodville, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2992. Also, petition of Ira Dean and numerous other citizens of Shelbyville, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2993. Also, petition of Gifford Davis and numerous other citizens of Brownsville, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2994. Also, petition of E. H. Smith and numerous other citizens of Peakland, Tennille, and Decatur, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROCERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2995. Also, petition of W. M. Murphree and numerous other citizens of Piedmont and Greenville, S. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2996. Also, petition of Jim Alls and numerous other citizens of Greenwood, S. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2997. Also, petition of A. P. Smith and numerous other citizens of Shamrock, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2998. Also, petition of W. E. Lewis and numerous other citizens of Bowlegs and Seminole, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2999. Also, petition of J. J. James and other citizens of Osage, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3000. Also, petition of Lewis Fleming and numerous other citizens of Shannon and Pontotoc, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3001. Also, petition of P. J. Walker and numerous other citizens of Brandon, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Con-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3002. Also, petition of R. E. Kitchen and numerous other citizens of Belden and Tupelo, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3003. Also, petition of Eddie Seal and numerous other citizens of Carthage, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3004. Also, petition of Mack Moore and numerous other citizens of Columbus, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3005. Also, petition of Calvin Secus and numerous other citizens of Aberdeen, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3006. Also, petition of Elliott Buchanan and numerous other citizens of Roxie, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3007. Also, petition of Willie Hinton and numerous other citizens of Waynesboro, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3008. Also, petition of Joe Taylor and numerous other citizens of Brandon, Jackson, and Pelahatchee, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3009. Also, petition of Walloc Crook and numerous other citizens of Brandon, Pelahatchee, and Morton, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3010. Also, petition of Robert L. Hammons and numerous other citizens of Tutwiler, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3011. Also, petition of James B. Erwin and numerous other citizens of Guntown and Blue Springs, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3012. Also, petition of Frank Austin and numerous other citizens of Vaiden and Carrollton, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3013. Also, petition of J. B. Townsend and numerous other citizens of Pioneer and Lake Providence, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3014. Also, petition of F. L. Campbell and numerous other citizens of Grapeland and Shaw, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3015. By Mr. ANDREWS of New York: Nineteen petitions containing approximately 300 names of residents of the Fortieth Congressional District of New York, protesting against enactment of the public-utilities bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3016. By Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota: Petition of Edward D. Rydeen, of Clearbrook, Minn., president of the Leon Towngressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old- ship Unit of the American Farm Bureau of Clearwater

County, Minn., John Skog, of Clearbrook, and other members of the resolution committee, urging that Federal funds be made available to provide for the continued testing of all herds of livestock and for the payment of reasonable indemnities for reacting animals, to the end that human health may be safeguarded and the livestock industry protected, and that the test for the Bang's disease be made compulsory; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3017. Also, petition of Edward D. Rydeen, of Clearbrook, Minn., president of the Leon Township Unit of the American Farm Bureau of Clearwater County, Minn., John Skog, of Clearbrook, and other members of the resolutions committee, urging that Federal funds be made available for the extension and expansion of our highway system without the matching requirements; to the Committee on Roads.

3018. By Mr. COLDEN: Resolutions of Harbor Post No. 1253, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, San Pedro, Calif., endorsing House bill 1, which provides for the immediate cash payment of World War adjusted-compensation certificates, and urging that favorable action be taken on this measure; and endorsing House bill 100, providing for the restoration of previous rights of Spanish War veterans relative to pensions, hospitalization, domiciliary care, etc., and petitioning for favorable action on same; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3019. By Mr. CONNERY: Resolution of Group No. 630, Polish National Alliance, of Lawrence, Mass., memorializing the Congress to enact House Joint Resolution 81 and Senate Joint Resolution 11, directing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3020. Also, resolutions of Group No. 2383, Polish National Alliance, of Lawrence, Mass., memorializing the Congress to enact House Joint Resolution 81 and Senate Joint Resolution 11, directing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3021. Also, resolutions of Group No. 967, Polish National Alliance, of Peabody, Mass., memorializing the Congress to enact House Joint Resolution 81 and Senate Joint Resolution 11, directing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3022. Also, resolution of the Common Council of the City of Peabody, Mass., memorializing the Congress to enact House Joint Resolution 81 and Senate Joint Resolution 11, directing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3023. Also, resolutions of the General Court of Massachusetts, memorializing Congress to repeal the cotton-processing tax or the spreading of the tax over industry in general; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3024. Also, resolution of the General Court of Massachusetts, memorializing the Congress of the United States relative to the prevention or punishment of the crime of lynching; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3025. By Mr. CROWTHER: Petition of citizens of Schenectady, N. Y., protesting against enactment of House bill 5423; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3026. By Mr. DARROW: Memorial of the Philadelphia Board of Trade, protesting against the passage of the Rayburn utilities bill (H. R. 5423); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3027. By Mr. DEEN: Memorial of the State Legislature of Georgia, condemning the Wagner-Costigan antilynching bill, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3028. By Mr. DEMPSEY: Memorial of Legislature of New Mexico; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3029. By Mr. DEROUEN: Petition of citizens of Beauregard Parish, La., urging Congress to enact into law House bill 2856; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3030. By Mr. DORSEY: Petition of citizens of Philadelphia, Pa., urging support of the principles of health management as promulgated by the American Medical Association, in connection with the security bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3031. Also, petition of residents of Philadelphia, Pa., urging the passage of House bill 2827, by Congressman Lundeen, providing for the establishment of unemployment, old-age, and social insurance, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor.

3032. By Mr. EKWALL: Senate Joint Memorial No. 16, of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, petitioning the President of the United States and the Secretary of State of the United States to refrain from declaring any reduction of the present tariff rates on filberts, shelled or unshelled, to the end that this industry of the Pacific Northwest may be protected fully and amply against destructive foreign competition; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3033. Also, Senate Joint Memorial No. 15, of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, petitioning Congress to pass adequate laws to require that each branch of every national bank publish, at proper intervals, in like manner as bank reports now are published, statements showing the assets and liabilities of such branch bank or affiliated institutions, and setting out the total amount of deposits standing in the names of residents of the community where such branch bank is situated and the total amount of loans and discounts made to such residents; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3034. Also, Senate Joint Memorial No. 12, of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, petitioning Congress to refrain from reduction of present tariff on cherries; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3035. Also, Senate Joint Memorial No. 10, of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, petitioning Congress to provide funds to clear dead timber, debris, etc., from Crane Prairie Reservoir site in Deschutes County, Oreg.; to the Committee on Appropriations.

3036. Also, Senate Joint Memorial No. 8, of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, petitioning Congress to make appropriation for the eradication of Bang's disease among cattle; to the Committee on Appropriations 3037. Also, House Joint Memorial No. 5, of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, petitioning Congress to pass appropriate legislation to provide military defense for the State of Oregon and the Pacific Northwest; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

3038. Also, House Joint Memorial No. 2, of the Thirty-eighth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, providing for segregating the costs of navigation and electrical energy on the Bonneville project, Oregon; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

3039. By Mr. GOODWIN: Petition of the Parent-Teachers Association, Kingston, N. Y., urging the Office of Education of the United States Department of the Interior to encourage the use and development of motion pictures for visual instruction, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Education 3040. Also, petition of the Board of Supervisors of Columbia County, N. Y., urging the repeal of section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934, relating to the publicity of income-tax returns; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3041. By Mr. GRANFIELD: Memorial in favor of the adoption by the Senate of the United States of a resolution now pending before it relating to religious persecution in Mexico; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

3042. Also, memorial of City Council of Northampton, relative to General Pulaski's Memorial Day resolution; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3043. By Mr. HART: Resolution of the House of Assembly of the State of New Jersey (senate concurring), memorializing the Federal Congress to enact appropriate legislation extending the powers of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3044. Also, resolution of Group No. 2787, of the Polish National Alliance of the United States of North America, memorializing Congress to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3045. By Mr. HIGGINS of Massachusetts: Resolution of the City Council of the City of Worcester, Mass., adopted February 18, 1935, that we hereby memorialize and petition the Congress of the United States to pass, and the President of the United States to approve, if passed, the General Pulaski's Memorial Day resolution now pending in the United States Congress; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3046. By Mr. HILDEBRANDT: Petition of the South Dakota Senate urging the passage of legislation or allocating of funds for the development by the United States of America of the hydroelectric and irrigation sites upon the Missouri River and its tributaries, within and upon the boundaries of the State of South Dakota; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

3047. Also, petition of Mobridge Post, No. 2741, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, being a representative body of the taxpayers as well as ex-service men within their community, to go on record as being solidly in support of the Patman bill (H. R. 1), to the exclusion of all others, and respectfully demand support of said bill by their respective Senators and Representatives in Congress; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3048. By Mr. KENNEY: Concurrent resolution of the One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Legislature of the State of New Jersey, adopting a concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress to extend the powers of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in order to liquidate tax indebtedness; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3049. By Mr. JOHNSON of Texas: Memorial of R. D. Elliott, Irene, Tex.; T. E. Elliott, Penelope, Tex.; and R. V. Dunbar, Malone, Tex., favoring House bill 3263; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3050. Also, petition of Wright Kincheloe, of Mexia, Tex., opposing House bill 5423; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3051. Also, memorial of Hon. J. L. Morris, Maypearl, Tex., favoring House bill 3263; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3052. Also, memorial of J. M. Dillon, secretary Tyler Division, No. 97, Benefit Association of Railway Employees, Tyler, Tex., favoring House bill 8100, the Pettengill bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3053. Also, petition of Joe Jefferson, city commissioner, Corsicana, Tex., and R. F. Sikes, Ennis, Tex., opposing House bill 5423, the Rayburn bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3054. By Mr. KVALE: Petition of 558 residents of the State of Minnesota, in the counties of Yellow Medicine, Renville, and Redwood, urging adoption of the Townsend plan of oldage pensions; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3055. Also, petition of 386 residents of the State of Minnesota, in the counties of Lyon, Murray, and Nobles, urging adoption of the Townsend plan for old-age pensions; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3056. Also, petition of 459 residents of the State of Minnesota, in the counties of Nobles and Lac qui Parle, urging adoption of the Townsend plan for old-age pensions; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3057. Also, petition of 542 residents of the State of Minnesota, in the counties of Kandiyohi, Lac qui Parle, Pipestone, and Rock, urging adoption of the Townsend plan for oldage pensions; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3058. Also, petition of 1,807 residents of Swift County, Minn., urging adoption of the Townsend plan for old-age pensions; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3059. By Mr. LESINSKI: Senate Concurrent Resolution 5, of the Legislature of Michigan, memorializing the Congress of the United States to pass suitable legislation, or the Postmaster General take suitable action, to deed to the State of Michigan the old post-office site and building in Lansing, Mich., for the use of State purposes; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

3060. Also, Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 6, memorializing the Congress to pass suitable legislation proclaiming October 11 as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3061. By Mr. LUCAS: Petition of Rev. H. R. Brown and other citizens of Pike County, Ill., endorsing old-age pension legislation; to the Committee on Ways and Means, 3062. By Mr. MERRITT of New York: Petition of Miss Kathryn Hinnenkamp, of 923 Waltin Avenue, New York City, N. Y., and other residents of New York City and vicinity, urging Congress to defeat the Rayburn bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3063. Also, petition of F. A. Rutz, of 69-27 Sixty-sixth Street, Glendale, N. Y., and other residents of Glendale and vicinity, urging Congress to defeat the Rayburn bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3064. Also, petition of Leslie L. Lawrence, of 93-18 Two Hundred and Fortieth Street, Queens Village, Long Island, N. Y., and other residents of Queens Village and vicinity, petitioning Congress to defeat the Rayburn bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3065. Also, petition of Mrs. J. A. Roberts, of West New Brighton, Staten Island, N. Y., and other residents in that vicinity, appealing to Congress to defeat the Rayburn bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3066. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Geiger Products Co., Inc., New York City, favoring the passage of House bill 70 by Congressman Bland; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3067. By Mr. PETTENGILL: Petition signed by Groups Nos. 2597, 1812, 2752, 1745, 2765, 2313, 2200, 759, 1612, 1461, 398, 672, 545, 924, 2163, 887, 2195, and 1792 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States of North America, directing the President of the United States to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; also like resolution of common council of the cities of Michigan City, South Bend, Frankfort, and Mishawaka, Ind.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3068. By Mr. PLUMLEY: Resolution of the American Legion, Hartford Post, No. 26, White River Junction, Vt., urging the passage of House bill 3896; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3069. By Mr. POLK: Petition signed by H. A. Moore, adjutant, Pike Post No. 498, the American Legion, Piketon, Ohio, with 33 other veterans and 89 citizens not veterans, urging passage of the Patman bill (H. R. 1) for immediate payment of the adjusted-service certificates, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3070. By Mr. RUDD: Petition of Marine Workers Metal Trades District Council, port of New York and vicinity, regarding the McCarran amendment to the work-relief bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3071. Also, petition of American Federation of Government Employees, New York Naval District Lodge, No. 36, Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning House bill 200; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

3072. By Mr. SADOWSKI: Petition of Council No. 15 of the Polish National Alliance, asking that October 11 of each year be set aside as General Pulaski Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3073. Also, petition of Group No. 2039 of the Polish National Alliance, asking that October 11 of each year be set aside as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3074. Also, petition of Group No. 2628 of the Polish National Alliance, petitioning that the resolution be passed setting aside October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3075. Also, petition of city council, Dearborn, Mich., asking that October 11 of each year be set aside as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3076. By Mr. SUTPHIN: Petition of the New Jersey Assembly, Trenton, N. J., urging Congress to enact legislation extending the powers of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation: to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3077. By Mr. TARVER: Petition from Oscar M. Reed and 22 other citizens of Whitfield County, Ga., favoring oldage pensions; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3078. By Mr. TINKHAM: Petition of residents of Boston, Mass., favoring Townsend plan of old-age revolving pensions; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3079. By Mr. TOBEY: Petition of State of New Hampshire, for the procurement of Federal cooperation in the stabilizing of the Merrimack River; to the Committee on Flood Control.

3080. By Mr. TRUAX: Petition of Harold E. Bowers and other citizens of Toledo, Ohio, regarding income-tax publicity as a wanton, meddlesome, and pernicious invasion of their privacy—it being their opinion that the responsibility for apprehending violators of the income-tax laws rests upon the duly constituted agencies of the Government and not upon busybodies, meddlers, snoopers, and self-appointed spies—and protesting against a law that will permit and encourage every citizen to spy upon his neighbor and meddle in his affairs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3081. Also, petition of members of Toledo Stereotypers and Electrotypers, Toledo, Ohio, by their secretary, Alfred H. Hosfeld, asking support of the McCarran amendment to the public-works relief bill and also of Senate Resolution 69, sponsored by Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach; to the Committee on Labor.

3082. Also, petition of the Montpelier (Ohio) Townsend Club of 250 members and over 2,000 petitioners, by their president, Charles M. Newell, and their secretary, Henrietta Heth, asking support in bringing the McGroarty bill (H. R. 3977) out of committee to the floor of the House and for a speedy and favorable consideration of same; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3083. Also, petition of August W. Bankey and other citizens of Gibsonburg, Ohio, urging support of a bill obligating the Government of the United States to pay every citizen of said Government whose record is free of criminality and who has attained the age of 60 years a monthly pension of $200 until the end of his life upon the sole condition that he agree, under oath, to spend the entire amount of the pension within the confines of the United States during the current month in which it is received; to the Committee on Ways 3084. Also, petition of Massillon Trades and Labor Assembly, Massillon, Ohio, by their secretary, Robert J. Siffrin, urging support of the prevailing-wage amendment to the public-works relief bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3085. Also, petition of Canal Zone Women's League, by Mrs. M. F. Bradney, urging support of Senate bill 3241, granting annuity to widows of Canal Zone employees, and urging the retention of the Panama Railroad Steamship Line and the maintenance of cheap fares for employees and their families as it is of vital importance to every American civilian employee on the Isthmus because it is necessary for them to spend vacations in a cooler climate and they naturally, in most cases, prefer the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3086. Also, petition of the First Ward Democratic Club of Akron, Ohio, by their secretary, J. T. McCaffney, urging support of the Patman bill (H. R. 1), which provides for immediate cash payment of the veterans' adjusted-service certificates, as they believe the certificates should be paid in full at once in order to settle a debt that is long past due, and believing that the Patman bill should be passed, as its enactment will not cause additional taxation and will provide for a needed expansion of the currency; to the Committee on Ways

3087. Also, petition of John Paulding Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Paulding, Ohio, by their post commander, A. F. | mittee on Foreign Affairs.

Ptak, urging Congress to pass legislation that will provide for the immediate payment in cash of said certificates in the amount of their face value, with cancelation of accrued interest and refund of interest paid, as the payment of the certificates at this time will not create an additional debt and would reduce by an equal amount the debt owed by the Government; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3088. Also, petition of General Marion Council, No. 162, Junior Order United American Mechanics, Marlboro, Ohio, by their recording secretary, Harry Wearstler, favoring the passage of House Joint Resolution 69, creating in the Department of Justice a bureau for deportation of aliens; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

3089. Also, petition of Trumbull County Building Trades Council, Warren, Ohio, by their secretary, Lawrence Elston, requesting support of the Davis-Bacon prevailing rate of wage law; to the Committee on Labor.

3090. Also, petition of E. A. Gildea and 11 other citizens of Gibson, Ohio, urging favorable consideration of the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3091. Also, petition of Arizona Joint Legislative Board of Transportation Brotherhoods by their secretary, Leroy Magers, Tucson, Ariz., endorsing the bill which will prohibit the employment of noncitizen labor on private works as there are now gainfully employed in the United States millions of noncitizen workers and many others who do not intend to become citizens: to the Committee on Immigration.

3092. Also, petition of 167 veterans and voters of Wadsworth, Ohio, by Ralph S. Robinson, urging full support and passage of House bill 1, providing for the immediate payment of the adjusted-service certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3093. Also, petition of Clan Stewart 274, Order of Scottish Clans, Canton, Ohio, by their secretary, Harval B. Stewart, asking favorable consideration of unemployment-insurance bill (H. R. 2827), as they consider it the only bill that deals adequately with the problem and has the merit of liquidating the expense incurred; to the Committee on Labor.

3094. Also, petition of workers, organized and unorganized, employed and unemployed, 500 in number, of Bellaire, Ohio, vigorously protesting against the passage of any unemployment and social-insurance bill other than the House bill 2827, and demanding their Congressmen to support and endorse House bill 2827 when it comes up for consideration; to the Committee on Labor.

3095. By Mr. TURNER: Petition of Ray Tucker and numerous other citizens of Iron City and Ethridge, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3096. Also, petition of Mack Martin and numerous other citizens of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3097. Also, petition of Leonard N. Fox and numerous other citizens of Lawrenceburg and Leoma, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3098. Also, petition of John Hunt and numerous other citizens of Loretto, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3099. Also, petition of T. G. Cook and numerous other citizens of Columbia, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3100. By Mr. WIGGLESWORTH: Petition of General Court of Massachusetts, in favor of the adoption by the Senate of the United States of a resolution now pending before it relative to religious persecution in Mexico; to the Com-

SENATE

THURSDAY, MARCH 7, 1935

(Legislative day of Monday, Mar. 4, 1935)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. Robinson, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Wednesday, March 6, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT—APPROVAL OF JOINT RESOLUTION AND BILLS

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also announced that the President had approved and signed the following joint resolution and acts:

On February 28, 1935:

S. J. Res. 49. Joint resolution authorizing the use of public parks, reservations, and other public spaces in the District of Columbia; and the use of tents, cots, hospital appliances, flags, and other decorations, property of the United States, by Washington, D. C., 1935 Shrine Committee, Inc.; and for other purposes.

On March 4, 1935:

S. 31. An act to provide for the issuance of a license to practice the healing art in the District of Columbia to Dr. Chester C. Groff; and

S. 402. An act to amend section 824 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	La Follette	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Couzens	Lewis	Reynolds
Austin	Cutting	Logan	Robinson
Bachman	Dickinson	Lonergan	Russell
Bailey	Dieterich	Long	Schall
Bankhead	Donahey	McAdoo	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Duffy	McCarran	Sheppard
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Shipstead
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Smith
Bone	George	McNary	Steiwer
Borah	Gerry	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Brown	Gibson	Metcalf	Thomas, Utah
Bulkley	Glass	Minton	Townsend
Bulow	Gore	Moore	Trammell
Burke	Guffey	Murphy	Truman
Byrd	Hale	Murray	Tydings
Byrnes	Harrison	Neely	Vandenberg
Capper	Hastings	Norbeck	Van Nuys
Carey	Hatch	Norris	Walsh
Clark	Hayden	Nye	White
Connally	Johnson	O'Mahoney
Coolidge	Keyes	Pittman
Copeland	King	Pope

Mr. LEWIS. I announce the absence of the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], caused by illness, and the absence of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler], who are necessarily detained.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Davis] is absent on account of illness. I ask that this announcement stand for the day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

PETROLEUM PRICES

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, in relation to a formal report not having been made in response to Senate Resolution 339 (submitted by Mr. Thomas of Oklahoma and agreed to on Feb. 25, 1933), calling for certain information from the Federal Trade Commission concerning petroleum prices, and transmitting information bearing on the general subject, which, with the accompanying paper, was ordered to lie on the table.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Assembly Concurrent Resolution 4

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

(Introduced Jan. 28, 1935, by Mr. Cunard; referred to committee on agriculture)

Concurrent resolution requesting that the Congress of the United States, without further delay, pass the Frazier-Lemke farm refinance bill, S. 212 and H. R. 2066

Whereas unless immediate relief is given, hundreds and thousands of additional farmers will lose their farms and their homes and millions more will be forced into our cities and villages and the army of the unemployed will necessarily increase to alarming whereas there is no adequate way of refinancing existing agricultural indebtedness and the farmers are at the mercy of their mortgagees and creditors throughout this State and Nation; and Whereas the Frazier-Lemke refinance bill, being S. 212 and H. R. 2066, in the Congress of the United States, provides for the liquidating and refinancing of agricultural indebtedness at a reduced rate of interest through the Farm Credit Administration and the rate of interest through the Farm Credit Administration and the Federal land banks; and

Whereas the Frazier-Lemke bill has the endorsement of 22 State legislatures and, in addition, the lower Houses of the States of New York and Delaware and of many commercial clubs, chambers of commerce, bank organizations, and of business and professional men and women, as well as the great majority of the farmers of this Nation; and

Whereas the enactment of this bill will have a vital effect not only upon agriculture but upon all classes of industry; and Whereas agriculture is the basic industry of this country, and there can be no recovery until agriculture is put upon a sound basis: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Assembly of the State of New Jersey (the senate concurring)

Resolved by the House of Assembly of the State of New Jersey (the senate concurring)—

1. That the Congress of the United States should enact the Frazier-Lemke bill without further delay.

2. That a copy of this memorial, duly authenticated, be sent by the secretary of state to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each Senator and Representative in Congress from this State, to the President of the United States, and to United States Senator Lynn J. Frazier and Congressman William Lemke.

Filed March 5, 1935.

Filed March 5, 1935.

A true copy.

THOMAS A. MATHIS, Secretary of State.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the petition of William Blackmon, of Chance, Va., praying for the enactment of old-age pension legislation, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate the petition of Elizabeath Rodolph, of Tyler, Ala., praying for the enactment of oldage pension legislation, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of the Old Age Pension Association of America, in convention assembled at Orange, Tex., favoring the prompt enactment of old-age pension legislation, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by Keystone Post No. 449, American Legion, of Central City, Pa., favoring the suppression of alien communistic activities in the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of the West Warwick (R. I.) Chamber of Commerce, protesting against the enactment of legislation extending preferential freight rates to any section of the country to the exclusion of other sections, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate

He also laid before the Senate a petition of sundry citizens of Owatonna, Minn., praying for the enactment of legislation looking to the eradication of all subversive movements against the Government of the United States, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate petitions of sundry citizens of Florida, Indiana, Missouri, New York, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, praying for an investigation of charges filed by the Women's Committee of Louisiana relative to the qualifications of the Senators from Louisiana [Mr. Long and Mr.

OVERTON], which were referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a petition from Electrical Workers Local Union No. 41, of Buffalo, N. Y., favoring the adoption of the so-called "McCarran amendment" to the work-relief joint resolution, requiring the payment of prevailing wages on public works, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the mayor and Council of Maplewood, Mo.; the Common Council of Terre Haute, Ind.; the Council of East Hartford, Conn.; and the Common Council of Cicero, Ill., favoring the enactment of pending legislation proclaiming October 11 in each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. CAPPER presented a telegram in the nature of a petition from the Marshall County Farmers Union, of Frankfort, and a petition of members of Eureka Local, No. 2207, Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union, of Eureka, in the State of Kansas, praying for the enactment of the so-called "Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill", which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. NORBECK presented the petition of Rev. Ralph C. Shearer and 80 other citizens of Tyndall and vicinity, in the State of South Dakota, praying for the enactment of legislation to expel alien agitators and communists from the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. COPELAND presented a resolution adopted by the Buffalo (N. Y.) Lumber Exchange, favoring prompt suspension of the tariff duty on rough lumber entering the United States from contiguous countries, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of members of the Onondaga Philatelic Society, of Syracuse, N. Y., praying for the enactment of pending legislation permitting the publication or printing of facsimiles of United States postage stamps, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. WALSH presented a letter from Grant B. Snyder, secretary of the Massachusetts Potato and Onion Growers Association, Amherst, Mass., enclosing a statement prepared by the board of directors of that association, relating to and opposing the enactment of the proposed "Potato Tax Act of 1935", which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Boston and Lee, Mass., remonstrating against the publication of personal income-tax returns, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens, being textile workers, of Adams, Mass., remonstrating against a revision of the N. R. A. textile code proposing to reinstate the 48-hour week, with one shift of workers, in the textile industry, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the memorial of Chester A. Richardson, of Stoneham, and sundry other citizens of the State of Massachusetts, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation providing for the payment of the so-called "soldiers' bonus" until such bonus becomes due and payable in accordance with existing law, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of American Legion Auxiliary, Unit 16, William E. Carter Post, of Boston, Mass., praying for the enactment of the so-called "Vinson bill" providing for the immediate payment of adjusted-service certificates of World War veterans, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Lynn, Mass., praying for the passage of legislation known as the "Patman bill", being the bill (H. R. 1) to provide for the immediate payment to veterans of the face value of their adjusted-service certificates and for controlled expansion of the currency, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a letter from Mrs. John Bayley Fox, chairman, etc., on behalf of the Department of Government and Economic Welfare of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, Boston, Mass., favoring the enactment of legislation providing for unemployment compensation, with changes suggested by the National League of Women Voters. specifically the inclusion of minimum standards, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented memorials and papers in the nature of memorials, numerously signed, of sundry citizens of the State of Massachusetts, remonstrating against the enactment of pending legislation to abolish public-utility holding companies and for the regulation of utility operating companies, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented the petition of the Polish Army Veterans' Association of America, Post No. 76, of Haverhill, Mass., praying for the enactment of House bill 2739, to extend further time for naturalization to alien veterans of the World War, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs

He also presented a resolution adopted at the midwinter meeting in Boston of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, favoring the enactment of legislation limiting the profits on arms and munitions contracts as a permanent policy for peace times, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented the memorial of the Peace Action Council of the Community Church of Boston, Mass., remonstrating against the adoption of a war budget and favoring drastic reduction in appropriations for the armed forces of the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the sixteenth annual convention of the National Restaurant Association at Chicago, Ill., protesting against the operation of Government restaurants, which was referred to the Committee on Rules.

He also presented a petition of Local Union No. 2419 (American Weavers), United Textile Workers of America, Farnumsville, Mass., favoring the inclusion in the pending work-relief joint resolution of a provision requiring the payment of prevailing wages on public works, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BARBOUR presented a resolution of the City Council of East Orange, N. J., favoring the enactment of pending legislation proclaiming October 11 in each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, which was ordered to lie on the

He also presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, which was ordered to lie on the table:

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-NINTH LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY, ASSEMBLY CHAMBER, Statehouse, Trenton, N. J.

Assembly Concurrent Resolution

(By Mr. Scovel, of Camden County; introduced and adopted by the house of assembly Feb. 18, 1935, and concurred in by the senate Feb. 25, 1935)

A concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress to extend the powers of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in order to liquidate tax indebtedness

Whereas the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was created by legislation to enable mortgagors and mortgagees to adjust mortgage indebtedness; and

Whereas the emergency legislation so creating the Home Owners'
Loan Corporation has been efficacious in easing to a great extent

Whereas it is appropriate and desirable that the functions of such corporation be extended: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Assembly of the State of New Jersey (the senate concurring):

1. That the Federal Congress be memorialized to enact appro-1. That the Federal Congress be memorialized to enact appropriate legislation extending the powers of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, so that loans may be made to home owners for the purpose of liquidating tax indebtedness upon property in cases where such taxes are at least 6 months in arrears and within such further limits as the Congress may determine; and be it further 2. Resolved, That this resolution, properly signed and authenticated by the presiding officers of the senate and general assembly, and by the secretary of the senate and the clerk of the house of assembly, be transmitted to each Senator and Representative from the State of New Jersey in the Congress of the United States by the clerk of the assembly forthwith.

3. This resolution shall take effect immediately.

LESTER H. CLEE,

Speaker of the House of Assembly. FREDERICK A. BRODESSER, Clerk of the House of Assembly. HIRAM E. PRALL, President of the Senate.

OLIVER VAN CAMP, Secretary of the Senate.

I hereby certify that the above is a true and correct copy of a resolution adopted by the house of assembly and concurred in by FREDERICK A. BRODESSER, Clerk of the House of Assembly.

Mr. ROBINSON presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Arkansas, which was ordered to lie on the table:

> House Concurrent Resolution 18 (By Messrs. Elgin and Wilkinson)

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Arkansas, and the senate concurring therein, That Arkansas is deeply interested in the passage of the work-relief bill proposed by our honored President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and the entire State is in need of the funds and the permanent public improvements that will come to the State if such bill is passed;

That it is the sense of this body that it would be a mistake to attach to the proposed bill the so-called "McCarran amendment" providing that laborers on such relief works should receive the prevailing wage, because such a provision would not only vastly increase the cost but also would deprive private industries of laborers who would flock to the easier Government work for the

That we respectfully urge upon our Senators and Representa-tives in Congress that they continue united and vigorous support of the President's own plan and aid in the passage of this deeply needed legislation;

That a copy of this resolution be sent to each Senator and Representative from this State to Congress.

ELGIN, of Craighead. WILKINSON, of Sebastian.

I, H. P. Smith, hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of House Concurrent Resolution No. 18. [SEAL] H. P. SMITH, Chief Clerk.

WORK-RELIEF PROGRAM

Mr. ROBINSON presented a resolution adopted by Aerie No. 209 of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, Pine Bluff, Ark., which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> FRATERNAL ORDER OF EAGLES. AERIE No. 209,

Pine Bluff, Ark., March 1, 1935.

Whereas in 1921 the Fraternal Order of Eagles advocated that the Federal Government appropriate $5,000,000,000 for a program of public works to provide employment for victims of the postwar depression; and

Whereas the then grand worthy president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, the Honorable John M. Morin, Member of Congress from Pennsylvania, introduced in the Sixty-seventh Congress a bill (H. R. 8997) providing for Federal expenditures of $5,000,000,000 to improve public highways, rivers, harbors, and waterways, and to reclaim idle, arid waste, or unimproved lands, and further providing for the building of homes for workers on such

Whereas the President of the United States has urged the Seventy-fourth Congress to appropriate $4,000,000,000 for public projects to provide work for the Nation's unemployed, victims of economic conditions over which they had no control: Now, there-

Resolved, That Pine Bluff (Ark.) Aerie, No. 209, of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, thank Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States, for urging the form of unemployment relief that the Fraternal Order of Eagles, through its national president, the Honorable John M. Morin, first sponsored in Congress 14 vears ago.

F. C. Schen,
Worthy President.
J. Frank Franky, Secretary.

GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

Mr. COPELAND presented a telegram from Edwin Balmer. editor, Red Book Magazine, New York City, N. Y., which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NEW YORK, N. Y., March 6, 1935.

Hon. ROYAL S. COPELAND,

United States Senator, United States Senate Building:
New York Herald Tribune and other papers here report that while making his speech yesterday on floor of Senate the senior Senator of Louisiana made a statement which inferred, if in-Senator of Louisiana made a statement which inferred, if indirectly, that in tendering a dinner to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and in publishing his memoirs, Redbook Magazine was following the instructions of what the senior Senator of Louisiana termed as "Farley adherents." Inasmuch as the speech of Senator from Louisiana will appear in Congressional Record, we do want to state that in tendering our dinner to General Johnson and in publishing his memoirs in current issue of Redbook Magazine, we were obeying instructions of no one except our own editorial judgment. We published General Johnson's memoirs because we consider them a striking human document and as prominent a piece of writing as we have seen since days of immortal Huckleberry Finn. In tendering our dinner to General Johnson we were honoring a man of courage and fairness. I will appreciate, my dear Senator, your making necessary correction for purpose of Congressional Record, because Redbook is strictly nonpolitical and unpartisan magazine, which takes no sides, but is doing its best to mirror the opinions of the country and represent the picture of this ever-changing and ever-growing Nation. Copies of this telegram are being sent to leader of Senate majority and junior Senator of New York. We will be very grateful to you, my dear Senator Copeland, if you will release this telegram to the political correspondents in Washington. With many thanks, respectfully, directly, that in tendering a dinner to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and respectfully. Editor Redbook Magazine.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ON CLAIMS

Mr. COOLIDGE, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1099) for the relief of Ethel G. Remington, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 272) thereon.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1290) for the relief of Walter Motor Truck Co., Inc., reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 273) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 1431) for the relief of the Collier Manufacturing Co., of Barnesville, Ga., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 276) thereon.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1548) for the relief of Douglas B. Espy, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 274) thereon.

Mr. GIBSON, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1073) for the relief of Louis Finger, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 275) thereon.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

A bill (S. 2177) granting a pension to Samuel G. Davis; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BARBOUR and Mr. MOORE:

A bill (S. 2178) to provide relief to depositors in closed national banks; to promote resumption of industrial activity, increase employment, and restore confidence by fulfillment of the implied guaranty by the United States Government of deposit safety in national banks; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. COPELAND:

A bill (S. 2179) for the relief of the Hellenic Transatlantic Steam Navigation Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 2180) granting a pension to Helena F. Joy; and A bill (S. 2181) granting a pension to Libbie T. Marrah; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BULKLEY:

A bill (S. 2182) for the relief of Paul Winters York; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PITTMAN:

A bill (S. 2183) to amend an act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor"; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. WALSH (by request):

A bill (S. 2184) to protect and preserve an essential domestic industry, operating under the provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act, from the destructive competition of Philippine manufactured products; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. McNARY:

A bill (S. 2185) to amend an act entitled "An act to accept the cession by the State of Oregon of exclusive jurisdiction over the lands embraced within the Crater Lake National Park, and for other purposes"; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. VANDENBERG:

A bill (S. 2186) to repeal restrictions upon the tenure of the Comptroller General; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. HAYDEN:

A bill (S. 2187) for the relief of the Consolidated Holding & Trust Co.: to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys. By Mr. METCALF:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 78) for the preservation and restoration of the frigate Constellation as a national museum and making Newport, R. I., its home port; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

WORK-RELIEF PROGRAM-AMENDMENTS

Mr. STEIWER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 117) making appropriations for relief purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed, as follows:

On page 3, line 25, before the period, to insert the following: "Provided further, That not to exceed 20 percent of any one allocation herein specified may be diverted for relief purposes as authorized in the Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933, as amended."

Mr. McCARRAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 117) making appropriations for relief purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed, as follows:

On page 3, line 14, after the comma following the word "areas", to insert the words "and irrigation and reclamation."

Mr. HAYDEN submitted an amendment relating to the construction and improvement of roads and highways intended to be proposed by him to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 117) making appropriations for relief purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

MEMORIAL SERVICES FOR OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES

Mr. WALSH submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 11), which was referred to the Committee on the Library:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That for the purpose of holding memorial services in honor of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes the two Houses of Congress shall assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives at a time to be fixed by the joint committee hereinafter named.

That a joint committee consisting of 5 Members of the House of Representatives and 5 Members of the Senate shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President of the Senate, respectively, which is empowered to make suitable arrangements for fitting and proper exercises for the joint session of Congress herein authorized.

That invitations to attend the exercises be extended to the Pres-of Congress herein authorized.

That invitations to attend the exercises be extended to the President of the United States of America and the members of his Cabinet, the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, the diplomatic corps (through the Secretary of State), the General of the Armies, the Chief of Staff of the Army, the Chief of Naval Operations, the Major General Commandant of the Marine Corps, and the Commandant of the Coast Guard, and such other persons as the joint committee on arrangements shall deem proper. ments shall deem proper.

That the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States is hereby invited to address the American people at the joint session of the Congress in commemoration of the life and services of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON PENSIONS

Mr. McGILL submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 96), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Pensions, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit during the sessions, recesses, and adjourned periods of the Seventy-fourth Congress at such times and places as it may deem advisable, and to send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words, to report such hearings as may be had on any subject before said committee, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

RECEIVERSHIP AND BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS

Mr. McADOO submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 97), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the special committee authorized by Resolution No. 78, Seventy-third Congress, to make an investigation of the administration of receivership and bankruptcy proceedings in the courts of the United States, and other matters pertaining thereto, and continued in full force and effect by Resolution No. 72, Seventy-fourth Congress, hereby is authorized to expend from the contingent fund of the Senate the sum of $25,000 in addition to the amount heretofore authorized for said purposes.

TRIBUTE TO OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES

Mr. COOLIDGE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a poem by Horace C. Carlisle entitled "Majestic Meekness of Justice Holmes."

There being no objection, the poem was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MAJESTIC MEEKNESS OF JUSTICE HOLMES

Twenty-four gracious years past his threescore and ten, Far beyond the extent of the usual life, Justice Holmes, by his deeds, by his voice, by his pen—True dispenser of justice, in an era of strife—Saw the most of these years in succession unfold, On pages of history, opinions of his, Through the centuries, still to be told and retold, Long as man wants to know what divine justice is. After decades of service, done in his own State, As attorney and jurist and author, his fame, As a legal authority, warranted weight To all documents bearing his memorable name. The unquestioned sincerity of every line In his every decree irrefutably proved That his innate integrity was too divine To be shaken or shattered or muffled or moved.

With a background, so sacredly rich, to commend Him to such a great service—of final resort—
It was nothing but natural that he should end
On the bench as a Judge of our own Supreme Court,
Where he served with peculiar distinction and pride, Through a period, marked by full many a year, Each an answer from God to his prayer to abide There till Justice in mercy should end his career.

HORACE C. CARLISLE.

THE BETTER-HOUSING PROGRAM-ADDRESS OF JAMES A. MOFFETT

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Congressional Record a radio address delivered by James A. Moffett, Federal Housing Administrator, over the National Broadcasting System, at New York City, under the auspices of the Committee on Civic Education by Radio, on Tuesday, March 5, 1935.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

I want to render thanks twice tonight. First, to the Committee on Civic Education by Radio for this opportunity to discuss the better-housing program. Second, to the thousands of industries and the thousands of citizens that have helped to make the initial part of the program successful.

part of the program successful.

My talk tonight was assigned the rather awesome title of "Providing a Liquid Market for Home Mortgages." That is a rather technical method of saying something that is really quite simple. All it means is that a Nation-wide effort is being made to keep credit for home financing available at all times.

You can well imagine the beneficial effects that such a result will have for all of us, both directly and indirectly. Directly it will benefit those who desire to own their own homes and those who are engaged in the business of building, selling, and financing homes. Indirectly it will benefit every citizen in the country, because it will tend to steady business and employment in the numerous great industries that are largely dependent upon home construction for their welfare.

I am talking about the future because the insured-mortgage plan

I am talking about the future because the insured-mortgage plan

I am talking about the future because the insured-mortgage plan being directed by the Federal Housing Administration is a permanent long-range proposition. It is the insured-mortgage plan which can provide the basis for making credit for home financing available at all times.

This is no temporary emergency panacea. We do not want a quick boom in building and then another bad slump. We want to keep home construction on a normal basis, so that as the population grows and the need for new homes arises, those homes will be erected to supply regular ordinary demands.

The idea is so simple and so easy to operate that it seems peculiar that our country did not adopt a similar system many years ago. It remained for our economic slump during the past few years, with the attendant collapse of home construction and the residential mortgage field, to show us that our mortgage machinery was creaking in many of its cogs, and that the problem of improving the situation should be attacked on a Nation-wide city. They finally find just the home they are seeking—the home that will represent to them, as it should to every American citizen, a place of refuge, comfort, and pleasure.

Perhaps I can show how we hope to prevent these troubles in the future by comparing one of our old systems of home financing with the new system provided in the insured mortgage plan. Take the case of Bill Jones, an average citizen who wants to achieve the economic and social distinction of being a home owner. He and his family look over many residences in their city. They finally find just the home they are seeking—the home that will represent to them, as it should to every American citizen a place of refuge, comfort, and pleasure.

Under the old system Bill Jones oftentimes was forced to assume both first and second mortgages on that home. The first trust usually matured in 3 years, and both Bill and the bank that made the mortgage available knew full well at the time it was executed that Bill could not possibly pay it off in that time. When the first trust matured, Bill was usually forced to renew it. In times of prosperity that was not very difficult, but it cost Bill extra money in the payment of fees and service charges.

Consider what happens in a time of depression. The first mortgages of Bill and thousands of other good citizens are coming due. The banks need ready money. They don't feel that they can run the risk of renewing all these mortgages. The result is that thousands of people face the prospect of losing their homes.

The vicious part of the whole system is that it affects the lenders as badly as the borrowers. When banks foreclose on a large percentage of the mortgages they hold, the property represented must be thrown on the open market if the banks are to get their money out of the loan. With so many homes on the market, the real-estate business is glutted, few homes are sold and the banks find themselves with a great deal of temporarily unprofitable real estate on their hands.

This makes them unwilling to lend money for new-home construction. In this way the mortgage market dries up; there is little credit for home financing; general business begins to lose ground.

While all this is going on, Bill Jones faces another trouble—ground.

While all this is going on, Bill Jones faces another trouble—that of paying off a second mortgage. Because of the greater risks involved in some of our previous forms of home financing, those who loaned money on second mortgages sometimes felt it necessary to charge high interest rates and collected various types of fees that often were exorbitant.

We have seen that when conditions were bad, neither the borrower nor the lender received any particular benefits from certain types of home financing.

To cure the trouble two principal things are necessary. One of them is to make it easier and cheaper for Bill Jones to buy a home. The other is to make it safer for financial institutions to lend money on homes. The insured-mortgage plan is the answer.

lend money on homes. The insured-mortgage plan is the answer.

The plan involves no change in the present relationship between borrower and lender. When Bill decides to buy that house of his dreams, he goes to his bank as before. If the bank is an approved lender under the rules of the Federal Housing Administration, Bill Jones can finance most of the indebtedness on his home through one insured mortgage—just one mortgage, not two or three—with low interest rates, and repayable in small monthly installments.

installments.

Let's assume that Bill wants to buy a home costing $6,250. He must put up at least 20 percent in cash, so he supplies $1,250 as a down payment. That leaves the principal indebtedness on his home at $5,000. An insured mortgage for this amount can be paid off completely in 15 years, including estimated amounts for taxes and insurance, in monthly payments of about $50.

This is about what rent would be on the home. Can you imagine how much better it is to know that every payment you make on a house, under this plan, brings you a little nearer toward its ownership? I know of no more simple or fair method of paying for a home. It is inexpensive and easy to handle. It will give thousands upon thousands of American citizens the chance to own property, and thus not only obtain a comfortable place of residence but also achieve a valuable investment.

The plan is just as beneficial for the lender. He is enabled to charge lower rates, and make it possible for only one mortgage to cover all the outstanding indebtedness on a home, because the insured mortgages are designed to be much safer investments than most existing types of mortgages.

We have seen that in times of stress the ordinary first mortgage

We have seen that in times of stress the ordinary first mortgage maturing in 3 years often becomes troublesome to a bank. Under the insured-mortgage plan the lender need not find himself with real estate on his hands if it is necessary to foreclose a mortgage. The lender collects insurance by transferring all claims in the property and the mortgage to the Federal Housing Administration. An insurance fund, directed by the Federal Housing Administration and contributed through small fees paid by Bill Jones and other home owners, is used to provide the lenders with their insurance. Insurance means simply that if, for instance, $3,000 is still owing on the principal amount of a mortgage, the lender is given a long-time bond for $3,000, which bears interest and matures approximately 3 years after the mortgage it represents. In other words, the lender merely changes his investment from a mortgage bearing interest to a bond bearing interest, and thus is assured that his original investment will always remain a profit-making proposition. We have seen that in times of stress the ordinary first mortgage

There are times when banks would like to turn the mortgages they hold into cash by selling them to someone else. This is known as "liquidity", something lacking in many ordinary forms of mortgages. This "liquidity", this possibility of selling a mortgage if the lender wants ready cash, is to be provided through what is known as "national mortgage associations", large corporations chartered by the Federal Housing Administration and engaged in the buying and selling of mortgages. They will work on a very simple scheme. On one hand, they will buy insured mortgages from the original lenders like banks and building-and-loan associations and other private financial institutions. On the other hand, they will use the mortgages as a security for bonds, which they will issue to the buying public. Because these bonds will have behind them the prestige of the Federal Housing Administration, they should prove attractive to individual investors. This will enable the ordinary citizen to participate in the profit-making possibilities of the insured-mortgage plan. There are times when banks would like to turn the mortgages should prove attractive to individual investors. This will enable the ordinary citizen to participate in the profit-making possibilities of the insured-mortgage plan.

We have now completed the cycle in our little discussion of the plan. Bill Jones can buy a home, or if he already owns a home, he may possibly get rid of oppressive first and second mortgages, through one insured mortgage. The financial institution that makes an insured mortgage available knows that it should be a liquid instrument—capable of being sold for cash at any time, and that money owing on the principal amount of the mortgage is insured if it defaults.

That is the system through which it is hoped to place home construction on a stable basis. That is the system through which it is hoped to give thousands upon thousands of American citizens the Joy and security of owning a home. That is the system through which it is hoped to stabilize the residential mortgage market, and thus help all American business.

The insured-mortgage plan is now in full operation. Throughout the country there are lenders willing to lend money. A late report reaching my desk shows that more than 2,500 financial institutions have been approved. Already thousands of citizens, including professional builders, have visited hundreds of these including professional builders, have visited hundreds of citizens, including professional builders, have visited hundreds of these agencies to make applications for insured mortgages.

There is every reason to believe that residential construction will be hitting its normal stride within a short time. It is my confident prediction that the next few weeks will show an amazing rise in the number of new homes being erected throughout the country.

country.

It has often been said that the American home is the foundation of not only our economic prosperity, but also of our intellectual and moral progress. More homes mean finer children, better early advantages in life.

More homes mean that many American citizens will find their social and economic welfare improved. The more happy and secure our average citizen can become, the more happy and secure our entire country can become.

our entire country can become.

Last but not least, more homes mean greater comfort and stability in our living conditions. It is a part of our idea to provide that homes erected under our insured-mortgage plan shall be of good construction, of pleasing architecture, and of value as an investment. There should be a great improvement in the quality of our future homes. quality of our future homes.

It is only necessary for us to understand the plan more fully, gain the cooperation of more lending institutions, and spread the message of this new home-financing method further and further. When we have stabilized home construction, I think we can safely say that we will have taken one of the most important steps toward making prosperity a permanent factor in our national life.

I thank you for your past support. And I again thank the Committee on Civic Education by Radio for the privilege of talking tonight about one of the most important parts of our recovery program.

program.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] to reconsider the vote by which the amendment on page 10, lines 24 and 25. and line 1, page 11, was agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I wish to ask the Senator from New York a question, so that I may thoroughly understand the proposition. Am I correct in understanding that the situation as it now stands authorizes an increase in the Army but does not provide the necessary funds to pay for it?

Mr. COPELAND. That is one of the questions involved, but the motion-

Mr. VANDENBERG. Regardless of the other question, is that a statement of fact?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes. The bill provides, as the Senator will see if he turns to page 10, at the end of line 21, that the sum appropriated is $51,069,333-

Together with such additional sums as may be necessary under this and other appropriations contained in this act to defray the cost of increasing the reenlisted strength of the Regular Army.

So the language contemplates that, with this appropriation and with transfers from other items in the bill, there will be money to provide for such increase in the Army this year as the Department might determine upon.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Who would decide the extent of the increase in the Army?

Mr. COPELAND. If the bill were left as it is, as acted upon by the Senate so far, it would be left to the Department.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Department, in its own discretion, would have the authority to increase the Army?

Mr. COPELAND. It is provided on the top of the next page that it would have the right to increase "the enlisted strength of the Regular Army from an average of 118,750", the present number, "to an average of 165,000 enlisted men."

Mr. ROBINSON. I rise to a point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senate is not in order. There are a hum and a roar in the galleries and conversation on the floor so that one cannot hear the speakers.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken. The Chair has observed that for the first 10 or 15 minutes after the roll call in the morning a number of conferences seem necessary to be held on the floor. The Chair hopes that conferences will be concluded at the earliest possible moment or else that the Senators who desire to engage in them will retire to the cloakroom.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I shall repeat what I said, hoping that Senators may now hear it.

As we adopted the provision yesterday, there is provided a total appropriation of $51,069,333 for pay of the Army; there is the further item found on page 10, line 22-

Together with such additional sums as may be necessary under this and other appropriations contained in this act to defray the cost of increasing the enlisted strength of the Regular Army from an average of 118,750 to an average of 165,000.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does the Senator construe that language as ordering the increase as indicated?

Mr. COPELAND. I should think so.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The $51,069,333 provided in line 21 does not cover the cost of the increase, does it?

Mr. COPELAND. It does not.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Where is the money provided to pay for the increase?

Mr. COPELAND. If the Senator will read the language at the bottom of page 10, he will see that it will be taken from other appropriations contained in the bill.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Are there any other appropriations in the bill having sufficient latitude to pay for increasing the Army?

Mr. COPELAND. I should think, in view of the language quoted, there would be plenty of latitude.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does that mean other appropriations in the bill are so much larger than necessary for the purposes assigned to them in the bill that money can be used in that way?

Mr. COPELAND. I want to be very frank with the Senator. I think the language is very remarkable. This is the language of the bill as it came to us from the House. It is what we accepted in the committee, and it is what the Senate approved by its vote yesterday.

Mr. VANDENBERG. As a matter of fact, the money is not available insofar as anybody can identify it. Is not that the fact?

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator can figure that out for himself. We provide $375,000,000 in this bill. The question is whether or not the Army can find sufficient money in the other appropriations in the bill to make up this cost. It would cost some $20,000,000 to add 46,500 men to the Army.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is it the Senator's judgment that there is $20,000,000 latitude in the other portions of the bill to pay for the proposed increase in the Army?

Mr. COPELAND. That apparently was the feeling of the House committee when they reported the bill, and of the House when they passed the bill.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator would not care to subscribe to that prospectus, would he?

Mr. COPELAND. I should dislike to do so.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. COPELAND. Certainly.

Mr. KING. In view of the uncertainty, or, indeed, certainty, that there is no provision made for payment of the $20,000,000—and the amount which will be required will be greatly in excess of that—would the Senator from New York. who has charge of the bill, consent to an amendment reading something like this:

Provided, That no part of any of the appropriations herein made shall be reduced for the purpose of making up the deficit of $20,000,000 in order to meet the cost incurred by the increase of the Army.

That would be honest and fair.

Mr. COPELAND. It is just as much a matter for the Senator from Utah as it is for me to offer such an amendment. If the Senator wants to move that $20,000,000 should be added to the bill-

Mr. KING. Oh, no; I do not!

Mr. COPELAND. It would be in order to do that, and it would make sure there would be no subtraction from any other item in the bill. The language is as written by the House, and it is for the Senate to determine whether it is satisfactory language. I assume that was the purpose of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] in moving reconsideration of the provision.

Mr. KING. It is manifest that my dear friend from New York is not satisfied with this language. It leaves it in a condition of uncertainty or, as I said, really of certainty that we are giving the impression to the public by the measure that we are increasing the Army by several thousand men and that we are making adequate provision to pay them, when as a matter of fact we are not, unless we deduct from other appropriations herein authorized, perhaps from the pay of other soldiers, perhaps by elimination of some items herein provided for, sufficient to raise the $20,-000,000 in order to pay for the increase in the number of Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It seems to me the Senator is wholly correct, and we are driven to one of two conclusionseither there is not $20,000,000 available to pay for an increase in the strength of the Army, and it must be provided in a subsequent deficiency appropriation, or the remaining items have been padded $20,000,000 beyond the necessities of Mr. KING. I assent absolutely to the statement made by the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President, if there is a $20,000,000 surplus in the other items, we ought to know about it. The bill provides for an increase of 46,250 men in the Army. If we shall provide that increase in personnel, the pay appropriated for the enlisted men will not be sufficient to meet the need. In addition to that there must be provided an increase in travel allowance, an increase in subsistence, and in all the other items. The $20,000,000 is not the entire. additional expense involved. There must also be an allowance for the other items somewhere.

To me the indefensible phase of the matter is that the Senate is asked to legislate in this form. We ought not to legislate in any manner that permits such a thing to be Permit me to make one further suggestion. I think what ought to be done is to strike out the whole provision. Then the matter could go to conference, and if it should be desired to adjust the bill in a way to meet the requirements of good legislation, it could be done in conference. That should be done or else the Senate ought to strike out the provision for an increase in the Army or provide for an increase in such number as we want and appropriate the necessary money therefor. That would be good legislation.

The proposal now before us is indefinite. Nobody knows whence the moriey is coming. I am afraid it is an implied authorization for the War Department to create a deficit for a sufficient sum to pay the cost of the additional men. When we authorize the War Department to add personnel to the Army we know those men must be paid, must be clothed, and must be fed. It is an implied authorization for the War Department to create a deficit for a sufficient amount to take care of the expense involved. I do not believe there can be any defense for this type of legislation.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, the Department could take the money out of relief funds, just as they did before.

Mr. DICKINSON. It was suggested yesterday that they should take $20,000,000, or whatever amount is necessary, out of the appropriation for rivers and harbors and transfer it to "Pay of the Army." Then they could take out of the P. W. A. or some other relief fund which may be available a sufficient sum to be transferred to the river and harbor fund to carry on that work. I do not believe anyone wants to do such a thing. I do not believe that was in the thought of the Senate Committee on Appropriations. We ought not to sit silently by and permit a provision of this kind to remain in the bill.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I wish to address myself to the spirit of this bill. I am not able to approve what appears to be the spirit of the Senate as now indicated by expressions. The real test intruded and as base of dispute is where certain money which may be necessary may be found. I say that the true question for this honorable body is, Is it necessary that we have the money; if so, will we make the effort to find the money if it be necessary for the defense of the country?

Mr. President, I fear that my Nation is not feeling the serious situation in which our country is being really placed by the world at large. Day before yesterday England promptly increased her authority for army and every form of increase either for assault or defense, despite the fact that the orders in council of her Cabinet select committee had approved a visit on the part of officials of the Cabinet to Germany to take up again, in council and conference, the matter of a general reduction of armaments.

Despite that pretense, England gave out through her officials the statement that there were reasons for the increase of her army and her batteries of assault which she felt justified in. It is stated in what is known as a "white paper", that there is to be a prompt increase; and that despite the fact that this legislative committee was then on its way to confer with Hitler, the voice of government of Germany, ostensibly for the approach of another conference looking to general reduction of arms.

Mr. President, I have alluded to a situation which I think ought not to escape the attention of this honorable body, but should attract it to a very serious reflection. At the same time, this morning's information is that France now asserts her right to increase her whole form of military organization, particularly looking with anticipation to the Farther East. In the meantime, Italy announces the increase of her batteries, and sees a reason for it, but does not impart it to the world.

Mr. President, I wish to invite the attention of the honorable Senate to what appears to be a dangerous situation for America.

We have heard a great deal of late about meetings assembled for the purpose of decreasing arms, and conferences for their limitation. We watched the army move out from Italy to the land of Ethiopia to the border of three countries, where a conflict may arise equal to that which brought on the World War. Not one word was heard from what is called the League of Nations to stop the march, or to take jurisdiction of the subject; not one word from the alleged "World Court" to take jurisdiction of the controversy as to who does truly own the land on the border, which dispute is ostensibly the excuse for this so-called "invasion." But how stand we? We seek no war. We seek no conflict. The conflicts in which our country have been engaged, sir, we were brought into; we were drawn into. How stand we now?

Eminent Senators on this floor, whose sincerity cannot be questioned, whose principles are not only sincere but patriotic, feel that we can avoid these increases and avoid the increase of Army and Navy, and that by doing so we would make a demonstration of peace, and that demonstration would be accepted by world nations as an evidence of our good will, and, therefore, would bring peace from other nations. Has that been true?

Sir, it was my pleasure to serve in Congress as a Member of the House at the time of the declaration of the Spanish-American War, and later, after we had returned from that war, I saw the then President of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, battered by the very same logic of pacifism that is being presented today in America—insisting that by not building up our defenses we would not attract assault, but that by doing so we might.

We declined to enter upon the upbuilding of our Navy; and we grew so weak that when we were compelled to defend the policy of California in passing her land laws as against an assault that was then threatened from Japan, Theodore Roosevelt was compelled to go to the country, under the slogan one may remember, the anthem that he produced from a single line, "Speak softly but carry a big stick", and obtain from the country its consent to reconstructing and rebuilding the Navy as an essential defense as against the threat which was perfectly apparent from the source whence it came.

Was that equally true of the Army? President Woodrow Wilson assumed the policy, which has been suggested by eminent men of America, that by "letting the Army down", as they called it, decreasing it, we would evidence to the world that we were a people of peace, and therefore our example would incite others to follow it. Did it?

President Wilson discovered that we were in a situation akin to that which had transpired with the Navy when we waked to find that we had not a navy sufficient to defend us at Veracruz when the threat was being made by certain foreign countries to enter into Mexico and bring Mexico into an assault against us.

President Wilson discovered that the Army was so deficient that we virtually had no army to meet a situation which was gradually being brought upon us—a constant threat that was menacing us. Everything was postponed; our suggestions for peace were flouted; and a great nation of the world did not hesitate to seize our ships and search them, seizing what they regarded contraband, and finding us guilty of a violation of international law in some form as a justification for an assault on us while we were a neutral nation.

Then it was that President Wilson was compelled to bring to the attention of this honorable body the necessity of defense; and then we began some form of preparation which, in the final end, left us in a condition, when we entered the war, certified by the whole world as a nation unprepared to defend itself; and, sir, but for the splendid patriotism and sacrifice of the children of America, with the grace of God, who is it that can prophesy what might have happened to this country had there been a direct assault upon us at our shores?

How do we stand today? Why muddle through? What is the meaning of this cowardice of spirit? Why do we shrink from the plain fact that menaces us, as it were, a picture in flames?

There is Japan. There is a situation to which on another occasion here I dared call the attention of this honorable body, of a great country in the Orient imitating there the policy which the United States initiated in America and announced to the world. We inaugurated a policy for the continent of America which we called the "Monroe policy." I stood on this floor sometime past and advised this honorable body, in its patient consideration of my view, that there would arise from the Orient a policy which would duplicate ours of America, and there would be a Monroe policy for Asia, with the doctrine "Asia for the Asiatics" and an exclusion of the western world, particularly the United States.

time was looked upon by my honorable colleagues as but a dream, and something of a furious intermission of thought in which I should indulge? Does anybody deny now what may happen? Japan will not only move in order to defend her course and to justify her anticipated position, but, as surely as my honorable colleagues sit in this Chamber today, giving me the patient attention of their consideration, Japan will soon make her gesture to Russia on the theory that the United States is now in doubt as to the wisdom of having received Russia into the family of nations. She will approach China upon the theory that we, the United States, have cut off both Japan and China from equality of citizenship and equality of situation upon the sphere of the world. The proposition will be made squarely to Russia: "You furnish the army: we, Japan, can furnish the navy." With the Army of Russia and the Navy of Japan confronting us, where stand we? A very natural proposition will be made by these eminent masters of statecraft in the East to Russia: "First, there is your Alaska, taken from you by trick, as you now say", for which you claim your people never have been paid. They will say to Russia: "There you have your Alaska. You are upon its borders. Seize your property. The forage and loot and rich territory will re-ward you." On the other hand, there are the Philippines, which Japan will lay hold of with one of her hands, claiming it as Asia, and to the United States she will send the challenge: "Come and get them, gentlemen! There is your Alaska. Take it back, if you can, from Russia. There are your Philippines. Hold them, if you can, from Japan." As between these two, carrying out the policy of a Monroe doctrine for Asia, the United States will be put in a position where concessions as to every policy she has will have to be made to the Orient to avoid war, or, finding ourselves in war, we will be unprepared to defend ourselves. And yet my honorable colleagues on this floor to me seem indifferent to what seriousness all this means to us, if it means

I ask this honorable body, Does it really feel that the five great countries of the world that have now entered into programs for increasing their armies, for multiplying their navies, for the aggregation of every form of aircraft and every capability for assault, have done so without an object? Have they not some purpose? Have they not some object in view? Do you think their people would have allowed all this increase and expense if their people did not understand the reason for it and did not hold the spirit of justification for it? Are their people less human than ours, or less appreciative of dangers? If it were merely a display, sir, if it were but a march of numbers with an aggregation of glittering uniforms, would their people in silence have tolerated it? That they know what they intend is apparent. That they intend something somewhere which we do not understand is equally evident; and are we to sit around here, and, between our honorable colleagues, multiply words upon the single question of "Where will we find the money?" as if the American heart, in the defense of its country, ever refused to supply the money whenever the necessity arose!

Where will we find it? My answer, sir, out of and from the possession of the patriotic heart of America, if necessary for the defense of the country. If we can take the blood and life of the men of America, we can take the purse of the masters who hold it, if necessary for the defense of our country.

What does it mean that we stand about, perfectly blind to the situation of the whole world, and struggle over technicalities to find method here to defeat a measure of increase upon a construction on a parliamentary direction of the appropriation under the rules of customary procedure? Do not Senators realize that at our doors stands the danger? Shall we not cry out in the Roman senate the warning, "The enemy is at our door"? There is danger. And how shall we avoid it? Not by showing that we are too weak to defend ourselves. We shall avoid it by displaying that we are being prepared to realize what is ahead of us, and the prospects before us. Then, when it is seen that we are able to meet it, repel it, and defeat it, the assault will not be made upon us.

How stands it now in verification of that which at the me was looked upon by my honorable colleagues as but a until it was discovered by the assailant that we were unpresent and something of a furious intermission of thought pared to meet it.

And now how stand we? My eminent friend from Michigan [Mr. Vandenberg] correctly states, and the able Senator from Iowa [Mr. Dickinson] fortifies the statement, that there is in the measure an absence of some specific way in which the money is to be obtained. I reply by asking, Where has any measure ever been brought before this body that did not have an absence of some of the ways and means of obtaining and expending necessary to be left to the discretion of those who administer it?

Mr. President, I support the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark]. I support this bill. I support it on the ground of necessity. I deplore the fact that my honorable colleagues cannot see the necessities; and I warn them that the way to avoid being drawn into conflict is to let other countries see our ability to resent, defend, oppose, and defeat all attacks.

Mr. President, when George Washington left us the admonition that "in time of peace we should prepare for war" he did not mean, nor was it intended to instruct, that we were to prepare to war on any nation. It was an admonition which must lay close as an unction to the heart, that "in time of peace prepare for the wars that will be made against you." It was an admonition of defense. It was a warning to make preparation for self-preservation. It is there we are again today, or the signs of the world mean nothing; they obliterate our senses in their confusion and they multiply in their dangers.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LEWIS. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. There is confusion as to the pending question. I understood the Senator to present arguments in favor of increasing the Army, and then I understood him to say that he supported the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark]. The motion of the Senator from Missouri is to reconsider the vote by which a committee amendment has already been agreed to.

Mr. CLARK. That is correct, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. ROBINSON. With the indulgence of the Senator from Illinois, I should like to have the situation clarified so that I may know just what is the motion of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. LEWIS. I had understood from the able Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, the Senator from Texas [Mr. Sheppard], that the motion of the Senator from Missouri, made during my absence—I have been away for a couple of days, and during that time the motion of the able Senator from Missouri was made—contemplated the proper increase of the Army and the justification of the item which I understood had been voted out and which he desired to have returned to the bill.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Illinois that the particular motion now before the Senate is a motion for a reconsideration of the vote by which the committee amendment on page 10 struck out the language in the bill as it passed the House, "at the discretion of the President and in such increments as he may deem necessary from time to time." At the time I made that motion I gave notice that it was my intention to move to strike out the provision for the increase in the Army.

Mr. LEWIS. I therefore call attention, if my able friend from Arkansas will tolerate, to the fact that I have addressed myself to the necessity of leaving to the discretion of the proper officials the control of finding the wherewith necessary, when it shall become necessary. Therefore the provision read by the Senator from Missouri leaving the discretion to the President quite justifies as a basis the argument I have made.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I still do not grasp the situation as presented by the Senator from Illinois. I hope the Senator understands I am not trying to embarrass him. I am seeking only to grasp his position and the effect of his argument.

Mr. LEWIS. Oh, I flatter myself I am proof against being embarrassed by questions.

Mr. ROBINSON. As I understand, the object of the Senator from Missouri in moving to reconsider is finally to strike from the bill the provision for an increase in the enlisted personnel of the Army.

Mr. CLARK. That is correct. If the Senator from Illinois will permit me for one moment—

Mr. LEWIS. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. The purpose of the pending motion to reconsider is to present again to the Senate the question contained in the committee amendment, which is as to whether the increase in the Army shall be mandatory or shall be discretionary with the President. Then, as I said a moment ago, it is my intention, no matter what may be done with that motion, to move to strike out the provision for the increase in the size of the Army.

Mr. ROBINSON. First, if the motion now pending should prevail, it would restore the provision which vests in the President discretion as to whether the Army shall be increased.

Mr. CLARK. That is correct.

Mr. LEWIS. It is to that I have addressed myself, I may say to my able friend from Arkansas, allowing discretion to those in command as to where the money would come from, and the method of the increase of men and money. If there is to be a subsequent motion of the able Senator from Missouri for a decrease from the number fixed in the House, I am compelled to oppose it, for I do not accept it nor approve it.

Mr. ROBINSON. The effect of the adoption of the motion now pending would be to restore the language originally contained in the bill, vesting discretion in the President to increase the Military Establishment. The Senator from Missouri has announced that if that shall be done, he will make another motion the effect and purpose of which will be to leave the Military Establishment as it now is and to prevent an increase. I thank the Senator from Illinois for yielding.

Mr. LEWIS. I thank the Senator from Arkansas for bringing to my attention a feature which had not been called to my consideration, due to the fact that I was absent during the time of the debate upon a feature of the motion which I had not heard mentioned.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. LEWIS. I yield to the Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I am sorry the Senator from Illinois misunderstood what I said to him about the Clark motion. I wish to clarify the situation by saying that the proposal of the Appropriations Committee, which the Senator from Missouri opposes, is not to increase the authorized strength of the Army. The authorized strength of the Army is 280,000 men, provided in the National Defense Act of 1920. That strength has never been realized on account of insufficient appropriations. It was whittled down through inadequate funds to less than 120,000, about 35,000 of whom are in the oversea territories, leaving us a number here in the United States not sufficient for the ordinary peace-time purposes of an army. The purpose of the small increase provided for, an increase of 46,000, is to bring the Army up to that skeleton proportion necessary for the proper expansion of the Army in the event of an emergency, necessary for the proper discharge of peace-time functions and necessary for the development of a proper force in the event of a need for such expansion.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, unquestionably the increase provided for in the bill will still be within the authorization of the 1920 National Defense Act, but the effect will be to increase the present standing Army by about 46,000 soldiers. If the policy incorporated in the amendments proposed by the Senator from Missouri shall be agreed to, it will remove the provision now contained in the bill, and retain the Military Establishment at its present strength. That was what I was trying to clear up.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Duffy in the chair). Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. LEWIS. I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. If I have drawn the proper conclusion from the remarks of the able Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] and the question propounded by the able Senator from Texas [Mr. Sheppard] they propose not at this time to clothe this skeleton with flesh and blood, but they do propose to preserve the skeleton itself?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, that is exactly true, and I may say that General Pershing, General MacArthur, former Secretary of War Baker, and other noted students of military affairs have testified that the irreducible minimum for peace-time purposes is 165,000 men.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I should like an opportunity sometime during the consideration of this bill to vote not only to perpetuate or articulate the skeleton of our Army but also to clothe it with flesh, blood, and sinew.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I flattered myself when I was expressing my views that I was adding something to the bill of flesh and blood, as the able Senator has suggested the necessity of adding both flesh and blood to the skeleton of the Army.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? Mr. LEWIS. I yield.

Mr. LOGAN. The difficulty is not with the able speech of the distinguished Senator from Illinois. The whole confusion arose because the Senator said he was for the Clark motion, which has for its object exactly the opposite of that for which the Senator has been contending. That is what brought about the confusion.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, it may be, and doubtless could be, that the Senator from Kentucky was confused in that line because, as I remarked, I misunderstood the parliamentary status as revealed to me by the Senator from Texas, or as I thought the Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs had stated it to me. The one feature which I was sustaining, and which I again announce, propound, and persist in, is that the provision which authorizes the Commander in Chief to be the judge of the emergency for the increase shall remain and be sustained and fortified—

Mr. SHEPPARD. And only up to 165,000 men, not beyond that?

Mr. LEWIS. That such provision in no wise be stricken from the bill.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I hope the able Senator from Illinois will not construe my interruption as indicating that I was opposing his remarks. On the contrary, I was agreeing, assisting, and encouraging the able Senator from Illinois, rather than saying anything in derogation of what he said.

Mr. LEWIS. I quite adopt that, Mr. President, and such was my understanding of the Senator's observation. I was appropriating what I thought was his very suitable simile of flesh and blood upon the skeleton.

Applying the expression of Wolsey to Cromwell in King Henry VIII, I do not wish to leave my country "naked to her enemies", therefore that she be clad in such manner as will justify her position, and hold her prepared and defended before the world.

Mr. President, because it has now been made clear that the question just at this moment, as the leader of the majority has stated, is whether or not the provision that gives discretion to the President shall remain in the bill or whether it shall be stricken out, preparatory to a subsequent motion to be tendered by the Senator from Missouri the nature of which I had misunderstood from not having quite understood what was presented to me, I now assert and here insist that what I have said shall be applied to what I contend is and should now be the policy for America, namely the proper increase of our Army to the full limit of a necessary defense, and complete preparation of defense in anticipation of all of that which around the world gives evidence of trouble to arise somewhere, and, possibly, having arisen, may strike us at some delicate point as seriously as that which brought us into the World War.

I have taken the liberty to invite my honorable colleagues to consider the conditions in the Orient, and the possibilities that could arise, as a justification for leaving the discretion in the hands of the Commander in Chief, that we may be provided for, and if, as the Senator from Texas [Mr. Sheppard] well says, the bill, as it stands, merely provides a very small army, in any exercise of his discretion, the number being rather limited, I will go still further, sir, and add to that discretion, if necessary. As it now stands, to that which is now proposed to be granted to the President as the Commander in Chief, more could be granted as the conditions require, I am insisting now that the time has come when this honorable body should announce that the eyes of America are fixed on the world; that the hearts of America are disturbed by the conditions in all the world; that we stand on the defense, tiptoe with anxiety; but we view our condition, and that, if not now wholly prepared, we leave the military fortunes of this country in the discretion of the Commander in Chief with his power to prepare that we may resist the attempt—perhaps assault—and be ready to protect this country in whatever emergency may arise, and to do whatever may be necessary to maintain and care for our America.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LEWIS. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. McADOO. I should like to say to my distinguished colleague from Illinois that in the discussion before the Appropriations Committee it was clearly brought out that no previous appropriation bill for the Army had ever contained a provision conferring upon the President the discretionary power to increase the Army. And the reason why it was opposed in the committee was that the President already is supercharged with great responsibilities; that he would have to go over the evidence, the same kind of evidence presented to the committee, before he could make intelligent decisions. Therefore the committee decided that the President should not be burdened with that discretion, and that as Congress had always exercised the power to determine the size of the Army, that policy should be adhered to in this bill.

Furthermore, Mr. President, the increase which is authorized here will not be made all at once. It will be made from time to time as required and necessitated by the orderly processes of recruiting. The men have to be examined, they have to be carefully selected, and if the burden were put upon the President to determine from time to time the extent of the increases to be made it would certainly be an injustice to him to charge him with these additional duties when they can be better performed by the War Department and by the constituted authorities which are maintained by the Government for that purpose.

I therefore oppose the motion of my distinguished friend from Missouri [Mr. Clark] to reconsider the action taken by the Senate. If I may transgress a little further—

Mr. LEWIS. I am glad to yield further to the Senator from California.

Mr. McADOO. I also wish to express my hearty sympathy with and concurrence in the views expressed by the distinguished Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] and the distinguished Senator from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst] and the distinguished Senator from Texas [Mr. Sheppard] and others who have spoken on the floor about the necessity for this proposed increase in the strength of the Army. I have recently had the pleasure of going all the way around the world and observing something of the conditions which exist in the world, and I say with due deliberation that unless we want to continue to be a "boob" Nation we will not hesitate to provide the moderate increase in the Army which is proposed by this bill. It is the part of prudence; it is justified by every consideration of national defense, and by every consideration of wisdom that we should do those things which are essential to the protection of the country.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois yield?

Mr. LEWIS. I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. In these dreary days when we do not obtain many satisfactions of life I wish to state to the Senate and to the country the satisfaction I have derived from the speeches this morning; and I am particularly gratified that the able Senator from California [Mr. McApoo], who is a close observer of men and things, has given us—I wish he had spoken longer—some of his observations and reflections regarding what he perceived in the Orient.

Mr. President, a number of Senators have visited the Orient within recent months. They have all brought back the same sort of information. As the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] says, to this information no prudent and sensible man may close his eyes or his ears.

I do not know that what I am now about to say is tactful, but it is my duty to say that some years ago I referred to lower California as the Achilles heel of this Nation. I am not overstating the case when I say that the entire littoral—the Pacific coast—is the Achilles heel of our Nation today.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, of course, as we know, on the classic occasion when Thetis held her child by the foot and gave it the decoration of the bath which gave it perpetuity and invulnerability, her hands, covering the foot, left the child where in that respect it was not guarded; and thus the heel of Achilles became, as my friend from Arizona has intimated, the vulnerable spot of the body.

Mr. ASHURST. If the Senator will permit me to make the suggestion, that was the spot toward which Paris directed his fatal arrow.

Mr. LEWIS. I may add also that when the time came before Troy when Paris discharged his arrow, which was not supposed to be poisoned, but which was, nevertheless, deadly in all respects, it would not have been effective upon the body of Achilles had it not touched this particular portion that had not been bathed in the waters of the Styx.

Mr. President, I also agree with the able Senator from Arizona that conditions have now placed us where the whole of the Pacific coast can be said to be the revealed "heel of Achilles", and it is the place where an assault, if it should be made, would be not only sensitive but one, sir, that could suffer such a wound as would abuse the whole body of the Republic to the point where there would be no healing, save in death.

Mr. President, referring, therefore, to the remark of the able Senator from California, what is sought in this bill? Is 147,000 the minimum figure? It is asked to have it brought up at once to that minority. My able friend from California correctly alludes to the heavy burdens upon the President, but those burdens have been borne by the President in the past, and under prevailing laws affecting the general situation are being administered and discharged by being committed to certain officers of the Cabinet or other agencies of the Government, through which they are all transacted and discharged.

If the discretion to which we allude is left to the President, I call the attention of my eminent friend from California that in this instance it is left to the Commander in Chief; that the President is a civil officer, but when we submit the matters affecting the Army to him, his position becomes metamorphosed into that of Commander in Chief, and as Commander in Chief he becomes the judge of what is best for the defense of his country, and then entrusts the execution of the mere administrative measures to whatever department or agency his judgment may indicate is best adapted to carry it through.

Thus has ever been the course, because in time of war itself, while the Commander in Chief has charge of the whole Army, it is well known did he not commit certain functions to certain agencies and aides, operations could not be carried forward to completeness. Therefore the provision which grants the discretion merely gives to him authority. While it may be, as my able friend from California says, that in no previous bill was such power granted, I beg to reply, from the vision I am able to gather of the world, that no such general previous condition has ever existed around us in the exact form, disguised and masked in detail as it is, as now surrounds us, and it is the height of wisdom that the discretion be left in the Commander in Chief, that he may transfer the execution of any duty he may find necessary to those departments to which have been committed the tasks of carrying out the Nation's policy, which the able Senator from California has demonstrated has been the experience of the past.

Mr. President, I have made plain, I trust, my own view. I hope I have made it so clear that my eminent friends of the Senate can agree with me. They may not agree with all of the fears I have expressed. They may be ill-founded. I pray God they may be born of fears not experienced. But I have lived through two eras of wars in the small life that nature gives us, and when we would say each time that in our estimation we were perfectly safe, we were drawn into wars which no one expected we would ever have to fight, and foes no one expected we would encounter.

May I be so pardoned by this honorable body as to touch upon a personal experience? Heaven knows I desire no war. It was I, a humble Member of the other House of Congress, who tendered the resolution to recognize the independence of Cuba. My then colleague from Utah [Mr. King], now the eminent Senator from that State, recalls the instance. My motion was tendered at the time as a mere party move. I must here confess what is known among some of my colleagues; it was because of my difference of principle with the then Democratic leader of my own party and the difference with members of my own party that a motion was made which led to debate that took on the form of recognizing the belligerency of Cuba, under which motion resolutions were adopted, with amendments from both sides, that finally led to the conflict, or constituted the reason for the conflict from which the contest followed. War was upon us. 'The blowing up of the Maine was the result of passing these resolutions, and the expressions under them brought on the crisis. I served through that war and returned to the Senate, and then we were driven to war in the Philippines.

Will we not remember that in the World War it was the sinking to the depths of the sea of the ships that carried merchandise shipped by the citizens of the United States that finally brought us, unhappily, to the apex? An assault upon the sovereignty of America compelled us to resent it. Such conditions have arisen, Mr. President, when we least expected them. There are those who feel it safe to assault when they feel we are unprepared to meet it. It is when we are prepared to meet it that the assault is warded off. It is to ward off the assault and to avoid another such condition as that to which we were brought, with results now so familiar to us all, the loss of life, the bankruptcy of treasuries, the demoralization of civilization, that I rise here and ask my honorable colleagues to consider the situation of our country and the world, and to turn to America, to remember this is their country, and every move for her defense, if not required, is no loss; if required, is a gain. If not undertaken when it is required is such a loss, to the point of desolation, that there is none of us can outlive the regret for failing to serve as our people and their rights command and justify. On with our duty; it is to God and country.

Sir, in behalf of America, I support the right and privilege of the discretion being left to the President to protect and preserve this Nation and the people of the United States.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, in view of the addresses to which we have just listened, and particularly that of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], I feel constrained to take the floor for the purpose of attempting to reply to some of the statements made and to express my disapproval of what I conceive to be the military policy to which our Government is being committed.

I appreciate how unavailing will be any opposition to the bill under consideration or any of its provisions. The die is cast; and this measure, carrying approximately $400,000,000, will soon receive the approval of this body and be enacted into law.

For a number of years I have protested against the measures which have been submitted carrying hundreds of millions of dollars of appropriations for the Army and the Navy. I have stated, as these recurring measures were presented, that the United States was expending more than any other nation in the world for its Military Establishment.

In my remarks yesterday I called attention to the report of the Government showing the great increase in the appropriations for the Army and for the Navy. For instance, the appropriations for the Navy Department in 1910 were $123,-000,000 and during each succeeding year following the World War, they have varied between $300,000,000 and $736,000,000. The appropriations carried for the War Department in 1910 were $189,000,000. Since the World War they have oscillated between $411,000,000 and $545,000,000, which lastnamed amount was appropriated for the year 1934. We can, with profit, examine the mounting costs of the Government during the past 50 years. For instance, in 1877 the total expenses of the Government chargeable against ordinary receipts amounted to $241,334,000. In 1910 the total expenditures of the Government amounted to $693,-617,065. Since then the Government expenditures chargeable against ordinary receipts, amounted to $1,977,681,751. Omitting the expenditures during the World War, the annual expenditures have increased; and for the fiscal year 1934 they reached the stupendous sum of $7,243,725,625. I might add that the postal expenditures are not included in the figures which I have submitted.

Mr. President, during the past 10 or 15 years I have not been in accord with the majority of the Senate in dealing with appropriations for the military establishments of our Government, nor have I been in agreement with the military policy of the Government so far as that policy was reflected in demands made for appropriations for the Navy and the War Departments. I find myself now in disagreement with what I conceive to be a spirit of militarism, and I say, without any desire to be offensive, to my colleagues or to be unduly critical of the Government itself, that I have long since learned that appropriations for the Army and the Navy receive strong congressional support, and not infrequently demands are made for larger appropriations than those provided in the bills that are being considered. Any voice raised in opposition to these stupendous appropriations is like a voice crying in the wilderness, and is soon silenced by the clamorous and insistent demands for the speedy passage of measures carrying large appropriations for the Army and the Navy.

It seems to me that we and many of the people have been indifferent to the results flowing from the large military budgets which have annually received the approval of the legislative and executive branches of the Government; and it is obvious that as our military appropriations have increased other nations have been led—not infrequently reluctantly—to augment their military appropriations.

I do not agree with the conclusion reached by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], nor with the deductions which he draws from what he conceives to be the conditions now existing in the world, lamentable and disturbing though they may be. I confess that world conditions are unsatisfactory; that there is too much of the spirit of militarism extant in many countries, and that there are economic and political movements which occasion apprehension in various parts of the world. But I confess that I am unable to perceive in this rather uncertain and unsettled condition, any occasion for hysteria upon our part, or for demands for larger increases in our military establishments. I see no foes disguised and masked—to use the expression of the Senator from Illinois—which threaten the peace and security of this Republic.

The Senator in the early part of his remarks conveyed the impression to me, if not to others, that our Government had been remiss in making appropriations and that the pending measure was wholly inadequate to meet the needs of the hour.

Mr. President, before this session of Congress adjourns, I make the prediction that the appropriations which will be made for our Military Establishments will exceed by at least $400,000,000 the military appropriations of any other country on earth. As I have pointed out, the annual appropriations since the World War have exceeded by at least $200,000,000 the appropriations which have been made by the most militaristic nation on earth. Neither France nor England nor Italy nor Russia has reached by several hundred million dollars, during any one year, our expenditures for military purposes. The figures which I have before me, and to which I have referred, show a progressive increase for many years in the appropriations made by our Government. It is certain that our appropriations for the Army and Navy for the next fiscal year will exceed a billion dollars, and, indeed, there is rather striking evidence that it will reach the stupendous sum of one billion three or four hundred million

I am unable, Mr. President, to justify our military budgets, which I have stated surpass any military nation on earth, and I regret exceedingly that the American people do not demand of Congress that there shall be a reduction in the military burdens imposed upon the people. The financial condition of our country should provoke the most serious thought upon the part of Congress and lead to a most careful examination of every measure carrying appropriations brought before either House for consideration. A military budget of a billion dollars in times of peace-and our country is now at peace-cannot, in my opinion, be justified. It seems certain that such stupendous military appropriations will arouse fear and apprehension upon the part of other nations and lead them to increase their military budgets. In other words, our example will not be overlooked by other nations: indeed, it will be their justification for adding to the burdens of their already overburdened populations by increasing their military expenditures.

Mr. President, we should not forget the heavy burdens of taxation to which our country is subjected and the enormous expenditures which are being made for governmental purposes. The National Government's expenditures for the fiscal year 1933-34 amounted to more than $7,000,000,000, and the total local governments' expenditures amounted to more than $9,700,000,000. This stupendous sum, approximating $17,000,000,000, amounted to a per capita expenditure of $133; and it must not be forgotten that our total public national debt approximates $30,000,000,000. When we recall that the total annual income of all persons gainfully employed in the United States during the past 3 or 4 years has ranged between thirty and forty billions of dollars, it is obvious that there is a crushing burden resting upon the

It is claimed that many of our political subdivisions are unable to function for lack of revenues and that many of the States and their political subdivisions have reached the limit of their bonding capacity. The deficits of the National Government have been increasing during the past 4 years, and for the fiscal year ending June 30 of this year it is almost impossible to determine just what the deficit will be, but it will reach, or perhaps surpass, $5,000,000,000. The total ordinary receipts of the National Government for the year 1933 were $2,338,356,180, and for 1934 were only three billion two hundred and some odd million dollars. The deficit for the fiscal year 1934 exceeded $4,000,000,000.

How can we defend an expenditure of more than a billion dollars for military and naval purposes for the coming year? That huge sum will, in my opinion, be more than one-fourth of the total revenue of the National Government. We are compelled to issue bonds and more bonds, and further plunge the National Government into the great gulf of indebtedness. So great is the indebtedness of our country, that demands are being made for the issuance of irredeemable paper money. There are groups of individuals of no small proportion who contend that the Government cannot meet these mounting expenditures by following fiscal policies which have been controlling in the past; and that it must follow the dangerous paths which other nations have followed and which, may I add, have led to destruction when they embarked upon inflationary policies.

Mr. President, I am not only pleading for a rational mili-country from dangers more serious than any other through which it has passed.

Mr. President. I return to some of the observations made by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis]. He stated that the world conditions created a "dangerous situation to our country." I cannot assent to the views expressed by my friend. Of course, difficulties and troubles in any part of the world have their repercussions beyond their borders, and conflagrations in Europe or in Asia may have some effect upon our country. It is possible, of course, that a serious conflict in Europe or in Asia might have some effect upon our trade and commerce, and it is conceivable that the United States might be drawn into a world conflict; but, Mr. President, the conditions which have existed since the World War have not justified the enormous appropriations which we have made for military purposes-appropriations which aggregate many billions of dollars—nor is there anything, in my opinion, in the situation in the world today which warrants the United States in appropriating a billion or more dollars for the Army and the Navy for the next fiscal year.

Mr. President, I do not regard the situation as threatening to America. What nations are our enemies and are shaping their military policies with reference to the United States? Perhaps that statement needs some qualification. Undoubtedly, when some nations see the enormous appropriations which the United States is making for its Army and for its Navy, it will be natural for them to inquire as to the reason for such course. Undoubtedly their course will be influenced by the military manifestations upon the part of our Government. When a nation as strong and powerful as the United States, occupying as it does a position which defies invasion, with its unlimited resources, annually appropriates hundreds of millions of dollars more than any other nation in the world, it is to be expected that its course will not be unobserved, but on the contrary will lead to inquiries, fears, apprehensions-indeed, suspicions-as to the policy and purpose of appropriations so stupendous and continuing.

I repeat, Mr. President, this Republic has no foe. Canada is our friend. There is a kinship between the people to the north and the people of the United States. Anglo-Saxon institutions there abound, and to a greater or less degree the Canadians are actuated by the same spirit of freedom and are governed by the same democratic institutions as are the people of the United States. It would be a cruel jest for anyone to indicate that Canada is or would be an enemy of this Republic.

Who will charge that Mexico is a menace to the integrity or authority of the United States? Mexico desires to live in peace and concord with this great Republic, and we desire to live in peace and concord with Mexico. We want to aid in every possible way in her economic and industrial development and in a realization of all the benefits which flow from a truly republican form of government. If we look farther south, into the Central American States, none of them is our enemy; all are our friends. I had the honor to write the plank in the platform of 1924 of the Democratic Party, in which I directed attention to the friendly relations existing between the United States and Latin America, and concluded the declaration with the statement that "God has made us neighbors; justice shall keep us friends."

The Latin American states desire the friendship of the United States; they are not our foes. If we should be assailed by any force beyond the seas, and the liberties of the people of the United States should be jeopardized, we would have the sympathy, and, if necessary, the aid of the people of the South American states.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. KING. I yield for a question.
Mr. LONG. I merely want to hear the Senator on the point I am about to mention. I have a respect for the logic of what the Senator is saying; but, from what we have been tary policy, but I am pleading for economy in our Gov- hearing, it seems apparent, at least it looks to me, as if we ernment and for the pursuit of policies that will save our are going to have to be a little bit more careful, if all our friends are not entirely mistaken, and be a little bit more ready in some respects than we have been. Apparently, from what we are told, we are not at all in a position to care for ourselves today. Perhaps that may be wrong.

Mr. KING. I do not agree with the pessimistic views and the loud lamentations to which we have listened this morning and with which we are frequently assailed throughout the United States. We have a powerful military clique in the United States; we might just as well admit it; and officers of the Army and Navy and other citizens of more or less prominence visit various sections of the United States and deliver addresses before organizations, civic and otherwise, in which they represent the United States as being utterly helpless to defend itself; they arouse the people by their appeals for what they call "preparedness", and in that they demand larger appropriations for the Army and Navy. The Senator from Texas just stated that there was an authorization in the act of 1920 for a very large standing Army, and, because we have not reached the maximum limit of that authorization, he insists that we have a mere skeleton of an Army and that we ought to enlarge it until we have reached the limit of that authorization.

When the Army bill of 1920 was passed we had in our eyes the smoke of battle; we had before us the recollection of the conflict which had just taken place in the Old World; and under the influence of a hysteria not warranted we were driven forward to demand the expenditure of $1,500,000,000 for battleships and for an increase in our Army of four or five or six times what it had been for many years during the history of the Republic.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. Borah] and myself—if I may be pardoned a reference to myself—submitted resolutions in the Senate challenging attention to the enormous appropriations which were demanded, and calling for an international conference to which might be brought for determination the military problems which confronts this and other countries. The then President of the United States, Mr. Harding—and he is entitled to the gratitude of the American people for his efforts in behalf of world peace—aided by his great Secretary of State, now the Chief Justice of the United States, secured an international conference.

As a result of that conference the unwise policy of building battleships which would cost $1,500,000,000 was abandoned, and battleship construction was restricted to the ratio of 5-5-3-1.87 for the great nations of the world. The United States represented 5, Great Britain 5, Japan 3, and France and Italy each 1.87 as a maximum of construction of capital ships. We saved for the United States by that conference more than a billion dollars, and restrained other nations from large expenditures, because they were afraid of us with the great military demand upon our part, from embarking upon great construction programs.

When we were pressing for the construction of battleships costing $1,500,000,000, there was introduced into the Diet of Japan a provision for the construction of six battleships; and Great Britain, inflamed—nay, becoming apprehensive because of our position—laid down the Hood and several other great battleships, some of which would have cost $70,000,000 each. When that conference was held they rejoiced in the fact that they had been liberated, pro tanto, from the burdens which the construction of those great ships would have imposed upon their people.

Mr. President, I repeat, we have no foes. Statements have been made over and over again by great naval commanders that no nation on earth could invade the United States and that the combined navies of the world could not do so. Admiral Fullam, Admiral Sims—the latter perhaps one of the greatest naval commanders we have ever had—testified that it would be impossible to wage a naval war across oceans, where the nation waging the war did not have colonies and have opportunities for coaling, refueling, and obtaining supplies. They contended that no nation could invade the United States; that with the development of submarines and airplanes, no fleet could reach our shores.

Who can challenge that statement? Jingoists may say that Japan may attack the United States. Mr. President, it seems to me a statement of that character is utterly without foundation, and denies the intellectual capacity of the American people. Japan does not want to make war upon the United States. I am no apologist for Japan. I think her course in many respects during the past few years has been reprehensible. Japan is looking to the Orient, not to the Occident. She wants to consolidate her gains in Manchuria.

It may be said in defense of Japan that she has a population of 70,000,000, a growing and increasing population, more than 500,000 accretion to her population each year.

My eminent colleague, Mr. Thomas of Utah, would be better prepared to speak of that than myself, because of his sojourn there for a number of years. Because of a paucity of irrigable land, a limitation for agricultural development or, for that matter, mineral development or industrial development, Japan feels that she must look somewhere for expansion of her growing population. Therefore, Manchuria becomes an object of her attention, if not desire. Manchuria has been the victim for years of misrule-indeed, of bandit and tyrannous government. Japan had nearly 1,000,000 of her nationals there, Koreans and Japanese. They were subjected to unjust treatment and Japan regarded it as her duty, if not her right, to protect their interests. I do not mean that Japan was free from selfish and imperialistic ambitions. In that defense a conflict arose, and she went forward until Manchuria was conquered and an administration set up under the apparent leadership of the present King of Manchuria.

Japan has no hostility toward the United States. She seeks our friendship. I think we are not serving the cause of peace by assailing Japan and intimating, as so many have done in the past, that Japan is our enemy and contemplates making war upon the United States.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. KING. I yield to my friend from Louisiana. Mr. LONG. The Senator is talking about the very thing

Mr. LONG. The Senator is talking about the very thing I had hoped he would discuss. Does not Japan take the position under the four-power pact and the Kellogg Treaty, to say nothing of the League of Nations, that she is going to do what she pleases in the Orient?

Mr. KING. If I were to answer categorically my friend from Louisiana, I think I should have to say that we are warranted in the deduction or the conclusion that Japan has not lived up to the terms of the four-power pact or the nine-power treaty or the terms of the League of Nations. I do not condone the course of Japan in disregarding its obligations under the treaties referred to. Indeed, I condemn her course. That may be said, however, of some other nations. Germany came into the League of Nations quite recently and sat down almost at the head of the Council table. But she left the League of Nations when there were some intimations that she was rearming and could not have her way. Other nations have not responded to the obligations which were solemnly undertaken by them when they entered into the League of Nations, and became signatories to other important treaties.

I will say frankly that Japan and Germany—because Germany has sought to violate the terms of the Kellogg-Briand Pact—have not lived scrupulously up to the obligations imposed by that great instrument which sought to bring peace and to prevent the great military manifestations which today impose such burdens upon the people of the world.

I come back to the proposition, which I assert, that the United States is not menaced by any nation. Who will say Great Britain menaces the peace of the United States or that Germany or any other nation seeks to injure or invade our country? Who will declare that any nation or a combination of all nations could land troops upon our shores, or overthrow our Government and impose upon us burdens which conquerors often impose upon conquered nations?

This Nation stands upon the glittering heights of the New World, unafraid, unchallenged; and if we pursue the course of justice, and peace, and fellowship under God we will become, and should become, the great leader for world peace, for moral supremacy, for the triumph of righteousness. But if we are challenging the world, if we spend $200,000,000 to $400,000,000 a year more than any other nation for military purposes, we will, of course, excite the fears and apprehensions of other nations. They know we are safe and immune from attack, and when we build great navies and contemplate great military movements and increase our Army, they will ask, "What is the purpose?"

They cannot look into our hearts as we look into our own hearts. They are bound to reach the conclusion that we have some military purpose adverse to their peace.

The statement was made by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] a few moments ago that we had been drawn into war. My recollection is that the World War is perhaps the only war into which we were drawn. As to the Mexican War, I am inclined to think that history will not support the Senator. Indeed, the great emancipator, Abraham Lincoln, a Member of the House of Representatives when we declared war upon Mexico, criticized and denounced our Nation's policy.

My friend from Illinois referred to the Cuban situation, the Spanish-American War. We were not drawn into it. We appropriated $50,000,000 early in 1898 and placed it in the hands of President McKinley for the purpose of putting our Army and our Navy in shape for the invasion of Cuba. We were not drawn into that war.

I had the honor, as a young Member of the House of Representatives, of being named by the Democrats to go to Cuba and investigate the situation. I went there and found that Weyler, by his concentration policy, had starved to death thousands and tens of thousands of the poor Cubans.

I went into the canebrakes, into the forests, and most of the provinces, and met the leaders of the revolution; I learned their views, and purposes and returned to Congress and advocated—and, perhaps I was wrong—armed intervention. We were the ones who were the aggressors against Spain in the sense that the situation there was such as that we felt constrained to interfere for the prevention of further loss of life.

We went to the Philippine Islands. We were not drawn into a conflict with the Filipinos. We waged war against them, and many thousands of them, directly and indirectly, lost their lives as the result of our invasion of their country.

Senators may recall the eloquent pleas made in this Chamber by one of the greater statesmen of our country, a Republican Senator, Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts. The Democratic Party declared against our Philippine policy and made the campaign of 1900 upon that issue under the leadership of Mr. Bryan.

I say we are not free from the charge that we have drawn other nations into war and that we have invaded their lands.

Mr. President, I protest against a militaristic policy. I think we should be pleading for peace, and not war; and that we should, as I indicated a few moments ago, take the lead among all nations in spreading the gospel of peace and good will.

I have just seen the Milwaukee Journal, an able newspaper, which states that the "prospects for peace improve." Sir Austen Chamberlain makes a strong statement to the effect that the prospects for peace throughout the world are bright.

Reference has been made to Russia. I cannot conceive—I do not believe it is possible for Japan and Russia to form a rapprochement which contemplates aggression upon other nations. If we had followed the plan suggested by the Russian representatives in disarmament conferences, we should have been on the way now to world peace.

Upon two occasions Mr. Litvinoff, representing Russia, pleaded with the disarmament conferences—and we were represented there by Mr. Gibson and others—for disarmament, and if that were not possible for important naval reductions in the military establishments of the world. His appeals were spurned. Our Nation did not accept his proposals or make suggestions that would have tended to relieve the tension and to pave the way for the reduction of the military forces of the United and other nations.

Mr. President, I shall support the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark]. For the reasons stated by the Senator from California [Mr. McAddol I am unwilling to put the burden upon the President of the United States of determining the extent of our armed forces. As great and as good a man as is the present occupant of the White House, I am unwilling to put into the hands of any President the authority to determine the size of the Army. In the past kings of Europe determined the size of their armies, and desired to control the purse as well as the sword. The struggles for liberty which finally culminated in reducing kings from despots to constitutional monarchs grew out of the resistance of the people to the claim that the king should prescribe the extent of the military forces and should have control of the purse.

The Congress of the United States, under our form of government, has the sole power to determine the kind and nature of our military forces. It has the sole authority to lay taxes upon the people. Let us maintain the integrity of the Constitution and the provisions therein found for the safety, happiness, and welfare of the American people.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I desire to occupy the attention of the Senate for only a moment.

I understood the Senator from Utah [Mr. King], from whom I always hesitate to differ, because he is a great statesman and patriot, to say he is in favor of the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark], and yet he is opposed to leaving to the President the discretion as to when this increase shall be made. That is the very thing which is now involved. The very question which is before us is whether or not we shall strike from the bill, as it came from the House, the words "at the discretion of the President and in such increments as he may deem necessary from time to time." The Senate committee reported in favor of striking out the provision giving this discretion of the President, and the amendment was agreed to by the Senate. Now a motion is made to reconsider the action of the Senate upon that amendment.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President-

Mr. KING. Mr. President, that motion, as I understand, is only for the purpose of moving to strike out the whole paragraph.

Mr. FLETCHER. That may be; but we are anticipating, and we have gone far afield to discuss something that really is not before us. The Senator from Missouri has not yet made that motion. He says he is going to make it, Very well. We shall have to discuss it at some time, and perhaps it is just as well to do so now. I have no doubt he will make the motion, but he has not yet made it. The only motion now before us is a motion to reconsider the action of the Senate on the provision of the bill which provides for giving discretion to the President.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FLETCHER. I yield to the Senator from Missouri. Mr. CLARK. I simply desire to state to the Senator that since there seems to be so much confusion as to exactly what the issue is, my intention, as soon as I can get the floor, is to simplify the issue by withdrawing my motion to reconsider and moving to strike out the provision for increasing the Army. If that shall be defeated, I shall renew my motion to reconsider.

Mr. FLETCHER. I think that would be much better, because the question we are now discussing has not been debated at all, but everything else has been debated which it is contemplated may come up. We have not yet reached that point. It seems to me largely immaterial whether this provision remains in the bill or not, whether we accept the bill as it came from the House or do not accept it. Whether we strike out those words in the bill, as the committee reported and as the Senate has favored heretofore, or leave them in, is not very material.

reductions in the military establishments of the world. His appeals were spurned. Our Nation did not accept his proposals or make suggestions that would have tended to relieve and detail and responsibility that did not belong there at all. I am perfectly willing to trust the President, as far as | that is concerned; but why pursue this favorite policy about Washington which is known as "passing the buck"? Why sidestep our own responsibilities and put them on the President?

That is the only reason why I voted in favor of striking out the provision. As the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] has said, I think what the enlisted strength of the Army shall be is a matter for Congress to determine. It is a matter for Congress to say, not for the President; and I do not think we ought to undertake to charge him with responsibilities and functions which belong on us.

As to that question, if I may say just one word more, then I shall have concluded.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD], the distinguished Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, has already pointed out that under the act of 1920 the enlisted strength of the Army was fixed at 280,000. It is now 118,760. The bill as it passed the House, and as it is now before us without any amendment from the Senate committee, proposes to increase the number to 165,000. That means an increase of 46,250 over the present enlisted strength of the Army. That is 115,000 less than the strength authorized under the act of 1920; and that is the question which will be raised by the Senator from Missouri.

I think by all means we ought to stand by the bill as it passed the House.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, suppose I move a reconsideration for the purpose of changing the language in line 22, page 10, to read as follows, and then the whole matter will be before the Senate:

Together with such additional sums, not exceeding $20,000,000, as may be necessary.

And strike out line 23. Then the whole question will be before us of whether or not we will actually increase the Army. If the $20,000,000 shall be inserted, according to the hearings before the House committee, that will defray all the expenses of the increase to the number proposed, including subsistence and clothing.

Would it be satisfactory to the Senator to have the debate proceed on that basis?

Mr. CLARK. Yes; that would be entirely satisfactory to me. All I wish is to have a square vote first on the question whether or not the Army shall be increased, and secondly, as to whether the increase is to be made mandatory or left discretionary with the President, as in the House bill.

I therefore withdraw my motion to reconsider.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to reconsider is withdrawn.

Mr. COPELAND. Now, Mr. President, I move a reconsideration-

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I suggest to the Senator from New York that he does not have to move to reconsider. He can offer his proposal as an amendment.

Mr. COPELAND. Yes; that is true. I move to amend, Mr. President, on page 10, line 22, at the end of the line, by inserting a comma and the words "not exceeding $20,000,000", and then striking out line 23; so that, if amended, that part of the bill would read:

Pay of enlisted men of the line and staff, not including the Philippine Scouts, $51,069,333, together with such additional sum as may be necessary, not exceeding $20,000,000, to defray the cost of increasing-

And so forth.

That will place squarely before the Senate the question as to whether we shall or shall not increase the Army.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes; I yield.

Mr. CLARK. I am unable to follow the Senator in his reasoning that putting in a limitation of $20,000,000, which is the only change sought to be made by the amendment now proposed, will open up the whole question of increasing the Army. It seems to me the only way in which that question can be properly presented to the Senate is by a motion, which I propose to make, to strike out lines 22, 23, 24, and 25, on page 10, and lines 1 to 4, inclusive, on page 11. That is the language which contains the authorization for an increase of the Army by 47,000 men, in round figures. It seems to me that is the only way in which the matter may be squarely presented to the Senate.

Mr. COPELAND. I shall be satisfied if the Senator proceeds in his own way.

Mr. CLARK. I have no objection to the amendment suggested by the Senator from New York. In fact, I should be very much in favor of it, although I still fear that it might be taken as an authorization for a deficiency appropriation.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. TRAMMELL. As I understand the rule, the Senator from New York has a right to seek to perfect the text that has been requested to be stricken out prior to putting the motion to strike out. If the Senator desires to offer that amendment, I think it would be in order and would have precedence over a motion to strike out.

Mr. CLARK. Nobody questions that. I agree thoroughly with the Senator from Florida. The only reason why I rose was to take issue with the Senator from New York on his theory that the adding of a limitation of $20,000,000 would present to the Senate the subject of the increase of the Army.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, after the debate in the early part of the session today it is apparent that this language included in the bill is involved; it is more or less deceptive and misleading, and, speaking for myself, not for the committee, I believe, frankly, that if we are to have a vote on the question of whether we are to increase the Army or not, we should have before us the exact figures showing the significance of our acts.

It has been suggested that the language "and other appropriations contained in this act " certainly contemplates that there should be a reduction in the appropriation for the Army engineers or other items. If we insert at the point I have suggested, at the end of line 22, the words "not exceeding $20,000,000 "-which would be subject to change if somebody thought wise, but that is what the testimony before the House committee indicated as the required amount-

Mr. FLETCHER. It would at least go to conference. Mr. COPELAND. It would go to conference. General MacArthur stated to the House committee that to have 46.250 enlisted men, all privates of the seventh class, would require, for pay, subsistence, and clothing, $20,382,000. If that sum were inserted in the bill, there could no longer be the criticism that we seek to rob other activities of the Army or of the Army engineers. Furthermore, it would indicate that there is no subterfuge and that we are not seeking to provide the certainty of a deficiency appropriation. It would be plainly stated as the action of the Senate that a sum of money not exceeding $20,000,000 should be appropriated for the purpose of increasing the Army by 46,200 men. That would make it a fair, frank, honest statement.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, why should we appropriate $20,000,000 before we determine whether or not we are to authorize an increase in the Army? It seems to me the simplest way to get the issue before the Senate-and I think the Senator from Missouri agrees with me, though he has absented himself momentarily from the Chamber—is to strike out, beginning on page 9, line 22, after the numerals "333", all the language on that page, including that proposal to be stricken out by the committee, and all the language on page 11 down to the words "enlisted men" on line 4. That would bring before the Senate immediately the question as to whether the Senate desires to increase the Army. Then, if it should be decided that the Senate does not want to increase the Army by 46,000, there will be no need of the Senator's proposed amendment relating to the $20,000,000. If the Senate does want to increase the Army by the strength suggested, then the Senator's amendment, confining the appropriation within $20,000,000, would be appropriate.

Mr. COPELAND. That procedure is entirely satisfactory to me.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I join with the able Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations in that request. From a parliamentary standpoint, that is by far the most logical way in which to proceed.

Mr. GLASS. It seems so to me.

Mr. McNARY. If this language is stricken out, the issue will be squarely presented. If it remains, then the amount of money which is to be expended, which is to be a limitation, can later be ascertained.

Mr. GLASS. I think so. I may say, before taking my spat, that in the committee I voted against increasing the Army, because I do not believe there is any need for an increase in the Army. I do not believe there is any nation on earth which contemplates attacking the United States. Faced with the record of recent years, when, without any preparation whatsoever, we transported, 3,000 miles across the sea, in a very brief period, to the amazement of the Congress itself, 2,000,000 men without the loss of a single life, considering the resources of this country, with its wealth and power, it is inconceivable to me that any nation can have any desire to go to war with the United States. I think that if we should devote one tithe of the effort to maintaining peace in the world that we devote to preparations for wars which are not going to occur, we would get on infinitely better than we do. Therefore I hope it may be the judgment of the Senate to refuse to increase the Army at this time.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, the Senator from Missouri is not in the Chamber. Perhaps someone else will offer the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York withdraw his proposed amendment?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes; I withdraw the proposed amendment.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I think, as I stated a moment ago, that the logical way to proceed is to strike out the language which has been referred to before an effort is made to increase the size of the Army. In view of that situation, in behalf of the Senator from Missouri, who is not in the Chamber at present, and other Senators who are interested, I am going to assume to suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Radcliffe Adams Costigan La Follette Ashurst Lewis Logan Lonergan Reynolds Robinson Couzens Cutting Dickinson Austin Bachman Russell Bailey Bankhead Long McAdoo Schall Dieterich Donahey Duffy Schwellenbach Barbour McCarran Sheppard Shipstead Bilbo Black Fletcher Frazier McGill Smith McKellar Steiwer Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah George Gerry Bone McNary Maloney Metcalf Borah Gibson Brown Townsend Trammell Bulkley Glass Minton Gore Moore Burke Guffey Murphy Truman Byrd Hale Harrison Tydings Vandenberg Neely Norbeck Norris Byrnes Capper Carey Hastings Van Nuys Hatch Hayden Johnson Nye O'Mahoney Pittman Clark White Connally Coolidge Copeland Keyes King Pope

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-nine Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, before the quorum was called I made a suggestion in order to effectuate an orderly procedure. I am not in sympathy with the suggestion I made, other than from a parliamentary standpoint. I assumed that the Senator from Missouri, upon his return to the Chamber, would probably follow the suggestion and offer the amendment.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I move to strike out on page 10, in line 22, after the numerals "333", all down to the semicolon in line 4, page 11. In other words, I move to strike out the following language:

Together with such additional sums as may be necessary under this and other appropriations contained in this act to defray the cost of increasing the enlisted strength of the Regular Army from an average of 118,750 to an average of 165,000 enlisted men.

Mr. President, I desire to detain the Senate only very briefly in this matter, because it is a subject which has been discussed at some length for 2 days.

As I listened to the eloquent address of the distinguished Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] this morning, with its horrific and gruesome picture of the imminent subjugation and probable dismemberment of the United States, I was reminded of a conversation I heard nearly 30 years ago between my father and the original author and inventor of the device of having a Japanese war scare every time there was a military or naval appropriation bill under discussion in Congress. I refer to the then captain, now admiral, Richmond Pearson Hobson-Captain Hobson, who originally devised this system of propaganda. Older Senators, men who served in the House in those years, will recall that every time a measure for a great navy or for a large increase in the Navy was about to be considered in the House of Representatives or the United States Senate Captain Hobson would take the floor of the House to eloquently discourse on the imminent danger of war with Japan, with dire prophecies of the complete subjugation of the United States.

I recall that on one occasion he came in the evening to call on my father, and as a youngster I was permitted to be present and see and hear him paint this picture of imminent attack and desolation, and after listening to him for about 4 hours describe how we were to be immediately attacked by Japan, with the possibility that Japan would be able to conquer all that portion of the United States west of the Rocky Mountains and probably permanently retain the Pacific coast as a vassal province of Japan, I was so frightened that I was almost afraid to go to bed for fear that there would be Japs underneath the bed to take me away during the night. And after 4 hours of this sort of discussion my father turned around to Hobson and said. "My God, Hobson, if I believed what you believe, I would not think one battleship or two battleships would do us any good "-there being at that time a dispute as to whether there should be one battleship constructed or two battleships constructed. My father said, "If I believed as you believe I would not believe that an increase of one battleship or two battleships would do us the slightest good. I would be in favor of mortgaging everything in the United States and building a thousand battleships to protect ourselves.'

And so I say today, Mr. President, to my distinguished friend from Illinois [Mr. Lewis], to my distinguished friend from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst], and to my distinguished friend from California [Mr. McAddoo], and others, that if I believed as they believe—that there was very imminent danger of Japan and Russia jumping on us for the purpose of dividing our property and possessions between them; and if I believed that we would probably be hopped on from the rear at the same time by a coalition of Great Britain and France and Italy and Germany no doubt, I would not believe that an increase in the standing Army of 47,000 men would be of the slightest measure of safety to us, and I would be in favor of mortgaging everything that we had and adding at least 4,000,000 men to the standing Army, and building as many battleships as could possibly be constructed.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. CLARK. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. COSTIGAN. If an emergency should arise of the kind described by the Senator from Missouri, is there any reason why Congress should not be assembled in extra session to meet the crisis?

Mr. CLARK. I will say to the Senator from Colorado that I cannot understand any reason why that should not be done, and I furthermore cannot see, in the face of a coalition of such powerful nations as Japan and Russia—the case put by the Senator from Illinois, to say nothing of the darkling intimations made by the Senator from California as to others that might possibly be preparing to attack us—I cannot see that the difference between an army of 18,000 men and an army of 165,000 men would be in any substantial way material.

The fact is that we are spending year after year more on armament than any other nation in the world. And we have been going right on doing that while at the same time we have been loudly preaching disarmament and a reduction of armament. To be sure, so far as our standing Army is concerned, it is relatively very small. It always has been. Of course, the reason we are spending more money on armament is that under our system we get less for our money than any other nation in the world. But so far as national defense is concerned I assert without the fear of successful contradiction that the increase here proposed would have no material effect on putting the country in the state of defense, and that the only possible effect that this increase can have is to squander millions and untold millions, because there is no limitation on the amount to be expended, and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Dickinson] was undoubtedly correct this morning when he said that the language in that bill could be taken as authority for a deficiency appropriation if the War Department created a deficiency. The only possible effect of this increase is to squander millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money in this time of profound depression and to give the jingoes and the militarists in other countries an excuse for going back in the same old vicious circle and advocating greatly increased appropriations for armament in those countries.

We saw this week an official statement from the British Government in which they assigned, among other causes, for asking for a vastly increased military budget, the fact that the United States was increasing its expenditures.

It is for that reason, Mr. President, in order to present this question squarely to the Senate, that I move to strike out the new language.

Mr. GLASS. And yet, Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senator from Missouri to the fact that there is scarcely a British statesman known on this side of the water who has not said over and over and over again that war between Great Britain and the United States is something incredible.

Mr. CLARK. That is perfectly correct.

Mr. DUFFY. Mr. President, I wish I could be in agreement with the sentiments expressed by my good friend from Missouri [Mr. CLARK]. The Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] this morning stated that when the National Defense Act was enacted, which authorized the Regular Army up to 280,000, that which was done was done under the effect of war-time hysteria, and that we had not recovered from the conditions that were in effect during the World War, and therefore such a large authorization was made. In my opinion, that action was taken because of the fact that the terrific cost of unpreparedness, which had taken so many hundreds of millions of dollars in fortune and hundreds and thousands of lives, was fresh in our memory at that particular time, and we did not want to repeat the experience we have had in the case of every war in which we have ever engaged, of being lamentably unprepared, and then being compelled to spend millions and millions, and even billions, of dollars extra because we did not have some sort of a sound foundation on which to rest our preparation.

It is all very well to hope that war will never come. I sincerely hope so. I have three little fellows coming along who I hope will never have to go to war. But if the time should come, I want them to have just as good rifles in their hands and just as good artillery backing them up as the fellows who are shooting at them. And it seems to me that the suggestion of the addition of some 40,000 men to our Army cannot in any way be taken as a militaristic gesture.

The testimony of General MacArthur and of others who have made a careful study of the subject shows that with more than 40,000 of our Regular Army in foreign possessions, away from the mainland, and with only some 80,000 in continental United States, as I recall the testimony, in case after case there is not only just a skeleton organization but the Army is absolutely hampered, so that in time of an emergency it would not have sufficient personnel to provide immediately the proper training.

Of course, we do not anticipate having, nor do we desire, a large standing Army. I think if the proposed increase should be provided our Army would then be somewhere near the strength of that of Portugal or Greece or some of the other small countries on the other side of the ocean. In my opinion, we must face the situation as it is. We cannot just hope for peace and refuse to see the conditions that today exist in the world.

It seems to me that we cannot emulate the ostrich and say we will not be prepared, and that we thereby shall avoid war. Such a policy never has succeeded in the past. I am certain that at the time the Spanish-American War broke we certainly were greatly unprepared. Certainly that was true in the World War, and I think my friend the Senator from Missouri and others of us who were over on the other side know that many hundred American lives were sacrificed because of the absolute inadequacy of training and lack of equipment, and the great handicap incident to engaging in war on such short notice.

If the addition of 40,000 men, which seems to me so essential and so necessary, could be interpreted as a bullying or militaristic gesture, I would be against it; but I think there is nothing in the history of this country to indicate that our people are inclined in any such direction.

It seems to me that the increase proposed in the Army is entirely reasonable, in order that we may put our house in shape if in the future such a dread thing as war should come.

No one more earnestly hopes that there will not be war than those who went through the last war; I feel very certain of that, and yet at the same time it seems to me that we are not so secure as some may imagine. As I recall the geography, right off our eastern coast are a row of islands, some of them within 40 or 50 miles of the mainland, owned by a government with which we very fortunately have been on friendly terms, and yet just a little while prior to our entrance into the World War we all know that relations were so strained at one time because of the interference with our rights on the part of Great Britain that people doubted what the consequences might be. With all those islands right at our very door, which are really weapons pointed at the heart of America, if the nation owning those islands is in good faith about wanting to pay us its war debt, personally I do not see why something could not be done to remove that menace from us. We read recently about a survey of airport sites upon some of those islands just off our doorway.

I sincerely hope we may continue at peace with that great nation, but I do not believe in refusing to face facts as they are, and by providing for this slight increase in the number of the Regular Army, which will furnish a training force if an emergency ever should arise, it seems to me that we shall be pursuing the part of wisdom. I think such an increase is justified. It would cost some $400 a year for each of the additional men. If we should take off the relief roll 45,000 young men and put them in the Army and give them the training the Army affords, it would not only make for fine young manhood, it seems to me, but it would also be advantageous from the standpoint of national defense, and in these times would not be ill-advised action.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, it seems to me that the argument of those in favor of this increase in the enlisted personnel of the Army proves too much. If the situation is at all as indicated by those who favor the increase, then the additional number of men would be wholly inadequate; it would amount to nothing in such circumstances. We should either meet the situation of which we are told by providing an adequate preparation, or the entire argument in favor of the proposal falls to the ground. In other words, we are proposing to expend this additional sum of money in order to provide the additional number of soldiers without any hope whatever that our action will be of any service in case a condition should arise such as seems to be contemplated by some of those supporting the proposition. Why not consider the question upon the bases of the taxpayers' interest and of economy?

I do not entertain the fear which is entertained by some of the possibility of conflict with Great Britain or with Japan. I do not think there is a possibility of any conflict with Great Britain. Why should Great Britain go to war with us when she secures everything she desires through diplomacy? [Laughter.]

In addition to that, she has every reason in the world economically, from a trading standpoint and from the standpoint of her own prestige, never to engage in conflict with the United States. It is my humble opinion if a war should occur between Great Britain and the United States that the British Empire would break up over night. Two of her most powerful dominions would not cooperate with the mother country in any such movement, and the statesmanship at the head of the mother country would not permit anything in the nature of a conflict between this country and Great Britain. It would be unwise from every conceivable national interest, and she could not succeed.

As to Japan, if I understand the program of Japan, it is not that of looking toward the United States. Japan undoubtedly has a program with reference to the Orient; she undoubtedly has in mind the extending of her dominion or her influence or her control, at least, to parts of the Orient; but under what possible theory, judging from the standpoint of expediency or public welfare, could Japan seek a controversy with the United States? Her plans indicate no such suicidal program. Mr. President, I do not entertain these fears. Of course, anyone may be mistaken about such a situation; we can only offer such views as we have, and upon those views we act here; but if any such program as is contemplated is anywhere in the offing, why stop at 46,000 soldiers? It will not do anything other than possibly indicate our own inadequate conception of the situation which confronts us.

Therefore, Mr. President, I shall support the amendment offered by the able Senator from Missouri. I support it because I feel it is one of those items of expenditure which we ought not to incur under the conditions which now confront us.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I wish to point out once more that this proposed increase in the strength of the Army is not requested on the basis of preparation for war. It is solely a question of what is an adequate peace-time strength for an army if we are to have an Army at all. The war strength of an Infantry division is about 20,000 men. The lowest strength at which it can be effectively trained and kept immediately ready for effective action is approximately 12,000 men. The National Defense Act contemplated the maintenance in continental United States of nine regular divisions of this size, supported by necessary groupments of special troops. At present we have but 3 extremely skeletonized divisions and 6 weak brigades, averaging about 6,000 and 2,000, respectively.

Manifestly the Army cannot operate on a peace-time basis and maintain the necessary training nuclei with only 118,000 men, especially when we recall that about 35,000 of them are already in oversea possessions and that the garrisons in those oversea possessions are themselves undermanned. The increase desired will enable us to have four divisions of 12,000 each. This will provide an effective basis for a military organization sufficient for immediate existing needs. It will also enable us to place other units on more than a paper basis and to increase the Air Corps to the strength authorized by the act of July 2, 1926.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, supplementing what the Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs [Mr. Sheppard] has said, I am sure no member of the Committee on Appropriations in recommending this increase in the strength of the Army had any idea that the purpose of the increase was to provide against any immediate or even approximate danger of war. The fact is, as the senior Senator from Texas has so well stated, that there are not now a sufficient number of men in the Regular Army properly to care for the property of the Army. I refer to Army posts and to other valuable property in various parts of the United States now practically in the custody of caretakers and not adequately cared for.

The Regular Army is used to help train the enrollees of the Civilian Conservation Corps; the Regular Army is used to help train members of the Officers' Reserve Corps; it is used in connection with the citizens' military training camps. Everyone recognizes that the Regular Army of the United States is nothing more than a skeleton. If it is to be a serviceable skeleton, it ought to have good, sound bones, and there ought to be sufficient bones to make a complete skeleton.

When our country has gone to war, we never have depended upon the Regular Army to carry on the war; but it does provide the nucleus for a great army. We sadly needed such a nucleus when the World War broke out. We did not have a sufficient number of trained officers to go around. That is why we maintain the Military Academy; that is why it is absolutely necessary to maintain the National Guard, upon whom, in part, we have to depend, and the Reserve Corps, upon which, in part, we also have to depend; and we must have sufficient men in the Regular Army to do the training work.

The quickest way to have a real army is to expand its units. If we keep a peace-time company on a basis of 90 to 100 men, and war is declared, the quickest way to train a larger force is to put an additional number of men in each regular unit—to raise the company to a war strength of 250 men.

The raw soldier will learn how to do his work quicker and better by associating with trained soldiers in an expanded unit. That is all the Regular Army is for; it is to afford a proper nucleus that may be expanded in time of war. We have not now an adequate number of men in the Army, and I think the House of Representatives was wise in providing this increase. The Senate should concur in what the House has done.

Mr. CAREY. Mr. President, I hope the Senate will not vote to strike out this provision. I happen to be a member of the committee; I attended the hearings and heard the testimony. The purpose of this increase in the enlisted strength of the Army is simply to prepare the first line of defense. General MacArthur has testified that we require 46,000 men in order to be ready for the first emergency. Someone has asked why not a million men or some such number as that? Forty-six thousand has been selected as the number, because that is the number required to bring five divisions of the Army up to the proper strength.

We have in the United States today but 50,000 combat troops. They are scattered from one end of the country to the other. If this increase shall be provided for, it will mean 46,000 additional fighting men, not men in the Quartermaster Corps or units of that kind.

As I have said, I attended the hearings; I heard General MacArthur; and I am convinced that the proposed increase in the strength of the Army is necessary if proper protection is to be afforded the country. I hope the Senate will not vote to strike out this provision.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, the standing Army is not the only force the Government has in the way of soldiers. We have at the present time a National Guard in every State in the Union, whose members constitute a part of the National Army. We have the Reserve Officers' Corps, composed of men who have had military training for 4 years in colleges throughout the Nation. I have not the figures as to their number—I presume the chairman of the committee or the Senator in charge of the bill could produce the figures—but they constitute a large number of men, much larger than the number proposed for the Regular Army of 165,000. They number considerably over 200,000; in fact, as I remember, the number is about 400,000.

It seems to me it is unnecessary at this time to spend another $20,000,000 for a larger Army. Whatever may be said about increasing the Army for defense or creating just a nucleus for defense is based largely upon imaginings. The history of the world proves that when any country has increased its Army or its Navy, its fighting forces in general, it has been for war and not for peace. The countries which have been armed to the teeth have been the ones first to | become embroiled in war. There is no question about that. It has been proven time after time.

It has been said that a standing army is no adequate defense, that a great navy is no adequate defense under the present scientific system of warfare. Even a great air force is not an adequate defense. It is true we might increase our Army to the size of that of Great Britain, or any other nation, and that we might in like manner increase our Navy and our air force. But suppose several of the other nations should join together, then what would be the situation? It would be impossible for us to increase our Army to equal that of the combined forces of the other nations, and even if that could be done it would afford no adequate defense. It has been proven time after time, especially in the matter of air forces, that it is impossible to keep the enemy bombing planes from doing terrific damage.

The sham battle conducted by air forces over London a few years ago is the best example of that fact. That sham air battle over London was better evidence than any other kind of a sham battle has ever produced. In that sham air battle there were a number of experts to watch the maneuvers and then to report their observations. After several days of the sham battle they reported that it was absolutely impossible to keep the enemy planes away, that they would come in under cover of darkness, or storm, and that one of those great planes would be sufficient practically to annihilate the business section of the great city of London.

Since that time there have been invented bombs much more deadly in character, including bombs carrying disease germs. The airplane service itself has been greatly improved. It is now possible to send a bombing plane by robot, directed by radio. It is said such planes can be directed accurately to drop bombs wherever it is desired to drop them. If a robot plane is shot down, it involves the loss only of the plane, which would explode wherever it happened to light. It is claimed such planes can be controlled as accurately as if a man were at the wheel in the plane itself.

It is my opinion that the increase proposed in the Army would not furnish an adequate defense at this time. When we need so much money for relief purposes, to take care of our own people, to develop projects in our own land, it seems to me to be rather absurd to expend so much money in preparation for war. I cannot see it in any other way.

One of the Members of the House of Representatives, discussing the question a few days ago on the floor of the House, used an illustration to which I will refer. He said, "When you see a boy take a fishing pole over his shoulder on Sunday morning and start down the street, you do not think he is going to Sunday school, and he is not." He gave other illustrations of a similar kind. When we see a nation increasing its armament spending in peace time, in preparation for war, more money than is being expended by any other civilized nation on earth, it is difficult for me to believe it is being done for any Sunday school purpose, for so-called "adequate defense", or anything of that kind. When a nation increases its army and navy, it is done for war purposes either at home or abroad.

It has been intimated and suggested by the press that those in control here at home are afraid of some of our own people. Much has been said about the "red" scare, that even students in colleges are becoming radical, that we need a large Army for protection from our own people here at home. There may be something to that, though I do not know; but it does not worry me at all. If our Government can prove itself to be a better government than any other form of government in the world, and can take care of its own people, there is no danger of any radical uprising in the United States. The people demand-and I think they are within their rights in demanding, for their benefitproper attention and proper care and proper legislation at the hands of the Congress.

Mr. President, it would seem to me that the motion of the able Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] should by all means be adopted, that we should save that little item of $20,000,000 and thus demonstrate to the people of the United States and to the people of the world that the United States Government is not increasing its army in preparation for war.

I have gone through the bill quite carefully. There is an increase over last year's appropriation in practically every item in the bill, not to make a better army, but to give the War Department more money to spend. There seems to be an orgy of money spending, anything to spend the Nation's money. I cannot quite understand it. The bill should go back to the committee with instructions to reduce a great many of the items, and thus save money for other purposes than are included in the bill. In any event, and by all means, I think the particular motion should be adopted.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, if we are to base the conclusions of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier] upon his premise that there is a part of the regular armed force of the United States equal in number to 400,000 which is not to be identified as the professional or Regular Army element, then we ought to have the exact figures before us rather than his estimated figure. For that purpose I invite attention to the annual report of the Secretary of War for 1934, which gives the figures.

Let it be understood that the Army of the United States consists of a professional or Regular Army element, and two civilian components, the National Guard and the Organized Reserves. The two last were mentioned by the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Vermont what is the total?

Mr. AUSTIN. I am about to state it.

The National Defense Act fixed the enlisted strength of the National Guard at approximately 425,000, a figure which has never yet been even remotely approached. Today the guard aggregates about 190,000 in all ranks, organized into 18 infantry divisions and certain auxiliary and supporting troops. I am quoting from page 51 of the report.

On page 52 of the report will be found a statement with reference to the number of the Organized Reserves to the effect that "the current strength is approximately 89,000."

I submit that for the consideration of the Senate as being approximately half the number upon which the Senator from North Dakota based his conclusion.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. AUSTIN. Certainly.
Mr. FRAZIER. I did not understand just what branches were included. Does it include the National Guard?

Mr. AUSTIN. It includes the two civilian components of the Army—the National Guard and the Organized Reserves.

Mr. FRAZIER. The Senator must remember that we have a few thousand in the military training camps which have been conducted during the past several years. That number is being increased to 37,500.

Mr. AUSTIN. I know that is so. That was not previously remarked upon. I was merely trying to correct the figures stated by the Senator. It is true that auxiliary to the forces which I have repeatedly mentioned, but not a part of the Military Establishment, are the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and the citizens' military training camps.

Mr. FRAZIER. I included those in my statement, and stated that I was not accurate as to the figures.

Mr. AUSTIN. If the Senator did so, let me give the exact figures. Of course, it should be understood that these organizations are only feeders, to be used only optionally, and that they are not a part of the Regular Army element.

In one year-I am reading from page 53 of the report-a maximum strength of the citizens' military training camps of about 38,000 was attained, while in 1934 this figure fell off to only 14,000.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield.

Mr. FRAZIER. In the case of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, of course, those who have graduated from these courses for years are still subject to call by the Government.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, they are, provided they have accepted an officer's commission from the Government. They are not subject to call if they have not accepted that commission; and, as the matter works out, there is only a small class every year graduating in these land-grant colleges where military training is given under the Morrill Act who obtain officers' commissions that may be had and thus articulate themselves voluntarily for call if the emergency should arise. That is a very small number. The regular habit of boys in these universities is to take 2 years of military training and then not carry on for the remainder of the 4 years, and in those instances where they do not seek commissions they generally do not go to these camps to extend their study in the field. If they do not have this camp experience they are not entitled to commissions upon graduating from the university.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield.

Mr. FRAZIER. As I understand, they are not eligible to attend a camp unless they take the complete 4-year course in the college.

Mr. AUSTIN. I understand differently, Mr. President. They are eligible to enter the Citizens' Military Training Camps even though they are not in college.

Mr. FRAZIER. In the citizens' military training camps, yes; but in the R. O. T. C. it is different.

Mr. AUSTIN. In the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, I believe they are eligible—I am not prepared to state that positively—immediately after they have commenced their course in college. I believe that in the very first vacation after the freshman year they are eligible.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield further, they certainly are not eligible to appointment as Reserve officers when they first enter, unless they have previously had military training.

Mr. AUSTIN. The conditions for a commission, of course, are entirely different from the conditions for taking the required amount of 2 years' study in military tactics and drill; but so far as the number of men who actually get into a position where they are subject to call is concerned, it is relatively small—I believe too small.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I desire to offer only a brief observation, and bring the debate back to what I consider to be the reality of the pending question.

Inasmuch as I am one of those who believe in the philosophy of adequate preparedness and who fully share the viewpoint of the able Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] respecting the national defense upon all occasions insofar as I can be impressed with the true necessity, I rise only to say that I am unable to believe that we confront an emergency crisis which requires sharp and sudden defense increases.

The President of the United States is under constitutional compulsion to advise Congress if and when America confronts any such emergency. The President of the United States is under annual constitutional compulsion to serve us by message with any warning of an impending threat or menace. The President of the United States responded to this responsibility in his annual address delivered upon January 4, 1935, from which I read the following sentence:

There is no ground for apprehension that our relations with any nation will be otherwise than peaceful.

The official notification to the Congress from the responsible officer of government in charge of our foreign relations in respect to these responsibilities is that none of the jeopardies and hazards that have been darkly conjured here upon the floor this afternoon are, in fact, imminent or in existence. I add that the President is not a pacifist and would not hesitate to ask for whatever armed forces we may need, if he sees an external crisis coming.

Any time the Commander in Chief of the American Army, the President of the United States, upon his responsibility says to Congress that the Army should be increased, I shall rise and join promptly with the Senator from Illinois in providing the essential units; but so long as the President of the United States stands upon the proposition that—

There is no ground for apprehension that our relations with any nation will be otherwise than peaceful—

I submit that we are not called upon to contemplate this appropriation bill in terms of a national emergency.

If and when an emergency is remotely in sight, and the President will identify it, I shall respond without limit. Any time he identifies a real preparedness need, I shall respond. I insist, however, under the existing circumstances, that we are entitled to consider this problem as an appropriation-bill problem and nothing else; and as an appropriation-bill problem, I submit that there is no justification whatsoever for attempting to increase the size of the Army by an indirect and anonymous appropriation-bill provision which is not candid and which does not even attempt to provide the money to pay the bill. This business of everlasting spending, without direct provision to raise the needed money, has got to stop pretty soon if any semblance of the public credit shall be preserved.

The bill itself, in respect to its appropriations for the Army, proposes to spend $45,000,000 more than last year.

In addition to this identified appropriation, we have heard of $132,000,000, as estimated by one expert, which it is contemplated will be diverted from the $5,000,000,000 work-relief measure to Army construction purposes. We have heard of that item in the sum of $405,000,000, as estimated by the Chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee; and now we run across another hidden item, which may be $20,000,000 or may be considerably more, which, from some unknown, unidentified source, must be drawn upon in order to provide another amazing increase in the total cost.

I submit that whatever the Army needs the Army should ask for in an orderly fashion and get upon its merits; and whatever appropriation Congress proposes to make for the Army and the national defense it should make for the Army in the open light of day and by direct action, with tax attached, so that the Nation will know what is being spent and so that the Congress may discharge its fiscal function and responsibility.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I listened this afternoon with great interest—indeed, with surpassing information and something of emotion—to the address of the able Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], whose great ability has often guided this body, and to whom we all certify a splendid leadership in anything where his ringing voice calls out for following.

In connection, however, with that able Senator's announcement earlier today that under no conditions, in his honest judgment, would we have conflict with any nation leading to war, I must ask him if in the month of January 1917 he, then an eminent leader of the House, was not equally of the opinion that under no circumstances would we be drawn into the World War; and did not that very able Senator, in a very capable address, likewise oppose what he thought was an unnecessary expenditure, because he felt it was putting upon us a burden which would not be justified by events that would arise; and yet did he not see us drawn into the World War by April, three months and a half after his very able discussion and the expression of his eminent confidence?

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I will answer the Senator by saying that I have no recollection of anything of the kind. On the contrary, I thought we ought to have gone into the war 2 years before we did.

Mr. LEWIS. It is interesting, then, to observe rather a change in my eminent friend. If it is his opinion that we should have gone into the war 2 years before we did, it would indicate that our friend recognizes that this country is in danger at times and should be prepared to defend itself; for surely he would not have advocated that we go into the war! 2 years before in the unprepared state he will admit we were in.

Mr. GLASS. We went into it in an unprepared state-

Mr. LEWIS. The able Senator is quite right.

Mr. GLASS. But we got prepared mighty quickly.

Mr. LEWIS. I wish I could concur in that statement. I should like to feel that the Senator is correct in it. The spirit was prepared, because it is America, but not our Army.

The able Senator earlier in the day called attention to the fact that our ships bore thousands and thousands of men across the sea, in all the tides and storms, but that we lost not a man.

Mr. GLASS. I said 2,000,000 men.

Mr. LEWIS. Yes; I said the Senator did-thousands and thousands. It is true, sir, and the fact that under that leadership, whether by the Secretary of the Navy or our whole Government, we had such excellent results, is something to be greatly commended and something we dwelt on with great and justified praise; but I must invite my able friend to recall that after we had landed these men we were still in the position of an unprepared country; and I was there in the conflict and saw the lack of preparation which bore results which never should have been put upon America.

I wish to ask my able friend, however, if it be true, in his belief, that by increasing the Army we are likely to awaken resentment, if it be true that by having only a small Army we awaken friendship, then why not have no Army at all, and multiply the friendship by having no defense whatever?

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I will say to my friend that I have not suggested anything about resentment. I do not think anybody who has any sense—in Japan or Great Britain or Germany or France-would regard an increase of the Army of the United States by 46,000 as affecting their action in case of war. I am looking out for the taxpayers of the country and not bothering about what foreigners think about the matter.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I take the suggestion and accept it literally as the Senator has given it to us. It may be, indeed it is true, that the small amount we are asking now would not, in the nature of numbers, influence any country that is contemplating an assault, or is being prepared for an assault in other directions which might incidentally or collaterally involve us, but the spirit of this country is indicated by the effort toward defense, and that is what it is that has an influence on the other lands. I concur with the Senator from Virginia that we do not anticipate war with England.

Mr. GLASS. I say to the Senator that I make this concession, that it will enable militarists, perhaps, in other countries, to tax their taxpayers more in order to increase their armies and increase their navies; and that is about the only effect it will have.

Mr. LEWIS. I answer that it may be true that in making this levy we increase a tax. But how much greater is the tax we put upon the people when we are brought into conflict without having made any preparation at all, or without having made adequate preparation? Failure to make adequate preparation is what in the past has forced the extra multiplied taxes upon the people which otherwise would have been avoided by an ordinary and natural and just preparation.

I wish to say that I concur with the able Senator in the allusion he makes as between ourselves and Britain. There is no intention on the part of our country to make war upon Britain, nor Britain on us. But the able statesman from Virginia will not overlook the fact that if we became involved with a country which is in an alliance with Britain, under conditions under which Britain was compelled to participate; under such conditions as that we would find ourselves in conflict with a friend.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, there is no nation on earth in an alliance with Great Britain that would compel Great Britain to go to war with the United States, and there is never likely to be such an alliance.

Mr. LEWIS. Such a confidence, Mr. President, I really envy. [Laughter.] I wish I were so constituted by nature that I could carry to myself that unction of consolation.

I have seen a certain nation, in one breath and at one time professing devotion of friendship, yet biding its time and then, finding us in a peril, seize our ships, loot them from the interior, repress our people, and only through the efforts of the Christian civilization of our land bidding us to be patient were we able to avoid conflict. It is because of the relation of that country to another country; there is where the danger comes.

It cannot be expected, I must say to the able Senator from Virginia, that if this renowned nation shall be an ally of another nation, and that other nation have a conflict with us, that that nation, Britain, would step out from her honorable obligation of alliance to our opponent merely because we were America. It has not been so in the past. But I do not anticipate war, and these observations of mine are not being based upon an expectation of war. I trust we may avoid it, and the way to avoid it, sir, is to be prepared for it.

I now wish to call the attention of my able friend from Michigan [Mr. Vandenberg] to this fact. The eminent Senator says he would be quite ready to join me and any other fellow Senators in the matter of defense, but he makes the condition that here is Congress, and that this is the institution and the agency that is to be employed.

My friend says it is for the President to advise us when we are in peril. Yes; but how is the President to be advised of peril that is kept from him? Are these lands going to announce to the President by a special wireless, "We are being prepared to assail you. I wish you would advise your Congress to get ready?"

Mr. GLASS. Have they announced to the distinguished and eloquent Senator from Illinois that they are going to attack us?

Mr. LEWIS. I will say to the Senator that I draw a conclusion from the President's message, which I shall read to him. While it is true, as the able Senator from Michigan has pointed out, that the President said that he felt that our relations were friendly, and he desired to accent his desire to continue them, the President says:

I cannot with candor tell you that general international relationships outside the borders of the United States are improved.

Mr. GLASS. That means that they are going to fight among themselves, and not with us.

Mr. LEWIS. It may be that they will fight among themselves, but it was because of a fight among themselves in Europe that we were drawn into it. If it had not been for the fight among themselves, I will say to my able friend from Virginia, we would not have been in a fight in Europe.

Mr. GLASS. If they had not submarined our ships, we would not have been in the fight in Europe, either.

Mr. LEWIS. I concur. Mr. GLASS. It was not the fight between European nations that bothered us; it was the encroachment upon our rights upon the high seas that drew us into the war.

Mr. LEWIS. I so stated this morning, as will be recalled, when I assumed to enter into this discussion, coming from an absence, and having a feature of the amendment of the able Senator from Missouri confused.

I now state that that is just our peril, as I see it. We were drawn into it, as the able Senator from Virginia says, by the assaults upon our ships. But I ask the eminent scholar of government, where in international morality law or public morality, was there really a difference between the assault by Germany through her submarines upon the ships and the assault of another nation which seized the ships and carried them into their ports and, under the power of search, searched the ships and repressed our seamen, and that being done on the ground of a violation by us of what was called international law?

Mr. GLASS. It was a violation by us of international law, because the ships seized were carrying contraband of war.

Mr. LEWIS. It may be that there were some instances, but we allowed those who seized the ships to be the judges of whether we were violators or not. I think it was a sad chapter in American history when we allowed the judgment of the outside world to make us a convict before the earth and held us up as a criminal before civilization, and left them the sole judges, without trial of America in a proper forum of public opinion.

Answering again my able friend from Michigan, the President could not be advised all the time of the facts. It is, no doubt, true that if he were, he would advise the Congress of the dangers, and Congress would assemble as soon as it could. Is it possible that we are to take no steps to anticipate conditions we ourselves see as an aid to the country? Do we represent the country, or do we not? Are we to wait for the Commander in Chief to inform us of the evils and dangers so apparent to the public eye that he may behold them and we be so blind as not to observe them ourselves, and not go forth in a courageous manner as the public servants of the Republic?

I do not want war. I hope against war. I certainly pray against every form of conflict, but I cannot overlook the history of the past, which teaches us that the way to avoid conflict is to let any land that contemplates behold that we are in a spirit to prepare against it.

Since, as my able friend from Virginia well concedes, the President called our attention to the conditions of the world at large, it is as against those conditions that we rise to confront them. While it may be true that certain lands of Europe may be invited in some form, or incited by some action of ours, to take some course among themselves, the distinguished Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier] says that because we increase our Army we indicate that we therefore intend to go to war.

If he is correct as to that—about which there is much to be said, generally speaking—what is the meaning of this increase in all these other lands? Suddenly, all at once, Britain, despite the convocation of conventions, increases her forces. Why this increase? To whom are these preparations from the Orient being addressed? To whom are these of Europe being addressed, and against whom, if my able friend is right that it is intended as war, and not as a childish experiment of the small boy?

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Connally in the chair). Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. LEWIS. I always have been more than pleased to do so. Nothing smoother or more velvety is ever given to the Senate than what comes from my friend the Senator from North Dakota. [Laughter.]

Mr. FRAZIER. I appreciate the fact of the Senator yielding, and his remark.

It seems to me that the fact that the United States for the last several years has spent more money on the increase of its Army, or the support of its Army and the Navy, and the building of more ships, and increasing our forces, than any other nation on earth in peace times has spent, compels foreign nations to try to compete with the United States in increasing their armaments, for fear we are going to attack them. I do not know where they get that idea, but we talk peace, and adopt the Kellogg Peace Pact, and then prepare for war. I think that is the answer, or in part an answer, to the Senator's question as to why the other nations are increasing their military and naval forces.

Mr. LEWIS. If my able friend from North Dakota be right, that other nations are increasing their forces and that the increase in their forces means war, therefore it means war, and it means war against someone. We recognize the grievances here and there announced as against us. But if my able friend and those who join him are right, that the increases on the other side are with the object of war, when was there a time when it was more necessary for us to make preparation than when we are threatened with such an aspect?

Mr. President, we hope to avoid war, are anxious in every way to avoid war. My friend speaks of the Kellogg Peace Pact. We joined in that and other pacts, and this morning the public press announced that now they are all hopeless, that all those who previously participated in these conventions have now drifted from them, that they are withered away, shrunken to where they cannot be found, and these nations are now denouncing them as mere undertakings which for a while were to bring forward peace desired by Christian nations but not as a military justification.

Mr. President, we tried them all. From none of these pacts has anything come forth except illusion. I still say there is but one real preparation, the spirit of preservation on the part of America; and while we talk about what other countries would do and how they would be guided or affected, European or Japanese, I answer this by saying that whatever be the course of other nations, there is a time when some of us must be for America! This is the time!

some of us must be for America! This is the time!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark].

Mr. CLARK. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I should like to say to the newer Members of the Senate that there are great disadvantages in being an "elder statesman." I shall be glad to retire from my chairmanship in favor of any younger Member. We have been here for 4 days discussing this bill. I shall take just a few moments. I think it will be conceded that I have taken very little time during these 4 days.

I conceive it to be my duty as the chairman of the subcommittee to make such defense as I can of the bill. I should be expected to do that even if I did not believe in the bill.

Reference has been made by the Senator from Michigan to the statement of the President in his message. The way we come in contact with the spirit of the administration, I take it, is through the various messages which are sent to us from the executive departments. I must conclude that when I have a message from the Secretary of War it must voice the sentiment of the administration. I cannot speak for the administration; I rarely do that.

When the bill came from the House I addressed a communication to the Secretary of War to inquire from him whether or not the bill, as it passed the House, contained all the items and instructions that were necessary to carry on the activities of the Department. Under date of February 26 I had a reply to that letter, in which he called attention to a few items, and one reference is to the item now under consideration by the Senate. I quote:

The increase in the enlisted strength of the Army is a fundamental requirement of national defense at this time. We have not enough of a nucleus of a Regular Army to carry out the missions that that small force is required to accomplish. The enlisted strength is at so low a figure that it is a continuing menace to the safety of the country.

Then he speaks somewhat in detail regarding this particular item, and says at the end of the item increasing the strength of the Army:

This in my opinion has the highest priority of any item in the bill.

That is a quotation from the Secretary of War. So I take it that it comes to us from the highest authority that this item is of the greatest importance, or, to quote again from the Secretary:

Has the highest priority of any item in the bill.

Mr. President, I wish to say that I do not expect my statements to have any great effect on international affairs, but as the chairman of the subcommittee handling the War Department appropriations bill, I say that it is all bosh to talk about the United States desiring to make war on anybody. I say further, as a citizen who believes himself to be fairly well informed of the sentiment of our country, that there is no sentiment in this country for any war with any nation on the face of the earth.

Mr. President, a little while ago a majority of the Members of this body—not enough to pass the treaty, but a majority of the body—expressed the opinion that we should enter the World Court in order that if there should arise any disturbance between this country and another there might be some means of judicial and peaceful solution of the problems at issue. I believe it is the sentiment of the country that any peaceful nonmilitary method should be the way to settle our disputes and not by an appeal to arms.

In the same breath I wish to say, Mr. President, that if I know the sentiment of the country, it is in opposition to any league, a league of nations, or other establishment. which has in it the possibility of an alliance on the part of our country with other nations to carry out, by war if need be, this or that or the other policy. I do not believe that in this generation or within the memory of persons now alive there will ever be a time when the money of our country will be sent to any foreign country to carry on war. Certainly no American blood will be spilled to carry on a foreign war. We have given all of our treasure and all of our boys we are ever going to give to carry on any war outside of our own boundaries.

I am speaking this way because I want it understood that in making an appeal for the passage of this bill it is with no thought on the part of the subcommittee that the money is intended to be spent to build up an army to be used against some foreign country. That is not the case and, in my opinion, will not be the case in this generation.

Mr. President, there can be no doubt we are living in a disturbed world. We would be deaf and blind if our senses did not convey to us the fact that there is more unrest among the youth of America than ever before in our history.

I may say in passing that I think one of the most distressing results of this economic depression has been the failure of appropriating bodies to provide money to carry on the public schools. There are today in the United States 8,000,000 boys and girls of school age who have no means of education. Schools have been closed because of the economic depression. There are 400,000 boys and girls wandering the streets and highways and byways of America—mere tramps.

Young men and women who graduated from college have no opportunity to find an outlet for their training and an application of their knowledge. There is no other group suffering so much in this depression as the youth of America.

As the result of that distressed state of mind on the part of the youth we find a ready reception—

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Does not the Senator think that the unnamed and undefined sum authorized by this bill for the increase in the standing Army might better be spent for just such purposes as the Senator is now describing—for educational purposes and the relief of the public-school system?

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I will answer that question. If the States and counties and townships and school districts and municipalities were so poor that they could not afford the means of education, I should join the Senator from Missouri in going very far toward their relief, to make certain that the education of children should be carried on. But $20,000,000 is a small amount compared to the need we are talking about. It would not go very far in providing the school help needed.

Mr. CLARK. Will the Senator further yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. There is no limitation of $20,000,000 in the bill; and even if the amendment suggested a while ago by the Senator from New York were included, it does not provide a limitation of $20,000,000, because we all know that if 47,000 additional men are enlisted they must be fed, they must be clothed, they must have the necessities that will presently develop. The proposed addition to the Army will require greater motor transportation facilities; it will require additions in the Quartermaster Department, additions in the Ordnance Department, additions in every administrative branch of the department. Naturally, after the men shall have been enlisted the expenditures will have to be made, and the War Department will make the expenditures, and then we shall simply be confronted with a deficiency appropriation for them; so there is absolutely no limitation of any sort in the bill.

Mr. COPELAND. I will answer the question but I beg the Senator to let me go forward. I am not anxious to filibuster my own bill, and I want to get through just as soon as I can.

Mr. CLARK. I will say to the Senator that, so far as I am concerned, I have occupied the floor for only about 3 minutes on my amendment, and the Senator certainly will not accuse me of trying to filibuster on his bill or on my own amendment.

Mr. COPELAND. I said I did not desire to filibuster against my own bill. I am not accusing the Senator of filibustering, and I have never wished to deprive any Senator of the privilege of expressing his views at the fullest length.

But I do desire to say, in reply to what the Senator has said, so that the Record will show it, that if we succeed in defeating the Senator's proposal, I shall then move to insert an item of $20,000,000 in order that pay, subsistence, clothing, and equipage may be provided, and that that shall be the limit

Mr. President, I was saying, or trying to say, that as the result of the disturbed mental attitude of youth, and their disappointment in their ambitions, they are now ready victims for all sorts of subversive teachings. I am very sorry to say—and I use with some hesitation, because it has been so overplayed during the last few months—that there is no question of the efforts being made to indoctrinate the youth of our land with the idea that a different order of government should prevail in America. There is a deliberate effort being made to undermine the minds of the youth of America and to inculcate in their minds the thought that a different system than the American system should be put in operation. There is an infiltration of their minds with this thought.

I wish to say, in passing, that I think it is an outrageous abuse of opportunity and power for any teacher who is employed in the public schools to give instruction in the fundamentals of learning, to take occasion to impress upon any pupil under his direction ideas which may be subversive of the American thought regarding government.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. KING. Does not the Senator believe, in view of his statement—and he is entirely correct—that the campaign which has been waged by Mr. Hearst in his chain of newspapers against this indoctrination of our schools with the policies and idealogy of the Bolshevik government deserves the commendation instead of the condemnation which has come from many Bolshevik school teachers throughout the United States?

Mr. COPELAND. I care not who carries on a campaign to call the attention of the American people to the indoctrinations that are being attempted in the schools—whoever does it I commend. I do think that we should be alive to the importance of pointing out to our youth exactly what good citizenship means.

I am more concerned in character development in the schools than I am in the three R's and the ordinary matters of instruction. But certainly when a teacher takes advantage of the opportunity to inculcate in the minds of pupils ideas which are contrary to our doctrines, it is time the American people should become aroused. I am glad there are men who use their opportunities to fight this evil.

Mr. President, there is no stronger advocate of the thought that there should be a prohibition of such character of teaching than is the American Legion. If Senators will take the opportunity to read the House hearings, it will be interesting to note that the American Legion has been engaged in combating this particular form of teaching. In connection with its work in behalf of Americanism it is also a strong advocate of an increase in the size of the Army.

I shall not enlarge upon that phase of the question for a moment, because I think I left my other thought somewhat incomplete. It was that if we open the Army to 46,000 more young men we would have that many more positions to offer as careers to the youth of the land. I am not advocating the pending proposal on the plea that it will do away with unemployment; that is not the thought I have in mind; but it is that there should be opportunities opened to our youth, every possible opportunity, in order that our boys may find things to do that are worth while and that appeal to them.

I know boys; thank God, I have one myself; and I know how interested many of them are in military matters, not with the idea of great wars but with the thought of the discipline, the drill, and the other activities. They appeal to youth, and if we open the door to 46,000 there will be at least 46,000 boys in the United States who will have an opportunity to do something which they want to do. I think perhaps that completes the thought I had in mind.

Now I shall return to the American Legion. Senators who are interested will note that in the hearings on this bill before the House committee, at page 693, there is recorded the fact that Col. John Thomas Taylor and Dr. Thomas H. Healey, the latter chairman of the national defense committee of the American Legion, appeared before the House committee and made a strong plea for an increase in the Army. Dr. Healey in his statement referred to the resolutions adopted by the American Legion. In his testimony I find the following:

The resolutions adopted by the Legion recommend— A Regular Army of 14,000 officers and 165,000 enlisted men.

So we find that the men who served our country in time of stress, the men who went to the front to fight our battles, and who have knowledge, from their own experiences, of the need of proper training, believe in an army of suitable size. They come to the Congress and express the thought they have, and present a resolution adopted by the American Legion to the effect that there should be an army of 165,000 men as provided by the pending bill.

The members of the Committee to Investigate the Munitions Industry, the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Nye], the chairman of the committee, the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] have had an opportunity to find out, from an examination of witnesses, what took place during the period of the war. They have investigated the matter not alone from the time we went into the war, but from the time the war started in Europe. They have ascertained that outrageous profits were made. I stated in my speeches last fall, in seeking to come back to this body, that I promised myself I would tell every audience before whom I appeared what had been revealed by the munitions investigating committee. It is a shame to think that out of the war such enormous profits were made, and I venture to say, if those profits could be recovered by the Government, that the bonus could be paid tomorrow morning without taking a dollar out of the Treasury.

I can quite understand that, because of what those Senators have found out, some of them hesitate now to vote money for an increase in the Army. But I do not think the revelation that certain men made outrageous profits. and, perhaps, improper profits, should be any reason why we should not have an army of sufficient size to afford the protection which we need for our own defense as outlined by the Secretary of War.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Russell in the chair). Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield. Mr. COUZENS. Has the Senator explained in his speech how they came to select the particular number and how the additional men are going to be allocated?

Mr. COPELAND. No; I have not. I may say to the Senator that that is found on page 35 of the hearings before the House committee. This was not brought out in detail in the hearings before the Senate committee, and perhaps, as it is very brief, I may refer to it. The statement is as follows:

The proposed distribution of the 46,250 enlisted men for the Regular Army is as follows:

Four divisions, one each as a nucleus for each of the four armies and five reinforced brigades, will be organized. The ultimate organization of the Regular Army upon mobilization will be nine divisions. The five reinforced brigades not only form the coming.

nuclei around which the remaining five divisions are to be organized upon mobilization but will also be immediately available for the field in the event of an emergency.

The average present peace strength of the First, Second, Third, and Fourth Divisions is 6,764. The proposed peace strength will be 11,899, expansible to a waf strength of 20,731.

The average present peace strength of the five existing reinforced brigades is 2,475. The proposed peace strength will be 5,369.

The allotments to the Signal Corps and to the services, medical, ordinance, and quartermaster, have been reduced to the minimum consistent with requirements for the maintenance of these divisions in the field. sions in the field.

sions in the held.

In order to keep the strength of the overseas garrisons at a constant level, a pool of 2,000 enlisted men is set up.

The Air Corps is brought to the strength, 16,000, authorized by the act of July 2, 1926, it having been brought to a strength of 14,582 by the reduction of other arms.

Provision is made for the nuclei of five antiaircraft regiments, which, added to the four existing, will provide one for each corps

The progressive development of antiaircraft defense is contemplated to supplement the defensive effort of the Army Air Corps.

Personnel for the mechanized Cavalry and for Infantry tank units will be provided as equipment becomes available.

I think that furnishes the information.

Mr. COUZENS. But the Senator did not tell me how they arrived at that particular number.

Mr. COPELAND. I cannot answer that question.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York vield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. The theory upon which that figure was reached by the War Department was that it was felt by the responsible authorities that that was all the traffic would bear at this particular time.

Mr. COPELAND. Of course, the Senator from Missouri may take that attitude, but I can hardly deal with it in such an off-hand manner when I have the statement of the Secretary of War, the highest authority.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. COPELAND. Certainly.

Mr. NYE. I ask the Senator from New York if the authority for the statement which he quotes undertakes to reveal how many men we should have in our Army to afford an adequate national defense.

Mr. COPELAND. The National Defense Act authorizes 280.000.

Mr. NYE. How far are we from that number now?

Mr. COPELAND. After increasing the number to 165,000 we would still be 115,000 short of the authorized number.

Mr. NYE. The point I wish to make is that in all the presentations on the part of the naval and military authorities we have been quite unable to ascertain what, in their opinion, would constitute adequacy of national defense. I do not think they would argue that what is provided for in the National Defense Act would provide adequately for defense.

Mr. COPELAND. Of course, there is no need to reply to the facetious remark of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK ] that this number is "all the traffic will bear." Certainly no one would say, and I am sure the War Department itself would be the last body in the world to say, we want 280,000 men and expect to get them. It takes a long time to absorb new men into an army. We found that out when we prepared for the World War.

Without any knowledge on my own part as to why this particular number was selected, it has been selected, and the War Department has given a very good outline of how it is proposed to use the money.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from New York, or the Senator from Texas [Mr. Sheppard] why all this period of time has elapsed without bringing the number up to the authorized 280,000?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, it has been due to the fact that the necessary appropriations have not been forthMr. COUZENS. Why should we make them now, during the most distressed period of our times, when we could not make them before?

Mr. SHEPPARD. It is never too late to do the right thing. The American people, in my judgment, will never object to the expense of an army of sufficient size and equipment for our needs.

Mr. COUZENS. Is this in preparation for war?

Mr. SHEPPARD. This does not place the Army on a war-time basis, nor is any attempt being made to do so. It is merely for the purpose of placing the Army upon the minimum basis required for peace-time work.

Mr. COUZENS. During all the prosperous years from 1920 to 1929 we did not add 45,000 men to the Army. Now, when the Government credit is strained, we are asked to add 45,000 men to the Army. I cannot understand it. I am not a pacifist. I would rather fight than be peaceful, but I do not understand the psychology of doing such a thing at this particular time.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I had thought to avoid an answer to this very question, but I find that I cannot. I was a member of the committee which, under the leadership of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh], wrote the C. C. Act. It appealed to me very strongly and as the most useful thing we undertook for the relief of distress and the relief of unemployment among young single men.

In my city today we have 500,000 families on the dole, 2,000,000 persons. It is almost impossible for single men, and I think it is true of single women, too, to find anything to do. I believe we have done nothing in trying to solve our difficulties which was superior to the C. C. C. movement. I think Mr. Robert Fechner, who is in charge of that work, deserves great praise for what he has done. In House Joint Resolution 117, which will soon come before us, that particular item appeals to me as wise because it plans to increase that work.

I cannot answer the question why there has not been a request made before to increase the Army. This is the first time since I have been with the committee that there has been a real effort made to make the increase.

I know the attitude of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Couzens]. There is no one in this body who has done more for youth. In reply to his question, if there were no other reason to do this now, in time of distress, it would be because we provide for 46,500 young men to be taken care of in a decent way. That is the thing about it that appeals to me, I did not want to say that because I did not want to overplay the work-relief idea.

Here we would put 46,000 young men under the fine physical training and the discipline of the Army. We would take them away from every possible subversive thesis and indoctrination of the leaders of thought in opposition to our American standards. It is one reason why I favor the bill, but I hesitated to base the appeal on work relief, because it might be regarded as an emotional appeal.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. COPELAND. Certainly.

Mr. NORRIS. Although it may be peculiar to me alone, and perhaps I know my own weakness in asking the question or making the suggestion I am about to make, I want to say to the Senator from New York that he has just made the only argument in favor of the provision to increase the Army that has appealed to me during the debate. It does appeal to me; but in connection with it I want to say to the Senator, if that is the reason—it seems to me it has reason behind it—if this proposal to increase the Army were coupled with some provision about the length of service for the increased membership, it seems to me it would have a more direct influence on the question. The term of enlistment in the Army is 5 years, I believe.

Mr. SHEPPARD. No; it is 3 years.

Mr. NORRIS. Very well; 3 years. Without any provision being incorporated in the bill, if it remains as it is and the amendment were defeated, does the Senator from New York suppose there would be an effort made on the part of the officials of the War Department to get this increased number from among the young men who are now out of employment and that they would probably be given preference?

Mr. COPELAND. I should like to say that we took considerable testimony. I hesitated to enter that feature of the discussion at all, although I am glad now I did because of what the Senator from Nebraska has said.

Mr. NORRIS. I feel just a little embarrassed to admit that I am impressed with that argument because of the very statement the Senator has just made, that he did not want to make it. Does he think there is something wrong about it? I do not understand him. I do not think there is anything the Senator from New York should fear in making that argument. I do not believe there is anything immoral or disgraceful about it.

Mr. COPELAND. I suppose it was silly of me, and I will admit that it was, but I did have the feeling that I did not want to make the argument that this is a work-relief bill.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, on yesterday I alluded to that subject and placed in the Record General MacArthur's testimony. It will be found at page 3020 of the Congressional Record.

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator from Florida did that, and someone opposed it on the ground that it was a wrong use of the funds and said, "If we are going to take in 46.000 men on that theory, why not take in 20,000,000?"

Let me say to the Senator from Nebraska that we have in the C. C. C. camps about 300,000 men at a time. Of course they are there for a limited period of time only. Many of them will graduate—if I may put it that way—with good, strong bodies, and with the benefits of the fine training that this effective group has worked out. Upon graduation they will be returned to the great body of the unemployed. Many of them, having submitted to camp life and having become accustomed to its discipline, would unquestionably, according to the testimony of General MacArthur, be attracted to the Army.

General MacArthur pointed out another thing. In the C. C. C. camps we pay $30 a month. He pointed out that the pay of these 46,000 men in the Army would be $20 a month, and their ration 37 cents a day, and about $30 to $35 a year for their clothing. I quote from his testimony:

There would be practically no other expense involved in the case of these men, so that the total cost per capita would be in the neighborhood of $400 a year.

So for $400 a year for each man we would build up the Army to the degree recommended by the War Department, and at the same time we would be taking care of 46,500 of our young men at far less cost than can be done by any system of dole.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I understand that General MacArthur, in the hearings before the House committee, on page 43, said, in regard to the C. C. C. camps:

I think there would be nothing finer than that the men in the C. C. C. camps should be used as a nucleus for the one element in the National Defense Act which has never been supplied, and that is an enlisted reserve.

And he goes on to say that the enlisted reserves should be brought up to the number of 300,000. In other words, the intention of the Army apparently is to put the C. C. C. boys into the Army Reserve.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MURPHY in the chair). The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark].

Mr. McGILL. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Borah	Connally	Fletcher
Ashurst	Brown	Coolidge	Frazier
Austin	Bulkley	Copeland	George
Bachman	Bulow	Costigan	Gerry
Bailey	Burke	Couzens	Gibson
Bankhead	Byrd	Cutting	Glass
Barbour	Byrnes	Dickinson	Guffey
Bilbo	Capper	Dieterich	Hale
Black	Carey	Donahey	Hasting
Bone	Clark	Duffy	Hatch

a. h

Tayden	McKellar	Nye	Smith
Johnson	McNary	O'Mahoney	Steiwer
Keyes	Maloney	Pittman	Thomas, Qkla
King	Metcalf	Pope	Thomas, Utal
La Follette	Minton	Radcliffe	Townsend
Lewis	Moore	Reynolds	Truman
Logan	Murphy	Robinson	Vandenberg
Lonergan	Murray	Russell	Van Nuys
McAdoo	Neely	Schwellenbach	Walsh
McCarran	Norbeck	Sheppard	White
McGill	Norris	Shipstead

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark].

Mr. CLARK. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, may the amendment be stated?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 10, line 22, after the numerals "333", it is proposed to strike out the following words:

Together with such additional sums as may be necessary under this and other appropriations contained in this act to defray the cost of increasing the enlisted strength of the Regular Army from an average of 118,750 to an average of 165,000 enlisted men.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark]. On that amendment the yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LOGAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Davis], who is absent. I transfer that pair to my colleague the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] and vote "nay."

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). Upon this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LEWIS. This morning I announced the absence of certain Senators and the reasons for this absence. I wish to repeat that announcement, and ask that it stand for this vote.

Mr. METCALF (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Tydings]. I do not see that Senator present, but I understand that if he were present he would vote as I have voted. Therefore I allow my vote to stand.

Mr. LEWIS. I wish to announce that the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are absent on account of illness.

I also announce that the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner] has a pair with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SCHALL]

I also desire to announce that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley], the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner], the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Tydings], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Gore], the Senator from Florida [Mr. Trammell], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Long] are necessarily detained from the Senator on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 26, nays 56, as follows:

	7	EAS—26
Black Bone Borah Brown Bulow Byrd Byrnes	Capper Clark Costigan Couzens Cutting Dickinson Frazier	Glass Hatch King La Follette McKellar Murphy Neely	Norris Nye Pope Shipstead Vandenberg
	N	IAYS-56
Adams Ashurst Austin Bachman Bailey Bankhead Barbour Bilbo	Bulkley Burke Carey Connally Coolidge Copeland Dieterich Donahey	Duffy Fletcher George Gerry Gibson Guffey Hale Hastings	Hayden Johnson Keyes Lewis Logan Lonergan McAdoo McCarran

McGill	Norbeck	Russell	Thomas, Utah
Maloney	O'Mahoney	Schwellenbach	Townsend
Metcalf	Pittman	Sheppard	Truman
Minton	Radcliffe	Smith	Van Nuys
Moore	Reynolds	Stelwer	Walsh
Murray	Robinson	Thomas, Okla.	White
The property was	NOT	VOTING—13
Barkley	Harrison	Overton	Tydings
Caraway	Long	Schall	Wagner
Davis	McNary	Trammell	Wheeler

So Mr. CLARK's amendment was rejected.

amendment which has just been voted on.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I now renew the motion I made last night, to reconsider the vote by which the amendment at the bottom of page 10 and the top of page 11 was agreed to. The words "at the discretion of the President and in such increments as he may deem necessary from time to time" were stricken out; and I move to reconsider the vote by which that action was taken.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator from Missouri whether the amendment which has just been incorporated does not contain a provision similar to that which he seeks to restore?

Mr. CLARK. I will say to the Senator that no amendment to that effect has been offered while I have been here, and I have been on the floor nearly every minute today.

Mr. ROBINSON. Let the amendment which the Senate just voted on be stated for the information of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the

The CHIEF CLERK. The language of the bill is, "together with such additional sums as may be necessary under this and other appropriations contained in this act to defray the cost of increasing." At this point the committee proposed to strike out the following words: "at the discretion of the President and in such increments as he may deem necessary from time to time", which amendment was agreed to yesterday. The language then continues: "the enlisted strength of the Regular Army from an average of 118,750 to an average of 165,000 enlisted men." The Senator from Missouri proposes at this time to reconsider the vote by which the Senate agreed to the amendment on page 10, line 24, striking out the words "at the discretion of the President and in such increments as he may deem necessary from time to time."

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, this is a very simple proposition. So far as I am personally concerned, I was opposed to the increase of the Army, and am still opposed to it. If there is to be an increase in the Army of approximately 33½ percent, as contemplated in the new language injected into the measure, which the Senate has by a record vote just refused to strike out, I prefer, as does the House of Representatives, that the President be allowed some discretion in the matter, as was provided in the bill as it passed the House.

The Senate has stricken out the provision giving discretion to the President, and my motion to reconsider simply is intended to afford the Senate an opportunity of determining the point as to whether the Congress is to make it mandatory on the President to expend this vast sum of money, in addition to the other provisions made for the maintenance of the Army, to make it mandatory on him to increase the Army whether he wants to or not, or whether he shall be allowed some discretion in the matter of additions.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, is it not well understood that the President is in favor of increasing the size of the Army?

Mr. CLARK. I will say to the Senator from Idaho that I am not advised as to that. It is perfectly true that the Senator from New York read to the Senate a letter from the Secretary of War, and it is also perfectly true that the Chief of Staff, and other high Army officers, have been actively lobbying for an increase in the strength of the Army, which they do from year to year, from session to session, and from Congress to Congress; but so far as the President of the United States himself is concerned, his last expression on the subject I think was that read by the Senator from Michigan here this afternoon, which occurred in his last annual message to the Congress.

Mr. BORAH. The quotation from the message did not cover this specific matter.

Mr. CLARK. So far as I know, I will say to the Senator from Idaho, there has never been any direct communication from the President to the Congress on this subject, and there has been no explicit quotation from the President made here today on that subject.

Mr. BORAH. I simply assumed that, as this proposal came from the War Department, from General MacArthur, it was in accordance with the views of the administration.

Mr. CLARK. In general, I would agree with the Senator from Idaho, except that we have had some contrary recommendations from various departments during this session, and I would not be entirely certain that one particular recommendation from a department met the views of the President. Certainly there would be no harm done by giving the President some discretion as to the speed and the manner in which this 331/3-percent addition to the Regular Army should be made.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, as I understand the motion of the Senator from Missouri, he desires to provide that the President may make a partial increase if he deems it in the public interest.

Mr. CLARK. That would be the effect.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Rather than the total increase of 46,000

Mr. CLARK. I have not proposed an amendment. I have proposed a reconsideration of the vote by which a Senate committee amendment was adopted on yesterday, in the very speedy consideration which was given. As the bill originally passed the House it contained this language in the provision making authorization of this additional appropriation-

At the discretion of the President and in such increments as he may deem necessary from time to time.

The bill did lodge some discretion in the President of the United States as to the additions to be made to the Army, the manner in which they were to be made, and other procedure connected with it. In other words, the bill gave him some discretion as to the necessity for making additions and the manner in which he should do it.

The Senate struck out that provision in the bill as it came from the House, and the motion now pending was made for the purpose of reconsidering the vote and affording the Senate an opportunity to determine whether they wish to make this increase in the Army absolutely mandatory on the President or give him some discretion in the matter.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I referred a little while ago to a letter from the Secretary of War. I wish to speak of it again. Before doing so, let me say that Senators will find on page 5 of the hearings before the Senate committee this testimony of General MacArthur. In reply to a question put to him by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsend] he said:

General MacArthur said:

We have the most complete confidence that if this bill were left as it is the President would immediately order this increase; but this places a burden upon the executive branch with regard to the strength of the Military Establishment which has never been placed upon it before, either in time of war or in peace. Strength questions have always been decided by the Congress.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. The Senator will certainly agree that the present Congress has placed a great many burdens on the Executive for the disposition of funds and the determination of policies which were never placed on any other Executive.

Mr. COPELAND. Perhaps that is the reason why we ought not to put any additional burdens on him.

Mr. CLARK. It is only when we come to the question of authorization for war and appropriation for war that that distinction is raised.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I now quote from the Secretary of War:

The House committee in its hearings, its report, and in the debate on the floor indicated its realization of the situation provided in an Philippine Scouts, $51,069,333, together with such additional sums indefinite appropriation for the increase from 118,750 up to 165,000 in the discretion of the President. It is believed that this increase is so urgent and so important that Congress, which has the constitutional duty to raise and support armies, shall take definite and positive action at this time.

That is what the Secretary said, and my interpretation is that that is the desire of the administration, although I cannot speak for the administration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] to reconsider the vote by which the Senate struck out the language after the word "increasing" in line 24, on page 10, to the middle of line 1, page 11.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I ask for a division.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A division has been demanded.

The Senate proceeded to divide.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, in view of the apparent closeness of the vote, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Har-RISON], who is necessarily absent from the Senate, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. METCALF (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Maryland IMr. TYDINGS]. Believing that he would vote in the same way that I shall vote, I feel at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LEWIS. I wish to announce the absence of the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] on account of illness.

I also wish to announce that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley], the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Long], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Typings] are necessarily detained from the Senate on official business.

I desire to announce the following pairs on this question:

The Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Schall] and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan] with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS 1.

The result was announced—yeas 32, nays 50, as follows:

	3	TEAS-32
Adams Bankhead Borah Brown Bulow Byrd Capper Clark	Costigan Cutting Donahey Frazier Gore Guffey Hatch King	La Follette Lewis Lonergan McGill McKellar Murphy Murray Neely	Norris Nye Pope Robinson Russell Shipstead Thomas, Utah Vandenberg
	1	NAYS-50
Ashurst Austin Bachman Bailey Barbour Bilbo Black Bone Bulkley Burke Byrnes Carey Connally	Coolidge Copeland Conzens Dickinson Dieterich Duffy Fletcher George Gerry Gibson Glass Hale Hastings	Hayden Johnson Keyes McAdoo McCarran Maloney Metcalf Minton Moore Norbeck O'Mahoney Pittman Radcliffe	Reynolds Schwellenbach Sheppard Smith Steiwer Thomas, Okla. Townsend Truman Van Nuys Walsh White
	NOT	VOTING-13
Barkley Caraway Davis Harrison	Logan Long McNary	Overton Schall Trammell	Tydings Wagner Wheeler

So Mr. Clark's motion to reconsider was rejected.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I move to amend, on page 10, line 22, by inserting a comma after the word "necessary" at the end of the line, and the words "not exceeding $20,000,000", and striking out all of line 23, so as to make the clause read:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from New York [Mr.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I do not intend to oppose the amendment, but I do desire very briefly to point out that it is simply a delusion and a snare. After the Congress has authorized an increase by one-third of the enlisted strength of the United States Army, it is silly and preposterous to talk about limiting the cost to $20,000,000 or any other figure. After the 47,000 additional men are enlisted in the United States Army they must be fed, they must be clothed, they must be paid, they must be transported, they will involve the Government in all the other charges which grow out of the services of members of the ordinary Regular Army at the present time; and it is perfectly silly to say that after these men shall have been enlisted in the United States Army the appropriation for the service can be limited to that amount.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I am not familiar with the effect of the amendment. What will the amendment do?

Mr. CLARK. So far as my opinion goes, Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Idaho that I think it is a mere empty gesture, a bait to catch gudgeons, an illusion and a snare that cannot possibly mean anything.

Mr. BORAH. Is that the view of the Senator from New York?

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President-

Mr. CLARK. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. COPELAND. The break-down is found on page 35 of the House hearings. The sum of $20,000,000 would not be a subterfuge because it covers the items involved. It covers pay, $11,000,000 plus; subsistence, $6,000,000 plus; clothing and equipment, $2,000,000 plus; a total of $20,000,000. I presume the Senator will raise the point that it does not include housing. We were assured that housing facilities are available. The provision includes subsistence, pay, clothing, and

Mr. CLARK. The Senator from New York is more familiar than I am with the fact that after men are enlisted they have to have subsistence, clothing, food, and transportation, and it does not make any difference whether Congress has said this must not exceed $20,000,000. When men are once in the service they have to be cared for. If it is found to cost $40,000,000 or $100,000,000 instead of $20,-000,000, Congress will have to appropriate the money because the men have to be cared for once they are in the service.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. CLARK. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator from New York has just stated that the amendment includes not only pay but subsistence, clothing, and equipment. He stated there is no provision for housing, but the information of the committee is that housing facilities are available.

Mr. CLARK. I am perfectly familiar with what the Senator from New York said and with what the War Department stated in their effort to get the increase in personnel. Any Senator who has visited Army posts anywhere in the country knows the accuracy of what I am about to say. I visited one recently in the State of New York and had occasion to visit another one in my own State. Any Senator or Member of the House who visits an Army post is immediately taken on a tour of inspection and shown the wretched state of dilapidation of all the buildings, in order that he may see that the accommodations are absolutely inadequate to take care of the present number of men.

It cannot be doubted by any legislator in the House or Senate that once the personnel of the Army shall have been increased by 33 1/3 percent that increase will be used as an excuse for additional appropriations of every sort, for motor transportation, for the Ordnance Department, for the Adjutant General's office, and every other branch of the service as may be necessary, not exceeding $20,000,000, to defray the cost and the administrative agencies which are involved in the of increasing the enlisted strength of the Regular Army operation of the Army.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, let me point out to the Senator that on this point the committee itself, during its deliberations, voted $130,000,000 to rehabilitate and repair the buildings at the Army posts.

Mr. CLARK. I will say very frankly I thank the Senator for that suggestion.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield?

Mr. CLARK. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. I did not understand the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], or the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] to say that the $130,000,000 is solely for the purpose of caring for the increased personnel.

Mr. CLARK. Not at all, but it is universally observed that the present facilities are inadequate for properly caring for the garrisons now at the various posts.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President-

Mr. CLARK. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. GLASS. The Senator from Missouri was making the point that the existing facilities are totally inadequate, and that the proposed increase of 331/3 percent in the Army would increase accordingly the demand for better facilities. I ventured to suggest that the committee at one point in its deliberations inserted an amendment in the bill requiring an appropriation of $130,000,000 to reconstruct and rehabilitate the buildings at the various Army posts.

Mr. CLARK. The Senator from Virginia has entirely stated my position. I think the point is extremely well taken. I have seen barracks at the various Army posts in such a disgraceful state of dilapidation as to be hardly believable, and I am not opposed to the idea that they should be put in a proper state of repair or proper state of accom-modation for the men. What I am saying is that to assert that the increase in the Army authorized by this bill will not result immediately in a renewed and extended demand for further accommodations at Army posts, is simply to close both eyes to a well-known fact.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator is maintaining that the increase which the Senate has just authorized will make necessary further increases in connection with housing, transportation, and so forth?

Mr. CLARK. Not only that, but there is likewise involved the matter of administration in every avenue of service in the Army.

If that be a matter of conjecture, why not Mr. GLASS. leave in the bill the provision that they may expend whatever may be necessary?

Mr. CLARK. I rose simply for the purpose of stating that I did not intend to oppose the amendment, but for the purpose of pointing out that the amendment does not mean anything whatever with the so-called "limitation."

Mr. GLASS. I do not understand that it is a committee amendment.

Mr. CLARK. It was offered, I believe, by the Senator from New York.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I merely wish to ask whether the Senate should depend upon the statements of people who visit the different camps and posts and form their opinion from observation as to what may be needed, or shall we depend upon the officers of the Army? General MacArthur testified before the committee that there would be no need for additional barracks or quarters for the men. He said there is no need to spend another dollar to accommodate the increased personnel. That is the testimony before us. Shall we take that testimony, or shall we take the view of people who visit the barracks and are told more accommodations are needed? The necessary repairs have been provided for in another section of the bill.

Mr. GLASS. Why not leave the bill as the Senate committee reported it? Why put a specific limitation in it?

Mr. FLETCHER. The criticism has been made that it leaves the field unlimited as to the amount appropriated. The Senator from New York is trying to limit it to the testimony before the committee.

Mr. GLASS. The Senator from Missouri is contending | that the appropriation is totally inadequate.

Mr. FLETCHER. Yes; and the Senator from Missouri contended that the present language left it unlimited.

Mr. GLASS. It does. Why not leave it unlimited?

Mr. FLETCHER. I have no objection, but it is claimed at one time that it is not specific and at another time that it is too specific. I do not know how to reconcile the contending opinions. Senators object to the language in the bill because they say it does not limit or specify. Now it is proposed by the Senator from New York to meet the objection by specifying the appropriation. That is the only object of his suggestion.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, let me say there is absolutely no inconsistency whatever in the assertion that the amount of expenditure to be entailed on the Government by the addition of 331/3 percent to the enlisted strength is unlimited and the assertion that the amendment now proposed by the Senator from New York puts a limitation on it. Both statements are entirely true; both statements are entirely correct; both statements are entirely consistent.

The amount to be expended by the United States as a result of this legislation does not depend on any paper legislation. It depends upon the fact that we are enlisting in the service of the United States Army 47,000 more men, and the expenditures authorized in this bill and the expenditures to be made in the future will be determined by the needs of that additional increment in the Army rather than by any paper limitation.

Further, in response to my friend the Senator from Florida, he has referred to the testimony of General MacArthur, lobbying at the Capitol for an increase in the Army, to the effect that it will not entail a dollar of additional expenditure for handling. I am familiar with that testimony. I am sure the general made that statement; and I will also venture the prophecy that next year, or the year after that, either General MacArthur or whoever may be at that time Chief of Staff of the Army will come before the appropriate committees of the Senate and the House and testify that it is necessary to have great expenditures made for housing and other facilities by reason of the increase in the enlisted strength of the Army authorized this year.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I desire to say to my friend from Missouri that General MacArthur was called here to testify by committees of the Senate and of the House, and it cannot be justly said that he was lobbying.

Mr. CLARK. Of course, I understand, as the Senator does, that that is the customary procedure. Nevertheless, the fact is that the Army, the Navy, and other services of the Government at all times maintain in the city of Washington lobbies for the purpose of increasing expenditures in their own particular Departments and along particular lines. The Senator from Texas, from his long experience here, is just as familiar with that condition of affairs as I am.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I think the Senator is making an unjust accusation.

Mr. COSTIGAN and other Senators addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield, and if so, to whom?

Mr. CLARK. I yield first to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Costigan]. I shall be glad to yield to all Senators.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, notwithstanding the reported statement of General MacArthur so frequently quoted this afternoon, it appears on page 10 of the hearings before the Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Appropriations that General MacArthur testified that the cost of maintaining a man in the Army is approximately $800 per year. If that figure be applied to the increase proposed in the pending bill, of course, the annual expenditure would be in excess of $36,000,000, and the appropriation now requested by the Senator from New York would be wholly inadequate.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri yield?

Mr. CLARK. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. COPELAND. It is only fair to say that in the testimony of General MacArthur the question was asked him, in substance-I do not know that I can turn to it at once-"Suppose you take into consideration all the overhead, the general expense of the Army, the expense of the War Department, and so forth; how much would it figure?" That is when he said it would cost, $800; but the actual care of the man for his pay, his subsistence, and his clothing would be in the neighborhood of $400 a year.

Mr. COSTIGAN. May I ask the Senator from New York if it is fair to assume that new men in the Army will cost the United States Government annually less per man than the present enlisted men?

Mr. COPELAND. No; I should not think so. Of course, there would be a little saving, because the overhead would be further distributed to the break-down.

Mr. COSTIGAN. The aggregate figure, as given by General MacArthur, if I understand the Senator from New York, is about $800 per man.

Mr. COPELAND. Of course any Senator can figure it. It is $20 a month for pay, 37 cents a day for food, and $35 a year for uniforms; so it aggregates about $400 a year.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President-

Mr. CLARK. I yield to the Senator from Virginia. Mr. GLASS. I desire to have the Senate understand that this is not an amendment offered by the Appropriations Committee. The Appropriations Committee had General MacArthur's statement and all other statements. Inasmuch as we have increased the Army by 46,000 or 47,000 men, what is the use of leaving the matter in doubt? It is now disputed here. Why not leave the bill as reported by the committee, and permit the use of as much money as may be required by this increase? That is what ought to Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I simply desire to supplement what the Senator from Virginia has said.

The Senate has decided that it wishes to raise the Army to the number indicated. It has made it mandatory to raise the Army to that number. Does the Senate mean to make a joke of this matter, or does it really mean to raise the Army to that number, and meet whatever expenses are necessary to raise it to that number efficiently? Why should this amendment be in the bill to limit the expenditure?

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I desire to make a brief reply and explain why this amendment is offered.

There is very unfortunate language in the bill. It appropriates the pay of the present personnel, which is, in round numbers, $51,000,000, "together with such additional sums as may be necessary under this and other appropriations contained in this act." I take it that that might mean an extraction of $15,000,000 from the Panama Canal, ten or twelve million dollars from the Army Engineers, and so forth, and the Department would have to find the money.

I am not satisfied to leave the provision as it is, because I do not think it is an honest picture of the situation. The Senate may decide the matter for itself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND 1.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Typings] asked me to present for him an amendment on page 58 of the bill, beginning at line 9, to strike out the following proviso:

Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated in this act shall be used for the organization or maintenance of an additional number of mounted, motor transport, or tank units in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps in excess of the number in existence on January 1, 1928:

If the Senator from Maryland were present, he would call attention to the fact that on page 51 the committee struck out a similar provision regarding the National Guard. Senator from Maryland wishes to have this proviso stricken out in order that the Organized Reserves may be on the same plane with the National Guard. Personally, I can see no objection to the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. CoreLAND] on behalf of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Typings].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.
The CHIEF CLERK. At the bottom of page 58, it is proposed to insert the following proviso:

Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated in this act shall be used for or toward the support of any compulsory military course or military training in any civil school or college, or for the pay of any officer, enlisted man, or employee at any civil school or college where a military course or military training is compulsory, but nothing herein shall be construed as applying to essentially military schools or colleges.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, this amendment simply does away with what is commonly known as "compulsory military training" in land-grant colleges.

I desire to propound a question to the Senator from New York, who is in charge of the bill.

Last year the item for the Reserve Officers' Training Corps carried an appropriation of $3,108,701. This year the House committee raised it to $3,452,304. The Senate committee raised it to $4,896,078. I should like to ask the Senator from New York, who is in charge of the bill, what that increase over the House provision is to be used for? The Senate committee increased the House provision by $1,443,774.

Mr. COPELAND. The purpose of that increase is to make it possible to place units of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps in about 100 more schools than are now equipped for it.

Mr. FRAZIER. That means 100 more high schools and colleges, I presume?

Mr. COPELAND. That is correct; 113, to be exact.

Mr. FRAZIER. That is very interesting.

Mr. President, I desire to submit some figures for the consideration of the Senate. They are figures which I believe are authentic. They are contained in a study of the comparative cost and efficiency of compulsory as against elective R. O. T. C. units.

There are listed 11 colleges which have compulsory military training, and in the basic number of those in training, taking the 2-year course, there are 10,330 young men, an average of 941 per school. In the advanced enrollment—that is, the third and fourth years of the college work in the R. O. T. C., or military training, in these 11 schools—there are 1,457 of those 10,000, or a little over, who remain in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. I might say that the average cost per individual undergoing compulsory military training is $739.

Eleven other universities and colleges are taken where they have an elective R. O. T. C. Of course, the total number in the basic enrollment is not so large. There are only 2,883 enrolled in the first 2-year course, an average of 266 per college, but in the advanced course, where the course is elective, there are 1,242 who remain in the course for the second 2 years, or a total of 43 percent of those who take the first 2 years of compulsory training. Where they have had compulsory training, only 14 percent take the second 2-year course, and the average of the compulsory training is $739 per man. The average cost in the elective course is $305 per man.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. The figures given by the Senator from North Dakota, of course, do not apply to the cost to the Government of the United States for students attending the insitutions?

Mr. FRAZIER. Oh, yes. As I understand it, they do apply to the cost to the Government.

Mr. RUSSELL. In other words, the Senator from North Dakota asserts that it costs the Government more to maintain an R. O. T. C. unit in an institution where the training is compulsory than in an institution where such training is voluntary?

Mr. FRAZIER. Where it is compulsory, it costs a great deal more than where military training is an elective course.

Mr. RUSSELL. But the Senator from North Dakota does not contend that it costs a great deal more to the Government of the United States per man?

Mr. FRAZIER. Oh, yes; absolutely; in the compulsory course it is necessary to have a larger force. In the 11 institutions there are 10,350 who take the first 2 years, but taking the second 2 years there are only 1,457, and $739 per man is the average cost of the potential Reserve officers in the compulsory course. In the elective course it costs the Government only $305 per man.

Mr. RUSSELL. I did not understand the Senator. The . Senator refers to the cost of the entire course of training?

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes.

Mr. RUSSELL. Not to the per annum cost of maintaining a student in such an institution?

Mr. FRAZIER. The entire cost.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield to the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I should like to inquire the source of the Senator's figures. Will he kindly put it in the RECORD, or state the source of the figures?

Mr. FRAZIER. They are given to me by a young man who is connected with an organization of college students who are opposed to compulsory military training, and I believe they are authentic.

Mr. AUSTIN. Will the Senator kindly name the association which this young man represents?

Mr. FRAZIER. I cannot remember just what they call the association, but I have met a number of these people at various times. I can give the names of the colleges and the number of students.

Mr. AUSTIN. Can the Senator give us the name of the young man?

Mr. FRAZIER. The young man is named Johnson, and he comes from New York City. I do not know whether he is a relative of the other prominent Johnson or not.

Mr. AUSTIN. What is his first name or his second name? Mr. FRAZIER. I do not remember his first name.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does the Senator know what his address is? Mr. FRAZIER. I can get it for the Senator if he desires to have it.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, it is obvious that it is not mere curiosity that prompts me to ask the question. The purpose is to ascertain the existence of the original records, the accuracy of the copies which the Senator is using, and the authenticity of the information; that is all. If there can be any information furnished from the records regarding the source and accuracy and authenticity of these figures, I ask the Senator to put the information in the Record.

Mr. FRAZIER. I do not think there is any question about the authenticity of these figures. The universities which have compulsory training are the University of Maine, Rutgers, the University of Maryland, Penn State College, University of Illinois, the Iowa State College, the University of Missouri, the Oklahoma A. & M., Oregon Agricultural College, Utah State Agricultural College, and the University of Washington. Those which have the elective course are the University of Pennsylvania, the University of West Virginia, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Wofford College, University of Cincinnati, Western Reserve University, Knox College, University of Michigan, University of Wisconsin, and Washington University.

The number of students enlisted in each one is given. It stands to reason that the students who take the elective course in a college are interested in the military training, and I have no objection to students at universities, or colleges, or high schools, if they and their parents want them to take military training, having it given to them, but I do object to the compulsory feature of the bill.

A great deal has been said about radicalism, and I note in the House hearings that some of the Army officers said there was necessity of increasing the State National Guards because of feared uprisings in the States by radicals and reds, danger of strikes, and so forth. Statements have been made in the press and here on the floor of the Senate, or they have gone into the Record, at least, about radical organizations in the universities and colleges of the United States, and a deplorable situation exists, according to some of these stories. But it seems to me that so long as we have compulsory military training in these institutions, we are doing much to make radicals of the boys in colleges who are forced to take military training over their objection, whether it is a conscientious objection on account of religious scruples, or whatever their objection may be. If they are forced to take military training, it seems to me it is going to have a tendency to make them more radical than they would otherwise be. As I have said before, I have no objection to their taking the military training if they wish to take it, but I do hate to have them forced to take it through a compulsory military course.

There are 79 land-grant colleges, I believe, which have compulsory military training, one less than there were a few years ago. The University of Minnesota, a land-grant college, has done away with compulsory military training during the last few months. That land-grant college and the University of Wisconsin, another land-grant college, are, so far as I know, the only two land-grant colleges in the United States which have done away with compulsory military training. In every other land-grant college in the United States, whether it be a university or an agricultural college, in order for the young man from the farm or from the city to complete a course in the university or agricultural college, he must take at least 2 years of military training. It is un-American; it is contrary to all our traditions that we should have compulsory military training in our schools and colleges in this free country of ours.

Some of the eminent Army officers have stated that they are not in favor of compulsory military training in the schools because there are boys who come into the schools who do not want to take the training, who do not make good officers or privates in the Army, and the officers do not like to have them taking such training. Many prominent educators in these schools have made the same statement, that they are opposed to compulsory military training. The National Education Association a few years ago went on record in favor of doing away with the compulsory feature of the military training in our land-grant colleges.

So, Mr. President, I think this amendment should be adopted. I do not know that it is necessary to take any more time in its discussion. The bill has increased by 46,250 the number of men in the Army, and it is proposed to increase by 113 the number of schools having compulsory military training. I do not know where we are going, Mr. President, with this military training. The next thing probably will be a bill providing for compulsory military training in all our schools, or for the young men in general throughout the country.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator from North Dakota frequently refers to compulsory military training. There is nothing to force any student to attend any specific institution. There is nothing to compel a student to attend a school where such courses are maintained.

Mr. FRAZIER. Does the Senator mean that there is no compulsion on the part of the War Department or on the part of the Government?

Mr. RUSSELL. On the part of anyone—on the part of the War Department or any governmental agency anywhere in the United States.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, there is not any compulsory feature on the part of the War Department, in so many words, but the effect is that the War Department will provide a certain amount of money for this course if it is made compulsory by the university authorities; and in order to get the money the small university or college has to accede to the compulsory feature.

I recall that a few years ago a college out in California did away with the compulsory feature of military training, and immediately the War Department withdrew its support from the college, and, according to the newspapers, it has threatened to do the same thing in Minnesota because the Minnesota board of regents did away with the compulsory feature of the military training.

Mr. President, in these hard times, of course, colleges are hard up, just the same as other institutions, and they need all the money they can get. Salaries and wages in many instances have been cut down. If the Army support should be withdrawn, I suppose a college would have to hire an additional member of its faculty to teach gymnastics or some other form of exercise which the students are now supposed to get through this Army drill. The compulsory feature in substance remains just the same, although it is not in the law; and the War Department will not furnish money and officers to a small school where there is no compulsory military training.

Mr. DUFFY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. DUFFY. The Senator mentioned some hundred-odd schools in which it is proposed to establish these units. These various schools have voluntarily made application for them, have they not? The units are not being foisted upon the schools by the War Department, are they?

Mr. FRAZIER. The applications may be due to the fact that the schools are hard up, and need the additional money at this time. The University of Wisconsin has not yet applied, has it?

Mr. DUFFY. No; to my regret, it has not. When I was in the University of Wisconsin I had to take military training, much to my disgust. At that time it was said, "Why, we are going to have no more wars in the future. We are living at peace with all the world."

Mr. FRAZIER. We were told about that on the floor of the Senate this afternoon.

Mr. DUFFY. Ten years later, when I was in the service, I had the benefit of the 2 years of experience and of training which I received when I was in the university. Then I was very glad I had had such training.

Mr. FRAZIER. I have no objection to anyone taking the military training if he desires to take it, but I do not like to see the compulsory feature in any of our land-grant colleges. That is the feature to which I object.

Mr. President, I have here a little article from a good Presbyterian publication. There may be some Presbyterians here who will appreciate it. The church organizations in general are opposed to compulsory military training, and opposed to the increase in the Army and the Navy which is going on year by year. I ask unanimous consent that the article be placed in the Record at the conclusion of my remarks. It is from the Presbyterian Tribune and is entitled "Headed for War."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit A.)

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I realize that there is no use of making extended remarks upon this subject. A similar amendment was voted down in the House, and similar amendments have been voted down on the floor of the Senate several times. I do think, however, that it is worth while to call to the attention of the Members of the Senate and the people of the country the fact that we are increasing our compulsory military training instead of decreasing it, and it is my opinion that it ought to be cut down. I am satisfied that if the question were put to a vote of the students who attend these colleges, or who are about to attend them, they would vote by a big majority against compulsory military training.

Some persons say the students do not have to go to a college or a university which has compulsory military training unless they wish to do so. That is true, perhaps; but in many cases there is no other school which they can attend, and so they go to a school having compulsory military training; and, if they are physically able to do so, they are compelled to take at least 2 years of military training.

EXHIBIT A

[From the Presbyterian Tribune, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York City, Feb. 21, 1935]

HEADED FOR WAR

The United States is headed straight for war. If present American policies are continued there will be a major conflict in the Pacific in this very decade. So delicate has the situation become that there is danger that we will be at war with Japan inside of 2 years. We do not believe that the American people sense the imminence of this crisis. We do not believe that they realize where the policies of the administration are carrying them. We do not believe they would approve if they did. But unless they wake up and make a mighty protest, a protest that is Nationwide and unmistakable, American manhood will once more be thrown into the shambles—and soon.

This is alarmist talk. It is meant to be. The signs of the times wake up and make a mighty protest, a protest that is Nation-wide and unmistakable, American manhood will once more be thrown into the shambles—and soon.

This is alarmist talk. It is meant to be. The signs of the times are too clear to be misinterpreted. They are too threatening to be disregarded. Japan has been made to feel that she is surrounded by a ring of enemies. Her people are absolutely convinced that we have hostile intentions toward them. She has denounced the naval treaty largely because she believes that a 5–5–3 ratio implies her inferiority and our hostile designs.

With this psychology it needs little imagination to realize the effect on the Japanese people of the recently announced war preparations of our Government. President Roosevelt's projected expenditures for national defense mark an all-time American record for peace-time expansion in the land, sea, and air services. The Navy's first line is to be put 2,000 miles out into the Pacific. Air bases stretching from Alaska to the Panama Canal, a budget for all this of more than a billion dollars, and P. W. A. funds intended for relief thrown into the naval hopper.

But still more threatening to the peace of the world are the proposed naval maneuvers in the North Pacific announced by Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, apparently with the approval of the President. These maneuvers, scheduled to begin May 3, are to take place in our own waters—but the Aleutian Islands, which are part of our possessions, stretch well on toward Japan. In fact, if the Japanese fleet decided to maneuver at the same time, it could still stay in its own waters and be within easy striking distance of our fleet. We do not know that they will, but they would have a perfect right to do so, just as we have a right to maneuver in the region proposed. The possibilities in this situation are so grave as to be staggering. By airplane these fleets would be within a few hours of each other. Are all our air pilots and the Japanese air pilots so perfectly disciplined and controlled that no on respects no laws

Moreover, peace-loving Americans must be realistic enough to know that there are men high in our political and industrial life who at this juncture would actually welcome a war. It would temporarily pull us out of the depression. There is deal danger at this point. If recovery measures fail, there will be increasing pressure upon the administration to seek this way out.

Thus there comes more quickly than we thought a supreme test for the church of Jesus Christ. Have our peace resolutions meant anything? Have they been mere words? Now is the time meant anything? Have they been mere words? Now is the time for Christians who have seen that war is sin to say so boldly before it is too late. In every church in our land meetings of protest against these provocative naval maneuvers must be held. We must take the lesson which has been driven home to us by Father Coughlin and William Randolph Hearst and deluge the President and Secretary of State Hull with letters and telegrams of unmistakable protest. Let the conscience of the Christian church speak so that even war lords and politicians may hear.

We are headed for war. Present administration policies can have no other outcome. There is nothing that can stop them but a mighty shout of protest from the Christian church.

a mighty shout of protest from the Christian church.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I am sorry, but I shall have to raise a point of order against the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state the point

Mr. COPELAND. The proposal of the Senator is a suggestion that support be withheld where there is any compulsory military course for military training in any civil school or college, and so on. The statutes say-United States Code, section 304, page 112-that the land-grant colleges are compelled under the law to teach military tactics. That is the law.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, in what year was that law enacted, please?

Mr. COPELAND. It was enacted on March 3, 1883. Further, at page 183 of the United States Code, section 381, it is provided-

That except at State institutions described in this section, no unit shall be established or maintained in an educational institution until the authorities of the same agree to establish and maintain a 2 years' elective or compulsory course of military

Therefore, under the law, so far as the land-grant colleges are concerned, they must teach military science.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield. Mr. FRAZIER. I remember very well that a number of years ago-I think it was in 1931-when this question came up, an opinion was rendered by the Attorney General of tural college. They happen to be at different places. Both the United States to the effect that there was no provision of law for compulsory military training in the land-grant colleges, and the Secretary of War at that time issued a statement along the same lines. I think the Senator is reading from some back-number code of law.

I also wish to say, Mr. President, while I am on the floor. that a point of order was raised against this amendment in the House on the 22d of February, and the Chair overruled the point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is ready to rule. Regardless of whether the law is as stated by the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND] or as contended by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier], the Senate has the right to place a limitation on any appropriation contained in the bill. It has a right to put a limitation in the bill that no land-grant college shall receive any part of this money if it does not have a 20-story building. In other words, there is no rule of which the Chair is aware in any parliamentary body, this or any other, which prevents a limitation of any kind on any kind of an appropriation. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, merely for the benefit of the RECORD, I wish to make one or two brief observations. I realize the lateness of the hour precludes any lengthy discus-

The remarks of the Senator offering the amendment might very easily create the impression that in some institution, somewhere, now receiving funds for the support of the R. O. T. C. unit, there is some form of compulsion which would compel young men to attend the institution and be subjected to a course of military training. There is no such thing anywhere in this land of ours as compulsory military training. Before a young man would elect to attend a college which was receiving the funds provided for in this measure for the support of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps he would be advised as to the rules and regulations of the college, as to what the curricula were, and what the obligations of students at that institution would be.

There are colleges in every State in the Union where there is no form of military training. If a man elects to attend a college where Latin is a prescribed course, or any one of the arts or sciences is a prescribed course, he would know in advance before he matriculated that he would be expected to take that course. That is all that is involved in the course of military training prescribed by our colleges. Any American citizen can avoid it by not seeking admission to any institution which prescribed military training as a part of the required course of study.

The practical effect of the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota is this: If the amendment were adopted, we would invade the precincts of every campus in the United States and say to the members of the board of trustees, to the members of the board of regents, and to the various State legislatures, "You have absolutely no right to prescribe any course of study in this institution. We will take that power away from you, take it out of your hands and put it in the hands of the students. The students themselves will determine what courses of study shall be prescribed for the school."

That would be the effect of the adoption of the amendment. No longer would the regents or the trustees or the various State legislatures be permitted to say what courses of study should be prescribed, but each student matriculating at an institution would have the right to elect whether he should drill. If a sufficient number were to decide in the negative, it would abolish the course of military training in any of the land-grant colleges.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield. Mr. FRAZIER. The amendment does not have the effect of changing the curricula or anything of the kind except as to the compulsory feature in relation to military training. In some of the States of smaller population, in North Dakota, for instance, there are only one or two such institutions. In North Dakota we have 1 university and 1 agriculare land-grant colleges. Both have compulsory military | training. A boy from the farm or from the city is almost compelled to take a course in one of those institutions or to go outside of the State to another institution.

Mr. RUSSELL. There is no Federal statute which would prevent the Legislature of the State of North Dakota enacting a law tomorrow that would make military training wholly optional at those institutions. Why should we concern ourselves here in discussing this matter which is now in the hands of the governing body of every State in the Union which has control over the State educational institutions where military training is given? The board of regents of the University of North Dakota has absolute right to prescribe that the military course there shall be wholly optional to every student or to prescribe that it shall be compulsory. Why should the Congress of the United States tell them that they shall not have the right to prescribe what courses shall be taught there in the way of military training any more than we might enact some legislation providing that German or French or mathematics or any other part of the regularly established curricula should not be taught?

Mr. FRAZIER. The attempt has been made, at least once by the legislature and once by the board of administration, to change the compulsory feature of military training. Each time it was voted down because they had information that the War Department would immediately withdraw support from the university and the college. In order to get that money, so necessary in these hard times, they consented and agreed to carry on the compulsory military training.

Mr. RUSSELL. I challenge the Senator from North Dakota to give any illustration or cite any concrete case where the War Department has withdrawn support unless the action of the college in making its military training optional has resulted in inability to secure a sufficient number of students in the military course to justify its maintenance. If the Senator from North Dakota can prevail with his amendment, he can go to the campus of every institution of the United States and permit the students to take a vote as to what the courses of study shall be, and if many of them decide not to take military training the War Department would not be justified in maintaining the course there; of course, it would be withdrawn. We would condemn the War Department if it kept an officer and all the equipment used in one of these training courses in a school where only 15 or 20 men were interested in securing the benefits of military training.

Mr. FRAZIER. Of course, if that is the case it shows that compulsory military training is not popular among the students. The only college I know of where the department withdrew was one in California. I do not remember its name. The board there took out the compulsory feature of military training and the War Department withdrew their support from that college. According to the newspapers they threatened to do that in Minnesota. I do not remember the particular institution, but I did read about that in the newspaper.

Mr. RUSSELL. I should not like to take some vague newspaper story as authority for charging that the War Department is violating the law relating to the establishment of military training in the colleges.

Mr. President, I hope the amendment will be rejected. can serve no useful purpose. Almost since the foundation of our Government it has been the fixed policy of the Congress to encourage a course of military training in our schools and colleges. Under the National Defense Act this training has assumed more importance than ever before. Nearly all of our Reserve officers come from these schools. If we are ever confronted with another great national emergency in the form of war the young manhood of America will be commanded in battle by them, unselfishly and patriotically, and ofttimes at a financial loss they seek to equip themselves for service to their country. They, as well as we, hope the need therefor will never arise. But I am opposed to any action by this body which will injure this important component of national defense—the Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator who has charge of the bill if he intends to proceed further with it tonight.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I wish to finish the bill tonight. We are very near the end of it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. All Senate committee amendments have been disposed of. The only question pending before the Senate is the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier]. After that shall have been disposed of, the question will be on the engrossment, third reading, and passage of the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I shall not detain the Senate longer than to point out some fundamental things with which we shall be meddling if we adopt this amendment. It seems to me that on an appropriation bill dealing with the War Department we should not undertake to change entirely the policy of our Government with respect to education, and its attitude toward the liberty of the young men and women of this country.

Since 1862 it has been the policy of the Government to encourage training for military service, on the theory that the grant made to the States of the Union by the Government in 1862 of scrip for public lands which enabled those States to have their citizens, their young men and women, trained in agriculture and the mechanic arts, was upon condition that those young men and women should also receive training for military service. This was an inviolable condition. This was a condition which had to be accepted by the legislatures of the several States before the grant could be availed of by the States. Thus was created, under the Morrill Land Grant Act, a college in every State of the Union to which the citizens of the State could go and obtain the education that was available out of the fund which a great Government saw fit to give to the State for the benefit of its young folks.

Every one of those colleges issues a catalog; and if military education is made a compulsory course, like the course in mechanic arts and like instruction in one language, together with certain mathematics, to enable the student to have, when he graduates, a well-rounded education, the student chooses in advance whether or not he will matriculate in that college. He has full liberty of choice in that respect. The compulsion to which reference has been made would arise only if we should adopt such an amendment as that proposed by the Senator from North Dakota. That is where we should get compulsion-by undertaking to force these institutions to do something that is contrary to the policy of the Government and to the law under which they accepted the grant from the United States. There is where we should get the compulsory feature, and there is where liberty would be instantly wiped out.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. AUSTIN. Certainly.

Mr. FRAZIER. I cannot quite agree with the Senator from Vermont. If this amendment should be adopted, it would be the policy of the Government to do away with compulsory military training; and according to the Attorney General's opinion a few years ago, as I recall—and I am quite sure I am correct, because I remember using the statement in a speech on the floor of the Senate-he held at that time was that there was no compulsory feature on the part of the Government with reference to the military training in these land-grant colleges.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, that is just what I am say-No compulsion was contained in the Morrill Act. A condition was attached to the grant which the State was free to accept or to reject. Let me read the language of the act:

in any manner after legislatures of such States shall have assented thereto and engaged that such funds shall yield a fair and reasonable rate of return, to be fixed by the State legislatures, and that the principal thereof shall forever remain unimpaired: Provided, That the moneys so invested or loaned shall constitute a perpetual fund, the capital of which shall remain forever undiminished (except so far as may be provided in section 5 of this act), and the interest of which shall be inviolably appropriated—

I ask the Senator's particular attention to this, since he asked me the question:

Shall be inviolably appropriated by each State which may take and claim the benefit of this act, to the endowment, support, and maintenance of at least one college where the leading object shall be, without excluding other scientific and classical studies and including military tactics, to teach such branches of learning as are related to agriculture and the mechanic arts, in such manner as the legislatures of the States may respectively prescribe, in order to promote the liberal and practical education of the industrial classes in the several pursuits and professions in life.

SEC. 5. And be it jurther enacted, That the grant of land and land scrip hereby authorized shall be made on the following conditions, to which, as well as to the provisions hereinbefore contained, the previous assent of the several States shall be signified by legislative acts:

When a State accepted that grant it accepted it upon the condition specified in section 4 that the school should teach, among other things, military tactics.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. AUSTIN. Yes; I yield.

Mr. FRAZIER. That law was passed in 1862. There have been a lot of changes since that time. Conditions have changed; and no legislature in 1862 could bind future generations for any great length of time, at least in my opinion. Legislatures could change their opinions, and the Congress of the United States could change its opinion; and this law has been amended since that time.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, that is the law of today, whether it was enacted in 1862 or in 1892 or in 1922. It happens that it constituted a contract which bound the United States and every State which has had this money given to it. Not only that; the contract has in it the elements of moral obligation, which every man who is a citizen of the United States should respect, regardless of whether or not we have courts that can any longer enforce the obligations of the Federal Government and of the State governments.

We have recently learned that we, as a Congress, may so legislate that, piling one act upon another, we may render the United States immune from the consequences of destroying the inviolable rights of citizens. That should place upon us the heavy obligation, which we ought to have, anyway, of scanning such an amendment as this to see to it that we carry out the obligation, that we continue to perform the representation we have held out to philanthropists and educators and statesmen through all the years that have elapsed since 1862 that we would keep inviolate that undertaking and that we would carry on the instruction of youth in these things upon which the grant was based. Thus did we attract to all these institutions of ours, in every State in the land, gifts, philanthropies, beneficences, made upon the understanding that the United States of America had founded these schools upon that theory and that policy.

If we have the power-and that is a thing we need not discuss here—assuming that we have the power to destroy that system, why should we wish to choose to destroy it? Why should we wish to adopt a theory which I grant men and women have a right to entertain? I do not quarrel with the Senator who offers this amendment in good faith. I do not question his motives. He may be more nearly right than I am about the policy of whether or not we should go ahead with any military institution. He may be nearer right than I. That is not the point at all. I claim, however, that it has been the theory of our Government from the beginning that liberty, freedom, opportunity, responsibility, incentive, encouragement to youth, would result in building up a fine personality in the citizen and a great country as a mass result. I object as a matter of policy to changing and reversing all that now, and making our Government a protector, a supporter, a guardian, an institution for giving to the child who is born under the Stars and Stripes everything he ought to have, sometimes called "a decent living." I object to a policy which tends so to soften character as to render it flexible and yielding, and to make the boys and girls of America wards of the state instead of soldiers under the flag. So, as a matter of policy, I am opposed to this amendment.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Vermont a question.

Mr. AUSTIN. I shall be pleased to answer the Senator's question.

Mr. FRAZIER. The Senator from Vermont seems to have the idea that this amendment, if adopted, would prevent the teaching of military tactics in the colleges, as provided in the law. That is not the case at all. It would simply prevent the compulsory feature.

We hear talk about American boys and girls being free, and all that sort of thing, and then they are compelled, if they go to these schools, to take at least 2 years of military training.

There are at least two religious sects in this Nation, quite large religious organizations, which object to military training of any kind, and under the explanation of the Senator, the children of parents belonging to those religious sects cannot send their children to these schools. The Supreme Court has ruled only recently, in a California case, that the board of administration or the faculty of a school has the right to compel boys, if they come to the school, to take military training for at least 2 years.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I suppose that is the question; if it is, I am willing to answer, but I could not very well make the answer brief.

I wish to say, if I understand the interrogatory, that military training is prescribed in these land-grant colleges just as the study of the mechanic arts is prescribed, just as a certain course in mathematics is prescribed. Any boy or girl who does not wish to take training in the mechanic arts or training in mathematics can stay away from the land-grant college. There is no more reason for saying that the training in military tactics should be excluded and that colleges should be compelled not to give or require it than there is as to any other required course.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier].

Mr. FRAZIER. I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following
Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Coolidge	Johnson	Nye
Ashurst	Copeland	Keyes	O'Mahoney
Austin	Costigan	King	Pittman
Bachman	Couzens	La Follette	Pope
Bailey	Cutting	Lewis	Radcliffe
Bankhead	Dickinson	Logan	Reynolds
Barbour	Dieterich	Lonergan	Robinson
Bilbo	Donahey	McAdoo	Russell
Black	Duffy	McCarran	Schwellenbach
Bone	Fletcher	McGill	Sheppard
Borah	Frazier	McKellar	Shipstead
Brown	George	McNary	Smith
Bulkley	Gerry	Maloney	Steiwer
Bulow	Gibson	Metcalf	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Glass	Minton	Thomas, Utah
Byrd	Guffey	Moore	Townsend
Byrnes	Hale	Murphy	Truman
Capper	Harrison	Murray	Vandenberg
Carey	Hastings	Neely	Van Nuys
Clark	Hatch	Norbeck	Walsh
Connally	Hayden	Norris	White

Mr. LEWIS. I make the same announcement concerning the absence of Senators that I made earlier in the day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier].

Mr. FRAZIER. I ask for the yeas and nays on this important question. It has to do with the compulsory feature of the military training in land-grant colleges.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The yeas and nays have been requested. Is the request seconded?

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee [Mr. GLASS] made it clear to me that I did not clearly state the amendment on page 10, line 23, providing $20,000,000 for the increase in the appropriation for enlisted men of the Army. I desire to call attention to the fact that the language which we accepted from the House is most unfortunate. I blame myself, as chairman of the subcommittee, for not discovering it; but the truth is that as the bill now stands the $20,000,000 necessary must come from the appropriation made for the present Regular Army, which is $51,000,000, and out of other items in the bill. My proposal is that we strike out the words "under this and other appropriations contained in this act", which are on page 10, line 23, and insert "not exceeding $20,000,000." Then the matter will be in conference, and the item will be presented to the country and to the Senate without subterfuge, and it will show exactly what it is intended to be.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator how much that would increase the appropriation?

Mr. COPELAND. Not exceeding $20,000,000.

Mr. KING. And the total appropriation will be approximately $500.000,000?

Mr. COPELAND. No; I should not say that.

Mr. KING. It will be over $400,000,000?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair state to the Senator the parliamentary situation. The Senate has already rejected that amendment, and in order to do what is proposed by the Senator from New York the Senate will have to reconsider that action.

Mr. COPELAND. I ask unanimous consent for a reconsideration of the vote by which the amendment was rejected, for the purpose of offering this amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. I object.

Mr. COPELAND. I move that the Senate reconsider the vote by which the Senate rejected the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New York to reconsider the action of the Senate by which the amendment was rejected.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 10, line 23, it is proposed to strike out the words "under this and other appropriations contained in this act" and to insert in lieu thereof the words "not exceeding $20,000,000", so as to read:

Pay of the enlisted men of the line and staff, not including the Philippine Scouts, $51,069,333, together with such additional sums as may be necessary, not exceeding $20,000,000, to defray the cost of increasing the enlisted strength of the Regular Army—

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I shall detain the Senate for but a moment.

I know that any opposition in this body to military and naval appropriations will be of no avail. We are embarking upon a militaristic course. We are sending word to the world that we intend to appropriate this year, not $1,000,-000,000, but $1,400,000,000 or $1,500,000,000 for military and naval purposes. It seems to me we shall be hypocritical if in the future we arise and say that we stand for peace when we are spending annually for military purposes from $400,-000,000 to $500,000,000 more than any other nation on earth.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, in order to make the bill consistent, on page 49 the same language is found with reference to the National Guard. I move to strike out the placed on the Executive Calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to | language, "under the several subappropriations contained in this act under the National Guard" in lines 23 and 24, and to insert after the word "sums" in line 22 the words not to exceed $2,500,000."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. Now, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the clerk be authorized to correct all totals.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objections, it is so

Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. KING.

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. KING. I wish to ask the Senator if he intends to move to reconsider the vote by which we adopted the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr.

Mr. COPELAND. Yes, Mr. President. I thank the Senator for calling it to my attention.

Yesterday the Senator from Mississippi asked that there be established in his State a new air squadron. He was very nice to us, and thanked us before we really had done it.

I invite the attention of the Senate to the fact that the first cost of the air squadron would be $375,000. The annual cost for maintenance would be $190,000. I suppose each Senator has had a telegram today asking for the establishment of an air squadron in his State. I ask unanimous consent for reconsideration of the action by which that amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, has the Senator from Mississippi been advised that this request would be made?

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, this is what occurred: As Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, I was standing here ready to make the point of order which properly lay against this amendment, and before I could open my mouth to make the point of order the then occupant of the chair declared that the amendment was adopted. I stated to the Senator from Mississippi then that I was going to move a reconsideration, but I think the motion ought to be deferred until he can be present.

Mr. COPELAND. What does the Senator from Arkansas suggest?

Mr. ROBINSON. I understand that the Senator from Mississippi will be in the Chamber in a moment. We might transact some other business and return later to the business on which we are now engaged. I suggest that we have an executive session at this time.

WORK-RELIEF PROGRAM

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, before that is done I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the consideration of the War Department appropriation bill, House Joint Resolution 117 be made the unfinished business of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Virginia? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States, submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORT OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. ROBINSON (for Mr. McKellar), from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of several postmasters, which were ordered to be

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

The VICE PRESIDENT. The calendar is in order.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of John J. Muccio, of Rhode Island, to be secretary in the Diplomatic Service.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of William P. Cochran, Jr., of Pennsylvania, to be secretary in the Diplomatic Service.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Parley Rigby to be postmaster at Idaho Falls, Idaho.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Arthur G. Buchanan to be postmaster at Lime Spring, Iowa.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

That completes the calendar.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate return to legislative session.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed legislative session.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The pending question is the request of the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND] for unanimous consent for the reconsideration of the vote by which the amendment known as the "Harrison amendment" was adopted yesterday. Is there objection?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from New York will not insist upon his request, but will let the amendment go to conference.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, the amendment proposed by the Senator from Mississippi was clearly subject to a point of order. I was on my feet ready to make the point of order, as I felt bound to do under a resolution of the Committee on Appropriations. Before I could do it the then occupant of the chair stated the proposed amendment was agreed to. I thereupon stated I thought there ought to be a reconsideration and that I was going to move its reconsideration.

Mr. HARRISON. I do not want to delay the passage of the bill. The matter was presented to the Senate yesterday. It was the first opportunity I had to present it. I see no reason why we should take up, unnecessarily, the time of the Senate after the amendment has been adopted. Let it go to conference and find out from the War Department about the facts if further facts are desired. I hope very much the Senator from New York will not insist upon his request.

Mr. GLASS. The point is that if things like this are to be done, appropriations bills will be torn all to pieces. The Senator's amendment was clearly subject to a point of order. I was standing in my place ready to make the point of order when the chairman of the subcommittee happened to say something to me and before I could open my lips the occupant of the chair said: "Without objection, the amendment is agreed to." There was no opportunity to make any objection. The point is that it will cost $375,000 initially, and the annual cost thereafter will be $190,000. That ought not to be done without the Senate of the United States understanding what it is doing, and it did not understand yesterday what it was doing.

Mr. HARRISON. I think the Senate understood what it was doing. I never saw it more sober in my life in the consideration of an amendment.

Mr. GLASS. Then there ought not to be any objection to reconsideration.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Virginia looked happier yesterday than he does now. He was in a better frame of mind then than he is now. I am sure, when he obtains further explanation from the high officials of the War Department, that he will agree thoroughly that it would be an outrage for the item to be stricken from the bill.

Mr. GLASS. The Senator from Mississippi is just cajoling the Senator from Virginia [laughter], just like he will cajole the conferees on the part of the House and the Senate to get his $375,000 appropriation. [Laughter.]

Mr. HARRISON. No; I would not try to cajole the Senator at all. [Laughter.] I thought I was complimenting the Senator. I hope the Senator will permit the item to remain in the bill and let it go to conference. The Senate acted on the amendment.

Mr. GLASS. But the Senate did not take any action. The presiding officer at the time took the action! [Laughter.]

Mr. HARRISON. There was no point of order raised. I speke with reference to the amendment. There was not a voice raised against it.

Mr. GLASS. No one had an opportunity to raise his voice before the occupant of the chair said the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. We had one of the best occupants of the chair that ever presided over this body.

Mr. GLASS. If the present occupant of the chair had been presiding it would not have occurred.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, the Senator from Virginia is certainly in error about the haste with which the amendment was adopted. I proposed an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi to provide for three air squadrons in Missouri.

Mr. GLASS. We could not do anything. Before anyone had a chance to say a word the occupant of the chair at that time said the amendment was adopted.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. COUZENS. What is the question now before the Senate?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND] asked unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison] was adopted. In the absence of the Senator from Mississippi, the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Robinson] asked that the Senator from Mississippi be sent for. He is now present. The question now is, Is there objection to the reconsideration of the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi was adopted?

Mr. HARRISON. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is heard.

Mr. COPELAND. Then I make the motion.

Mr. COUZENS. Did not the Senator from New York previously make the motion to reconsider the vote?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed by the parliamentary clerk, who keeps accurate record of the proceedings, that the Senator from New York did not make the motion in the first place, but asked unanimous consent. In the meantime the Senate went into executive session. The Senate then resumed legislative business and the Chair now understands the Senator from New York to make the motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment known as the "Harrison amendment" was adopted yesterday. That motion is now the pending question.

Mr. HARRISON. If the Senator from New York is going to insist on his motion, I hope the matter may be passed over until tomorrow, so that we may have a full attendance of the Senate to discuss the matter. I had been hopeful that the bill would be gotten out of the way and sent to conference by this time. [Laughter.] I do not want to put the bill over until tomorrow unless it is necessary to do so.

Mr. COPELAND. I should not think the Senator would hesitate to have a vote taken.

Mr. GLASS. I hope it may go over until tomorrow. I want a full attendance of the Senate when we vote. Yesterday it was just voted on by the then occupant of the chair.

Mr. HARRISON. Very well; let us have a vote.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New York to reconsider the vote by which the Harrison amendment was adopted. [Putting the question.] The ayes seem to have it.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask that the Chair put the question again, because I am sure he misunderstood the way Senators responded. [Laughter.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair state to the Senator from Mississippi that he believes it is customary in parliamentary bodies, where a question is voted on, for the Chair to rule with the committee in case of any doubt. The Chair believes the Senator from Mississippi has been in parliamentary bodies long enough to know that the Chair usually resolves all doubts in favor of the committee.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold that a moment?

Mr. COUZENS. Unless we are going to have a roll call on the pending question I shall insist on the suggestion. I think the point of order ought to have been raised yesterday.

Mr. HARRISON. The point of order was not raised.

Mr. GLASS. Nobody had any opportunity to raise the point of order. I was on my feet to raise the point of order and before I could open my lips the then Presiding Officer said: "Without objection, the amendment is agreed to."

Mr. HARRISON. I ask for a division.

Mr. COUZENS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The absence of a quorum is suggested, and under the present parliamentary situation no other course is open to the Chair than to order the clerk to call the roll.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the desire was expressed by the Senator from Mississippi, and I think acquiesced in by the Senator in charge of the bill, that this matter go over until tomorrow. If that shall be the order, I do not think it will be necessary to have a quorum call.

Mr. ROBINSON. If it is agreeable to those in charge of

Mr. ROBINSON. If it is agreeable to those in charge of the bill that the matter go over until tomorrow, I shall make a motion to take a recess at this time.

Mr. COUZENS. Then I withdraw the suggestion of the absence of a quorum.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate stand in recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, March 8, 1935, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate March 7 (legislative day of Monday, Mar. 4), 1935

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

CONSUL GENERAL

David B. Macgowan, of Tennesse, now a Foreign Service officer of class 3 and a consul, to be a consul general of the United States of America.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Walter Bragg Smith, of Alabama, to be United States marshal, middle district of Alabama, to succeed Douglas Smith, removed.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

Capt. John Downes to be a rear admiral in the Navy, from the 1st day of February 1935.

The following-named lieutenants to be lieutenant commanders in the Navy to rank from the dates stated opposite their names: Harvey R. Bowes, May 1, 1934.
Paul L. Mather, June 30, 1934.
Arthur W. Peterson, June 30, 1934.
Clarence H. Pike, June 30, 1934.
Harold R. Holcomb, June 30, 1934.
Henry S. Nielson, July 1, 1934.
Earl LeR. Sackett, July 1, 1934.
Warner W. Angerer, October 1, 1934.
Richard S. Morse, October 1, 1934.
George A. Seitz, November 1, 1934.

The following-named lieutenants (junior grade) to be lieutenants in the Navy to rank from the dates stated opposite their names:

Daniel J. McCallum, June 30, 1933.
Louis Roedel, November 1, 1933.
Robert S. Bertschy, May 1, 1934.
Philip D. Compton, August 1, 1934.
Elmer C. Buerkle, September 1, 1934.
Eugene D. Sullivan, September 1, 1934.
Joe W. Stryker, September 8, 1934.
William C. Latrobe, October 1, 1934.
David A. Hurt, November 1, 1934.
David M. Tyree, December 1, 1934.

The following-named ensigns to be lieutenants (junior grade) in the Navy from the 4th day of June 1934:

William J. Sisko

George DeMetropolis

The following-named assistant surgeons to be passed assistant surgeons in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant, from the 30th day of June 1934:

Carl H. McMillan William E. Carskadon John L. Enyart John P. Wood

Passed Assistant Paymaster Frank Humbeutel to be a paymaster in the Navy with the rank of lieutenant commander, from the 1st day of June 1934.

The following-named boatswains to be chief boatswains in the Navy to rank with, but after ensign, from the 1st day of October 1934:

William H. Daly Henry K. Wombacher George E. Cook Raymond F. Purcell

The following-named electricians to be chief electricians in the Navy, to rank with but after ensign, from the 1st day of October 1934:

John T. McNulty John R. Lambert James B. Glackin Harry A. Stafford Elof W. Hermanson

The following radio electricians to be chief radio electricians in the Navy, to rank with but after ensign, from the 1st day of October 1934:

Douglas N. Thomas Thomas A. Garrett
James W. Anderson Mack C. Veltman
Peter A. E. Greenwell

Machinist Forrest G. Windsor to be a chief machinist in the Navy, to rank with but after ensign, from the 1st day of October 1934.

The following-named pharmacists to be chief pharmacists in the Navy, to rank with but after ensign, from the 1st day of October 1934:

Joseph H. Bell Allan D. Spaulding John R. Dakin Harry N. Trotter

MARINE CORPS

Capt. Alton A. Gladden to be a major in the Marine Corps from the 26th day of January 1935.

First Lt. Richard M. Cutts, Jr., to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 1st day of March 1935.

First Lt. Frank D. Weir to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 1st day of March 1935.

First Lt. Merlin F. Schneider to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 1st day of March 1935.

Second Lt. Chester R. Allen to be a first lieutenant in the Marine Corps from the 29th day of May 1934.

Second Lt. Lloyd H. Reilly to be a first lieutenant in the Marine Corps from the 29th day of May 1934.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 7 (legislative day of Monday, Mar. 4), 1935

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

SECRETARIES IN THE DIPLOMATIC SERVICE

John J. Muccio to be secretary in the Diplomatic Service. William P. Cochran, Jr., to be secretary in the Diplomatic Service.

POSTMASTERS

TRAHO

Parley Rigby, Idaho Falls.

Arthur G. Buchanan, Lime Spring.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, MARCH 7, 1935

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we rejoice that on yonder throne is our Elder Brother, apart in stainless glory with a face of light, with arms to help, and with a heart to forgive. O Thou who art the mightiest of the mighty and the holiest of the holy, Thy throne is forever and ever and Thy years shall never fail. We thank Thee that Thou hast brought back the God of love to lost and bitter men. We pray that we may hear Thy voice sounding in the recesses of our souls making overtures to a better life. Enable us to keep firmly and securely in our minds that love is stronger than hate, that truth conquers error, that right is victorious over wrong, that the blessed Father of heaven and earth is with us and will prevail. We pray in the name of Jesus. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed a joint resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. J. Res. 77. Joint resolution authorizing printing and binding for the Federal Power Commission.

RESIGNATION FROM COMMITTEE

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication:

Hon. Joseph W. Byrns, Speaker House of Representatives,

Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Speaker: I desire to submit my resignation as a member of the Coinage, Weights, and Measures Committee of the

I take this action because I was recently elected to membership in the Insular Affairs Committee, and with my other three committees I simply cannot give the time five committees would require.

With kindest regards, I am

Very sincerely yours,

JOHN J. DEMPSEY.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the resignation is accepted.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 4 minutes.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, it seems to me that the object of meeting at 11 o'clock this morning was to transact the business of the House. I should like at this time to make a point of no quorum in order that the Membership of the House may hear this address.

Mr. CELLER. I do not think it is that important. should appreciate it if the gentleman would not press his motion. I will modify my request and make it 3 minutes.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to take up the time of the House, but a very severe attack has been made upon the New York manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Vincent Dailey, and it is incumbent upon somebody from New York to say a few words in behalf of Mr. Dailey, not that this distinguished servant needs any defense but merely to dispel any notions that might be drawn from the false statements made by one McAuliffe in his ridiculous attack. It is quite proper, because we are now about to consider a bill affecting the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

A man by the name of McAuliffe made an affidavit filled with tissues of falsehood and lies concerning Mr. Dailey, a very important official who honestly and efficiently has dispensed to date over $385,000,000 to home owners on their mortgages. Considerable publicity was given to the ridiculous statement by Mr. McAuliffe. He comes from Brooklyn, where I hail from; and I know that he made this accusation against Vincent Dailey only "to get back at" Dailey because Dailey summarily dismissed him because of irregularities found in his conduct as an appraiser in the Brooklyn office. Mr. Dailey found that this man McAuliffe deliberately, for economic motives of his own, increased certain appraisals. McAuliffe was one of the appraisers in that bureau. Because of this serious irregularity he was summarily dismissed. Thereafter he made these absurd accusations against Dailey, a very efficient, God-fearing, honest official of the New York office. I repeat. Dailey's record is unassailable. Dailey told me that McAuliffe was dismissed by his instructions when he became convinced by proof that he was abusing Dailey's confidence and that he had increased an appraisal without sufficient and satisfactory explanation.

Now, it may be that charges are made for political reasons that Dailey has employed primarily only Democrats in his office, but I remember distinctly when the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was first launched and they set up the office in Newark, N. J., that a Democrat could not get a chance in the place; Republicans only were employed in that office in Newark. The destinies of that office were presided over by a former Member of this House, Mr. Fort, and I remember distinctly that the Democratic Members from New York and New Jersey importuned Fort and those in charge of the office of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation at that time, not only for some positions, and were refused, but we applied almost daily for relief relative to the mortgage-foreclosure situation in Long Island, in New York City, and in up-State New York; but to all our pleas a deaf ear was lent and we did not have a chance with that Republican-controlled office.

Republicans, Socialists, mugwumps, anybody, can go to Dailey's office and get a square deal. All are treated alike. However, Democrats hold the key positions, but in the business conducted in New York there is no political prejudice or discrimination. All home owners are treated alike, fairly and squarely. Permit me to present an editorial from the Rochester Evening Journal:

IT SOUNDS LIKE BUSINESS

Vincent Dailey, of Rochester, manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation for the State, is doing a big job exceedingly well. That is the kind for which his talents are best adapted.

His program explains much of the record:

"To see to it that every individual, corporation, or group entitled by law to the benefits we are authorized to bestow will receive these benefits as quickly and as fully as possible, without regard to race, creed, party, or personal influence."

You couldn't ask for more than that.

How about the matter of political patronage? Democrats are appointed to offices—certainly, he says. But on a basis of their qualifications for the work they must do; but politics plays no part in this agency, and"When I say politics I include partisan politics, personal politics, holier-than-thou politics, and the thousand and one other species of politics that are continually popping up to interfere with the management of institutions intended to function for the benefit of our great mass of people."

A good creed for other Government departments, too.

Here is another editorial from down State, from the Long Island Daily Press at Jamaica, Long Island:

THE H. O. L. C. EXPOSED AND FOUND A SUCCESS

Partisan Republicans in Nassau County have just completed "exposing" the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

As a result it has been found that home loans went to Republicans and Democrats, new poor and old poor—all victims of the economic conditions of the day. Since this is what the H. O. L. C. started out to do, this phase of the new deal has been exposed as quite a success.

In some cases there were loans to the owners of substantial homes. This finding certainly stamps approval of the H. O. L. C. work, because one of the fears of its best friends was that it would not sufficiently care for the man who had been secure in a high-salaried job before the depression and who then plunged to the depths when his job was gone.

It seems, too, that on the basis of relative voting strength there was a slight leaning toward giving loans to Democrats—a finding which confirms the new deal's oft-repeated contention that it is the party of the masses, the people most likely to need aid.

One conclusion that partisan critics have reached is so utterly One conclusion that partisan critics have reached is so utterly absurd that to overturn it brings the quixotic feeling of bowling over straw men. The contention is that the Federal Government "punished" Nassau County for voting Republican in the last election by closing the Home Loan office in Mineola right after the election. Critics who advance this belief know that the new deal was given an overwhelming vote of confidence throughout the land, and still the Home Loan offices were closed down everywhere, because the Corporation is temporarily without funds. To point out that one of the first jobs of the new Congress is almost certain to be a reenforcement of the H. O. L. C. with more money is merely to prove the case doubly. more money is merely to prove the case doubly.

Nassau County "punished" for voting Republican!

Robert Moses, who was the Republican candidate for Governor, should get a laugh out of that in view of the majorities he hoped for and those he got. Mr. Moses might well comment ironically that as far as the H. O. L. C. is concerned, Nassau County was treated no differently than any other Democratic Happily for Nassau County, the partisan viewpoint is not likely to be general. Liberal Republicans are quick to admit that the H. O. L. C. has done well, not only for the home owner saddled with a heavy mortgage and for the business man with frozen mortgage assets, but for municipalities as well. The H. O. L. C. has been a boon to local governments which could not collect back taxes, Nassau County among them, as County Treasurer Harry L. Hedger has already pointed out.

Here is another recent editorial expression from the Herald Statesman published in Yonkers, Westchester County:

It is generally conceded that here in New York State the direction of the Home Loan machinery for the Federal Government, under Vincent Dailey, chairman, has been unusually efficient. Mr. LaPorte comments that the Empire State administration "is considered one of the best administered of all the State agencies."

Mr. LaPorte is regional manager for New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut, an important overseeing official of the H. O. L. C.

I desire to give you a résumé of the important and farreaching functions of the New York office of the H. O. L. C. presided over by Mr. Vincent Dailey. I draw copiously and fully upon one of his recent speeches for data.

The H. O. L. C. in New York State functions through six autonomous district offices located in New York City, White Plains, Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, and Buffalo. In each county there is an organization to cover the work of negotiating, appraising, closing, and servicing. The total number of salaried employees fluctuates between eleven and twelve hundred, while about 2,000 are qualified for duties on a fee basis.

February 7 operating figures follow:

Total applications	134, 629
Preliminary appraisals completed	126, 352
Mortgages, consents obtained	106, 972
Final appraisals completed	87,064

As a result of investigations and appraisals it has been necessary for us to reject as ineligible 35,472 applications, leaving net applications of 99,157.

Of these we list:

	Number of loans	Amount
Loans approved Loans closed Loans pending	72, 179 62, 546 26, 978	$381, 986, 000 324, 550, 065

I believe that I am right in saying that these would have been disposed of if we had not suspended appraisal operations in November. These operations were resumed recently.

It might be interesting to know that disbursements in New York State are almost one-seventh the amount disbursed in the entire Nation.

Every loan is safeguarded by 22 distinct operations between receipt of application and loan closing.

In the refinancing of loans one of the duties is to pay off delinquent taxes. These have amounted to nearly $25,000,-000, 60 percent of which, or approximately $15,000,000, having been paid to the city of New York.

It is also incumbent to recondition the property where necessary, and to do this intelligently the New York office had to organize a specialized department of architects, cost estimators, and experienced builders. This department alone is handling 17,196 cases. Of these 15,980 have been inspected, and low bids have been approved on 6,456 cases amounting to $1,844,065. They are now disposing of over 500 cases a week in this department, the amount of reconditioning work involved being over $20,000 a day.

In less than 3 months, without addition to his force, they have, by reorganization, set up a complete servicing department that is today attending to $400,000,000 of property located in all parts of New York State. Dailey and his office are steadily reducing delinquencies and increasing receipts. Within a short time he will have segregated the defaulted cases, the handling of which has been increasingly

Each of over 60,000 home owners has been visited recently in their homes, and the duty of caring for their service has been delegated to a trained individual. Just as Dailey endeavored to be efficient and sympathetic in his refinancing operations, so he will endeavor to be efficient in his collecting operations, ever mindful, however, that his work must be constructive owing to the peculiar circumstances under which he operates.

What are the policies of the H. O. L. C.?

Dailey's main policy is to relieve the distressed home owner. However, in doing this there have been many incidental benefits to others, and often the distress of the mortgagees has been so closely linked with the situation of the home owners that efforts have had to be expanded in meeting many emergencies in order to insure the successful operation of our complete plan.

As an illustration, take the closed banks; I am informed all loans held by these institutions were eligible for H. O. L. C. refinancing. The H. O. L. C. bonds passed to the depositors and contributed to relieving their distress which otherwise might have resulted in injury to both depositors and mortgagors and generally increased the number of distressed home

Of course, all bonds passed to mortgagees, whether individuals, savings and loan associations, banks, trust, or insurance companies, were benefits accruing to those who were depositors or insured; and if you place in this picture the people whose taxes were kept down by our payment of delinquent assessments and the solvent home owners whose equities were protected by the support our operations gave to the home realty market, you will find that almost without exception every citizen has in some way been aided by the operations of the H. O. L. C. in New York.

Another illustration of Dailey's policy to meet every emergency may be brought to you forcibly by what he successfully accomplished in an up-State city, where he threw in an augmented force of deputies, appraisers, and attorneys and saved from failure four large savings and loan associations. A run had already started when he was called in. That he was successful is attested by the fact that all four are today operating, and their members are secure in their funds.

Probably the most important of his policies is the one he adopted at the start of looking ahead for his problems and preparing to meet them. As a result of this policy of foresight, before even his first office was opened, he initiated and later forced adoption by the legislature at Albany of legislation that allowed him to operate with facility, and which saved millions of dollars to the distressed home owners.

The savings to the home owners to date on account of the legislation he had passed in New York State abating the recording tax on H. O. L. C. loans has amounted to over a million and half dollars.

The laws governing purchase and acceptance of H. O. L. C. bonds by banks, fiduciaries, trust companies, and insurance companies have been a great factor in sustaining the prices of H. O. L. C. bonds with such a great volume entering the market.

Dailey early was cognizant of the guaranteed-mortgage situation. He acted with a view of being constructively helpful in same. On August 26, 1933, with the approval of Governor Lehman, of New York, there was passed by the legislature the following act initiated by Dailey. I quote the part relating to the guaranteed-mortgage problem from section 278 of the real property law of New York State:

tion 278 of the real property law of New York State:

* * The superintendent of insurance as conservator, liquidator, or rehabilitator of any such person, partnership, or corporation organized under or subject to the provisions of the insurance law * * that shall have made or shall hold an investment * * in a bond secured by mortgage on real property or share, or part thereof, whether guaranteed or not, may at any time, without an order of the court or other authority, exchange, prior or subsequent to maturity, such bond and mortgage or share or part thereof and any rights in respect thereto for bonds of Home Owners' Loan Corporation * * and may hold such bonds of Home Owners' Loan Corporation as authorized and lawful investments for any and all purposes, notwithstanding the provisions of any general or special law of this State inconsistent with the provisions of this section.

In addition to originating and forcing the adoption of this law over a year and a half ago, Dailey especially secured and trained a staff of deputies and designated them for work exclusively on cases in which guaranteed mortgages were concerned, even stationing them in the offices of companies in liquidation. He did this on his own initiative. When these cases progressed to closing, he likewise installed his own personnel in the offices of the mortgage companies to expedite the work.

Because of the law I just quoted and Dailey's undertaking to relieve distress, under the guaranteed mortgages, the New York superintendent of insurance on January 30, 1935, was able to report that he had refunded 7,832 mortgages, in the amount of $39,265,000, guaranteed by title and mortgage companies in rehabilitation, through the Federal Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and he further stated that over $20,000,000 more of the same type of mortgages were pending.

I merely want to add to this that Dailey likewise has refunded many millions more for companies not in rehabilitation, and that in at least one instance he was informed his assistance was so material as to enable the company to keep out of rehabilitation.

But the main phase that I want to bring before you is that Dailey has done a job definitely, quickly, without fuss, bother, or publicity, and has done it thoroughly and smoothly, passing laws, meeting problems, and performing duties, unostentatiously.

Another important policy of the H. O. L. C. is to do the work required as economically as possible. Cost of operation of the New York office has been steadily maintained at a figure so low in percentage to the work done that it has received continually favorable comment both from Washington and from experienced mortgage men who are fulsome in their praise of the efficient and economical performance of Dailey's large staff thrown together hurriedly to meet an emergency. Only the manager and counsel are paid in excess of $5,000 annually, and the average annual salary of the entire staff, specialized, as its duties necessitates, including lawyers, appraisers, accountants, architects, engineers, and executives, is less than $1,500 per year. The weekly average is exactly $28.77 per person.

What are the plans of the H. O. L. C. under Manager Dailey in New York?

Mr. Dailey informs me, in the first place, that by instructions from Washington, he is again proceeding with loaning activities, and he is taking it for granted because of these instructions that bonds will be available for closing all eligible-loan applications now on file. It is on this basis that the total number of closed loans within the next few months will approach 100,000 with an aggregate amount of approximately $500,000,000. With this task completed, the New York office will have cared for all eligible applications at present on file. The applications with which Dailey cannot proceed because of the absence of elements necessary to make them eligible are now being presented to private institutions. Some of these have already been taken over by private institutions. By this additional activity of the New York office, Dailey is aiding many home owners who, though not in distress, have been applying to the H. O. L. C., because the mortgagees are in need of funds. Here Dailey is serving a twofold purpose. He is taking the worry off the home owner and is providing the mortgagees with funds.

His servicing department will keep all informed on properties in need of repair. By doing this, Dailey will protect the security behind the bonds and, at the same time, contribute greatly toward relieving unemployment.

From the operation of servicing to date, the New York office will have a percentage of problem loans. These, says Mr. Dailey, will be divided into four classifications. The first will be those home owners who cannot make their payments because of lack of employment. Dailey has already set up the machinery to see that those who are on relief shall get credit by the payment of what is known as "rent money." At the same time steps are being taken to cooperate with various employment agencies in an effort to rehabilitate the families into incomes through employment so that they may cease to be a burden to the relief agencies and may again not only support themselves but meet their payments to the H. O. L. C.

The second are those who live in multiple family houses and who are unable to rent their apartments because they have not the funds to improve same to meet the competitive conditions at present prevailing. Where the situation warrants, Dailey will improve these properties to the end of getting them occupied by tenants so that the income from rents will improve the economic conditions of the owners and, at the same time, make possible their meeting the payments due us. This work will also contribute to the relief of general unemployment and will lighten the relief burden.

The third class will be those properties which may be turned over to the H. O. L. C. because of the owners having died or moved away or given up their struggle to maintain their homes. Dailey plans to recondition these properties and dispose of them to new home owners on terms consistent with our usual mortgages.

The fourth class are those properties which are owned by a very small number of people who may not see fit to reciprocate the aid given them by the Government by meeting their just obligations. Dailey wants definitely to distinguish between the three classes of delinquents mentioned and with whom he shall cooperate to the fullest extent to help them out of their difficulties and this last class which may be defined as "chiselers."

I just want to say that if, after a thorough investigation, Dailey is convinced that a home owner has accepted Government assistance with the intent to default on his obligations, he (Dailey) will use every legal means to enforce ! the contract and he will have no hesitancy on bringing about foreclosure.

What are the politics of the H. O. L. C.?

In answering this question I want to emphasize that I am now speaking only about New York State. I also want to make a distinction between public servants and public service.

I shall take up public servants first. In connection with the New York State H. O. L. C., these are the persons or companies that through appointment or designation perform the service of the Corporation. They consist of salaried employees, fee employees, companies engaged in the preparation of abstracts, insurance brokers, and contractors engaged in the reconditioning work.

All salaried and fee employees have been appointed personally by Dailey on the basis of qualifications to perform the duties assigned to them, after a thorough investigation of their record, a thorough examination to determine their fitness, and after Dailey had become convinced of their integrity, loyalty, and zeal for efficient service. Mr. Dailey has always frankly admitted that these appointments have been made from the ranks of the Democratic Party.

The designation of the companies to prepare the abstracts of title has been absolutely free from any political consideration. The first arrangement for title work was entered into with the New York Board of Title Underwriters, representing, I am reliably informed, 80 percent of the facilities for this kind of work in and around Greater New York. This is an opportune time to read into the RECORD a letter sent Dailey by this organization, occasioned by a recent newspaper article in connection with operations of the New York office:

New York Board of Title Underwriters, 149 Broadway, New York, February 11, 1935.

Mr. VINCENT DAILEY

State Manager Home Owners' Loan Corporation, 350 Fifth Avenue, New York City.
DEAR Mr. DAILEY: This letter expresses the sentiments of all the title companies that are members of the New York Board of Title

We appreciate the substantial amounts of title work awarded to our several companies in connection with loans made by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation since it has been operating in New York.

We note that statements have appeared alluding to political patronage in the distribution of title work. Based on our relations with you and the other Home Owners' Loan Corporation officials, we feel that we would be wholly lacking in appreciation if we didn't express to you at this time the following attitude of our members, i. e., that we believe we have all been treated alike, and that we have no knowledge whatever of any suggestion of so-called "politics" that entered into the placing of orders given to the companies represented in our board. May we further state that we realize that under the pressure that prevailed in connection with the emergency of the work under your charge we handled for your corporation as large a volume of title examinations as it was possible for us to care for and attend to with dispatch.

Furthermore, it may be in order to mention now that in coopera-tion with you, and based on your thoughtful representations, we were prompted to accord very special recognition to the great group of distressed home owners, and to the cost, due to title services, of the loans under negotiation to them. It has been stated that the resulting savings and reduction in costs have thus amounted to $2,000,000. We are proud to have shared credit for that important accomplishment with you and your most capable

With assurance of highest regard,

Very truly yours,
GREATER NEW YORK-SUFFOLK TITLE & GUARANTEE CO.
GUARANTEED TITLE & MORTGAGE CO. HOME TITLE GUARANTY CO LAWYERS TITLE CORPORATION. NEW YORK TITLE INSURANCE CO. TITLE GUARANTEE & TRUST CO. TITLE MORTGAGE CO. OF WESTCHESTER COUNTY. S. H. EVANS, Secretary.

You will note that this letter states that they handled as large a volume of title examinations as it was possible for them to care for, and attend to with dispatch. To supplement their facilities, Mr. Dailey used from the outset also the full facilities of every independent title company. Even this was not enough. Consequently, in the emergency, in order not to delay closing, Dailey selected also some 20 abstract companies possessed of the equipment and personnel to take care of the overflow. The problem was to get the work done.

Now, as to the fire-insurance policies, one of which has to be on every house on which a loan is made. Here is the record. The policy Dailey pursued is all contained in the following letter from his associate counsel to the general counsel of the National Board of Fire Underwriters. It is dated at New York, April 20, 1934. It reads as follows:

Mr. J. H. DOYLE,
Counsel the National Board of Fire Underwriters,
85 John Street, New York City. Dear Mr. Doyle: Confirming your telephone conversation of this afternoon, I write to notify you that it is expressly against the policy of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to cancel existing fire insurance policies covering premises which are the subject of our loans

More than this, in the case of policies expiring at or about the time of the closing of our loans, it is against the policy of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation even to suggest the name of any insurance broker or agent for the issuance of renewal policies. Our instructions to our closing attorneys state specifically that they "shall not negotiate insurance for the account of our horrowers". borrowers."

borrowers."

Practically no cases of willful disregard of these instructions have come to our attention. Where these instructions have been violated we have acted immediately by withdrawing all our work from the attorney in question, dropping him from our lists, and instructing the home owner to continue to honor the old policy and disregard the new policy where such action is possible.

We suggest in this connection that in those few cases where our instructions have been disregarded, steps be taken, both in fairness to the home owner and to the company on the existing policies, to reinstate the old policies, cancel the new, and arrange for the return to the home owner of the excess paid for the new premium over the refund received on the old.

We shall appreciate receiving word as to the breach of our

We shall appreciate receiving word as to the breach of our regulations in this matter on the part of anyone connected with our organization, in order that we may be in a position to act as promptly and effectively in the future as we have in the past.

Thanking you for your cooperation in this matter, I am,

Sincerely yours,

NORMAN SALIT, Associate Counsel.

This letter appears in the Legislative Record of the National Board of Fire Underwriters of May 4, 1934, Bulletin No. 899. Paralleling it is the following memorandum to the member companies from J. H. Doyle, general counsel of the Fire Underwriters:

Policies covering interest

It is the purpose of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to permit the applicant for a loan to place the insurance for himself in an admitted company and through an agency of his own selection without undue influence or direction by the Corporation.

Our attention is now directed by the Corporation to the purpose above set forth and its disavowal of any intent to permit anyone acting for it to induce or tend to induce any applicant for a loan to forfeit, cancel, or surrender a policy of insurance (if written in a company authorized to do business in the State where the property is located) and rewrite same through any other agency or channel.

I am in receipt of a letter from the Home Owners' Loan Corpo-

I am in receipt of a letter from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, dated April 26, 1934, copy of which is attached.
While it is not possible, due to the conflict of interest by the change in companies, to reinstate the old policies, cancel the new, and arrange for the return to the home owner of the excess paid for the new premium over the refund received on the old, yet the rule of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in this matter is so manifestly fair and so consistent with ethical practices that we feel sure no company will knowingly violate it or permit its agents so to do.

Respectfully submitted.

J. H. DOYLE, General Counsel.

I want to emphasize that Mr. Dailey rigidly adhered to this policy of allowing every home owner to select his own insurance broker and company.

In the letting of contracts for reconditioning of homes Mr. Dailey followed a strict policy of awarding the work to the low bidder. All bids are sealed and all are opened publicly at a designated time. To be invited to bid, a contractor must get his name on an approved list. To do this he must present a certificate of compliance under the N. R. A. code; he must supply evidence that he has or can get workmen's compensation and public-liability insurance and must satisfy as to his financial responsibility and reputation for satisfactory work. This list is wide open to anyone who can fulfill these requirements.

The original lists, I am informed by Mr. Dailey, were furnished by the chambers of commerce of the State. These have been augmented by qualified contractors designated by home owners or accepted on application of the contractors themselves. In New York State there are approximately 5,000 eligible firms listed, and in sending out invitations to bid, Dailey employs a system of rotation designed to spread the work

When a reconditioning loan has been approved he sends a list of all contractors, who can do the work, in the location in which the home is situated, and the home owner can designate from this list the three contractors he wishes to bid on the job, or he can submit the name of a contractor not on the list. In case the unlisted contractor qualifies, his name is listed and he is invited to bid. Under this system the home owner makes his own choice as to the contractors invited to bid, the sole interest being to safeguard the interest of the Government that the work is done at the lowest price obtainable in open bidding.

Now, as to the public service rendered by Mr. Dailey: In the service of the H. O. L. C. in New York State, politics never has, does not, and will not, as long as Dailey is manager, play any part; and when I say "politics" I include narrow, partisan politics, personal politics, and the thousand and one other species of politics that are continually popping up to interfere with the orderly management of institutions intended to function for the benefit of our great mass of people.

Dailey has stated that-

If we are fit to hold our jobs we must understand the clean-cut terms under which we operate, and in the performance of these duties I, as manager, will continue to see to it that every individual, corporation, or group entitled by the law to the benefits we are authorized to bestow will receive those benefits as quickly and as fully as possible without relation to race, creed, party, or personal influence. That I have followed this policy in the past, I point to the record.

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Speaker, on roll call no. 23 I am recorded as being absent. I wish to announce that if I had been present I would have voted "nay."

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it. Mr. LEHLBACH. Yesterday the previous question was moved on a bill then pending, and upon a division the vote was 36 to 16, whereupon a point of no quorum was made. Under the rules of the House there would follow an automatic roll call on the question of ordering the previous question, but before proceedings could be had the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] moved that the House adjourn, and the House accordingly adjourned. My inquiry is, Is the motion for the previous question still pending?

The SPEAKER. The motion is pending and the vote will again be taken the next time the committee is called under the Calendar Wednesday rule; that will be the first business in order when the Judiciary Committee is again called on Calendar Wednesday.

ADDITIONAL HOME-MORTGAGE RELIEF

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 150.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of H. R. 6021, "A bill to provide additional home-mortgage relief, etc." That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 4 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts, and for the present I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, when this bill was pending in the House 2 years ago the Republican membership advocated the administration of this law should be conducted on a nonpartisan basis. A majority felt otherwise and determined the officials should be selected through political patronage. It is interesting to note in the last 2 years it has been necessary for the Administrator to remove 44 State, district, and assistant managers because of mismanagement, disregard of explicit instructions, or inefficiency. In the same period of time 22 persons have violated the Corrupt Practices Act, and it has been necessary to remove 11 managers and assistant managers because they have solicited funds for political purposes. This record has been brought to the attention of the Committee on Rules by the gentleman who has presided over the administration of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. It indicates plainly we would have been much better off if we had left politics out of this act designed to relieve the millions of distressed small-home

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SNELL. I desired to ask the gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler] a question in regard to the administration in the State of New York, but his time expired. I do not care to make definite charges because I never do that unless I know what I am talking about, but I do know that practically the only loans made by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in my immediate vicinity, except in one instance, were made in the 3 weeks previous to election. I also happen to know that the gentleman who made those loans closed them up very quickly and after he had closed them he said to the people who received the money: "Remember, this money comes from President Roosevelt and Governor Lehman." He did not say that they had to vote for them in order to get the loans, but he especially made the statement as I just stated after the loans had been made, and I know the only activity in regard to any of those loans was in the 3 weeks before election.

Mr. CELLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. There were in New York State 134,629 applications made in toto. Thirty-five thousand applications were rejected, and up to date over 63,000 loans were closed, and they are fairly well distributed throughout the State of New York. Complaints have been made that New York City was discriminated against, and Brooklyn particularly. I took pains to look into that matter, and I find New York City was not discriminated against, that Brooklyn was not discriminated against, nor was the upper part of New York State. I am not familiar with the gentleman's particular district, because I did not look into that section, but I am quite convinced, as a result of investigation of newspaper clippings which I gathered all over the State, there has been discrimination nowhere. There are most laudatory opinions to be found everywhere in regard to the work of Mr. Dailey.

Mr. SNELL. If there are no politics in connection with the applications for these loans, why did they not stop 2 weeks before election, when they knew they had more loans than they could grant, instead of waiting until the day after election and saying they had 400,000 applications and they were going to stop receiving them?

Mr. CELLER. I do not think that is an accurate state-

Mr. SNELL. It is very nearly accurate, as far as the papers are concerned.

Mr. CELLER. There was a cessation of loans due to our failure to appropriate sufficient money. It may be that some of the loans in the gentleman's district were embraced within those.

Mr. SNELL. I am talking about the general statement that came out after election, after they had stopped receiving applications because they had something like 400,000 applications on file. I maintain, if there were no politics in it, they knew before election they had more applications than they could grant.

Mr. CELLER. The gentleman knows the newspapers in Long Island, Syracuse, and other places in New York are Republican controlled.

Mr. SNELL. If there are any newspapers Republican controlled anywhere, I would like to know it.

Mr. CELLER. I will put in the Record, in my revision of remarks, a list of those newspaper as well as the editorials.

Mr. SNELL. I will be glad to have the papers listed.

Mr. CELLER. I will put them in the Record. See revision of my remarks made at the beginning of day's session.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 3 additional minutes.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. May I call the attention of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] to the fact that of the $2,400,000,000 plus loaned by the Corporation, New York received in excess of $325,000,000 of that amount? In other words, on a per capita basis, New York ranks higher than any other of the States of the Union, with the exception of Ohio and Michigan.

Mr. SNELL. I did not intend to convey the idea that New York as a whole had been prejudiced against. I simply made the statement that the only activity there was in my immediate vicinity was in the 3 weeks before election, and I thought the whole organization was subject to criticism when they took applications 3 weeks before election, and on the 13th day of November said they had 400,000 pending and would not receive any more.

Mr. COX. Is the gentleman complaining of the operations of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation because of its alleged favoritism to the Democrats?

Mr. SNELL. I would not say it was favoritism to the Democrats, so far as the loans that were made in my community were concerned, but I do know the only activity there was took place 3 weeks before election, and, personally, I think it was for a definite purpose.

Mr. COX. I think if the gentleman will investigate, he will find that the Republicans, so far as distribution of patronage is concerned, have received the lion's share.

Mr. SNELL. I did not say anything about that. I just spoke about the situation that appeared there just before election.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. May I ask the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] if he can name any place anywhere of a Republican receiving any favoritism. He said he investigated the facts. Let us have them.

Mr. COX. I do not know, other than the fact that the field forces of the Corporation are largely Republican, and I am making no complaint about that, because I do not know how it happened.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. How about the managers who selected them?

Mr. COX. Let me reply to the gentleman by asking him a question.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Surely.

Mr. COX. From the investigation that the committee has made, is the gentleman in position to indict the Corporation upon the basis of its playing politics in the administration of the fund at its disposal?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may need.

Mr. Speaker, when I made my opening statement concerning politics in this Bureau, I did not want to be considered as making an attack upon Mr. Fahey. I am not. I really believe Mr. Fahey is an honest, capable man, trying to perform a difficult task to the best of his ability and trying to keep politics out of it. I really believe this, and he would be in a better position to do it if he were let alone.

Mr. COX. Does not the gentleman believe that that reflects the attitude of the entire Board?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I believe there has been a lot of politics in the administration of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. I believe there has been a lot of inefficiency and delay about which the people are finding fault, but I have no reflection to cast upon Mr. Fahey. What I would like the House to do is to keep politics out of the administration of this Corporation. There is too much money involved and it is too serious a relief problem to be a political football. I believe when we are administering relief to distressed people whose homes are in danger, or when we are giving to people the sustenance of life, like we are through the E. R. A., it ought not to be a question of whether a man is a Democrat or a Republican. If a person is in distress, he or she ought to be on a parity with other needy persons and should receive equality of treatment.

Mr. COX. From the investigation which has been made and from what the gentleman knows about the operations of the Corporation—

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I am not talking about what has come before the committee, but about the general complaint that has come from many sources about a great many of these relief organizations.

Mr. MARSHALL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. MARSHALL. Mr. Speaker, I want at this time to relate something concerning which I have personal knowledge in my own district reflecting upon this question of political activity. I am in favor of continuing the Home Loan, and I think most of us are, but we do object to its being used as a football of politics. Here is what happened in my district: As you all know, in each county was appointed a Democratic lawyer to check titles. I do not object to that. Let them have a Democratic lawyer to check titles; but here is what I do want to cite to this Congress as an example of the kind of politics that was played: In my district each one of these attorneys, just before election, less than a week before election, addressed a letter to each and every applicant who had been successful in getting a loan, and he also addressed a letter to each person who had an application pending, in which he played the cheapest kind of politics in holding out to these people what had been done under the act, and what they hoped to continue to do, and then stating specifically that in order to do this they must vote the Democratic ticket. I think that is cheap politics.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. CELLER. I just want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that Franklin Fort, our former colleague and a Republican, was placed in charge of the division embracing New York, New Jersey, and the surrounding States when the Home Loan Corporation bill was first passed by the Congress; and if there was ever politics in the situation, there was politics then; and I also wish to remind the gentleman that the present head of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Mr. Fahey, is not a Democrat. I am informed he is Republican.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman is mistaken about that. Mr. Fahey is a lifelong Democrat.

Mr. CELLER. Then I am misinformed; but Mr. Strong, who is the Assistant Treasurer, is a former Republican on your side of the fence, a former Representative from Kansas. Numerous Republicans can be found on the roster of important positions in the H. O. L. C., as well as the Federal Housing Administration.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is not the gentleman talking about the home-loan bank, which is an entirely different proposition?

Mr. CELLER. They all have to do with saving the homes of the people.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. COX. For the purpose of replying to the statement made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MARSHALL] complaining of politics in the Corporation, whatever politics there may be in it, Ohio, nevertheless, on the wholesale operations of the Corporation in distributing $459,000,000, received $143,000,000 of that sum.

Mr. MARSHALL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield so I may answer that statement?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. MARSHALL. I think that is the best evidence as to how it was operated in Ohio. They were trying to elect Democratic office holders in Ohio.

Mr. COX. Is the gentleman complaining of the work of the Corporation on the basis of its having paid out too much money in his district and in the State of Ohio?

Mr. MARSHALL. I am complaining of the cheap politics that was played with taxpayers' money to try to elect a Democratic administration in Ohio.

Mr. COX. But does the gentleman consider that an answer to my question?

Mr. MARSHALL. Certainly; it is a very good answer.

Mr. COX. Is the gentleman complaining on the ground that the Corporation has paid out too much money in his State?

Mr. MARSHALL. The gentleman could not infer that from the statement I made.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield.

Mr. TABER. If what some of our Democratic colleagues are trying to get at is the proper procedure, then would it not be proper to tax only the Democrats and not tax the Republicans? If they are going to get all the benefits from the taxes, there ought not to be discrimination anywhere along the line.

Mr. COX. Surely the gentleman from New York is not charging that the Republicans have been discriminated against in the making of these loans?

Mr. TABER. When they do such things as the gentleman from Ohio has stated and use the granting of loans as a lever to persuade folks to vote the Democratic ticket, I think that is the rankest and rottenest kind of politics. [Applause.]

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for one question?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I must decline to yield for a moment, so that I may use some of my own time.

Mr. Speaker, this discussion shows that if we had been wise in the first instance we would have enacted a provision which would have taken employees out of the realm of politics. It would have been better for the Democratic Party itself. When the Democratic Party insist that every major position shall be dominated by a Democrat, they invite the suspicion that the law is being administered on a partisan

When you observe that out of 276 applications in one community only 16 loans have been made after a year's time, you naturally wonder whether all are getting a fair deal.

I am going to vote for this legislation because I believe the applicants who have had the influence, those who had the most energy, have had their applications granted. The applicants who are left should in all fairness be given a chance for the relief given to others. Let me illustrate. In the State of Rhode Island the Board has not acted on application 377, and yet the man who filed this application has complied three times with the requirements demanded. Thousands who filed later have received relief.

Mr. PIERCE. Probably he did not have the pull of some loan corporation. Talk about politics, it is simply a question of these loan companies.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I am for the legislation. I believe people who have been waiting for over a year ought to be given relief, and I want to say I am hoping and praying that the thousands of people who are suffering should be relieved promptly and fairly.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I want to say to the gentleman that the manager in my district, Mr. Tasker, has not played any politics, but has given a fair and honest administration.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I am delighted to hear it, and I hope it will continue.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. HEALEY. The gentleman has not made any complaint about the way it has been administered in his own State, has he?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I am not making any serious charges about the State of Massachusetts. I think, on the whole, they have done very well, although I think they have not dispatched business in my own district quite as much as they should. However, I have no complaint.

Mr. HEALEY. Does not the gentleman know that the administration of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in Massachusets has given wide-spread satisfaction and has had the endorsement of all the leading newspapers throughout the

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I can only say what I said previously to the gentleman—that I am not making any general complaints about the State of Massachusetts. I think they could have acted with more dispatch in my own

Mr. COX. At least they have acted there with the result of granting $90,000,000 in retail loans to the State of Massa-

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Have I to repeat to the gentleman from Georgia what I have said twice, that I am not complaining about Massachusetts?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN. They did play politics in appointments in the district because they appointed more Republicans than Democrats, but is it not a fact that one of the outstanding Republican politicians in the United States was a member of the Board? I refer to Mr. Walter Newton. If there were any politics being played, would not the gentleman himself have information from Mr. Newton. Mr. Newton is my friend, but the gentleman must admit he is a politician.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I have not tried to get such information. I realize the home-loan legislative relief was a product of a Republican administration.

Mr. COCHRAN. Is it not also a fact that the man who handles the money, the treasurer, is a former Republican Congressman, Mr. Strong, of Kansas? He undoubtedly would bring some information to the Republican side if politics were being played. Jim Strong is an outstanding Republican, always was, and always will be.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Not if he is trying to hold his job.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Is it not a fact that the former Member of Congress, Mr. Walter Newton, was removed from the Board?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Probably he was too efficient or too watchful.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I have criticized the Home Owners' Loan Corporation whenever I deemed it necessary, but I state most emphatically that in the State of Pennsylvania certainly no politics has been played with it.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Oh, I would not expect any politics in Pennsylvania anyway. [Laughter.]

Mr. SMITH of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. SMITH of Connecticut. Does not the gentleman think that the political party which is in the majority and which institutes and carries through such a great relief measure as this Home Owners' Loan Corporation and such great relief measures as the others that have been carried through during this administration is entitled to claim political advantage from it by pointing out that all this was done in a Democratic administration and that the preceding Republican administration had failed to do it? Is not that a legitimate political claim?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I do not agree with that statement at all. I think this Home Owners' Loan Corporation had its start under a Republican administration. As the Democratic Party came into power, of course, distress became greater, and the people were more short of money, and naturally you had to extend it in order to take in the people and give them proper relief.

Mr. SISSON. And does the gentleman mean by that that the Republicans furnished the cause and that we furnished the cure? [Laughter.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I would say that if you go away back to the cause, you will go back to the Wilson administration, when we fought the World War. That is the real cause of all our troubles.

Mr. STACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. STACK. I have listened this morning with a lot of interest to the discussion, and from the temper of the House I am satisfied that the Republicans as well as the Democrats want this relief bill passed.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. There is no question about that.

Mr. STACK. So as to help the people back home. Now, like men and women, please let us get down to business and pass the bill and give some relief. [Applause.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. RICH. This bill will grant one and a half billion dollars additional to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. Are we in some way going to protect the Federal Government as well as the mortgagees? I hope we are not going to permit the banks of the country to unload on the Government a lot of mortgages on property, where the mortgages are for a larger sum than the value of the property. The banks of the country are interested as well as anyone else in having this bill passed, so that they can dump onto the Federal Government a lot of their mortgages that are away beyond the value of the property involved. I hope we will give proper consideration to that. We should not make this a dumping ground to the advantage of the banks of the country.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Boileau].

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, during the past few weeks there have been many statements made on the floor of the House with reference to the administration of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation Act and the conduct of those officials who have been charged with the administration of the act in the various States. Several gentlemen have said that politics has been injected into the administration of the act, and others have stated that graft, corruption, discrimination, and favoritism have been manifested in the administration of the act. With reference to the first of these charges, that politics has to some extent been injected into the administration of the act, I think Wisconsin is, perhaps, situated similarly to other States in that respect. Practically all of those who have had any responsibility for the administration of the act in the State of Wisconsin have been members of the Democratic Party. I have no fault to find with that. Someone had to be appointed, and we could not expect to have Republicans or Progressives appointed by a Democratic administration. Mr. J. R. McQuillan, State manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation for the State of Wisconsin, is a Democrat of long standing. He was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in my congressional district in 1932.

The attorney for the district which comprises practically all of the counties in my district, Mr. Frank P. Ragner, is an attorney of standing in the community, a lifelong Democrat, and a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in my congressional district during the last campaign. The district manager, Mr. Sherman Wade, is a Democratic State senator. He has been district manager since this bill has been in operation.

I wish to say in behalf of all of these men that they are of high standing, of unimpeachable character, and well qualified to carry on the work they have been charged with. I want to say in their behalf that in my experience I have never heard even the slightest suggestion of any fraud, any favoritism, any graft, or anything of that kind in the administration of this act in the entire State of Wisconsin. They are men who have been chosen because of party loyalty, that is true; but there has been no tendency to disregard qualifications, and each of them has been well qualified for his particular work. I wish to say further that in the State of Wisconsin we have had no major political scandals in many, many years. Whether Republicans, Democrats, or Progressives are charged with the responsibility of administering the political affairs of our State, we have been free of any charges of graft or corruption. I wish to say particularly with reference to the officials of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in Wisconsin that they are carrying on their work admirably and, as I said a moment ago, I have heard no suggestion of inefficiency, favoritism, or graft in the administration of this act in the State of Wisconsin. [Applause.]

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOILEAU. I yield.

Mr. SAUTHOFF. I should like to ask my colleague from Wisconsin if the high standard of government in Wisconsin is not due to the fact that we Progressives set the standard for the Democrats and Republicans to try to keep up with?

Mr. BOILEAU. I think the gentleman is accurate in that respect. I wish to say that as far as the political leadership of our State for the last half century is concerned, it has been largely influenced by the members of one illustrious family, the La Follette family. The late Senator La Follette and his two sons, who now represent the State, one in the United States Senate and the other as Governor of the State, have done a great deal toward keeping politics clean in Wisconsin.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Bolleau] has expired.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox].

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, it surprises me that anyone familiar with the operations of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, such as members of the Rules Committee, which committee has been conducting hearings on a resolution to investigate for some time, should even indicate a willingness to indulge in the blackguarding of the Corporation that has been going on for some considerable time. I am sure that in the experience of the Members, the operations of the Corporation have not in every instance been entirely satisfactory, but those of us who are acquainted with the facts ought to be willing to do justice to the truth as we must know it to be and gladly make the concession that the Corporation, insofar as the Board in Washington is concerned, has made a splendid job out of the work they have had in hand.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. COX. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The gentleman appreciates the work that has been done here in Washington. Does he think it advisable in this bill to make a provision whereby the head office in Washington cannot say who will be district managers? May I put it another way? Why a change in a manager who has served probably efficiently?

Mr. COX. I make this statement in reply to the gentleman's inquiry, that the hearing which the committee has conducted has established it as a fact that the Board in every instance, where anything in the nature of a charge of wrongdoing has been lodged against any agent or employee and in any wise sustained, has acted promptly and has made dismissals, and has done everything else that an agency of the Government could be expected to do in an effort to keep its house clean.

Criticisms have been made against the Corporation—that is, many charges have been lodged against it, which I shall endeavor to answer in a general way, and I hope to the reasonable satisfaction of my colleagues. But here is the assurance that I want to give you now—it is that you have a Board here in Washington which is made up of outstanding men without a single exception. I do not believe there is a man in the service of the Government at this time who is giving himself more completely to an effort at proper administration than the Chairman of the Home Loan Board, and this same thing applies to his entire official household. Every member of that Board is a man of experience in the line of work he is doing and of fine background, and ought to be beyond the reach of some of the criticisms that have been made upon the floor of the House.

The Rules Committee has given careful consideration to the Sweeney resolution asking for an investigation of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the conduct of the members of its Board of Directors, and has called for specific evidence of misconduct. The charges and complaints which have been made have with few exceptions been general in character and indefinite and in some cases unfounded. I should like to review for the information of the Members of the House of Representatives and for the Record something of this situation.

Charges and contentions have been made which may be classified as follows:

First. The charge has been made that Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 was enacted for the direct and immediate relief of individual home-mortgage debtors, and that the Corporation established what was celled a "wholesale department", which was conducted in effect for the benefit of banks and other mortgage institutions, and that such course is irregular.

Second. The charge has been made that in this so-called "wholesale department", and, indeed, in some cases in the ordinary lending operations, favortism has been shown, resulting in delay in granting relief to deserving applicants and resulting in the making of loans to parties who were not in distress and were not entitled to the relief granted by the Corporation, and that this course is irregular.

Third. The contention is made that in the organization of the State agencies favoritism has been shown and a disproportionate part of the resources of the Corporation has been employed in some States as compared to the portion employed in other States, and that this is irregular and improper.

Fourth. The contention is made that there have been irregularities in the selection of employees, and that a course has been pursued in this respect which has not only been unsatisfactory to the complainants but is also bad public policy.

Fifth. The contention is made that the appraisals of the Corporation in many instances have been so high as to be unjust to the Corporation and the Government, and in many other cases so low as to work an undue hardship upon the applicant, and that a course has been pursued in appraisals which is bad public policy and ought to be investigated.

Sixth. The charge is made against the directors of the Corporation and the Corporation itself that rules and regulations have been made and applied affecting eligibility of applicants and their properties which have excluded worthy applicants from the relief intended, and that these rules and regulations are in many cases unlawful.

Seventh. And there are other charges of irregularities, most of which when examined, however, are found to be mistakes in individual cases made by individual agents of the Corporation in the field, such as are to be expected in so large an operation, and which appear to have been made in spite of the provisions of the statute and the regulations of the Corporation and the best efforts of the administrators to prevent such mistakes.

When this legislation was originally pending in Congress, those who were being called upon to administer the same pointed out many of the difficulties to be encountered in the administration of a relief measure involving so many individuals in a condition of distress and involving financial institutions of such great resources; and the Congress, recognizing the difficulties in the administration of the relief, shaped the legislation in an effort to give sufficient power and authority to meet such difficulties and to give the relief which the Government proposed as promptly and effectively as possible; and in considering the questions now before us we must take into consideration the conditions which the Congress considered in the beginning and from time to time when this legislation has been amended, and the condition of the applicants and their creditors with which the Corporation was required to deal. We must take into consideration the fact that when the legislation was enacted in the beginning of the present administration a depression had been permitted to continue, and a credit contraction and deflation had taken place to the extent that the situation in the homemortgage market appeared to be almost hopeless. The homemortgage debt was the largest single private obligation in the United States, amounting to more than $20,000,000,000. and already the credit contraction and deflation which had taken place had resulted in foreclosure upon about 10 percent of these debts, throwing about 1 out of 10 of these home owners out of house and home, completely crushing the market for houses, and gravely endangering the security of all mortgage institutions. In addition, at least five or six billion dollars of this debt was hopelessly in default, and the creditors either could not or would not renew or extend, and home owners, of course, could not pay under such conditions in one lump sum.

The Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 was approved June 13, 1933, and the necessity of immediate action was apparent to everyone. The Congress undoubtedly intended that the Corporation should be conducted as an emergency operation, and that relief should be given to the country as quickly as possible, and individual Members of Congress and the country as a whole urged the utmost speed, and, I believe, recognized that the speed demanded would result in more mistakes than might have resulted if the usual course of the development of such a business might have been pursued.

The Corporation was immediately organized after the statute was passed and a staff was assembled and has been from time to time adjusted and readjusted to meet the conditions confronting the Corporation. The Corporation has been compelled to deal with more than 1,700,000 applicants, involving, with the members of their families, an estimated six or seven million people in addition to many thousands of creditors of these people, and was compelled to employ more than 20,000 people within a few months and to select for professional services from appraisers, lawyers, and architects more than 20,000 others. It was confronted with a new method of mortgage lending, namely, the exchange of bonds for mortgages instead of the liquidation of mortgages in cash which would have been much easier if the cash had been made available to the Corporation. Its applicants were in large measure our citizens who were in the greatest desperation when confronted with what appeared to them to be the immediate loss not only of their homes but also of their lifetime savings invested in these homes, and at the same time the Corporation had to deal with the creditors of these people, who, in many cases, were themselves desperate. It must not be overlooked that these serious problems existed in each of the 48 States, the District of Columbia, and the 3 Territories, making a total of 52 jurisdictions in which the Corporation operates, and a staff and a procedure had to be adopted which would accomplish the result desired in each of these jurisdictions. A different situation existed here from that confronting the Federal Reserve Board or the Farm Credit Administration and other undertakings of the Government, in that this was a new undertaking with no staff and no procedure and no precedent, whereas, for instance, the Farm Credit Administration had the precedent of Federal landpank farm mortgage lending for nearly 20 years, with procedures established and an organized staff, and furthermore, the debt problem here dealt with is much more than twice as large in dollar volume and in number of individual mortgages as that dealt with by the Farm Credit Administration.

All things considered, the Corporation did get under way very expeditiously and has given unmeasured relief to individual applicants and their families, resulting in an improved real-estate market, in improved conditions in mortgage institutions which protect the savings of the multitude, and has been one of the principal contributing factors in the recovery program. It has taken over more mortgages than anybody else ever acquired in a similar period or any other period. It is now the largest mortgage institution in the world, and holds about three times as much in urban-home mortgages as all of the life-insurance companies in America combined. It has had at one time all of the problems of organization, establishment of procedures and methods of doing business, employment, the development of a new method of mortgage refunding with bonds, the establishment of a servicing procedure, and the conduct of a financial operation which is unprecedented. And all of these things had to be done by a public institution which was subject to criticisms not only just and proper, but also from critics who are biased and who said it could not be done and who did not wish to see the result accomplished, and, in many cases, who for partisan reasons desired to discredit even the best efforts made in good faith.

The Corporation and its directors freely admit that many mistakes have been made and that complaints are justifiable. The complaints which have been made have been most vigorously inquired into by the Corporation and its directors. In some cases it was too late to remedy the mistakes. In many cases the mistakes were corrected. A most thorough showing has been made in connection with all of the matters which have been called to the attention of the committee. There may be and are differences of judgment, but there is no occasion to say that good faith has not been practiced or to say that the effort which has been made is not a reasonably efficient effort to administer the statute.

Much complaint has been made about the situation in Cleveland, Ohio, but let us examine the facts for a moment. In the State of Ohio, the Corporation has received 186,000 applications for $673,000,000 in loans, and prior to February 14, 1935, had closed over 68,000 loans for over $211,000,000. Let me compare this with Georgia, where on the same date 13,159 loans had been made for a total of $29,830,484; and with Kansas, where on the same date 15,792 loans had been made for $28,583,643. In order to make it more clear, let us take note that the Cleveland district alone has received over 25,000 loans heretofore closed for more than $90,000,000, or three times the amount for that one district that has been received in the whole State of Georgia or the whole State of Kansas. Loud complaints have come from Detroit, but the record shows that on the same dates above referred to, over 35,000 loans had been closed in the Detroit district, amounting to over $107,000,000. Again, one district has received more than three times as much relief as the whole State of Georgia or the whole State of Kansas, and has received more than twice as much as the average entire State. To accomplish this operation in these congested areas in any reasonable amount of time, it appears to be clear that it was necessary to have not only the regular offices but also the wholesale department. It is interesting to note that the wholesale department in these congested areas has extended about as much relief as the retail department. If the gentlemen who complained about these situations could have had their way only one-half of the relief would have been afforded in their territories which has been afforded by the efforts which have been put forth.

As we consider this situation, it is necessary to consider the size of the institution with which we deal. Home Owners' Loan Corporation now holds more than three times as many urban home mortgages as all the life-insurance companies in America and has acquired these loans over only a few months, whereas these life-insurance companies have had many years to develop their business. The corporation operates in 48 States, 3 Territories, and the District of Columbia, and no other mortgage institution operates in so wide a territory. It has issued more bonds than has ever heretofore been issued by any corporation in the history of the world; and this has been a delicate operation, which has been put through without an undue disturbance of the Government credit or the bond market. It has employed more than 20,000 people, as I have pointed out, in an emergency and has selected more than 20,000 other people to render professional services, such as appraisers, architects, and lawyers. While many of our recovery efforts are only now beginning to get under way, this one has been engaged for more than a year in actually closing, with all the details involved in a loan closing, more than an average of 2,000 home loans daily. At the same time all the books and records for so vast an operation were necessarily developed, and the operation of servicing these loans is confronting the Corporation, and reports in this connection are very encouraging. No reasonable man could expect such an operation without mistakes. The marvel is that more mistakes have not been made. The operation itself has not only justified itself, but the administrators of the act have justified the faith and confidence of the administration and the country.

When we consider this situation it is necessary to consider the fact that Home Owners' Loan Corporation is only one of four responsibilities which have been entrusted to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for the protection of home ownership in this country. The members of this same Board must administer the Federal home-loan bank system, consisting of 12 banks, which have more than 3,100 members. which, in turn, hold more than $3,000,000,000 of mortgages on American homes. No more creditable statement can be made than the mere statement of the fact that this system has operated throughout this perilous period and finds now only 6 institutions in this large membership of over 3,100 in receivership and only 6 others under any kind of control of any public supervisory authority. The stabilization effected by these banks has not only protected many millions of savers but has prevented chaos in this large volume of home mortgages, and the members of this Board are entitled to very much credit for this accomplishment. At the same time, the members of this same Board were entrusted by the Congress with responsibility for the organization and development of Federal savings and loan associations to further stimulate local thrift to provide sound financing for local homes. More than 700 of these institutions have been chartered and more than $200,000,000 of capital is now employed in them, and the Government has been called upon in this connection for less than $15,000,000 of this capital. The record shows that these institutions are actually engaged in lending money when most others decline to lend and that they are rendering a substantial service. When we realize how many mortgage companies and other mortgage institutions have completely retired from mortgage lending, we realize the necessity for the development of new ones to take their places and the benefits to be derived from these associations in connection with permanent recovery. Of course, it has taken substantial time to develop this system of thrift and so large a number of these institutions. A year ago almost no money was being invested in mortgage institutions and money was piling up in insured bank deposits and stagnation was resulting. The members of this same Board were made trustees of the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation by the act of June 27, 1934, and have developed a plan for the insurance of accounts in thrift and home-financing institutions and have actually insured all the accounts in more than 500 such institutions, involving several hundred million dollars, and the results of this operation are expected to attract a more adequate supply of money to finance home ownership on a sound basis. I point these things out so that we may all realize that the Federal Home Loan Bank Board has been entrusted with a wide and comprehensive program, designed to provide the means for the sound financing of homes and intended to improve conditions of home ownership, and for the purpose of pointing out the large responsibility which has rested upon the shoulders of the members of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and their staff.

But let me take up and analyze for a moment the charges and contentions I have referred to seriatum:

First. When the so-called "wholesale department" was established, the regular offices of the Corporation were overwhelmed with applications, and the Members of Congress and the entire administration, and indeed the country, were demanding added means to facilitate this debt-refunding operation. Many thousands of banks were either in receivership or were operating under State or Government restriction, and regular mortgage institutions were in large measure unable to function. Many people felt that greater speed could be obtained by going into institutions in liquidation and there examining the mortgages on a wholesale basis with the receiver, and thus determine which ones were in a hopeless situation and rapidly refund such debts, and thus get the debtor out of his peril and at the same time provide funds for the savers in these closed banks and other institutions, many of whom were in the direst need for their savings for the rainy day which had come. It is worthy of note here that the so-called "wholesale department" was established for the sole purpose of giving relief in this situation, and to operate in institutions in liquidation only, and that the Members of Congress at the time recognized the advisability of this course by the enactment of subsection (1) of section 4 of the original act as an amendment which was approved April 27, 1934. This amendment confined the operations of the Corporation to applicants who were in default on the date of the original act, June 13, 1933, with three exceptions, and one of those exceptions was "in any case in which the home mortgage or other obligation or lien is held by an institution which is in liquidation." A careful study of the regulations of the Corporation clearly indicate an effort to confine this wholesale operation to institutions in liquidation, and beyond that, to confine it within the spirit of the act to applicants who were in distress with their mortgage debt. Some mistakes have been made in the operation of this department; but these mistakes were mistakes of the local agents in the field and were in violation of clear regulations of the Corporation and what appears to be the best efforts of the directors to confine this operation not only within the words of the act but within the spirit of the act. Some loans have been made through this department to persons with substantial salaries and incomes, but such loans were approved by local agents in violation of the regulation of the board of directors, and such mistakes are not materially different to similar mistakes which have been made in the regular channels by agents of the Corporation in the socalled "retail offices." As a whole, the wholesale department has been well conducted, and practically all of the loans made by it appear to have been in all respects eligible for refunding by the Corporation. There is no denial that mistakes have been made, but it appears clear that a bona fide effort has been made to administer the law as the Congress wrote it. Note should be taken also of the fact that the contention has been made that the wholesale department gave preference to parties who happened to be indebted to an institution in liquidation, and in individual cases this has been true, but the general result is that the individual who filed his application in the original office of the Corporation was served much more quickly because the wholesale department relieved that office of the large volume of business which was conducted by the wholesale department, and other applicants were therefore much more quickly reached.

In connection with the charge that loans have been made to persons not in distress, attention should be carefully called to the fact that the original statute did not restrict the operations of the Corporation to distress lending. The original statute guaranteed the interest only of the bonds of the Corporation, and the Congress apparently proceeded upon the theory that mortgagees would not accept the bonds except to avoid a foreclosure against an individual in distress. While the statute was in force in this form, it appears that many applications were received in cases where the mortgagee consented to take the bonds where the applicant was a person of some means or had substantial income, and some of these cases were closed. The amendment of April 27, 1934, for the first time limited the Corporation in its operation by statute and provided that loans were not to be made unless the applicant was in default on June 13, 1933, the date of the original act, with certain exceptions. It appears that prior to April 27, 1934, the Corporation made reasonable efforts to serve the most deserving cases, but that since April 27, 1934, extreme efforts have been made to prevent the making of loans to persons not within the words of the statute.

Second. Cases are presented where loans have been made to individuals with substantial salaries or substantial income or of substantial means. It is freely admitted that such loans have been made. Out of nearly a million loans which have been approved to date, a few dozen loans can be pointed out as improper because the applicant was not really in distress, but was really seeking 5-percent money on long terms. These mistakes were made by the regular offices of the Corporation as well as by the so-called "wholesale department", but they are extremely few compared to the whole number. Two or three Members of Congress secured relief from the Corporation, and they have what is considered a substantial salary, but in these and many other cases which have been so largely discussed, they are even themselves in many cases highly debatable as to whether or not they could qualify as a distressed home owner under the act. Every reasonable effort appears to have been made by the Corporation to take the applications in order or to approve only those which were eligible under the letter and spirit of the statute.

Third. Some States, of course, have secured more of this relief than other States, but the people of some States were very much more burdened with home-mortgage debt than the people of other States. No basis can be found for any charge of a preference for one State over another State. Very grave charges in this connection have been made by comparison of the lending operations in Ohio, where a greater amount has been loaned than in Pennsylvania, which probably has approximately the same mortgage debt. But the facts are that the Corporation has spent much more money in Pennsylvania in an effort to administer the statute than it has spent in Ohio. It has not had so wholesome and uniform a cooperation of the people of Pennsylvania as it has had from the people of Ohio. In spite of many obstacles in Pennsylvania, every effort appears to have been made to administer the statute fully in the State, and changes have been made to bring about a more effective administration in Pennsylvania. Indeed, as one studies the record of the Corporation, it is astounding that greater inequalities have not developed among the different States in the administration of this statute.

Fourth. I know how keenly all of us feel about the selection of employees in an agency of the Government such as this which comes so close to the people. It has, of course, been impossible to satisfy everybody in the selection of employees. The members of the board of directors and the executives of the Corporation have labored under such extreme pressure that at times some of us have thought that they did not give adequate consideration in matters of employment. Serious complaint has been made because men have been sent from one part of the country where they know conditions to another part of the country where it is claimed they do not know conditions. We and all of the people of the country must recognize that the development of this large staff of employees and their organization and the development of procedure for this Corporation was a difficult task, and in many instances, where executives and employees had been trained in the organization and procedure of the Corporation, it appeared, in the judgment of the board of directors, advisable to send such employees who had been trained in the work of the Corporation to points where difficulties had arisen, or to do specialized work where it was necessary. Mistakes have, of course, been made in the original selection of employees and in the transfer of employees, and unpleasantnesses have developed necessarily in this connection, but an ex parte investigation of these charges not only does not show probable cause for an investigation but clearly indicates that the board of directors have exercised the discretion vested in them by statute in good faith.

Fifth. When the Corporation was established, its appraisal procedure was one of the most vital questions confronting it. In many places there was no such thing as a clearly existing market value for houses, and a rule was promulgated to the effect that appraisals would be based upon (1) the appraiser's estimate of market value, (2) replacement cost less depreciation, and (3) a capitalization of the average rental value over the past 10 years. Equal weight was given to each of these three measures of value. The rules of the Corporation require, first, a preliminary appraisal by a paid employee of the Corporation; second, a detailed appraisal by an outside professional appraiser on a fee basis; and third, a review of these appraisals in the office; and fourth, a final Corporation appraisal based on all of this information and any other information in the file and made by principal executives in the State agencies. In the early months of the operation, appraisals were extremely irregular, some being too low and some too high, and every reasonable effort appears to have been made to adjust appraisals under the rules established by the Corporation, and this process required many changes in appraisal personnel. All of us, and everyone, admit that the problem of appraising more than a million individual homes scattered throughout 52 jurisdictions is a difficult problem, and that mistakes must necessarily result. The Corporation admits mistakes have been made. I have heard no complaint about the appraisal policy of the Corporation as indicated by its official regulations which I refer to above. Innumerable individual mistakes have been made in appraisal and the Corporation has provided for reappraisal and has provided finally for a loan review division in Washington, to which any person dissatisfied may appeal the case if dissatisfied with appraisal or any other action of the Corporation in connection with an application.

Sixth. The words of the statute confine eligible cases to bona fide home owners and to properties valued by the Corporation at not exceeding $20,000, and properties improved for not more than four families; but the spirit of the statute clearly indicates an intent on the part of the Congress to grant relief for the benefit of the individual urban home mortgage debtors. Pursuant to the spirit of the statute, the Corporation has undertaken to apply its resources to the relief of home owners in the most reasonable manner and has excluded properties which were preponderantly business properties, although the owner may reside in some part of it; and has excluded farm properties which were eligible for loans from Farm Credit Administration. It appears clear from the statute that it is intended that the Corporation will make loans which are to be paid back and that it is not a charitable enterprise and, therefore, the Corporation has excluded loans to individuals of bad character who have established a clear record of willful nonpayment of their debts, and has excluded loans to individuals who have no income present or prospective and, therefore, no possibility of ever paying the debt; and this latter course is pursued on the theory that no actual relief would be granted by the Corporation employing some of its resources to refund a debt which would necessarily still have to be foreclosed. The Corporation has made loans to many persons who have no present or prospective income where such persons are sheltering in the home members of the family or others who have earnings or income and who are willing to join in the homemortgage obligation to save the home for the applicant and themselves. Much complaint has arisen from the application of these tests of eligibility, but when analyzed, they appear to be clearly within the words and spirit of the law. and wholesome from a standpoint of the preservation of home ownership. Many mistakes have been made in the application of these rules and regulations, but an appeal is always provided to a loan review division in Washington and finally to the board of directors itself, although it is freely admitted that the board of directors cannot consider all of the individual applications or any large proportion of the same with its other necessary duties.

Seventh. I could enumerate many complaints of miscarriages in the case of individual applications. It would be useless to do so. It is apparent that this operation necessarily has resulted in mistakes, and mistakes are admitted on every hand, but machinery exists to correct these mistakes, and has been most carefully provided. These cases can still be remedied in many instances and will be remedied in most instances if all of us cooperate in this great undertaking.

After consideration of all of these matters, any fairminded person must come to the conclusion that vigorous efforts have been made to administer the statute according to its terms. While conditions have greatly improved, we still have a serious situation which threatens home ownership and the stability of our citizenship. It is essential that the Congress provide substantial additional relief in this field. One of the greatest difficulties which developed during the depression was the collapse of long-term mortgage financing. Home Owners' Loan Corporation has been one of the most effective agencies in the recovery program. It has not only served the home owners and saved the homes of nearly a million of our citizens from foreclosure, thereby saving that many families from being dispossessed and preserving their savings invested in the equities in these homes, but it has also contributed more than anything else toward recovery, and the possibilities for recovery in the heavy industries. It must be recognized that a great task still exists in refunding mortgages for home owners in distress, and that a great task confronts this Corporation in servicing the loans which it has acquired. It behooves all of us to cooperate in this endeavor which comes so close to the firesides of our people.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] has expired.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by setting forth a tabulated statement of figures showing the total applications received by the Corporation, the amount of money involved and the progress of these applications by States through to closed loans up to February 14, also a statement of the operations of the wholesale department through February 28, which indicates completion of these operations in all States except Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Michigan.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

The tabulated statement is as follows:

Summary of operations of Home Owners' Loan Corporation for week ending Feb. 14, 1935 (Prepared by: Division of Research and Statistics, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Washington, D. C., Feb. 20, 1935)

		Total	applications		Applicat	ions with	lrawn and	held for fu	rther cons	ideration	ION SERVIN		Prelimi	nary ap-	Fee ap	praisals	Delivered to legal re	ceived					Cumulativ	The same			Net ap-		completed	comp	leted	depar	tment
	State	Number Amount		During week	Total	Before prelim- inary ap- preisal	After preliminary appraisal	After fee ap- praisal	After review appraisal	After delivery to loan commis- sion	After delivery to legal depart- ment	plica- tions re- ceived 1	During week	Cumula- tive	During week	Cumula- tive	During week	Cumula- tive
1	Finited States					86, 849		86, 178	32, 876	76, 821	80, 448	1, 251, 106	207	1, 498, 077	636	1, 370, 947	3, 019	991, 108
2	United States  District no. 1		$5, 664, 991, 910 1, 481, 497, 452	5, 187 1, 765	488, 938 86, 333	10, 372	125, 766 33, 600	12, 785	6,811	10, 402	12, 363	217, 099	16	286, 913	26	228, 048	2, 176	157, 704
3	Region A	72, 290	298, 614, 041	297	23, 180	2,752	8,859	2,769	2, 391	3, 727	2, 682	49, 110	0	68, 343	0	56, 454	2	35, 977
4 5 6 7 8	Maine	7, 424 47, 031 3, 480 12, 047 2, 308	18, 796, 859 213, 991, 112 8, 940, 591 50, 557, 049 6, 328, 430	242 17 16 6 16	3, 005 14, 191 1, 419 3, 916 649	420 1, 513 371 381 67	564 6, 421 472 1, 256 146	1, 372 155 290 682 270	1, 618 0 773 0	3, 562 156 9	649 922 130 815 166	4, 419 32, 840 2, 061 8, 131 1, 659	0 0 0 0 0	6, 650 44, 834 3, 101 11, 527 2, 231	0 0 0 0 0	6, 012 36, 090 2, 535 9, 758 2, 059	0 0 1 0 1	3, 790 21, 719 1, 912 6, 922 1, 634
9	Region B	231, 142	1, 182, 883, 411	1,468	63, 153	7, 620	24, 741	10, 016	4, 420	6, 675	9, 681	167, 989	16	218, 570	26	171, 594	2, 174	121, 727
10 11 12	Connecticut	21, 473 75, 040 134, 629	104, 061, 548 388, 452, 304 690, 369, 559	303 668 497	8, 909 18, 275 35, 969	1, 469 1, 588 4, 563	1, 928 7, 665 15, 148	953 4, 298 4, 765	0 257 4, 163	3, 718 1, 539 1, 418	841 2, 928 5, 912	12, 564 56, 765 98, 660	0 0 16	19, 901 72, 301 126, 368	4 0 22	17, 327 53, 775 100, 492	2, 173	10, 833 36, 542 74, 352
13	District no. 2	363, 77	1, 299, 805, 142	1, 407	93, 838	13, 606	18, 183	14, 292	5, 591	17, 800	24, 366	269, 934	8	342, 308	29	304, 449	144	217, 688
14	Region A	159, 654	581, 051, 244	419	46, 220	8, 432	10, 895	3,771	1, 344	14, 161	7, 617	113, 434	6	148, 395	27	131, 248	15	89, 897
15 16 17 18 19	Delaware Dis rict of Columbia Maryland Pennsylvania Virginia	2, 552 4, 189 27, 765 106, 232 18, 916	8, 477, 095 26, 154, 020 83, 419, 977 405, 225, 846 57, 774, 306	4 0 65 334 16	727 2, 047 4, 514 33, 137 5, 795	361 680 1, 157 5, 086 1, 148	165 786 1, 226 6, 839 1, 879	65 0 409 2,873 424	16 0 302 883 143	22 556 665 11, 524 1, 394	98 25 755 5, 932 807	1, 825 2, 142 23, 251 73, 095 13, 121	(5) 5 0	1, 914 3, 506 25, 616 99, 796 17, 563	7 1 4 15 0	1, 745 2, 689 22, 226 89, 298 15, 290	0 0 0 15 0	16, 775 58, 392
20	Region B	204, 118	718, 753, 898	988	47, 618	5, 174	7, 288	10, 521	4, 247	3, 639	16, 749	156, 500	2	193, 913	2	173, 201	129	127, 791
21 22	Ohio	186, 742 17, 376	673, 565, 273 45, 188, 625	988	41, 813 5, 805	4, 049 1, 125	5, 903 1, 385	9, 278 1, 243	3, 493 754	3, 230 409	15, 860 889	144, 929 11, 571	1 1	177, 894 16, 019	2 0	159, 592 13, 609	93 36	118, 960 8, 831
23	District no. 3	241, 512	591, 060, 042	510	72, 905	11, 487	21, 080	14, 472	3, 506	10, 205	12, 155	168, 607	95	225, 341	305	196, 355	177	144, 673
24	Region A	99, 764	232, 402, 028	244	27, 801	3, 732	6, 924	6, 105	73	6, 703	4, 264	71, 963	29	93, 373	28	84, 343	30	62, 319
25 26 27 28 29	Alabama Florida Georgia North Carolina South Carolina	25, 795 22, 762 22, 005 20, 445 8, 757	57, 351, 332 51, 303, 034 50, 047, 657 53, 225, 975 20, 474, 030	45 29 33 112 25	5, 735 7, 374 5, 483 7, 110 2, 099	462 693 658 1, 631 288	1, 633 1, 888 1, 259 1, 666 478	1, 093 1, 453 503 2, 349 707	0 0 0 0 73	1,905 2,579 2,148 0 71	642 761 915 1,464 482	20, 060 15, 388 16, 522 13, 335 6, 658	(*) 14 0	24, 259 21, 935 20, 616 18, 317 8, 246	0 0 11 17 0	21, 749 19, 769 19, 064 16, 126 7, 635	0 0 26 4 0	16, 615 13, 813 14, 323 11, 979 5, 589
80	Region B	141, 748	358, 658, 014	266	45, 104	7, 755	14, 156	8, 367	3, 433	3, 502	7, 891	96, 644	€6	131, 968	277	112, 012	147	82, 354
31 32 33 34 35 36	Arkansas Kentucky Louisiana Mississippi Missouri Tennessee	18, 814 19, 625 22, 678 17, 341 41, 209 22, 081	30, 598, 566 51, 727, 765 65, 822, 673 29, 354, 001 131, 415, 507 49, 739, 502	75 16 74 27 (*)	6, 560 6, 603 6, 698 5, 986 13, 067 6, 190	399 1,150 874 1,136 3,593 603	2, 174 3, 435 1, 764 1, 946 2, 985 1, 852	871 1, 246 1, 192 746 3, 768 544	1, 059 56 114 146 340 1, 718	355 1 1,140 831 631 544	1,702 715 1,614 1,181 1,750 929	12, 254 13, 022 15, 980 11, 355 28, 142 15, 891	0 0 22 6 5 33	18, 326 18, 118 21, 482 15, 786 37, 065 21, 191	1 0 71 4 201 0	15, 603 12, 702 18, 932 13, 135 33, 265 18, 375	0 0 145 1 0	11, 888 9, 789 13, 708 9, 127 24, 153 13, 689
87	District no. 4	379, 217	1, 224, 460, 041	304	118, 101	31, 347	14, 425	24, 682	6, 051	26, 505	15, 091	261, 116	35	224, 110	99	286, 620	495	201, 153
38	Region A	158, 709	639, 671, 660	107	57, 841	11,724	10, 141	8, 600	4, 023	16, 317	7, 036	100, 868	26	144, 134	30	129, 067	240	85, 621
39 40	Illinois Wisconsin	107, 213 51, 496	436, 203, 057 203, 468, 603	(5)	42, 219 15, 622	9, 875 1, 849	5, 457 4, 684	5, 822 2, 778	4, 023 0	11, 604 4, 713	5, 438 1, 598	64, 994 35, 874	19 7	95, 209 48, 925	26 4	86, 346 42, 721	210 30	55, 498 30, 123
41	Region B	220, 508	584, 788, 381	197	60, 260	19, 623	4, 284	16, 082	2, 028	10, 188	8, 055	160, 248	9	79, 976	69	157, 553	255	115, 532
42	Indiana Michigan	79, 834 140, 674	196, 357, 272 388, 431, 109	88 109	20, 625 39, 635	9, 154 10, 469	2, 310 1, 974	2, 536 13, 546	431 1,597	3, 146 7, 042	3, 048 5, 007	59, 209 101, 039	8	63, 003 16, 973	8 61	58, 731 98, 822	103 152	48, 010 67, 522

[See footnotes at end of table]

Summary of operations of Home Owners' Loan Corporation for week ending, Feb. 11, 1935—Continued [Prepared by Division of Research and Statistics, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Washington, D. C., Feb. 20, 1935]—Continued

		Total a	applications		Applicat	ions withd	lrawn and	held for fu	rther cons	ideration			Prelimi	nary ap-	Fee appraisals		Delivered to legal
18	The Man transfer of the	rec	eived		Cumulative							Net applica-	praisals completed		comp	oleted	depar	tment
The State of the S	State	Number	Amount 2	During week	Total	Before prelim- inary ap- praisal	After preliminary appraisal	After fee appraisal	After review appraisal	After delivery to loan commis- sion	After delivery to legal department	tions re- ceived 1	During week	Cumula- tive	During week	Cumula- tive	During week	Cumula- tive
44	District no. 5	260, 606	$569, 988, 333	633	66, 722	12, 214	21, 410	10, 120	7, 893	7, 639	7, 446	193, 884	52	240, 696	164	205, 574	12	159,000
45	Region A	145, 244	305, 640, 308	446	33, 567	5, 801	7,872	6, 027	4, 463	5, 965	3, 439	111, 677	52	134, 333	161	117, 832	5	88, 853
46 47 48 49 50 51 52	Colorado	29, 738 32, 980 18, 692	39, 011, 894 60, 838, 576 53, 109, 719 82, 184, 829 39, 912, 903 14, 628, 787 15, 953, 600	5 61 118 218 44 (5) (4)	5, 476 6, 219 6, 495 8, 152 3, 112 1, 801 2, 312	839 1,006 1,022 1,205 625 387 717	2, 471 1, 652 898 1, 262 398 578 613	1, 255 1, 586 1, 373 242 971 520 80	473 248 0 3, 181 528 33 0	116 876 2, 204 1, 838 346 55 530	322 851 998 424 244 228 372	12, 876 23, 490 23, 243 24, 828 15, 580 5, 200 6, 460	0 50 1 1 1 0 0	17, 262 27, 395 27, 688 30, 605 17, 394 6, 296 7, 693	0 161 () 0 0 0	14, 265 23, 999 23, 429 27, 519 16, 730 5, 047 6, 843	() 2 0 0 0	11, 074 18, 342 17, 958 19, 076 12, 484 4, 114 5, 805
53	Region B	115, 362	264, 348, 025	187	33, 155	6, 413	13, 538	4, 093	3, 430	1,674	4, 107	82, 207	0	106, 363	3	87,742	7	70, 155
54 55 56	New MexicoOklahomaTexas—State	37,610	9, 110, 826 84, 664, 057 170, 573, 142	31 31 125	1, 549 10, 836 20, 770	625 3, 657 2, 131	557 3, 293 9, 688	282 159 3, 652	2,315 1,109	7 441 1, 226	72 971 2, 964	2, 895 26, 774 52, 538	0 0 0	3, 533 32, 522 70, 308	1 0 2	2, 768 27, 959 57, 015	6 0 1	2, 230 24, 028 43, 897
57 58 59	Dallas Houston San Antonio	31, 123 19, 371 22, 814	68, 483, 726 48, 333, 089 53, 756, 327	(s) 87 38	10, 004 5, 755 5, 011	1, 208 581 342	5, 466 2, 244 1, 978	1, 434 1, 378 840	351 267 491	840 50 336	705 1, 235 1, 024	21, 119 13, 616 17, 803	(a) 0	29, 529 18, 572 22, 207	(s) 0 2	22, 272 14, 991 19, 752	0 1 0	17, 315 11, 458 15, 124
60	District no. 6	191, 337	497, 711, 744	568	51, 039	7,823	17,068	9, 827	3, 024	4, 270	9, 027	140, 298	1	178, 709	13	149, 901	15	110, 882
61 62 63 64 65 66 67 68 69 70	Arizona	93, 911 6, 127 6, 723 1, 642 16, 088 14, 380	23, 416, 800 290, 534, 364 9, 900, 382 12, 745, 617 4, 567, 270 35, 587, 398 34, 146, 242 74, 032, 750 7, 573, 070 5, 207, 851	16 384 3. 9 1 56 58 0 9	1, 601 28, 533 667 2, 181 388 4, 213 1, 834 9, 681 952 989	10 3, 031 68 905 162 472 691 1, 138 268 678	6 8 8,777 369 591 39 1,505 393 4,189 432 165	0 5, 986 99 226 71 975 481 1, 756 87 146	0 1, 456 18 0 42 676 17 783 32 0	2,830 5 258 12 110 1 601 23 0	153 6, 453 108 201 62 475 251 1, 214 110 0	7, 370 65, 378 5, 460 4, 542 1, 254 11, 875 12, 546 28, 692 2, 691 490	(5) 0 0 0 0 0 1 1 0 0	8, 330 88, 616 5, 832 5, 479 1, 433 15, 093 13, 267 26, 557 3, 310 792	(5) 0 0 0 0 0 13 0 0	7, 069 74, 876 4, 860 4, 581 1, 389 12, 145 12, 175 29, 404 2, 798 604	0 0 0 0 0 0 0 15 0 0	6, 298 53, 994 4, 133 3, 576 1, 227 8, 473 10, 178 20, 056 2, 556 391
71	Puerto Rico	168	469, 156	0								168

Summary of operations of Home Owners' Loan Corporation for week ending Feb. 14, 1935
(Prepared by Division of Research and Statistics, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Washington, D. C., Feb. 20, 1935)

MILIN													r in L	oans closed
		examiners ceived		Delivered to loan closers Applications pending			Number (refinancing)			Amo	unt (refinancing reconditioning)	Total loan papers re- ceived in Washing-	Com- pleted loan files in Wash-
State	During week	Cumula- tive	During week	Cumula- tive	During week	Cumula- tive	Total	Before delivery to legal depart- ment	After delivery to legal depart- ment	During week	Cumula- tive	Percent, net ap- plica- tions	During week	Cumulative	Per loan	Washing- ton and regional offices <sup>3</sup>	in wash- ington and re- gional offices
		18	19	20	21	22	23	24	25	26	27	28	29	30	31	32	33	34
	United States	2, 842	985, 800	3, 378	965, 188	5, 082	842, 280	450, 815	340, 446	110, 369	8, 453	800, 291	64. 0	$24, 236, 479	$2, 418, 908, 885	$3,020	787, 771	701, 265
1	District no. 1	1, 911	157, 431	889	154, 637	344	137, 668	81, 040	71, 758	9, 282	821	136, 059	62. 7	3, 166, 754	650, 233, 595	4, 779	133, 965	117, 667
	Region A	2	35, 976	7	35, 958	87	32, 060	17,602	15, 815	1, 787	321	31, 508	64. 2	1, 290, 538	126, 374, 078	4, 011	31, 363	29, 798
2	Maine Massachusetts	0		0 2	3, 788 21, 710	8 64	2, 773 20, 410	1,717 12,875	1, 278 12, 043	439 832	21 274	2, 702 19, 965	61. 1 60. 8	35, 801 1, 161, 347	6, 286, 110 89, 036, 799	2, 326 4, 460	2, 696 19, 836	2, 696 18, 284

Proposed   1.5	6 7 8	New Hampshire	0 1	1, 912 6, 921 1, 634	3 0 2	1, 908 6, 921 1, 631	2 13 (5)	1, 769 5, 688 1, 420	300 2, 466 244	279 2, 024 191	21 442 53	3 20 3	1, 761 5, 665 1, 415	85. 4 69. 7 85. 3	6, 162   78, 104   9, 124	4, 268, 604 23, 008, 853 3, 773, 712	2, 424 4, 062 2, 667	1,779   5,634   1,418	1,779 5,634 1,405
Commerciation	9		1, 909	A CONTRACTOR OF THE PARTY OF TH	882	To be a second		And Condesi.	100		1000		A RESIDENCE OF THE SECOND	1530000	No. of the last of		10000000		87, 869
Topic   Columbia   C	I 10 11 12	Connecticut	1 0	10, 831 36, 542	101	10, 831 35, 581	5 52	9, 892 31, 878	2, 672 24, 991	2, 572 23, 151	100 1,840	6 155	9, 892 31, 774	78. 7 56. 0	30, 051 745, 945	43, 192, 498 155, 011, 734	4, 363 4, 879	31, 456	9, 311 26, 863
Delawase	13	District no. 2	192	217, 167	718	208, 598	2, 059	162, 573	128, 408	76, 612	51, 796	2, 451	141, 526	52. 4	7, 121, 026	428, 959, 173	3, 031	140, 951	123, 999
Permitsylvania		Region A	64	89, 377	475	87, 129	1, 181	74, 182	47, 840	31, 154	16, 686	1, 303	65, 594	57.8	3, 720, 581
Page   12   12   12   13   14   15   15   15   15   15   15   15	8 16 17 18	Pennsylvania	48	1, 959 15, 595 58, 053	0 37	1, 959 15, 253 56, 172	1,037	1, 881 13, 159 47, 209	281 10, 288 33, 846	208 8, 231 20, 635	2, 057 13, 211	1,031	1, 861 12, 963 39, 249	86. 9 55. 8 53. 7	99, 318 292, 135 2, 920, 040	10, 865, 736 37, 691, 787 113, 868, 424	5, 832 2, 908 2, 901	1, 836 12, 924 37, 979	1, 281 11, 498 25, 296
Chiese		Virginia	2	-	7	-			-	-
Region A	21	Ohio		118, 960	240	112, 681	839	80, 811	76, 304	41,829	34, 475	1,015	68, 625	47.4	3, 114, 896	211, 313, 202	3, 079	68, 579	68, 579
Alabama	23	District no. 3	157	144, 546	191	143, 735	410	128, 029	44, 190	36, 089	8, 101	776	124, 417	73. 8	1, 645, 866	307, 098, 035	2, 460	123, 201	116, 910
Caperglanger   Cape				Market Adams						Printed Control of the Control		100000000000000000000000000000000000000	Market Street Control	The second second	THE RESERVE OF THE PERSON NAMED IN			March Street Street
Arkansas.   1   1, 851   14   1,760   40   9,418   5,031   2,008   963   64   9,233   7,53   96,490   16,048.84   1,700   7,691   7,69	26 27 28	Florida Georgia North Carolina	0 26 4	13, 813 14, 317 11, 979	17 10 2	13, 582 14, 293 11, 976	24 25 5	12, 813 13, 282 10, 486	2,880 3,363 3,002	2,336 3,114 2,820	544 249 182	70 55 46	12, 508 13, 159 10, 333	81. 3 79. 6 77. 5	124, 056 135, 590 95, 923	28, 521, 908 29, 830, 484 26, 479, 078	2, 220 2, 563	12, 489 13, 159 10, 301	12, 632 10, 056
124   13,605   112   13,675   53   11,606   4,344   3,886   458   80   11,606   72,8   135,042   33,207,133   2,640   11,230   10,143   12,314   13,605   12,314   13,605   12,314   13,605   12,314   13,605   12,314   13,605   13,607,133   13,607   13,605   13,607,133   13,607   1	30		127	82, 233	162	81, 819	230		26, 119		3, 938	419	70, 525	73. 0	920, 591		2, 566	68, 509
Bistrict no. 4	32 33 34 35	Louisiana Mississippi Missouri	0 124 1	9, 748 13, 665 9, 127 24, 153	33 112 1 0	9, 625 13, 579 9, 112 24, 153	53 31	7, 790	5, 026 4, 344 3, 747 6, 134	3, 948 3, 886 3, 409	1, 078 458 338 395	71 80 29 121	7, 996 11, 636 7, 608 22, 008	61. 4 72. 8 67. 0 78. 2	174, 762 155, 042 53, 967 282, 079	22, 305, 004 33, 287, 133 14, 077, 881	2, 790 2, 849 1, 850 3, 082	7, 651 11, 220 7, 448 21, 382	10, 067 7, 448 21, 277
Billinois   188   55, 435   199   55, 835   190   15, 835   206   40, 278   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   14, 924   18, 763   18, 924   18, 763   18, 924   18, 763   18, 924   18, 763   18, 924   18, 763   18, 924   18, 763   18, 924   18, 763   18, 924   18, 763   18, 924   18, 763   18, 924   18, 763   18, 924   18, 763   18, 924	87	District no. 4	459	199, 751	839	195, 161	1, 033		94, 701		19, 647	2, 626	166, 415	63. 7	8, 353, 518		3, 103	160,006	136, 072
Billinois   183   55, 435   190   55, 835   120   69, 278   18, 763   14, 924   190   254   28, 677   74.1   3, 844, 851   179, 879, 415   3, 91   42, 790   220, 632   43, 777   41, 855, 778   41, 855, 778   42, 855, 778   42, 855, 778   43, 855, 778   43, 855, 778   44, 855, 455, 778   44, 855, 455, 778   44, 855, 455, 778   44, 855, 455, 778   44, 855, 455, 77	38	Region A	213	85, 472	222	85, 028	350	76, 697	28, 061	22, 283	5, 778	1, 213	72, 807	72.2	4, 700, 629	273, 582, 397	3, 753
1		Illinois Wisconsin	183 30	55, 435 30, 037		55, 385 29, 643	236 114	49, 278 27, 419	18, 763 9, 298	14, 934 7, 349	3, 829 1, 949	959 254	46, 231 26, 576	71. 1 74. 1	3, 844, 831 855, 798	179, 879, 415 93, 702, 982	3, 891 3, 516	42, 799 25, 365	29, 939 21, 787
District no. 5.   To   158,053   139   157,327   570   146,353   52,217   42,322   9,895   920   141,667   73.1   1,876,119   304,755,424   2,151   138,011   126,700   45   Region A.   64   87,911   71   87,854   249   82,070   31,831   26,283   5,568   493   79,546   71.5   972,196   161,627,634   2,024   77,672   72,239   46   Colorado.   0   11,067   9   11,024   20   10,669   2,463   2,596   233   88   10,415   80.9   172,733   30,453,100   1,851   1,8				THE RESERVE AND ADDRESS OF THE PARTY OF THE
45 Region A 64 87, 911 71 87, 554 240 82, 070 31, 831 26, 263 5, 568 493 79, 846 71.5 972, 196 161, 627, 634 2, 024 77, 672 72, 239 46 Colorado. 0 11, 1067 9 11, 024 20 10, 598 2, 463 2, 124 339 88 10, 413 80.9 173, 278 20, 453, 170 1, 964 10, 167 8, 179 11 10, 601 8, 182, 199 11, 024 10, 601 8, 132 5, 990 2, 133 114 115, 358 66.4 227, 03 30, 229, 960 1, 1988 15, 001 14, 604 84 Kansas. 568 17, 283 (7) 17, 148 23 10, 603 7, 461 6, 283 1, 188 10, 413 80.9 173, 278 20, 453, 170 1, 964 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 8, 179 10, 167 10, 167 8, 179 10,	43	Michigan				64, 529	532	57, 124	45, 869		7, 345	853	55, 170	54. 6	2, 495, 910	156, 209, 413	2, 831	54, 284	50, 770
Colorado	44	District no. 5	70	158, 053	139	157, 327	570	146, 353	52, 217	42, 322	9, 895	920	141, 667	73. 1	1, 876, 119	304, 755, 424	2, 151	138, 011	126, 700
Towa.   3   18, 340   32   18, 279   111   16, 601   8, 132   5, 999   2, 133   114   15, 388   65, 4   221, 703   30, 629, 950   1, 988   15, 901   14, 604   14, 608   17, 451   15, 608   17, 451   17, 615   17, 6		Region A.		THE RESERVE AND ADDRESS OF THE PERSON NAMED IN	-	The second secon		THE RESERVE AND ADDRESS OF THE PERSON NAMED IN COLUMN 2 IN COLUMN		THE RESERVE THE PERSON NAMED IN	THE RESERVE THE PERSON NAMED IN	The second second
61         North Dakota         0         4,109         1         4,108         1         3,850         1,384         1,314         70         10         3,816         73,4         15,240         7,965,126         2,087         3,805         3,745           53         Region B         6         70,142         08         69,773         321         64,283         20,386         16,069         4,327         427         61,821         75,2         903,923         143,127,790         2,314         60,339         54,461           54         New Mexico         6         2,219         2         2,162         4         2,016         879         737         142         4         2,016         69,6         8,555         4,255,160         2,090         2,010         1,879         65         60,27,71         1,832         3,717         615         1,56         62,442         8,855         4,255,160         2,990         2,010         1,879         65         1,832         3,717         615         1,56         62,442         83,80         304,449         51,303,956         2,286         22,345         19,333         34,347         83,84         3,417         60         1,832         3,717         615	47 48 49	Iowa Kansas Minnesota	3 56 2	18, 340 17, 283 19, 053 12, 254	(5) 32	18, 279 17, 148 19, 028	111 23 50	16, 601 16, 081 18, 234	8, 132 7, 451 6, 850 4, 370	5, 999 6, 283 6, 176	2, 133 1, 168 674	114 139 77	15, 358 15, 792 17, 978	65. 4 67. 9 72. 4	221, 703 271, 266 178, 176	30, 529, 950 28, 583, 643 41, 514, 156	1, 988 1, 810 2, 309	15, 091 15, 238 16, 984 11, 171	14, 694 15, 108 14, 621 10, 675
53         Region B         6         70,142         08         69,773         321         64,283         20,386         16,069         4,327         427         61,821         75,2         903,923         143,127,790         2,314         60,339         54,461           54         New Mexico.         6         2,219         2         2,162         4         2,016         879         737         142         4         2,016         69,6         8,555         4,255,160         2,290         2,910         1,879           55         Oklahoma.         0         24,022         60         22,761         4,332         3,717         615         156         22,442         83.8         304,149         51,303,956         2,256         23,345         19,185           56         43,895         56         43,899         257         39,506         15,175         11,605         3,570         267         37,363         71.1         591,219         87,568,674         2,344         35,964         33,447           57         Dallas         0         17,456         9         11,362         17         9,900         3,735         3,833         342         30         9,817         2,4	51	North Dakota		4, 109 5, 805	1 12	4, 108	1	3, 850 5, 351	1, 384	1,314	70		3, 816 5, 279	73.4	15, 240		2, 087	3, 805 5, 226	3, 745 5, 217
64         New Mexico         6         2,219         2         2,162         4         2,016         879         737         142         4         2,016         69,6         8,555         4,255,169         2,092         2,010         1,879           65         Oklahoma         0         24,028         10         24,022         60         22,761         4,332         3,717         615         156         22,442         88.8         304,149         51,303,956         2,286         22,301         1,879           66         District no.         0         43,895         56         43,589         257         39,506         15,175         11,605         3,670         267         37,363         71.1         591,199         87,568,674         2,344         35,984         33,447           57         Dallas         0         17,315         13         17,209         41         16,344         5,400         4,509         891         142         15,719         74.4         316,088         33,949,708         2,160	53	Region B	6	70, 142	68	69, 773	321	64, 283	20, 386	16, 059	4, 327	427	61, 821	75. 2	903, 923	143, 127, 790	2, 314	60, 339
B7 Dallas 0 17, 315 13 17, 209 41 16, 344 5, 400 4, 509 891 142 15, 719 74. 4 316, 888 33, 949, 708 2, 160 11, 456 9 11, 362 17 9, 900 3, 735 3, 893 342 30 9, 881 72. 6 48, 883 25, 704, 936 2, 61	54 55 86	New Mexico	0	24, 028	10	24, 022	60	22, 761	4, 332	3, 717	615	156 267	22, 442	83. 8	304, 149	51, 303, 956	2, 090 2, 286 2, 344	22, 345	19, 135
61 Arizona 0 6, 224 7 6, 086 27 5, 771 1, 642 1, 225 417 35 5, 728 77. 7 79, 509 14, 023, 033 2, 448 5, 745 4, 799 62 California 30 52, 074 534 49, 503 412 42, 102 25, 501 17, 837 7, 664 565 39, 877 61. 0 1, 458, 652 107, 862, 239 2, 705 41, 981 35, 524 63 16aho. 5 4, 113 17 4, 041 66 3, 305 2, 233 1, 435 888 71 3, 137 57. 5 123, 625 5, 443, 901 1, 726 2, 824 2, 595 40, 400 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 1	58	Dallas Houston San Antonio		11, 456	9	11, 362	41 17 199	9,900	3, 735	3, 393	342	30	9, 881	72.6	316, 088 48, 583 226, 548	25, 704, 036	2, 601
62 California 30 52,074 534 49,303 412 42,102 25,501 17,837 7,604 505 39,877 61.0 1,488,632 107,802,339 2,705 41,981 35,524 64 Montana 0 3,576 3 3,566 20 3,107 1,566 1,167 399 15 2,976 65.5 30,402 5,907,429 1,980 3,100 3,100 65 Nevada 0 1,227 0 1,224 3 1,148 109 89 20 3 1,145 91.3 5,681 3,109,82 2,712 1,197 1,154 66 Orgon 1 1 8,473 0 8,465 15 7,843 4,099 3,877 222 37 7,776 65.5 67,934 15,159,707 1,199 7,870 7,350 67 Utah 17 10,162 33 10,066 107 8,928 3,731 2,619 1,112 119 8,815 70.3 272,307 21,028,951 2,385 8,800 5,805 68 Washington 0 20,056 0 19,943 0 18,340 10,538 9,850 688 0 18,154 63.3 0 32,832,104 1,809 17,755 17,707 69 Wyoming 0 2,556 8 2,445 15 2,259 471 245 226 13 2,220 82,6 33,227 4,995,254 2,246 2,208 17,554 129	1000		- Committee of the Comm	WHEN PERSON AND PROPERTY AND PARTY.	602	Personal State of the Control of the	The second second		Married Street, Square, Square		11, 648			The state of the s					79, 917
67 Utah	62 63 64 65 66	California Idaho Montana Nevada	30 5 0 0 1	52, 074 4, 113 3, 576 1, 227 8, 473	17 3 0 0	49, 503 4, 041 3, 566 1, 224 8, 465	412 66 20 3 15	42, 102 3, 305 3, 107 1, 148 7, 843	25, 501 2, 323 1, 566 109 4, 099	17, 837 1, 435 1, 167 89 3, 877	888 399 20 222	565 71 15 3 37	39, 877 3, 137 2, 976 1, 145 7, 776	61, 0 57, 5 65, 5 91, 3 65, 5	1, 458, 652 123, 525 30, 402 5, 681 67, 934	107, 862, 239 5, 443, 901 5, 907, 429 3, 110, 982 15, 159, 707	2, 705 1, 726 1, 980 2, 712 1, 949	41, 981 2, 824 3, 100 1, 197 7, 870	35, 524 2, 595 3, 100 1, 154 7, 350
	67 68 69	Utah Washington Wyoming.	0	10, 162 20, 056 2, 556		19, 943 2, 445	0	8, 928 18, 340 2, 259	10, 538 471	9, 850 245	688 226	0	18, 154 2, 220	63. 3 82. 6	33, 227	32, 832, 104 4, 995, 254	1,809 2,246	8, 800 17, 755 2, 208	17, 707 1, 754
	71								168	168	0

[See footnotes at end of table]

National summary of wholesale operations	of Home Owner	s' Loan Corporation through	Thursday, Feb. 28, 1935
[Prepared by Division of Research and	Statistics, Feder	ral Home Loan Bank Board	, Washington, D. C.
	-

					Applicati	ons finally re-				Appraisals	completed
State	Name of representative	Number of insti- tutions	Applic	cations filed	jected o	r withdrawn	Net a	pplications	I KA	First	s	econd
			Number	Amount	Number	Amount	Number	Amount	Number	Amount	Number	Amount
United States		6, 139	201, 755	$660, 564, 039	53, 293	$199, 786, 877	148, 462	$460, 777, 162	194, 682	$644, 327, 260	191, 038	$628, 035, 931
District no. 1		481	13, 685	64, 662, 796	3, 826	20, 456, 390	9, 859	44, 206, 406	13, 370	68, 928, 974	12, 992	66, 831, 399
Massachusetts	Completed	32	2, 121 1, 968 1, 914 472 4, 122 2, 173 123 792	10, 557, 528 5, 598, 597 9, 481, 976 736, 220 24, 152, 812 11, 388, 950 544, 199 2, 202, 514	394 789 583 101 1, 250 460 38 211	2, 375, 725 2, 669, 641 3, 007, 251 184, 752 8, 788, 879 2, 650, 776 191, 881 587, 485	1, 727 1, 179 1, 331 371 2, 872 1, 713 85 581	8, 181, 803 2, 928, 956 6, 474, 725 551, 468 15, 363, 933 8, 738, 174 352, 318 1, 615, 029	2, 084 1, 939 1, 908 409 4, 019 2, 114 123 774	10, 402, 188 5, 515, 340 9, 443, 251 725, 022 27, 201, 181 12, 315, 559 544, 199 2, 782, 234	1, 991 1, 847 1, 908 408 3, 889 2, 086 120 743	9, 846, 747 5, 190, 699 9, 443, 251 731, 556 26, 045, 401 12, 158, 911 530, 709 2, 884, 126
District no. 2		1, 269	79, 900	286, 519, 737	19, 819	77, 970, 105	60, 081	208, 549, 632	77, 845	278, 812, 843	76,052	271, 522, 78
Maryland Ohio Pennsylvania Virginia	Completed	52 299 652 78	407 1, 662 58, 179 16, 674 782 2, 19	2, 319, 900 5, 418, 684 208, 224, 216 62, 434, 026 2, 559, 652 5, 563, 259	162 363 13, 653 4, 982 150 509	923, 400 1, 256, 239 50, 494, 346 23, 249, 48 528, 867 1, 517, 605	245 1, 299 44, 526 11, 692 632 1, 687	1, 396, 500 4, 162, 445 157, 729, 870 39, 184, 378 2, 030, 785 4, 045, 654	378 1, 620 57, 084 15, 794 773 2, 196	2, 154, 600 5, 255, 918 203, 949, 109 59, 377, 308 2, 512, 649 5, 563, 259	323 1, 514 56, 129 15, 136 754 2, 196	1, 841, 100 4, 870, 196 200, 479, 150 56, 303, 407 2, 465, 675 5, 563, 259
District no. 3	······································	1, 436	26, 150	69, 348, 156	6, 481	18, 226, 857	19, 669	51, 121, 299	25, 483	68, 941, 946	24, 825	66, 356, 084
Arkansas Florida Georgia Kentucky Lonislana Mississippi Missouri North Carolina South Carolina	Completed	186 104 61 128 147 86 241 206 81	999 3, 706 1, 200 1, 357 1, 388 7, 584 2, 108 3, 071 1, 744 558 2, 435	2, 205, 864 6, 947, 884 2, 502, 394 2, 481, 607 3, 590, 560 25, 567, 007 3, 467, 732 9, 961, 111 5, 298, 063 1, 410, 846 5, 915, 088	284 589 339 335 463 1,919 674 525 636 120 597	566, 976 1, 003, 152 663, 469 709, 333 1, 288, 871 6, 981, 708 1, 085, 389 1, 790, 074 2, 162, 588 304, 078 1, 671, 219	715 3, 117 861 1, 022 925 5, 685 1, 434 2, 546 1, 108 438 1, 838	1, 638, 888 5, 944, 732 1, 838, 925 1, 772, 274 2, 301, 689 18, 585, 299 2, 382, 343 8, 171, 037 3, 135, 475 1, 106, 768 4, 243, 869	999 3, 641 1, 110 1, 286 1, 293 7, 574 1, 929 3, 022 1, 647 557 2, 425	2, 205, 864 6, 883, 648 2, 330, 430 2, 366, 427 3, 354, 607 25, 540, 204 3, 181, 587 9, 806, 476 5, 986, 200 1, 410, 675 5, 869, 828	989 3, 569 1, 067 1, 257 1, 170 7, 516 1, 869 2, 891 1, 571 548 2, 378	2, 183, 401 6, 812, 513 2, 223, 500 2, 307, 001 2, 979, 600 25, 379, 459 3, 091, 346 9, 391, 009 4, 736, 026 1, 394, 314 5, 857, 648
District no. 4		1, 290	61, 321	192, 438, 427	18, 580	70, 207, 255	42, 741	122, 231, 172	57, 822	182, 771, 420	57, 196	179, 423, 490
Michigan	Completeddo	811	3, 941 10, 073 45, 898 1, 409	17, 002, 126 22, 226, 165 148, 953, 059 4, 257, 077	1, 301 1, 327 15, 599 353	7, 163, 553 3, 188, 170 58, 543, 693 1, 311, 839	2, 640 8, 746 30, 299 1, 056	9, 838, 573 19, 037, 995 90, 409, 366 2, 945, 238	3, 923 9, 581 42, 918 1, 400	18, 621, 069 21, 034, 037 138, 908, 945 4, 207, 369	3, 793 9, 581 42, 457 1, 365	17, 280, 965 21, 034, 037 137, 033, 694 4, 074, 794
District no. 5		1, 228	10, 366	23, 167, 433	2, 037	5, 240, 669	8, 329	17, 926, 764	10, 190	21, 620, 024	10,000	20, 653, 45
Kansas Minnesota Nebraska	Completed	340 71	2, 081 3, 807 142 1, 523 306 87 134 1, 223 234 829	4, 363, 538 8, 557, 161 282, 275 3, 016, 669 287, 536 179, 892 3, 375, 070 453, 479 2, 044, 226	547 505 38 517 40 33 36 106 53 162	1, 139, 566 1, 617, 331 85, 756 1, 249, 902 104, 225 122, 525 39, 386 333, 395 95, 525 453, 058	1, 534 3, 302 104 1, 006 206 54 98 1, 117 181 667	3, 223, 972 6, 939, 830 196, 519 1, 766, 785 503, 344 165, 011 140, 506 3, 041, 675 357, 954 1, 591, 168	2, 081 3, 786 142 1, 426 267 80 125 1, 221 233 829	4, 363, 538 8, 485, 369 282, 275 1, 813, 250 379, 566 258, 136 169, 909 3, 371, 986 451, 679 2, 044, 226	2, 039 3, 737 142 1, 332 293 71 121 1, 203 233 829	4, 275, 803 8, 352, 226 282, 275 659, 836 883, 866 224, 363 165, 528 3, 313, 649 451, 679 2, 044, 226
		100000000000000000000000000000000000000	10, 333	24, 427, 490	2, 550	7, 685, 601	7, 783	16, 741, 889	9, 972	23, 252, 053	9, 973	23, 248, 72
Montana	Completed	59 17 66 28 54	3, 412 75 172 393 1, 716 841 2, 760 389	1, 161, 206 10, 006, 223 118, 668 292, 306 1, 010, 754 3, 337, 879 1, 848, 471 5, 836, 487 815, 496	149 1, 202 16 21 64 426 75 501 96	375, 528 3, 952, 430 26, 412 28, 402 178, 180 991, 502 210, 634 1, 694, 209 228, 304	426 2, 210 59 151 329 1, 290 766 2, 259 293	785, 678 6, 053, 793 92, 256 263, 904 832, 574 2, 346, 377 1, 637, 837 4, 142, 278 587, 192	543 3, 195 75 168 380 1, 716 840 2, 682 373	1, 059, 693 9, 309, 835 118, 668 279, 280 967, 547 3, 337, 879 1, 847, 971 5, 562, 985 768, 195	3, 299 71 165 375 1, 716 828 2, 674 334	1, 005, 752 9, 573, 755 110, 561 265, 804 959, 291 3, 337, 879 1, 822, 557 5, 507, 571 665, 550

		Applica	tions approved to v	d by loan c	ommittee as	Applica	tions sent to	Loans disbursed
State	Name of representative	With reduction		Without reduction		attorneys		Loans			of net ap-
		Number	Amount	Number	Amount	Number	Amount	Number	Amount	Feb. 28	Feb. 22
United States		41, 349	$141, 204, 801	121, 103	$334, 602, 436	158, 660	$459, 412, 708	133, 565	$378, 522, 585	90.0	89. 7
District no. 1		3, 068	16, 920, 090	7,799	32, 797, 172	10, 684	48, 814, 218	9, 859	43, 574, 827	100.0	99. 0
Massachusetts New Hampshire New Jersey New York		281 669 35 905 283 19	4, 397, 498 901, 866 3, 790, 212 129, 228 5, 597, 845 1, 396, 406 102, 882 604, 153	1, 263 898 722 348 2, 469 1, 643 74 382	5, 107, 086 1, 649, 179 3, 122, 715 564, 929 12, 896, 394 8, 213, 486 287, 764 955, 619	1,830 1,179 1,331 383 3,374 1,913 93 581	8, 709, 207 2, 551, 045 6, 912, 927 694, 157 18, 448, 522 9, 547, 942 390, 646 1, 559, 772	1, 727 1, 179 1, 331 371 2, 872 1, 713 85 581	7, 627, 729 2, 692, 291 6, 912, 927 670, 623 15, 000, 040 8, 791, 786 360, 207 1, 519, 244	100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0	100.0 100.0 100.0 100.0 100.0 94.8 100.0
District No. 2		5, 796	23, 249, 653	59, 704	176, 564, 860	64, 782	197, 534, 362	48, 630	146, 543, 591	80. 94	80.9
District of Columbia Maryland Ohio Pennsylvania Virginia West Virginia	Lichlyter Bauehman (SM)	5,004	421, 800 657, 176 20, 355, 379 617, 816 1, 197, 482	171 1, 175 48, 023 7, 972 516 1, 847	974, 700 3, 522, 559 143, 824, 078 22, 404, 149 1, 473, 597 4, 365, 777	248 1, 437 48, 023 12, 174 704 2, 196	1, 413, 600 4, 529, 794 143, 824, 078 40, 112, 218 2, 091, 413 5, 563, 259	245 1, 299 35, 084 9, 683 632 1, 687	1, 387, 075 4, 093, 106 105, 522, 898 29, 488, 511 2, 006, 345 4, 045, 656	100. 0 100. 0 78. 8 82. 8 100. 0 100. 0	100. 0 100. 0 78. 9 82. 1 100. 0
District no. 3		6, 681	21, 347, 968	15, 240	34, 631, 333	21, 961	56, 092, 728	19, 669	49, 997, 508	100.0	100.0
Arkansas. Florida. Georgia. Kentucky. Louisiana. Mississippi. Missouri. North Carolina. South Carolina.	Completed	426 223 499 232 2, 375 566 654 411	667, 119 1, 190, 988 595, 069 1, 070, 101 651, 762 9, 116, 520 930, 905 3, 085, 499 1, 267, 302 737, 778 2, 034, 925	579 2, 938 725 607 862 4, 233 868 1, 892- 840 319 1, 377	1, 195, 697 5, 254, 658 1, 922, 079 928, 994 1, 829, 791 11, 830, 540 1, 303, 202 5, 085, 538 2, 063, 380 607, 030 2, 610, 224	887 3, 242 948 1, 106 1, 084 6, 608 1, 660 2, 546 1, 251 508 2, 121	1, 862, 816 6, 180, 123 2, 517, 148 1, 999, 095 2, 477, 506 20, 947, 090 2, 691, 020 8, 171, 037 3, 330, 882 1, 293, 670 4, 622, 371	715 3, 117 861 1, 022 925 5, 665 1, 434 2, 546 1, 108 438 1, 838	1, 493, 556 5, 749, 281 1, 829, 783 1, 846, 158 2, 174, 074 18, 619, 002 2, 234, 208 7, 839, 358 3, 010, 052 990, 810 4, 211, 226	100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0	100.0
District no. 4.		18, 144	62, 527, 044	28, 270	69, 918, 445	44, 399	121, 933, 830	39, 295	105, 863, 997	92.0	91.
Illinois Indiana Michigan Wisconsin	Lawson	2, 629	7, 619, 610 6, 233, 828 47, 097, 747 1, 575, 859	1, 775 6, 872 18, 915 708	5, 597, 984 14, 147, 705 48, 591, 078 1, 581, 678	2, 857 9, 279 31, 044 1, 219	10, 826, 043 19, 251, 592 88, 773, 005 3, 083, 190	2, 640 8, 746 26, 853 1, 056	9, 838, 573 17, 686, 951 75, 726, 867 2, 611, 606	100. 0 100. 0 88. 6 100. 0	88.
District no. 5		3, 397	6, 902, 539	5, 233	11, 253, 273	8, 567	17, 622, 628	8, 329	17, 132, 625	100. 0	100,
Iowa . Kansas . Minnesota . Nebraska . New Mexico . North Dakota . Oklahoma . South Dakota .	Completed	1, 231 52 718 96 4 79 354 98	711, 659 2, 957, 430 87, 713 1, 204, 310 186, 152 17, 206 94, 118 1, 137, 896 178, 227 327, 828	185	2, 021, 875 3, 982, 400 108, 806 727, 907 362, 134 184, 222 38, 024 1, 853, 315 178, 282 1, 796, 308	1, 601 3, 302 104 1, 069 297 63 109 1, 156 199 667	2, 810, 589 6, 939, 830 196, 519 1, 875, 131 566, 802 209, 293 126, 392 2, 971, 311 335, 593 1, 591, 168	1, 534 3, 302 104 1, 006 266 54 98 1, 117 181 667	2, 678, 500 6, 942, 323 196, 519 1, 766, 785 528, 510 158, 460 114, 882 2, 852, 012 303, 466 1, 591, 168	100, 0 100, 0 100, 0 100, 0 100, 0 100, 0	100, 100, 100, 100, 100, 100, 100, 100,
			10, 257, 507	4, 857	9, 437, 353	8, 267	17, 414, 942	7, 783	15, 410, 037	100.0	100.0
Arizona California Idaho Montana Nevada Oregon Utah Washington	Completed	343 1,876 47 19 856 266 798	1, 099, 816 4, 621, 672 77, 314 63, 729 1, 465, 589 559, 120 2, 227, 138 143, 129	64 116 332 705 540 1,520	446, 300 2, 841, 663 97, 342 187, 850 873, 376 1, 012, 692 1, 099, 241 2, 400, 427 478, 462	447 2, 348 60 158 351 1, 409 799 2, 318	1, 073, 483 5, 918, 203 95, 757 256, 696 937, 105 2, 203, 071 1, 629, 413 4, 627, 565 613, 649	426 2, 210 59 151 329 1, 290 766	853, 795 5, 057, 238 92, 263 247, 880 884, 448 2, 053, 660 1, 565, 637 4, 075, 954 579, 162	100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0 100. 0	100.0 100.0 100.0 100.0 100.0 100.0 100.0 100.0

Gross total applications minus withdrawn and held for further consideration (column 11 equals column 1 minus column 4).

All reconditioning cases are accounted for by their respective refinancing loans except 575 cases of loans on unencumbered property.

Total number of closed loans represented by loan papers received in Washington and regional offices (preliminary shipments plus complete loan files received).

Cloan files that were complete when received plus final shipments of loan papers received.

Reported as of Feb. 7, 1935.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Greenwood].

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, there is no activity that has been pursued under these emergency measures that has done more, in my opinion, to bring relief to the people of this Nation than the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. From the most recent statement, on February 28, this corporation had loaned $2,468,000,000 plus. This covered applications to the extent of 817,773. Figuring 5 as the average family, this has preserved the homes and kept a roof over the heads of 4,088,865 people. In doing this it is my belief that the Government will lose but very little. Statistics through the years show that about 3 percent of the loans made upon real-estate mortgages, especially upon homes where the mortgagor lives, is the limit of loss.

Although the Government is a little more liberal on these loans than private agencies would be, I believe that through the years the Government will not lose to exceed 5 percent. This activity along with the activity of the Federal land banks in saving the farms of this Nation I consider one of the greatest relief measures.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. GREENWOOD. I yield.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I noticed a news item some time ago which I think stated that approximately 250,000 of these mortgages were now in default in respect of interest. Can the gentleman enlighten the House on that?

Mr. GREENWOOD. I think the figures are large. I think they use the word "default" in the sense that they did not pay promptly. The chairman of the corporation in his statement showed that a very much smaller number were actually in default.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield right

Mr. GREENWOOD. I have not much time.

Mr. COX. I wanted only to give the gentleman an answer. As I recall, the statement of Mr. Fahey was to the effect that 18 percent were in arrears from 1 to 3 months, but that that was far below the experience of any mortgage-lending agency in the country at the present time.

Mr. GREENWOOD. That, as I understand it, is the report of the chairman of the Corporation. There has been some criticism of the administration of this law. In setting up the machinery, the gigantic machinery to conduct an operation like this, and in the selection of men, very often who have had little experience, we must anticipate that there will be some inequalities, I know. I suggested the attorneys and appraisers in my district, yet I was not able to get men of equal qualifications; neither did I get equal administration in one county as compared with another, because of the difference in activity, initiative, and qualifications of the men who had charge; not that there is any graft or irregularity, but there just was not the enthusiasm put into it in some places.

Mr. COX. The gentleman will emphasize the point if he will give the illustration of the two counties in his district I heard him mention in the committee.

Mr. GREENWOOD. I will give the experience in one county, a small county of about 35,000 population. I appointed an aggressive young attorney. He closed his law office and went into this work vigorously. The last report I had was that he had loaned over $1,500,000 on homes in that small county and had rehabilitated every building loan in every bank so that they were placed on a basis not enjoyed subsequent to the time of the frozen assets. So these inequalities must exist, but that does not mean there is graft. No doubt there have been those who have taken charge and have tried to use their personal and political influence.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, the rule which we are now considering is a wide-open rule which permits the bill relieve distressed home owners and distressed mortgagors, to be read for amendment after 4 hours of general debate, and any amendment can be offered and considered in the Committee of the Whole. There are some amendments which should receive the serious attention of the House.

In discussing this rule the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin] spoke of some employers soliciting political funds. I think it is to the credit of the administration of this great enterprise that so many people have been discharged. If I recall the figures correctly, for instance, at least 3,000 appraisers were removed as incompetent and inefficient; and a great many of them had been recommended by Democratic Representatives and Senators.

Very lengthy hearings were held before the Rules Committee in their consideration of a proposed investigation of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. We heard very little complaint from a political angle, except from the majority side. Many complaints were made that Democrats were not appointed to positions, but that Republicans had the preference. This may be true. I cannot deny it.

The gentleman from New York, the distinguished minority leader [Mr. Snell], spoke of loans in his district. I do not believe he has the exact facts when he states that no loans were made except 2 weeks before election. It is true that all loans were stopped about the 11th of November 1934, but that was some time after the election, and applied throughout the country.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. SNELL. The gentleman did not quote me entirely correctly. I said that there were practically no loans made in my immediate vicinity until about 3 weeks before election, and I think that is correct.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I do not know what "practically no loans" means.

Mr. SNELL. Well, to be specific, there was only one home loan made in my home town during the year up until some time late in September or October.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Potsdam is a very prosperous town. There could be very little distress there.

Mr. SNELL. That may have been true formerly, but it is not so at the present time, I will say to the gentleman.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for the purpose of making a correction which I am sure he will be glad to have called to his attention?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. COX. The loans were not stopped as indicated by the gentleman, except they ceased taking new applications and made loans only where the applications had been approved and were in the hands of the attorneys of the corporation.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Something was said about so many loans being made in New York. Of course, New York contains more homes than any other State in the Union, far more in proportion to its population. It has the greatest number of urban homes of any State in this country, way out of proportion to its population.

Mr. COX. May I call attention of the gentleman to the fact that of the $460,000,000 administered under the wholesale operations, New York obtained, as I recall, $8,794,000.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Something was said about the amount of loans in default. As I remember the figures, they run only 18 percent after 90 days, which is very much lower than the experience of insurance companies or other lending institutions.

Mr. HESS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio. Mr. HESS. Will the gentleman tell the House how many

Mr. HESS. Will the gentleman tell the House how many foreclosures have been brought by the Government on these loans?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I cannot state that, although we had the figures in the hearings.

Mr. Speaker, I believe it is a very serious question whether the Home Owners' Loan Corporation should be continued. The purpose of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was to relieve distressed home owners and distressed mortgagors. not mortgagees. I am not satisfied that that has been the case. I know the administration wants to get out of this Government mortgage lending business as quickly as it can. I know the administration does not want to pour unlimited funds into the business, and I do know they only want to appropriate $1,250,000,000, which amount they do not want increased, as I understand the Committee on Banking and Currency will attempt, contrary to the wishes of the administration. What has happened to the $2,500,000,000 already loaned by this Corporation? Do you know that over 95 percent, and perhaps 97 percent, of the entire two and onehalf billion dollars has gone into banks, life-insurance companies, mortgage companies, building and loan institutions, and similar lending institutions, while only 3 percent of that huge fund has been paid out to the individual mortgagee. I for one did not appreciate when I voted for the bill creating the Home Owners' Loan Corporation that it was for the benefit of the lending institutions.

Those institutions have been well taken care of under the first R. F. C. Act, passed by the Republican administration, and the later R. F. C. Acts, which took care of those institutions with funds of billions.

We extended the R. F. C. Act to take care of insurance companies, banks, mortgage companies, and building and loan associations through purchasing their preferred stock and debentures. Who in this House thought that 97 percent of the two and a half billion dollars granted to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation would be used to bail out banks, insurance companies, building and loan associations, and similar institutions?

But that is just what has happened. There has been some proof adduced that these institutions, not the closed ones alone, but the open ones, have encouraged defaults on the part of their mortgagors so that the institutions could unload its mortgages on the Federal Government. That is why the administration wants to get out of this business as quickly as it can. It wants to encourage private money to come into the mortgage field. The individual mortgagee is not pressing his mortgagor. The individual mortgagee is extending the time of the person who owns his home, but the institutions are forcing and encouraging defaults so the technical "distress" will occur. These institutions would not dare foreclose these mortgages if the Government did not make this huge fund available to help them.

I believe it is a very serious question whether we did the right thing in passing the Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill. I know this is a startling statement to make, but I was very much surprised when the Chairman of the Board said that 97 percent of the money went to institutions which had already been taken care of under the R. F. C. and other money-lending services of the Government.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from New

Mr. CAVICCHIA. The main purpose of the act, as the gentleman stated, was to save people from losing their homes. What difference does it make whether it went to a corporation or to an individual as long as the homes were saved?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I have heard that argument made, but I know that in New York, for instance, no bank or insurance company would have dared to have brought wholesale foreclosures. If the Government had not made their billions available, the mortgagees would have been compelled to wait; but they realized in this money and took over the corporation bonds and were even willing at one time to sell them at 84 cents on the dollar.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GILCHRIST. The gentleman is making an interesting statement. In his examination of this question, did he find any evidence that banks and building and loan associations had been taken care of very quickly? For example, it has been stated to me that in one or two cases which have been presented to me a bank was allowed to get a loan in 4 days, whereas in the case of a private loan, with which I was connected on behalf of a constituent, we were engaged in the matter for 4 months, and finally did not get the loan

Mr. O'CONNOR. That may be so. I do not know. The institutions undoubtedly have better facilities for quick action than the individual.

This evidences, however, just what I am getting at. Congress intended to help the mortgagor. Financially we have helped the mortgagee.

Mr. HOEPPEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from Cali-

Mr. HOEPPEL. In Los Angeles there was one building and loan association that had 800 sour mortgages which they unloaded on the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Maybe we have gone too far in this operation, and perhaps we have to see it through. However, I am apprehensive that some day we may wake up and find that something was put over on us; that institutions used their influence and have again put their hands into the Treasury for their own benefit, using the poor, distressed home owner as the atmosphere by which the lenders could be paid off out of Government funds.

Mr. COX. In the interest of fairness, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia. Mr. COX. Does the gentleman not know that the cor-porations entering into these wholesale operations resulted from an urge that came from the White House?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I did not know that.

Mr. COX. And does he not know that any assistance which may be rendered a mortgagor is necessarily relief of the mortgagee where the transaction is one of distress?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I shall yield the gentleman more time if he wants to make a speech, but the gentleman is talking of incidental relief to the mortgagor. We voted for direct

Mr. COX. Does the gentleman not concede that as a result of these operations the deposits in distressed institutions were released, to the benefit not only of the institutions but of the depositors themselves, which was beneficial to the country as a whole?

Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman has answered his own question—again by stressing the incidental rather than the

As indicating the desire of the institutions to unload their mortgages, they took an average loss of some $680 in their wholesale operations and in their retail operations they took a loss of some $240. But where did the individual mortgagee stand? Did he or she get any of their funds? Yes; 3 percent at the most.

The individual mortgagee did not come here and ask this Government for money. He took care of his mortgagor. He took care of the man or woman in his community who was indebted to him and in distress.

Mr. HARTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. HARTER. Does the gentleman believe that we should eliminate the institutional amendment under which these wholesale operations took place and which was adopted last April, and make the sole test of eligibility the distress of the home owner, in the future operation of this act, if it is passed?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Inasmuch as we have gone this far. what I would like to see done as to pending applications is that preference be given to the individual mortgagee. [Applause.]

Oh, I know that the committee will say they know very much more about it than anybody else, but probably the Rules Committee has sat with this thing as long as the Banking and Currency Committee, and the statements made to us have been a revelation.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. The gentleman's remarks apply to | retail operations as well as wholesale operations?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. RABAUT. I want to congratulate the gentleman upon expressing absolutely the very condition that exists in the city of Detroit.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Oh, I will yield. Detroit was, of course, one of the worst spots in the Nation because of its huge bank failures.

Mr. COX. Does not the gentleman know that Detroit has obtained more money under this legislation than any other section of the country?

Mr. RABAUT. And the banks got it.

Mr. COX. They received more money per capita than even the city of Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I am not satisfied with just taking care of pending applications, for the reason that pending applications will include most of those applications which were fomented or encouraged to be filed by institutions, and chiefly for the benefit of the institutions, and not the mortgagors. I would let down the door to applications, because you are between one dilemma or the other-either close the door completely or let down the bar to all applications and then give preference to individual mortgagees. [Applause.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. RICH. Does not the gentleman believe that we have taken over, through the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, a great many mortgages on which the Federal Government will never be able to realize, and that we are going to have a large loss?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Well, I do not know that.

Mr. RICH. I would like to say to the gentleman that I think we have, and I think the gentleman's statement that we ought to take care of the individual rather than the banking institutions is very good, and I hope he will look after that in the bill we are about to draft.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The purpose of this legislation was to encourage lending other than by the Government. The individual has not been encouraged to lend, and the institution has done just the opposite, and instead of new lending they have saddled their mortgages on the Government.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes.

Mr. HEALEY. The figures show there are about 500,000 pending applications.

Mr. O'CONNOR. That is correct, as I understand.

Mr. HEALEY. The average loan is about $3,000, so that all you can do under this appropriation is to take care of pending applications, is it not?

Mr. O'CONNOR. But why should a man, with the aid, and at the instigation of a bank or a building and loan association, who got his loan in just under the wire on November 11, if that was the date, have any preference over the individual who, on November 12, was in great distress or in greater distress? [Applause.]

Mr. HEALEY. I am in accord with the gentleman on that. I think they ought to be taken in the order they were filed and should be given consideration in that order.

Mr. O'CONNOR. That does not help any, either.

Mr. HEALEY. But what I want to know is whether it is a fact that some of these 500,000 pending applications are what are known as wholesale applications where we help the banks or other institutions, or are there 500,000 individual applications?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I do not know about that.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes.

Mr. WHITE. Will the gentleman favor an amendment to eliminate the wholesale operations of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Oh, I do not know as to that at this late date. In the case of a distressed institution, of course, the result to the depositors may be worthwhile.

Mr. HARTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman permit an interruption, so that I may answer that question?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes.

Mr. HARTER. I have asked the same question of the manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Mr. Fahey, and the general counsel, Mr. Russell, and they say that the wholesale operations are practically completed and they have no objection to the elimination of that institutional provision.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. GIFFORD. I wish to interpose a statement in answer to the question asked by the gentleman from Ohio a moment ago. The figures we have are that 800,000 loans have been granted, 240,000 are already in default more than 90 days, and foreclosures have been ordered only in 60 cases and only one actually in possession.

I want to remark also that in the city of Chicago the Home Loan would have lost its lien on present mortgages if it had not paid $2,000,000 to the city of Chicago for taxes demanded of those who could not pay.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I do not know anything about those figures, but, of course, as to taxes, I believe something like $150,000,000 of this money has gone to pay taxes.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. More than that.

Mr. O'CONNOR. At any rate, a very considerable amount and in some of the large cities as much as $20,000,000 has gone into the city treasury in taxes, which of course has helped local governments-again the mortgagor is only indirectly the beneficiary.

Mr. GIFFORD. The gentleman stated that the losses or delinquencies were not surprising or were not as much as in other mortgage associations. Does the gentleman not know there were very few loans made on January 1, 1934, in this new organization, and does he not understand how tremendous that delinquency is in a new organization, a very few months old, and would the gentleman compare that favorably with other mortgage associations?

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I have only a minute and I must close. There is another matter in this bill that calls for serious consideration when the bill is considered in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and that is a provision for issuing loans for the renovation and alteration of apartment buildings, business places, and so forth. The limit has been cut from $50,000, as requested by the Administration, to $25,000, the idea of the committee, and I hope the $50,000 limitation will be restored by the Committee of the Whole. I assure you that I shall do what little I can to restore the figure $50,000, the amount requested by the Administration, and I ask the assistance of the Members of the House.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was adopted.

PUBLICITY OF CERTAIN STATEMENTS OF INCOME

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Ways and Means, I report the bill H. R. 6359, a bill to repeal certain provisions relating to the publicity of certain statements of income.

The bill was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CULLEN. I yield. Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman inform the House when he thinks this bill just presented will be called up for consideration?

Mr. CULLEN. On next Saturday.

Mr. SNELL. I am glad the gentleman has brought this in to give us an opportunity to repeal it.

Mr. CULLEN. I may say that it is possible that it will | be brought up tomorrow.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The Rules Committee will meet at 2 o'clock this afternoon to pass on the matter.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I find that there is considerable general interest in the House in a statement made up by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, showing in detail its operations in both wholesale and retail activities. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by inserting two short charts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

ADDITIONAL HOME-MORTGAGE RELIEF

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6021), to provide additional home-mortgage relief, to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, and the National Housing Act, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with Mr. CELLER in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL] has 2 hours, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Hollister] 2 hours.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, it is not my purpose to devote time to any political suggestions that have been brought into the discussion of the rule for the consideration

It seems that my own side of the House has devoted more time to that kind of discussion than has been done by the other side.

I think it may be said in fairness to the present Home Loan Bank Board, especially the Chairman of the present Board, that in the administration of the Home Owners' Loan Act and the home-loan banking system, if the Board has been guilty of any sin of a political nature it is that they have leaned too far in the effort to keep free from partisanship and political considerations in making up the personnel and in determining the policies upon which administration has been conducted.

It will be remembered that when we passed the act last year providing additional funds for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and amending the act in other particulars, the Senate incorporated a provision in the bill directing the Board to disregard political considerations in selecting agents, attorneys, appraisers, and others constituting the personnel of the administration. I do not know that any mention of it was ever made on the floor of the House, because that provision was eliminated by the Committee on Banking and Currency, and the matter was not discussed; but it is a fact, which should be stated, that the chairman of the Board, Mr. Fahey, insisted that the amendment offered by Senator Norris and adopted by the Senate should remain in the bill. If there has been any department of the Government that has gone as far as anyone could ask in disregarding politics, I make the statement that the Home Owners' Loan Corporation Board has done that very

I have no doubt the Board has made mistakes. I am sure that we could listen indefinitely to the recital of individual instances of mistakes that have been made, but to save a million home owners in the United States from foreclosure in a period of 12 months is an accomplishment of stupendous signficance to the social and economic welfare of the Nation. That is the achievement that was accomplished by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation during the year 1934. The Corporation had applications to the number of 1,739,499 filed for consideration. Lcans were made taking care of 800,000 distressed mortgagors in the United States. The Board estimates that out of pending applications that are still to be considered and passed upon, notwithstanding the order of November 13, 1934, terminating new applications, a total of more than 1,000,000 loans will have been made, which means that something like 5,000,000 people in the United States have been saved from foreclosure and the loss of shelter.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes. Mr. KNUTSON. I was not here when the gentleman made his opening statement. How many applications for home loans were pending when the fund we voted 2 years ago became exhausted?

Mr. STEAGALL. I could not give the gentleman the exact number. At that particular time they were quite numerous. I have not those figures, but in all there have been something approaching one million and three-quarters applications to date, and over 800,000 of them have been taken care of. It is estimated that of the number now pending in the legal department, which means that they have been passed on favorably through the various initial steps of consideration, not less than 200,000 more will be granted, which will leave something like 500,000 applications to be passed upon.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. What was the objection of the committee to including qualified suburban tracts for home

Mr. STEAGALL. That is just a little aside from the point I had reached in my discussion.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I hope the gentleman will give me 5 minutes on that.

Mr. STEAGALL. This may be said in that connection. We hope that we are approaching the end of the activities of this branch of the relief agencies of the Government, and to attempt changes in the rules of a substantial import at this late date is not thought desirable by the committee.

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. STEAGALL. Yes.

Mr. BOLAND. Is it the intention of the committee to amend this bill by increasing the amount that it calls for

Mr. STEAGALL. The bill as reported provides for an additional fund of one and a half billions of dollars. The Home Loan Bank Board estimated that the work of concluding relief, based upon applications already filed, could be accomplished by the authorization of an additional sum of one and one-quarter billions of dollars. Before introducing the bill and after various discussions with the Board, the amount was raised to one and a half billion dollars, adding $250,000,000 to the amount which the Board considered sufficient to finish the task, giving consideration to applications pending, just as had been done all along. The bill as reported provides for a billion and a half, which we have been advised is more than sufficient to finish the work.

Mr. BOLAND. Is it the intention of the committee to increase that amount?

Mr. STEAGALL. The Committee on Banking and Currency has before it the matter of changes and amendments to the bill. Any action in that connection will be disclosed when the bill is reached for amendment. I am now addressing myself to the provisions of the bill as reported originally by the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. BOLAND. As chairman of the committee, the gentleman is satisfied that the bill is adequate as it is without any extending amendments?

Mr. STEAGALL. I am giving the gentleman the information supplied that committee by the members of the Home Loan Bank Board.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Does the bill provide for the filing of any additional applications?

Mr. STEAGALL. The bill as reported by the committee provides for taking care of applications heretofore filed.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. It does not provide for new applications?

Mr. STEAGALL. Not as reported by the committee originally.

Mr. SWEENEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes. Mr. SWEENEY. The distinguished Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency undoubtedly is aware that the H. O. L. C. will soon start foreclosing on a large scale, owing to distress on account of unemployment? Does not the distinguished gentleman think we ought to extend the principles of the Frazier-Lemke bill applicable to farms only, for about a year or two, to those who are in distress? In other words, declare a moratorium for those who cannot make their payments?

Mr. STEAGALL. I think the gentleman's apprehensions are unfounded. We have just heard a statement-I will not call it a complaint, but a statement which I take to be in the nature of a criticism—that the Board has not established a policy of foreclosure. I do not think there is anything in the record which justifies any apprehension that the administration of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation will become harsh or oppressive under the present administration.

Mr. SWEENEY. May I say in reply that I tried to secure from Mr. Fahey the number of foreclosures and the number in anticipation. I could not get that information, so I do not know who spoke for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Mr. STEAGALL. The fact is I think there has been 1 foreclosure down to date out of nearly 1,000,000 loans made, and some 50 or 60 in contemplation, although not in actual process of foreclosure.

Mr. CROWE. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. STEAGALL. I yield for a question.

Mr. CROWE. Is it thought that this additional $1,500,-000,000 that is being asked for in this bill will be sufficient on the basis of the later loans that were made, or with the liberality that was given earlier in making loans by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation? Early in its life we found that loans were made much more liberally than later. I want to know if the $1,500,000,000 is expected to take care of it under the more stringent regulations, or would it not take more than that to handle this legislation as it was operated during the first few months?

Mr. STEAGALL. I can only say to the gentleman that I have the assurance of those in charge of the administration of the fund that they could, under continuation of existing policy, complete their task with $1,250,000,000. That is the statement they made and that is the sum which they requested in their original conferences respecting this legislation. The committee, out of an abundance of liberality, we thought, raised the amount to $1,500,000,000.

Now, undoubtedly there was some haste in extending relief during the initial stages of the administration of this law. We might infer from statements that have been made here today that all the distress that has come upon mortgagors in the country took place following the enactment of this bill. The fact is this law was passed because of the deplorable developments throughout the country which showed unprecedented foreclosure of mortgages, both upon the farms of the Nation and upon the urban home owners.

The situation was unprecedented. In the circumstances it was only natural that there should have been some haste in extending relief afforded by the legislation. Naturally, as the distress was relieved and distressed mortgages removed, there would have been some slowing down of loans and possibly some higher degree of care and caution in passing upon the merits of individual applications. But let me say here we have the word of this Board, and I accept it in full faith, that the guiding principle by which they have been governed at all times in the administration of this act has been to give first consideration to the distressed home owner who was in danger of having his loved ones turned out of their homes.

Mr. STACK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. In just a moment. In that connection it is fair to say that the Board is not to blame that loans may inure in part to the benefit of existing lending institutions. That is inevitable. The minute a mortgage reaches a condition of distress for the home owner, the mortgagee is of course in a situation where any loan extended to the mortgagor inures to his relief and to his benefit. It will be remembered that during the last session of Congress one of the live questions in this House and before the country, as it had been for some time theretofore, was the matter of relief for depositors in closed banks. You will all re-member what took place at that time. There was an insistent demand for legislation to afford relief to depositors in closed banks. The bill passed last year recognized that mortgages in the hands of liquidating agents became automatically distressed mortgages. So one of the exceptions to the rule requiring default prior to the 1st of January 1933 was made to cover mortgages held by institutions in process of liquidation.

The Board informs your committee that, notwithstanding that provision of law, the policy of passing upon loans with first consideration directed to the distress of the individual home owner continued to guide the Board in making loans, even in cases where the bonds went to institutions holding mortgages under conditions that necessitated liquidation and foreclosure. An infinitesimally small amount would cover all the loans that were made in carrying out the provisions which treated of mortgages in the hands of liquidating agents as automatically in distress. If the statements made are to be relied upon, as I do rely upon them, if there is any criticism against the Board because of loans made where the benefits went to lending institutions, the criticism is that the Board did not go so far as it was expected to go in carrying out the provisions of the law adopted by Congress providing for such loans.

The suggestion was made that there should be a provision incorporated in this bill requiring the Board to give preference to individuals rather than lending institutions. Such a plan would be an abandonment of the fundamental principles and purposes of the bill. The test that should always be applied, as we are informed it has been applied in the past in making loans by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, should be to carry out the expressed will of Congress to use these funds to protect the families and the home owners of the United States. Any departure from that or any effort to differentiate between classes of mortgagees who might indirectly benefit from loans would involve us in serious difficulties and result in a departure from the fundamental purposes of the legislation.

Mr. STACK. Will the gentleman yield for a point of information?

Mr. STEAGALL. I should like to discuss the various provisions of this bill, but I will yield.

Mr. STACK. Can the distinguished Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency tell me and my colleagues what constitutes distress?

Mr. STEAGALL. Of course, the attempt to give a legal definition and interpretation of that word as employed in determining the policies of the Board respecting loans, calls for just a little thought and a little reflection. The gentleman understands, of course, as I think all of us do that the purposes of Congress was to employ the funds supplied under this legislation in saving homes from foreclosure, the question being whether or not in the absence of relief afforded by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation the home owner would lose his home by foreclosure.

Mr. STACK. The mortgagor, or home owner, must show distress to have his application considered. After he shows distress, 30 days after he gets the loan and the transaction is completed, he must take up his loan, pay the interest and the percentage that he is to pay off monthly.

Mr. STEAGALL. That was not the original provision of the bill. Repayment of principal was not so required so long as borrowers paid interest and liens were accumulating. That, however, was amended.

Mr. STACK. When he could not show that he was able to take up his loan-in other words, when he was actually in distress, out of work-he had to go out and get collateral security. So I make the statement that this will not help the man in distress any more than the original act did if you continue to require additional security. If a man is drowning, and you pick him out of the water, you do not throw him back in again.

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman understands that this is a loan system; that it never was contemplated that the Government would pay off a mortgage on anybody's home and forget it. That was not contemplated, and, so far as I know, was never desired.

Mr. STACK. I personally am interested in seeing this bill passed to help the people back home; but I am satisfied it is a recovery act. It is to bring back recovery, is it not?

Mr. STEAGALL. I do not know that I would so classify the Home Owners' Loan Corporation Act. I regard it as an emergency relief measure.

Mr. STACK. It is an act designed to help the working-

Mr. STEAGALL. Incidentally, of course, it will help bring about recovery, because every time you take a distress mortgage out of a lending institution, you have relieved the institution, and made it easier for the institution to make a new loan; and those incidental benefits, of course, may be classified as aiding recovery. The fundamental purpose back of the law, however, was relief for distressed home owners, to save the homes of families by resort to the use of funds from the Federal Treasury.

Mr. STACK. This will be my last inquiry. I am firmly convinced that this is a relief bill, a recovery bill, and I would suggest, in my humble way as a first termer; of course, that a moratorium be given to a home owner, or to a mortgagor as long as he is in economic distress.

Mr. STEAGALL. The record down to this date does not justify any apprehension as to the policy that will govern the board in the matter of collection of mortgages which they have acquired. They have been operating a year or more and have had but one foreclosure. So I think their policy is pretty well indicated to be that of utmost sympathy and leniency.

Mr. STACK. They are asking the home owner to go out and get collateral security before they make the loan,

Mr. STEAGALL. In some few instances they did that where the board went beyond what they were required to do by the letter of the law and extended relief where they were not justified in taking over a mortgage with the security back of it. They permitted personal endorsement by some member of the family or somebody in order to justify the corporation in extending relief. I think the purpose of the Board commendable.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there? Mr. STEAGALL. I vield.

Mr. COX. The gentleman is not condemning this practice of the Board, is he? In other words, where an applicant had need for a loan, and the property ordinarily might be considered as sufficient security, but he had no income, no job, and no prospect of any, does not the gentleman think that as an additional protection to the Government it was wise on the part of the Board to exact of such applicant a personal endorsement?

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman, I think, is a little inaccurate in the language he uses. I do not understand that any such thing was ever exacted. Endorsements were simply accepted when tendered, which shows a sympathetic attitude on the part of the Board in going beyond the requirements of the law in order to grant relief in particular cases, and I commend the purpose of the Board in that

Mr. COX. The Board, in its anxiety to give relief under such instances, did actually suggest the furnishing of an endorsement. Does not the gentleman think the Board is to be commended, as he said it might be, in its effort to assist under such circumstances?

Mr. STEAGALL. It unquestionably proves a sympathetic. commendable purpose on the part of the Board. If this were an institution in which the consideration of emergency relief did not enter. I should not commend the Board for going outside the protection afforded by the property covered by the mortgage; but in carrying out the relief purposes contemplated in this legislation, I think the Board is to be commended for its sympathetic attitude.

Mr. HOEPPEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. HOEPPEL. Answering the gentleman from Georgia, I should like to cite an occurrence in which I am involved personally. An old gentleman 76 years of age had a mortgage on his home for $500. His home was worth approximately $5,000. They stated that they could not extend relief to him unless he secured a cosigner, notwithstanding the fact that his property was worth four or five times the mortgage on it, and I personally had to become a cosigner in order to keep this old man from being thrown out on the street.

Mr. STEAGALL. I do not know anything about that individual case; and so far as I am concerned, I shall not discuss individual cases. I may say to the gentleman that nobody can pass on the merits of an individual case without hearing all sides. The consideration of individual cases and complaints would prolong this debate indefinitely.

Mr. COX. If under the circumstances as stated by the gentleman from California [Mr. HOEPPEL], the man had no income and could not produce, does the gentleman not think it was a wise thing for the board to insist on the additional requirement?

Mr. STEAGALL. I can readily understand how there may have been cases where the property covered by mortgages was worth the amount the corporation would be required to advance in order to prevent foreclosure; but if the situation presented a case where foreclosure could only be deferred temporarily, with no chance to save the applicant's home, there would be no need for the Government to step in and take over the responsibility and burden of foreclosure. It would be a violation of the law under which they act if the board made a loan when it was disclosed that repayment could not be expected and would not benefit the mortgagor.

Mr. HOEPPEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. If the gentleman is going to argue an individual case, I decline further.

Mr. HOEPPEL. In this case the individual had a small

Mr. STEAGALL. I do not yield to the gentleman to discuss individual cases. We just have not the time. That is a complaint I would suggest taking up in the regular way as an administration detail. If I were to yield on matters of that kind, we would be here all week.

Mr. COLMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from Missis-

Mr. COLMER. The gentleman stated a moment ago that the committee had increased the request from one and a quarter billion to one and a half billion. I want to inquire how many applications are now pending or were pending when the Home Owners' Loan Corporation ceased to make

Mr. STEAGALL. May I say to the gentleman that the Corporation has never ceased making loans. What happened was that on November 13 last, seeing that applications were accumulating in an amount that could not be taken care of with the funds on hand at that time, the Corporation directed that no further applications be considered except those that had passed to the legal department, meaning those that had passed the initial stages; in other words, those as to which the merits of the loans had been passed on and all questions eliminated except clearing up the title and questions of a legal nature.

So that there was no termination of loans. It was simply a common-sense method of administration by which it was announced that no further applications would be considered except such as had passed to the legal department. There was no money to take care of further applications. Of | such applications receive consideration, or will such applicourse, they are making loans all the time. They are making loans now upon applications that were filed prior to the order of November 13, 1934.

Mr. COLMER. Will this additional authorization provide for all of the applications for loans now pending?

Mr. STEAGALL. I thought I had made clear the attitude of the Board. The Board asked for $1,250,000,000, which they estimated would enable them to care for all pending applications.

Mr. COX. In such instances where the Board found them eligible.

Mr. STEAGALL. Certainly. I mean to take care of those passed upon favorably, not to grant all applications that were filed. No one contemplated that. Then, out of an abundance of caution, and to make sure that the situation would be completely safeguarded, the bill as introduced raises the amount from $1,250,000,000 to $1,500,000,000.

Mr. COLMER. Then there will be the opportunity to grant further loans in addition to those now pending?

Mr. STEAGALL. Under the bill the funds may only be employed to take care of applications heretofore filed.

Mr. COX. I wonder just what the attitude of the gentleman is with respect to amending that provision of the bill. That is, the provision limiting loans to applicants who already have their applications on file. In other words, the gentleman, I am sure, is fully aware of the fact that in certain instances, such as stated by the gentleman from Indiana in the discussion in reference to consideration of the rule under which the bill is now being considered, many communities were well advised as to their rights and privileges and there was the filing of applications in all cases where need and distress existed. In other areas where the distress was equally as great, if not very much greater in many instances. there were no applications filed. That need is just as great now and may be greater than it was 5 or 6 months or a year ago.

Mr. STEAGALL. If the gentleman will take the statement of the Board in that connection, he will find that prior to the promulgation of the order on November 13, 1934, terminating consideration of loans except such as had passed to the legal department, he will find that they were coming in to the number of only 6,000 a week.

Mr. COX. That does not answer the question I propounded. Does the gentleman not think that the door should be opened again and applications received from those in distress, and that in administering the additional fund that is being put at the disposal of the Corporation, the Corporation should be permitted to determine instances where loans should be made upon a basis of comparative need and distress?

Mr. STEAGALL. I can appreciate the gentleman's very solicitious attitude in that connection, but I may say to the gentleman that we shall have to stop sometime.

Mr. COX. That is very true, but whenever we do, let us stop right.

Mr. STEAGALL. No matter what date is set when applications will be no longer accepted, the situation will always be such that we will endanger cases which are just as meritorious as applications theretofore filed. The whole theory of this desire to terminate applications, of course, is that the country in a year and a half has become apprised of the benefits of this legislation and that all cases of a meritorious nature have been reflected in the filing of applications within that time. Any definite date for terminating applications must necessarily result in excluding meritorious loans in some cases.

Mr. BLANTON, Mr. HEALEY, and Mr. ELLENBOGEN rose.

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield first to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton].

Mr. BLANTON. Since November 13 numerous people have made application for urgent loans and the applications have been returned and they have been told the H. O. L. C. was no longer receiving such applications. Under this bill will ment, may I ask one question?

cations made since November 13 receive no consideration whatsoever under this measure?

Mr. STEAGALL. That would depend upon the administration of the law. The Board can receive applications tomorrow if they see fit to do so.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. But they are not doing that.

Mr. STEAGALL. There is nothing to keep them from receiving applications at any time up to the effective date of this bill as it was reported; after that, they could not do it. Of course, this would rest in the field of administration.

Mr. BLANTON. Then, if I understand the gentleman correctly, all applications that have been sent in since November 13 will come under this bill and should receive consider.

Mr. STEAGALL. I think I have answered as well as I can. Mr. BLANTON. That question can be answered yes or no. Mr. STEAGALL. No; it depends upon the administration of the measure.

Mr. COX. Will not the gentleman clear up the question raised by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON]? If I understand the meaning of the bill, it is that no one who did not have his application on file on November 13 of last year will be eligible for consideration.

Mr. BLANTON. Then, there will be thousands of disappointed people all over the country.

Mr. COX. That is obliged to be true, because the Corporation ceased receiving applications on the 13th of November.

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman from Texas is a good lawyer and the gentleman from Georgia is a good lawyer, and both of them were once able judges. Here is the language of the bill:

In order to provide for applications heretofore filed.

Mr. COX. All right; but none has been filed since November 13 of last year.

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman is stating facts, and I am talking about the provisions of the bill. This language leaves the matter with the Board.

Mr. BLANTON. They have been mailed to State and regional offices and sent back to the home owners unfiled.

Mr. STEAGALL. This provision leaves the matter with the Board and it will be determined by them whether they will permit further applications to be filed or not. Whether there would be any departure from the rule laid down by the order promulgated on the 13th of November, I am not prepared to say any better than the gentleman from Texas. I have read the language of the bill.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman permit just one other brief question?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield. Mr. BLANTON. In the administration of this bill, under its present language, could the gentleman tell us whether or not the Board would consider applications made since November 13?

Mr. STEAGALL. I prefer not to attempt to prejudge any policy or rule that may be hereafter adopted by the Board. I cannot do that any more than the gentleman from Texas. It is in the power of the Board to accept new applications at any time down to the effective date of this legislation.

Mr. BLANTON. I think the gentleman is wise, because I do not believe any sane person in the United States could tell what this arrogant Board will do or how it will attempt to arbitrarily administer this bill; hence, we ought to give them specific orders.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, there is wide-spread demand in the House and in the committee for time for discussion of this bill. It had been my purpose to go over the bill section by section, but inasmuch as I have consumed so much time in yielding for interruptions, I am going to conclude my remarks and reserve the time at my disposal for other Members.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 20 min-

Mr. HOEPPEL. Before the gentleman begins his argu-

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield for one question, although I would prefer to explain the bill and answer questions afterward.

Mr. HOEPPEL. I notice here that the mortgagor is going to pay 5-percent interest whenever he gets a loan through the Corporation. The Corporation secures the funds for 2.75 percent. The distinguished chairman said this is a relief measure, but as long as the Government is taking 2.25-percent profit from the distressed mortgagors I consider this a Shylock measure until that is corrected.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Is the gentleman asking me a question or making a statement?

Mr. HOEPPEL. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, the bill is a triple-barreled bill. It involves amendments to the Home Loan Bank Act, amendments to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation Act, and amendments to the Housing Act.

I believe, in addition to speaking on some of the general principles of the bill, as has been done by our distinguished chairman, it would, perhaps, be a good idea to run through the bill by sections and explain it to the extent that further explanations may be necessary over and above what is contained in the report, and then in what additional time I may have I should be glad to answer any questions which members of the Committee desire to submit.

I do not believe that any further comment is necessary on section 1, as the provisions are obvious.

Section 2 provides that there shall be no preference respecting the dividends on stock of the home-loan banks. The law now provides that the Government shall have a 2-percent cumulative dividend on the stock in the banks to which it has subscribed. The Board feels that there are one or two banks in such a condition it would perhaps be unwise to pay any dividends, certainly not 2 percent, but in a desire not to have the Government's stock in arrears they are trying to pay 2 percent when nothing, or at most 1 or 11/2 percent would be more proper. Inasmuch as it is a small matter, the Federal Government having 80 percent of the stock of the banks, it would be wise to eliminate that provision.

Section 3 is a new section inserted at the request of the various members of the home-loan banks.

There is at present an advisory committee consisting of the chairmen of the various home-loan banks. The chairman in every case is appointed by the Federal Board, so in a way the central board is asking that its own appointees should advise with the Board. It would, perhaps, be a fairer presentation of the views of the mortgage-lending institutions if they could have a committee of their own to advise with the central board.

This adds no expense to the Government except the traveling expenses of the individuals. The member of the committee who comes to Washington is to be appointed by the board of directors of each particular bank.

Section 4 really needs no additional explanation. It merely amends, or broadens, the borrowing powers of bank members and permits the home-loan banks to lend on obligations of the United States or obligations fully guaranteed by the United States instead of solely on mortgages.

Section 5 permits the discounting of mortgages which have 20 years to run instead of 15, and makes the mortgages eligible as collateral up to $20,000 instead of mortgages on property valued at not exceeding $20,000, as in the present law. The present limit of the mortgage that can be discounted is 80 percent of $20,000, or $16,000. This is raised to $20,000 in the bill, with no limit on the value of the property, except, of course, that the mortgage may not be in excess of 80 percent of that value. After all, if a lending institution has a proper mortgage, and wishes to borrow money on it, there seems to be no reason why there should be any maximum limitation on the actual value of the property on which the mortgage is placed. This section is, therefore, a liberalizing provision which permits additional discounts by the members of the home-loan banks.

Section 6, incidentally, should be a new section 10 (b). instead of 10 (a) as in the bill. Anyone who checks up the present law will realize that this is a misprint. It should be 10 (b), because it is a new section. This section permits the home-loan bank to broaden its scope in making advances to others than members, if those others are institutions approved under the Housing Act to make insured mortgages. It provides advances up to 90 percent of the mortgages thus insured. If you approve of the whole mutual mortgage set-up included in the National Housing Act, by which accredited institutions may enter the mutual mortgage system and buy and sell mortgages which are insured through the mutual system, it seems perfectly sound that such institutions holding such insured mortgages should be able to take them somewhere, discount them, and get some money. It should be understood that all of the provisions of this act, all of the provisions of the Home Loan Bank Act and of the Housing Act are different ways of approaching the mortgage problem of the country, which many people feel is one of the chief jams which is blocking the recovery program.

Section 7 merely corrects an inadvertent omission in the act when consolidated home-loan bank bonds were provided for in the amendments made to the Home Loan Act last year, the tax-exemption provision, which applies to the individual issues made by the different individual banks, was left out by mistake.

Section 8 permits the funds which are received by the home-loan banks for services they have rendered to be used as a revolving fund for further purposes of the bank, for the paying of expenses and for whatever other purposes may be necessary. If this new section were not included, the procedure followed at the present time would have to be followed indefinitely; that is, all funds received by the banks for these special charges would have to go into the Treasury and be reappropriated.

The difficulty of that system is that it is very hard to anticipate ahead of time what the amount of those charges will be, as they depend entirely on the volume of business going up or down as the facilities of the banks are used. Therefore, to estimate ahead of time and to make an appropriation to cover what will be received in the ordinary course of business for the services rendered is almost impossible. and there seems no harm in permitting the earnings of the bank so made to be used as a revolving fund for the purposes of the bank.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes. Mr. RAMSPECK. Does that same rule apply to the receipts of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation?

Mr. HOLLISTER. It is not changed in this bill. At the present time the receipts of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation on the sales of mortgages do not have to be reappropriated

Mr. RAMSPECK. Then Congress has no voice in the control of what they do with that money?

Mr. HOLLISTER. The receipts from the mortgage-redemption operations of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation go to retire the bonds of that Corporation.

Mr. RAMSPECK. They are also used to pay salaries?
Mr. HOLLISTER. Whether there is a special appropriation for that I could not inform the gentleman. It is not included in this bill, and I cannot tell whether the Home Owners' Loan Corporation finances itself out of its own funds or whether we appropriate for it.

Mr. FORD of California. Will the gentleman yield to me? Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to a member of the committee. Mr. FORD of California. The difference between the interest the Home Owners' Loan Corporation pays and the interest on the mortgage that the mortgagor pays gives enough latitude to take care not only of the operating expenses but of any possible losses that may accrue during the course of the year.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes.

Mr. SWEENEY. Going back to section 10 (a), is it the gentleman's understanding that the funds of the Federal home-loan bank are now available for the creation of mortgage associations?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I shall get to that in a minute. That is covered by a later section.

Section 9 has been covered quite generally on the floor in the last hour, and I shall not go further into it except to point out the figure of a billion and a half additional, which is carried in the bill. The Corporation started off with $2,000,000,000. That sum was then increased to $3,000,000,-000, and this bill makes a total of four and a half billion dollars-in other words, more than two times the original authorization to the Corporation when the act was first

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.
Mr. CRAWFORD. There are 200,000 loans pending in the legal department, and the 500,000 applications which have not yet reached the legal department. As I understood the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL], has the Board given any idea as to what percentage of those 700,000 applications will be cared for by the $1,250,000,000 which the Board mentioned at first? Have there been any figures submitted on that?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes; I can answer the gentleman.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What I desire to get is a rough estimate as to the particular applications which will be discarded if we appropriate only $1,500,000,000.

Mr. HOLLISTER. An estimate was made by the Board in the preliminary discussions of this bill that $1,250,000,000 would handle all existing applications by a very narrow margin. The applications which are now in legal, which are going through in due course, will be attended to by money which is already appropriated. There are some 800,000 loans which have already been made. There are about 200,-000 more for which there is still money on hand, thus taking up the difference between $2,500,000,000 and $3,100,000,000, which is $600,000,000, always remembering that the average is about $3,000 per loan. There are about 700,000 more applications on hand, of which it is practically sure 200,000 will not get through in good shape and should not be considered, leaving an outside figure of 500,000. Five hundred thousand multiplied by $3,000 is $1,500,000,000. The Board felt strongly that as the program continued, always assuming that recovery has started, and with private funds now flowing into the mortgage market through the opening up of business by the building-and-loan associations, other mortgage organizations, and insurance companies, to that extent the pressure on the Home Owners' Loan Corporation would be relieved, not only with respect to whatever additional applications might be received but with respect to those already in. The Board reports that a number of applications already on hand are being withdrawn, where the applicant has found that, through his building-and-loan association or in some other way, he is able to do his financing. The Board therefore felt that with $1,250,000,000 it would be able to satisfy the 500,000 applications which, at the most, of those on hand would be good. It was felt by the committee. however, that to make it absolutely sure, so that we could say no applications on hand and those which might be received up to the time the act became effective would be turned down, we had better raise it to $1,500,000,000. Does that make it clear?

Mr. CRAWFORD. That is a very fine explanation and gives the answer I wanted. There is one additional thought: This yardstick of roughly 500,000 applications which the gentleman is now using, discarding 200,000, is taken as of November 13, or as of about what date?

Mr. HOLLISTER. As of the date the chairman talked to us, which was within the last 2 or 3 weeks.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. HEALEY. In connection with the statement just made concerning the fact that there are now more private funds available for mortgages, has there been a tendency on the part of the private lending agencies to modify the terms of their mortgages so as to conform more to the home-loan mortgage?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Fahey told us that there were a half billion dollars of money of various insurance companies which was ready now to go into the field, and that some of the insurance companies were beginning to loan on a 5percent, 20-year basis. I did not myself verify those figures. but that is what we were told. Frankly, however, the insurance companies do not loan on the proportion of value that the Corporation does.

Mr. HEALEY. Just one further question.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Certainly.

Mr. HEALEY. The fact that there is a tendency on the part of the private lending agencies to modify the terms of their mortgages is due, of course, to this particular legis-

Mr. HOLLISTER. I do not think there is the slightest doubt about it.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. COX. Was the gentleman not in error in his reply to a question by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAW-FORD! to the effect that in further lending the Corporation might consider applications received up until 2 or 3 weeks ago, when Mr. Fahey, chairman of the Board, was before the gentleman's committee? As a matter of fact, did not the Corporation close its doors to new applications on November 13, 1934, and in effect, this money will be loaned only to those who had their applications on file as of that date, and that no person who has sought to file an application since November 13, 1934, or may hereafter seek to file an application, will have the slightest chance of being considered? Now, is that not the fact?

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is a question on which I cannot answer the gentleman definitely. I believe that is substantially the fact.

Mr. COX. Based upon my understanding of what has been done, that is the fact.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I have not been able to verify whether an order of that kind went out generally around the country. It certainly did in some cases. It probably did in a majority of cases. However, I was just shown a newspaper clipping a few moments ago by a gentleman on my side of the aisle, in which the Virginia State chairman of the H. O. L. C. announced they were beginning to receive applications again in Virginia, under what authority I do not know. It would seem to me that the Corporation could very properly, pending the time it will take this bill to pass both Houses and ultimately be signed by the President, open its doors for applications. As a matter of fact, the November 13 order had nothing to do with the law itself. It was done by the Corporation and the Corporation could, today or tomorrow, or any day it desires, change that order. The bill only covers applications which are received up to the time the bill becomes law. If the bill does not become law for 30 days and the Corporation cared to open the doors for making applications again, it could do so, for the Corporation would have that power.

Mr. COX. Now, with respect to the order of November 13 of last year, I wish to state upon the authority of the testimony of the Chairman of the Board, Mr. Fahey, that it was universally applied to the entire country.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 additional minutes.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. MAY. As I understand the situation from the gentleman's statement there were approximately 700,000 applications filed altogether. It has reached the point where, when the money available is used up, they will have 700,000 which will need new money, and some 200,000 of these will be unable to meet legal requirements or the eligibility requirements of the act.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes; the loan requirements of the

Mr. MAY. I should like to make this further inquiry. Of course, we appreciate that returns are coming in both by way of interest payments as well as principal payments on the loans previously made. Do these moneys when collected. either from principal or interest, become a revolving fund that could be reloaned by the board to new applicants?

Mr. HOLLISTER. No. The total which can be lent is in relation to the bond issue. There cannot be an increase to the extent of the payments made. In other words, if 10 men pay their mortgages amounting to $50,000, that $50,000 may not be re-lent for new mortgages.

Mr. MAY. There is a provision in this bill which authorizes the filing of new applications up to the time the bill

Mr. HOLLISTER. There never has been any limitation in the law as to the filing of applications. The limitation on the filing of applications was solely an order issued by the Board itself. There has never been any limitation in the law as to the filing of applications; the law is just as it was before.

Mr. EATON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield. Mr. EATON. On the question of eligibility for loans, I have received a number of inquiries as to whether the owner of a building occupied as a home, a small part of which building may be used as a store for a small business to support the home, would be eligible for a loan under this legislation

Mr. HOLLISTER. The Board has made rulings to cover that, and they have a special committee which passes on border-line cases, for such there will be always. Mr. Fahey made the statement to the committee that if the principal use of the building was for home purposes it was eligible, but that if the principal use was for business, as, for instance, where the home part of it consisted of one room, or a place where someone slept, such home use was merely incidental, and such a building would not be eligible.

Mr. EATON. But that if the principal use was for a homein other words, if it was a real home—that it would be

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER I yield.

Mr. SWEENEY. The question propounded by the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey is a very important question. I do not want to make a speech-

Mr. HOLLISTER. I wish the gentleman would ask his question; I will try to answer it.

Mr. SWEENEY. Can the gentleman tell me whether or not the Board has laid down rules for the determination of what constitutes a homestead? At the present time it must be decided by the respective State managers, thereby creating 48 different interpretations of what constitutes a homestead.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I did not so understand.

Mr. SWEENEY. That is the rule.
Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. NICHOLS. Can the gentleman advise the Committee as to what will be the status of the applications which have been filed but which for some technical reason have been rejected? If the technical objection could be corrected, would they be considered as filed applications or as new applications?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I could not answer the gentleman.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. LUDLOW. Can the gentleman state, approximately, what percentage of the borrowers are delinquent in their payments?

Mr. HOLLISTER. As I remember the figures, Mr. Fahey stated that 70 percent of those whose mortgages were held by the Corporation were paying right on the dot at the first request; that an additional 16 percent were paying on the second request made by mail; and that there were only 14 percent delinquent after the second mailed request was

Mr. LUDLOW. Can the gentleman state what arrangements there are to carry along this 16 percent of delinquents? Many of them are in desperate circumstances and, obviously, must be dealt with leniently.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman must look to the law for that, and to the regulations. The act originally provided that principal payment might be waived for 3 years, and, as amended, it gives the Corporation discretion to waive payments of all kinds. Of course, if a borrower fails to make his interest payments, eventually there must be foreclosure, because the Corporation must be handled as a business proposition. As I understand, there has been 1 foreclosure out of some 800,000 mortgages held.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield. Mr. CRAWFORD. If the order we were discussing a while ago with reference to the 700,000 applications is dated as of November 13, 1934, and if the statement of the Board as to the $1,250,000,000, plus the $250,000,000 which has been added by the committee, covers only the applications received as of November 13, 1934, then, as I understand this proposal, there is no further provision for applications filed since, whether mailed in and rejected or otherwise?

Mr. HOLLISTER. The statement of the Board was that $1.250.000.000 would be sufficient to take care of everything which had been taken in at the time the request was made to our committee. The committee added $250,000,000 more. I myself feel that the $250,000,000 more will handle everything to date, and any amount which may be received between now and the time this bill becomes effective.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. DITTER. Referring to the matter of defaults, has the committee any information as to the location of those defaults, the States in which they occurred?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I imagine that could be found out from the Corporation.

Mr. DITTER. It is not incorporated in the hearings?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I do not know. There are several tables incorporated in the hearings. The Corporation, I know, has that information set up by States.

Mr. DITTER. Will the gentleman venture an opinion as to the possible contingent liability that would come about as a result of these defaults?

Mr. HOLLISTER. No one could possibly predict that today. It depends on the economic situation in the country. The Board itself thinks, if the economic situation improves, and with the care they have taken in appraisement, that there will be no ultimate loss, but naturally when the Government is holding $3,000,000,000 of mortgages, and will hold four and a half billion dollars before long, a man would be rash to predict what loss will eventually fall on the Gov-

Mr. DITTER. Is it the gentleman's opinion that the difference between the amount of interest paid by the mortgagor and the amount of interest carried in the bonds will be sufficient to compensate the Government for the loss incident to these defaults?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Some guess might be made, but how could anyone make a real prediction in reference to that at the present time? Nobody can tell what further distress there will be, and no one can tell what loss will be sustained.

Mr. DITTER. Did I understand the gentleman to say that at the present time there are defaults to the extent of 60 percent?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Fourteen percent. That is, in default on the second notice.

Mr. DITTER. Is that as to payment of interest or payment of interest and principal?

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is probably payment of interest, because under the law the principal may be waived by the Corporation.

Mr. DITTER. The amortization period has not yet started.

Mr. HOLLISTER. May I complete my statement, and then if I have additional time I will be glad to answer questions. There are a great many sections of the bill that are self-explanatory and do not need further explanation; however, there are two or three sections that should be touched upon.

Section 12 permits the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to acquire bonds of the home-loan bank system. At the present time any bonds issued by that system must be sold in the open market. It has been thought wise to permit the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, if a certain amount of money is needed by the home-loan bank system, instead of having to put out a new Government-guaranteed security on the market, it would be better to allow the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to make advances temporarily by the acquisition of bonds of the home-loan bank system.

Perhaps the next section which needs comment over and above that contained in the committee's report is section 17, which has to do with the insurance fund for building-and-loan associations, or rather the condition in which building-and-loan associations must keep themselves in order to qualify for insurance. The present act provides that certain reserves should be set up within 10 years. Under this bill that is liberalized and made 20 years, giving the mortgage institutions an opportunity to have a longer time in which they may set up these reserves and make themselves eligible for insurance of their accounts.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 additional minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the second part of section 17 strikes from the existing act a prohibition against the payment of dividends by a mortgage institution which is in the insurance fund in the event there are losses which are chargeable to the reserves. It was felt that this was unduly severe, in that a small loss might be charged to reserves and yet the institution might be in perfectly good shape to pay dividends, might have a record of many years standing which it wished to maintain, and in order to preserve the confidence of the community it might be found desirable to pay these dividends. The regulations under which these institutions operate under the insurance fund are solely in the hands of the insurance corporation, and it is perfectly easy for it to control the situation, for no building-and-loan association would dare declare a dividend without the permission of the insurance corporation. It was therefore felt wise to take out of the act that prohibitory provision.

There is one section which deserves considerable attention, because it has been touched on very little so far and is quite important. That is section 22, which changes title I of the Housing Act in order to provide that the Government may insure up to 20 percent of a line of credit given by a bank or other lending institution on business buildings as well as on small homes. You will remember that the Housing Act permitted or authorized insurance by the Government up to 20 percent of the line of credit given on loans not to exceed $2,000 for renovating purposes. This has now been extended to business property with a limitation of $25,000.

I believe the membership of the committee should realize what a radical departure that is from the original plan of the Housing Act. The Housing Act was supposedly to cover housing. This new provision, of course, has nothing whatever to do with housing, and naturally involves a larger risk to the Government, inasmuch as a $25,000 loan without mortgage security (and these loans are not supposed to be mortgage loans) involves a larger risk than a loan of $2,000. This was a highly controversial point in committee and deserves careful consideration on the part of the Members of the House.

Mr. MILLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to the gentleman from Arkan-

Mr. MILLER. Is it the purpose of that amendment to permit hotels, apartment houses, and other business institutions as enumerated in section 22 of the bill to have the benefit of this reinsurance provided in the Housing Act?

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is correct.

Mr. MILLER. In other words, the Housing Act is extended—

Mr. HOLLISTER. To cover loans of $25,000 to business property of certain kinds as described in the act.

Mr. MILLER. As a matter of fact there appears in my State especially a need for this liberalization, because we have many small hotels and other businesses down there.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I would like to yield to the gentleman for a question, but not to go into any further discussion.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. For a question on this section; yes.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Would this right to extend such a loan to $25,000 for repairs, say, on an apartment, be affected by the limitation in a former part of this bill, to an apartment or a house of four units?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Oh, no; it may be 10 or 12 or 15 or 20. There is no limitation on this.

Mr. MASSINGALE. There may be any number of units provided they use the money for repairs.

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is correct.

Section 23 is a change. The gentleman from Ohio asked a little while ago about the national mortgage associations and the provision cutting down the requirement of capital from $5,000,000 to $2,000,000, and that is involved in this section.

The next section permits an increase in capital of these associations by the issue of notes, bonds, debentures, and so forth, by 15 times instead of 10. The result is that under the new act, with an original $2,000,000 capital, it can be built up to $32,000,000, whereas under the old act $5,000,000 cf original capital was required and could only be built up to $55,000,000.

Remember also that in the act recently passed, extending the life of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for 2 years, which became law on January 31, we authorized the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lend to institutions of this nature, thereby assisting them to get started and get into the business of buying and selling insured mortgages.

I shall now be glad to yield in the time I have left.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to my colleague on the committee.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Can the gentleman tell us whether under section 23 any of these mortgage or money-lending associations have been formed with a capital of $5,000,000?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Not one, notwithstanding the promise that was made last spring that there was money ready to leap into this line of business.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. KERR. In order that I may understand the attitude of the committee and the Board toward this legislation, I want to ask the gentleman this question: Did the committee and the Board contemplate, in making provision for $1,500,000,000, to extend the activity of this Corporation so that they would simply take care of those applications which were on file or in the possession of the attorneys, or did they contemplate taking care of all applications up to the passage of this act?

Mr. HOLLISTER. The Board felt that the applications on file are all those that should be considered. I am certain it was the idea of the Board that it should not be extended. This was in the request for $1,250,000,000. I am sure, although I do not think the question was ever asked, that the chairman of the Board would feel that with the additional $250,000,000 which has been granted, there would be considerable leeway for additional applications, which, if the Board cared to change its present regulations, could be received up to the time this new act is passed.

Mr. KERR. But, really, in the contemplation of the Board and the committee, you are only providing for the 14th of November 1934?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I believe that was the Board's view. Mr. KLOEB. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes.

Mr. KLOEB. The gentleman has passed over section 19. Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes; I am glad the gentleman has called my attention to that.

Mr. KLOEB. This section provides for a reduction in the interest rate from one-fourth of 1 percent to one-eighth of 1 percent to these institutions that qualify under the savings and loans corporation provision. What I am interested in is this: Up to this time, I think I am correct in saying, this insurance corporation has received applications and acted upon those applications only of institutions that have been federalized. Is that correct?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I do not think that is correct.

Mr. KLOEB. The gentleman does not think it is correct?

Mr. HOLLISTER. No; I do not believe it is correct. I do not think there has been any great demand from other institutions to come in, but the Corporation, as I understand, is ready to accept any institution that fulfills the conditions and only too glad to accept them.

Mr. KLOEB. They have accepted applications, but not passed on them?

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman may be correct about that

Mr. KLOEB. In other words, is not the gentleman acquainted with the fact that the Corporation is giving preference to those institutions that federalized?

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman means in connection with the insurance fund?

Mr. KLOEB. Yes.

Mr. HOLLISTER. If that is the case, I do not know it.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. LUDLOW. I think all of us have observed that in recent years the building-and-loan associations have been absolutely dormant. What encouraging sign does the gentleman see that they are beginning to function and to make loans?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Simply what I have been told with respect to the increased activity of the home-loan banks, the fact that some of the building-and-loan associations are going into the insurance fund, and the general statement from the heads of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to the effect that many applications now on file are being withdrawn because they are being financed by their local building-and-loan associations.

Mr. LUDLOW. The gentleman believes they are really beginning to put out money?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I am so informed.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes.

Mr. SCOTT. With the Government holding $4,500,000,000 of mortgages, does the gentleman have any idea what percentage of the total mortgage indebtedness on homes this

Mr. HOLLISTER. I seem to remember a figure of something like $20,000,000,000, but whether that is correct or not, I would not care to say. I would want to verify that figure.

Mr. SCOTT. In other words, the Government would be holding about one-fourth of them?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Quite a percentage of them; yes.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 minutes.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Committee, there are other members of the committee who want to speak under general debate, and therefore I am going to take very little time, especially in view of the fact that the chairman has explained the bill in a general way, and the ranking Republican Member, Mr. Hollister, has very ably explained the bill in detail.

As I understand the situation, the subject which is of most interest to the House is how much money will be completion of the loans that had not been made up to the | available for loans and whether or not there will be an extension of the time for filing applications. Also, whether or not the bill will, in the opinion of the committee; be amended increasing the available amount.

What actually happened was this: Those Members who it was thought would be conferees on the Senate and House sides were called together. Mr. Fahey appeared before the group and said that the Treasury only wanted $1,250,000,000 for the purpose of taking care of applications made up to and including November 13, and he said that maybe that would be enough, but that he would prefer to have an additional $250,000,000, and so, insofar as we were able to speak for the committee, we agreed that the amount should be $1,500,000,000.

Now, then, under the bill applications can only be considered which were actually filed on or before November 13. There is no question about that, no necessity for any debate, and no room for misinterpretation.

Mr. WALTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. WALTER. Will the gentleman tell us why November 13 was selected?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I do not know about that, but I presume the Board would say that the money had run out and they decided they would have to cease receiving appli-

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. KENNEY. Notice was given by the Board on November 16 but no general notice was given to the public that they would cease applications on the 13th.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. So far as I know, the gentleman's statement is correct.

Mr. KENNEY. Does not the gentleman think that the public ought to have had some notice beforehand?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Let me say to the gentleman that I am sympathetic to an extension of the time.

Mr. YOUNG. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I will yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. YOUNG. The manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in the State of Ohio states on November 13 there were approximately 70,000 applications that had not been acted upon. Of this number he estimates approximately 56,000 of these applications are worthy and should be granted; that if Ohio alone is to take care of these worthy applications filed up to November 13, it would take between $170,000,000 and $200,000,000. Does the gentleman think that $1,500,000,000 is going to be sufficient for the entire country?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. In this conference that I have already alluded to we inquired about that, and with great particularity, and we were assured that insofar as the eligible applications are concerned, which were filed before or on November 13, $1,500,000,000 would be entirely adequate. I do not know anything about it myself.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman spoke of applications filed. Does that mean that they are filed in the county or the State or down here in Washington?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Filed wherever it is necessary to be filed. In Maryland, for instance, on the Eastern Shore, we have a district manager. If they were filed with that district manager by November 13, they are all right. I do not know what the situation is in the gentleman's State.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I want to thank the gentleman for his statement that he is in favor of extending the time for new applications, and to inquire what time he has in mind.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. As far as I am concerned, I think 60 days after this law becomes effective would be about right.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. It would not be for Pennsylvania.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. It would, if you give it some publicity.

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes.

Mr. KENNEY. If the time were extended for a period of 60 days, does not the gentleman think he ought to authorize additional bonds up to at least the sum of $2,000,000,000, instead of $1,500,000,000?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Up to this time that is not the opinion of the committee. The opinion of the committee is that, considering the way the applications fell off this fall, $250,000,000 additional will be adequate. Applications fell off so that in the last week there were only 5,000, whereas at the peak there were 41,000 a week.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes.

Mr. LUDLOW. The gentleman spoke of a pronounced falling off in the number of applications. Is that due to a resumption of normal lending facilities?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. No; it is supposed to be due to the fact that most of the people who were eligible to ask for loans under this bill have already done so.

Mr. KENNEY. The gentleman stated that the applications have fallen off in the last week.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. They had been falling off for several weeks until the last week there were only about 5,000 of them.

Mr. KENNEY. Was not one of the reasons for that, the new regulations that were put into effect, so that people were required to get more data, more information, which postponed the actual filing of their applications?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I know of no such condition in my own district.

Mr. KENNEY. The gentleman knows there was a change in the rules and regulations from time to time, a change in the data that the home owner had to furnish to the Corporation.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I presume they did change their rules and regulations, but that they made them more rigid, I have no information.

Mr. KENNEY. I might say that they were very much more rigid.

Mr. HARTER. Does the gentleman believe private lending agencies are ready and willing to make the type of loans that have been made by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, thus preventing the necessity for continuing our lending activities?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. My opinion—and this is outside of this discussion—is that unless we are able to create some other means of distribution than a distribution based on borrowed money, neither the Government nor private institutions are safe in lending, because I think this condition of depression will continue. That is what I think about that. [Applause.]

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Tell us about that. We are interested in that.

Mr. BRUNNER. Is it not a fact that if we do extend the time for filing those applications only those in distress in June 1933 would be eligible for the loan?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. That is correct. Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. WOLCOTT. In answering the question just asked, whether this would apply only to loans made in June 1933, it applies to those who were in default since then and who have become distressed through unemployment and the economic situation or misfortune.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes; that is true. Those are the qualifications. I thought the gentleman had the qualifications in mind

Further answering the question asked by one of the gentlemen, I think I should say that at the same time we are issuing tax-free bonds that in some of our States, if a woman goes to a store for a soup bone and pays 10 cents for it, she has to pay a tax of 1 cent, or 10 percent.

In other words, the bonds of the rich are tax-free and the soup bones of the poor are taxed, and that is deflationary. That is destroying the consuming power of the public, and when you do that and as long as you do that you cannot have any relief from this depression. [Applause.]

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. Does not the gentleman think it would be better for the Congress to fix the date in this bill after which no applications will be received, rather than leave it up to the administration?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Well, that is what is done under the bill as written. I presume if there is any extension of time it will be for a definite period.

Mr. DONDERO. And let Congress take the responsibility on that, rather than to hand it on to the administration of the act?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. CAVICCHIA].

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Mr. Chairman, I know that many Members are interested in the phase of the bill which has interested building-and-loan associations. As the bill was originally drawn it drew the fire of the building-and-loan associations. They were fearful that if passed in the original form they would be harmed. I think the committee has considered all the objections of State associations and the bill as it is now presented to you shows many changes which will benefit building-and-loan associations as a whole. One of the objections that the associations made to the original bill was to the change in the board of directors of the 12 Federal homeloan banks. That section has been completely eliminated, so that no change is contemplated.

The building-and-loan representatives are directors of the 12 banks, and the Government has sufficient supervision over all banks so that it, the Government, will not suffer because it has a larger capital invested in the Federal home-loan bank than have the building-and-loan associations which are members of the bank.

Another objection made by the building-and-loan associations was to the provision contained in the original bill, giving $250,000,000 to the Federal home-loan bank so that it could buy shares in Federal savings associations. It was felt this was a discrimination which would work to the harm of the building-and-loan associations. The bill as it now comes before you provides that $250,000,000 may be used, without discrimination, to buy shares of stock in both kinds of associations, whether Federal or State. The bill as it is in your hands, calls for an additional $1,500,000,000 to take care of those applications which are now in. I believe the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Goldsborduch] mentioned the fact that an amendment will be offered extending the time within which new applications may be filed. That is limited to 60 days after the passage of the law. Am I

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes: that is correct.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. A great deal has been said while the rule was under discussion, as to politics and graft.

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I yield.

Mr. KENNY. Before the gentleman goes into that, he referred to the building-and-loan associations as having their objections to this bill removed, as it is now presented. That, I presume, includes reference to the building-and-loan associations of our State of New Jersey, which now have no objection to the bill?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I can say to my colleague from New Jersey that representatives not only from the building-and-loan associations in New Jersey but from the United States League of Building and Loan Associations are very much pleased with the bill in its present form. All objections which our associations in New Jersey made have been corrected in this bill.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I yield. Mr. DOCKWEILER. Before the gentleman passes the subject he has just been discussing, on the question of applications, how will the various divisions or agencies throughout the country know when to determine when an application has been filed? Will it be when a person's application has been assigned a number in that office, or when it happens to be in the legal department, or when?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. The gentleman is asking me a question which goes to administration. I cannot answer. I can only give him my offhand opinion, that when anybody applies for a loan, whether it has been given a number or not, he has made an application. Such person then qualifies under the present bill. If he does not, then it ought to be made very clear to the Board that that is the intention of the Congress in passing this bill. That also includes those whose applications have been turned down, in my opinion, and who want it reviewed. I am not speaking for the Board. The gentleman understands that.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. I understand that, but if we are going to leave that up to the administration, does the gentleman not think it would be much better right here on page 6 of the bill to say what the exact line of demarcation is, whether an application is an application in actual force and effect, as, if, and when something happens under it?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I suggest to the gentleman that he take this matter up with the chairman of the committee who is ready to offer an amendment. The exact language of that amendment I do not know. I do know that an amendment is ready to be offered to section 9.

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman yield for a brief

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I yield.

Mr. KENNEY. The gentleman is a valuable member of the committee and I would like to have his opinion.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. We both come from New Jersey.

Mr. KENNEY. If the time within which to file new applications is extended for a period of 60 days is it the opinion of the gentleman that the bonds we authorized to be increased are sufficient in amount?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I do not quite understand the gentleman. We are increasing the bond issue $1,500,000,000 for new loans plus $250,000,000 for the purchase of stocks in Federal savings associations and building-and-loan associations, which makes an increase of $1,750,000,000.

Mr. KENNEY. Does the gentleman think $1,500,000,000 is sufficient to take care of all the applications which may be filed within a period of 60 days after the passage of the

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Mr. Fahey told the committee-

Mr. KENNEY. What figure does the gentleman recom-

Mr. CAVICCHIA. The committee's figures, which are $1,500,000,000 for applications now in and which will come in plus $250,000,000 for the board to buy shares of stocks in Federal savings associations and in building-and-loan associations, which amounts to $1,750,000,000.

Mr. KENNEY. Would the gentleman seriously object to increasing the figure to $2,000,000,000?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I will say this to my colleague from New Jersey and to the Members of the House, that while I want distressed home owners taken care of as far as it is practicable, I wonder how many are getting money now who really do not need it to the exclusion of those who really do need it? Nobody can set the limit as to what will be sufficient.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I yield.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Will any of this money be used for increased personnel?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I do not think so. Some of the per-stopped making loans in November. It may be that some of them will come back, but they certainly will not need more than they had before November 15.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. They will not increase that number?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I do not think so.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I yield.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. If I have understood the statements of the various speakers, the Board itself called for $1,250,000,000 to take care of applications that had been received.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Yes.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. But the committee added $250,000,000 to take care of applications which may come in now; is that correct?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. That is correct.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 additional minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Another important change that should be noted is that in the existing law loans were authorized to be made on buildings that housed not more than three families and on property which was appraised at not more than $20,000. The pending bill so changes the existing law as to make loans permissible on four-family houses; and the mortgage is not to exceed $20,000 regardless of what the appraised value is. It seems foolish to limit the appraised value of property and overlook the fact that the higher the appraised value the greater the security the corporation will have.

I have heard a number of colleagues say that the amount provided in this bill is not sufficient, that the time within which applications shall be filed is not long enough. I want to say to the Members of this House, going back to the question of my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Kenney], if you are going to leave the door open for applications to be made without setting a time limit, neither $1,500,000,000 nor $2,000,000,000 will be enough, nor will $3,000,000,000 nor $4,000,000,000; you will have to have the Government agency take up, in time, practically every mortgage that the home owners of our country have where the buildings offered as security do not house more than four families. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. REILLY].

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Chairman, the pending bill is designed to amend and make more workable three legislative enactments passed by Congress for the purpose of helping to bring our country up and out of the industrial mire in which it has been wallowing for the past 5 years. The bill amends the Home Loan Bank Act, which was passed during Mr. Hoover's administration in 1932.

The Home Loan Bank Act was really the first piece of legislation written since the panic which had for its direct object the putting of men to work, through the furnishing of funds to the home-building organizations of the country. The Home Loan Bank Act was designed to serve the home-building organizations of the country in the way that the Federal Reserve Bank Act has served the banks of the country, through the furnishing of facilities for rediscounting home mortgages, thereby releasing money to continue the home-building program.

The idea was that there was a demand in certain sections of our country for the construction of new homes, but because of the money situation, and particularly because of the frozen mortgage situation, there was no money available for such purposes, and that by providing banks for rediscounting existing home mortgages, the needed money could be secured.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation Act was passed 2 years ago and was designed to save the homes of our counsonnel were dismissed after the regional and district offices try, which were threatened with mortgage foreclosures, because of the inability of the owners to refinance their mortgages and also because of the fact that millions of home owners were unemployed and consequently unable to pay their taxes, keep their homes in repair, or to take care of their mortgage liabilities.

The Federal Housing Act, passed in the last session of Congress, also had as its aim the putting of men to work, through governmental assistance in aiding home owners to secure funds for the repair or remodeling of their homes on monthly payments, and also for the purpose of aiding those of our citizens who desired to become home owners in securing the needed financial assistance. These are the two aims and purposes of this legislation, having in view the creating of new jobs, both in the repair of homes and the construction of new homes.

Time will not permit me to discuss the functioning of these three acts, so I shall devote all of my time to the workings of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. It is this act in which the people of the country are most interested today, and it is the one act passed by Congress since the panic began which has brought more direct relief to distressed citizens than any other single piece of recovery legislation.

After the Corporation had been functioning for about a year, the permissible bond issue was raised from $2,000,000.000 to $3,000,000,000. One million seven hundred and thirty-nine thousand nine hundred and thirty applications from home owners have been made to the Corporation for mortgage relief. It is stated that about 400,000 more mortgagors were not permitted to file their applications because of the fact that they were ineligible for relief under the law, not being in the class of distressed home owners. Applications filed with the Corporation to date represent mortgage obligations of about $5,689,000,000, representing about one-fourth of all outstanding urban home mortgages in this country. No government in all of the history of the world ever undertook to make small loans to hundreds of thousands of its citizens on their homes on such a scale as our Government undertook in the Home Owners' Loan Corporation law.

To date about 800,000 mortgagors or families have found relief through this Government set-up, and more than two and one-half of the three billions of dollars authorized by the Government have been used up for relief of these distressed mortgagors. On last November the Corporation ordered that no more applications for mortgage relief would be received, and that only the applications which had reached the hands of the attorneys would be considered until further action was taken by Congress. This order was made necessary because of the fact that more applications were already filed than the funds authorized by Congress would take care of. At that time 200,000 applications were in the hands of attorneys for closing, and it was thought that there were sufficient funds on hand to take care of these applications.

About 100,000 applicants have been refused outright, and there are about 600,000 applications now on file that are not in the hands of attorneys yet to be finally disposed of. It is estimated that about 400,000 of these applications for mortgage relief will be approved.

The pending bill increases the bond-issuing privilege of the Corporation $1,750,000,000, making a total bond issue for refinancing of home mortgages of $4,750,000,000. This bill also provides that the Corporation should not only consider the applications already filed but also applications of distressed mortgagors who, in good faith, prior to the date the amendment to this law takes effect, sought relief from the Corporation by formal application, letter, or otherwise, and who will file their application within 60 days after this amendment to the law takes effect.

There was a great deal of complaint voiced after the Corporation refused to receive any more applications last November, because there was no notice given to the public of the intentions of the Corporation to terminate the application period. Some mortgagors had recently received blanks on which to make application for relief. Others had consulted local representatives of the Corporation and others had written in for information, but because of the limiting of time for receiving applications without any public notice, they were unable to complete their applications. It is believed that this additional authority given to the Corporation for receiving applications will take care of all distressed mortgagors who last November had made some effort to appeal to the Corporation for mortgage relief.

There has been some criticism against the way in which the Home Owners' Loan Corporation has functioned; that favoritism has been shown; that mortgagors not entitled to relief were given relief; that mortgagors entitled to relief were denied relief. Of course, it was humanly impossible to set up, under high pressure, an organization with 20,000 officers and representatives and have it function 100 percent from the standpoint of honesty, integrity, and ability. I think the Corporation has done a good job under the circumstances.

In Wisconsin there has been very little complaint. Of course, some applicants felt aggrieved when the property valuation was lower than they expected it to be. Property valuation is often a question of judgment, and it would be asking too much to expect appraisers to always meet the property valuation expected by the mortgagor. Wisconsin was fortunate in the personnel of its Home Owners' Loan Corporation set-up. The men who were selected to direct operations in the different districts of Wisconsin were men of ability, character, and integrity, and while they have made mistakes and have been misinformed and misled by appraisements, I think it is the judgment of all who are familiar with the workings of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation of Wisconsin that it has functioned pretty close to 100 percent.

There can be no doubt but that the Government has bought a great many pieces of property, particularly in the early days of the functioning of the Corporation. There can also be no doubt but that a great many people got mortgage relief when they were not entitled to it, because they were not distressed mortgagors. Most of these errors occurred in the youth of the Corporation, but as the Corporation functioned and the personnel became more proficient in sizing up property values, the number of mistakes and errors became less and less every day.

Considering the depression and the fact that millions of our citizens are out of work, the fact that the Corporation is able to report that 70 percent of the mortgagors are making their monthly payments, at least as regards their interest obligations, is most encouraging. The report further is that only 16 percent of the mortgagors have failed to make monthly payments of interest or principal. No private loaning institution in this country has such a record, and it speaks well for the management of the Corporation. There is no doubt today but that interest rates are too high, and it is believed that the workings of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation will result in bringing down interest rates not only to those who are privileged to be served by the Corporation but to all of our citizens who are subject to interest obligations, either on mortgages or notes or obligations of any kind.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish].

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I hope that I will not be interrupted until I have at least concluded my remarks, and after that I shall be glad to answer any questions if there is any time left.

Possibly I have not been in the habit of giving great praise to some of the unsound and unworkable measures of this administration in the past; perhaps I have not always agreed with the experiments and innovations of the "brain trust"; but I am pleased, as a member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, to stand here in the House and give full praise to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. This act has provided very necessary relief to some 800,000 American citizens who, due to the fact they were unemployed and their funds exhausted, might have lost their homes in which they had placed their investments over many years if this legislation had not been enacted, reducing the rate of interest and making it possible to extend the time for payment of the principal over a long period

This is one of the new-deal measures that should have unanimous support. It was reported out of the committee over a year ago, unanimously. It was again, just the other day, reported by the same committee, with certain modifications, unanimously.

Together with the Home Owners' Loan Corporation should be placed the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which was a Republican measure, recommended by a Republican President.

Another measure that I believe has been satisfactory is the Farm Credit Act, to provide funds for the farmers to save their farms.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill is truly nonpartisan and has been considered on that basis, and there is no question that it was needed at the time and that it has rendered splendid service and relief. It is a relief measure that has accomplished effective results.

I do not propose to speak at any length about the administration of it and the carrying out of the intent and purposes of the act. I realize full well it is a very difficult proposition to handle efficiently the disbursement of such a huge sum of money—upward of $3,000,000,000. There is no question that there has been some favoritism, some politics, and, probably, some graft. In some States it may have become a racket, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Sweeney] should have ample time to present to the House the information he has in regard to the maladministration of this act. It is his duty to present the facts to the country. At the same time we must realize the difficulties that a man like Mr. Fahey, for whom I have the highest regard, has had to deal with in erecting almost overnight such a huge organization.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. FISH. I yield.

Mr. SWEENEY. Does the gentleman think that the Congress or the Nation will get the information we are entitled to if Mr. Fahey persists in refusing to give the information and declines to answer a question and your powerful Rules Committee denies the right of a Congressman to ask a question?

Mr. FISH. I want to say to the gentleman, as a member of the minority, I have the highest regard for him personally. I know how difficult it is when you belong to the majority—and I have belonged to the majority on many occasions-to stand up and try to do what you consider is your public duty to do-to expose graft, favoritism, and rotten administration. I know the gentleman has charged that the administration of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation is a racket and that it is replete with graft. I agree with the gentleman that Mr. Fahey should answer whatever question the gentleman propounds to him. I agree with the gentleman that the House should compel Mr. Fahey to answer any honest and honorable question of information that the gentleman or any other Member of the House may ask, and I rather think if the gentleman puts that in the form of a resolution, asking such questions, Mr. Fahey would answer them; or if he did not answer them, the House would pass a resolution requiring him to do so.

We are entitled to all the facts, and I am sure, representing his party, the only motive the gentleman has is to improve the situation and to do away with any rottenness or any favoritism that may exist, and the gentleman should be aided in his efforts.

I do not see why the gentleman is blocked by his own party, because everyone realizes the difficulty in setting up a proper and efficient administration of the act. It was built overnight, and, of course, there is graft in it. Of course, there is maladministration and favoritism and politics, and I propose, myself, to say a little about that, but not against the bill. I am for the bill and as far as I know today, I am for Mr. Fahey, but I am naturally not for some of the underlings who have used this relief measure for their own selfish purposes, either political or for graft. Such men should be fired out of the corporation, but I do not condemn Mr. Fahey. I think we ought to get the facts out of him and then demand that he clean up his own house and insist on it, and I shall go along with any Member of the House in that direction.

I agree with the gentleman from Ohio that the H. O. L. C. has been used, unfortunately, for political purposes. I admit I am a politician. I believe that the patronage should go to the party in power. I believe that the postmasterships should go to the party in power. However, I do not believe these temporary relief organizations, which are set up to relieve distress and help the destitute, should be used as political footballs or should be permitted to be used to play politics with human misery.

That is going a little bit too far. When Vincent Dailey, the New York State manager for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and vice chairman of the Democratic State committee, and good man Friday for Mr. Farley, goes before a civic organization in New York State, and in the most brazen, bare-faced manner states that all the 1,200 employees under the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, who should have been selected for their ability, knowledge, training, an defficiency in real-estate and mortgage transactions were Democrats, I believe that is carrying partisanship too far. That is the most brazen, partisan statement that I ever heard from the head of any Federal organization affording relief in the present economic emergency. Mr. Fahey would be rendering a public service by calling for the resignation of Mr. Dailey, but he will not, as Mr. Farley will see to that.

What can you expect when the manager of the H. O. L. C. and likewise the vice chairman of the Democratic State organization makes that kind of a statement that all of his 1,200 employees in a relief and business organization are Democrats? What can you expect but politics, and the Farley brand of politics at that.

Of course, that is wrong. None of you Democrats in Congress wanted that, you do not want to continue it on that basis or any other basis except efficiency and a square deal regardless of party affiliations. It smells to high heaven. There is no question but that in the last election the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in some States-I do not claim the whole country—but in some States was used for political purposes. In the State of Oregon recipients from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation issued a letter stating that all who received loans should vote the Democratic ticket, particularly for our good friend and colleague, General MARTIN, for Governor. They sent out a letter which I have here, and which I will not take the time to read, calling upon all beneficiaries of the H. O. L. C. to vote the Democratic ticket, whereas every Republican on this side voted for the bill, and every single Republican member of the Committee on Banking and Currency voted for the bill.

It was used for political purposes in Oregon, and I presume in other States—and then as soon as election was over—probably it was a coincidence, I do not want to be too harsh and accuse the Democratic administration of using it solely for politics—but on November 13 orders were issued from Washington shutting down on all future applications for home owners' loans.

That may be a coincidence. Let us assume that it is; but, whatever it is, it is water over the mill; but, if there are still any irregularities, favoritism, or politics, they ought to be exposed publicly.

Now, there are some matters I want to speak about that are not coincidents in handling the relief, but about which I have personal and first-hand information. In my own district, which happens to be the district of the President of the United States, nine members, who have been on the F. E. R. A. or relief rolls, got out a letter in my own county to the unemployed and people receiving relief to the effect that unless they vote the Democratic ticket there will be no relief and they will starve. It amounts to a direct threat in writing of reprisal against the poor and needy who were receiving Government aid if they failed to vote the Democratic ticket.

Mind you, I was one of those who voted for the relief. I voted for the C. W. A. and other relief measures, believing they would be administered in a nonpartisan manner. have abided my time to place the following incontrovertible facts in the Record, so that he who who runs can read. If this abhorrent and vicious practice of using Government funds for votes is sanctioned in the President's district and nothing is done about it by Administrator Hopkins, what can the rest of the country expect? These shameful political tactics must cease. Political corruption is bad enough to contend with, but intimidation of the destitute and unemployed American citizens through use of Government relief is a political fraud and racket of the grossest character and cannot be condoned.

Here is the letter:

COMMITTEE OF PUTNAM COUNTY UNEMPLOYED,

October 30, 1934.

Dear Friend and Fellow Worker: Since March 4, 1933, or in a year and a half, Putnam County has received about $175,000 as a direct result of the present Democratic activities.

You and I have had a job as a result of this money. Some of us have had a job for a short time and some of us have had a

You and I have had a job as a result of this money. Some of us have had a job for a short time and some of us have had a job for a longer time.

This sum can be increased, and more of us will be able to get a job if we support the Democratic program. Ten thousand dollars has come in each month and every effort has been made, and will be made, to increase this to twice the amount.

On the other hand, if we do not support the Democratic program, there is a possibility that this fund will be discontinued for Putnam County, and you and I will no longer be able to get a job. You are urged to support the Democratic candidate for member of assembly, Herbert S. Bell, because he is a part of the Democratic organization, which is bringing in this money. If you vote for his opponent, you are asking the Government to stop sending in this money, which has been coming to you and to me.

Your very existence is at stake. You can save a job for yourself and make jobs for your relatives and friends only by going to the polls on November 6 and supporting Herbert S. Bell for member of assembly, and all of the other Democratic candidates, whose program is in full accord with the national program to this end.

All of the Republican candidates are against the Democratic program, which has helped you, and which will help you more.

Vote the straight Democratic ticket on election day, and save your jobs.

your jobs.

Very truly yours,

CHARLES A. HAIGHT, Jr., DAN CARLO, JOHN McDonald, LEO JAMES, LESLIE FERGUSON. ARTHUR W. TRUESDELL,

WILLIAM THOMPSON, JOSEPH MAYETT, WILLIAM WHITLEY, SPENCER W. HANSE, EDWARD LUNNING,

For the Committee.

This went out to all of the unemployed in my county. I admit that I am a politician. I admit that I will go as far as anyone within the bounds of reason and decency to help my party, but I have never believed in playing politics with human misery. I cannot agree that any party should dip its hands into the Treasury of the United States and use those funds for campaign purposes.

Mr. KENNEY. Who signed the letter?

Mr. FISH. That letter was signed by nine men who either were on the Federal relief rolls or had received Federal relief in my county. It was sent to all of the Federal relief workers and to all of the unemployed. I took it up with Mr. Hopkins, Relief Administrator, thinking at least that he would be one Democrat who would be friendly to me, because I defended him on the floor of the House when he was under attack last year. He served my State well in the past, and I thought I would get some cooperation from him, but I got none. He said that he had investigated and found none of the signers were on the Federal relief. It took me several months to get the facts. It is hard to get hold of these relief rolls, but in spite of what Mr. Hopkins said, I found that all but two were either on or had been on the Federal relief rolls. The fact is I received no cooperation at all from Mr. Hopkins. He just covered the thing up. Every one of these men should have been fired out immediately.

Therefore I have no other recourse than to present the facts to the House on an occasion of this kind and let the record speak for itself. It may not be fair to indict the Democratic Party for the failure of Mr. Hopkins to act, as he is probably not a Democrat, but at least he was appointed by this administration and it is responsible for him. Whatever he is, he is not a Republican, and his relief administration reeked with politics at the expense of the Treasury around election day and nothing was or has been done about it.

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. FISH. Not now, unless it is on the subject of Oregon. I shall yield on that. Let me go on a little further. The main Democratic paper in my county, to back up this letter, said in part:

SUPERVISORS WATCH RESULT

SUPERVISORS WATCH RESULT

It is reported that the Democratic majority of the Putnam County Board of Supervisors is watching the election developments with exceptional interest and plans to govern its future policies by the results shown at the polls next Tuesday.

If the voters of the county elect Democratic candidates, particularly the Democratic candidate for the assembly, Herbert S. Bell, of Brewster, according to the report, the board of supervisors will assume that the people of the county are pleased with the Democratic policies and wish to continue to receive governmental money for work relief. Accordingly the board will continue to make the appropriations necessary to secure such money.

Government money can be secured for work relief only if the board of supervisors appropriates $1 for every $3 to be supplied by the Federal and State Governments.

If the voters do not elect Democratic candidates, it is said the board of supervisors will be forced to assume that Putnam County does not like the Democratic policies and does not want any more Government money and prefers to carry the burden alone.

If such an unexpected development does occur, the board of supervisors, in order to carry out the expressed wishes of the voters, may be faced with the unpleasant task of refusing to make further appropriations for its share and thus cut off the flow of Government money.

appropriations for its share and thus cut off the flow of Govern-

In other words, the board of supervisors would make appropriations necessary to secure Federal relief money provided the relief workers and their families and friends voted the Democratic ticket, backing up what this letter says; but if they failed to vote the straight Democratic ticket there would be no appropriations, and the needy, destitute, and unemployed could starve.

I do not indict the whole Democratic Party. I am only indicting at the present time the Democratic Party of my own county. The Democratic county chairman just prior to election joined in the chorus and said at a political rally that every vote against the Democratic candidates was a vote against direct benefits for Putnam County. But if that can happen in the President's district without any recourse or cooperation or assistance from the relief administrator, it can happen in anybody's district. That whole performance is about as vicious, contemptible, and un-American as anything that has happened in my political life—using public funds directly to coerce, intimidate, and threaten the voters. That is what went on in my county, and I have been informed since Congress convened by my Republican colleagues that it was the practice throughout the country. The last election was not an election. It was merely a vote for Santa Claus, and Santa Claus won, because you cannot expect people to vote against him. A famous but inglorious victory was won by the Democrats, and having fulfilled his political purposes now, Santa Claus is to be scrapped for public works until 1936. What a travesty and hollow mockery of all the promises and inducements held out to the millions of relief workers to vote the Democratic ticket or starve. other Democratic promises, even that to those on the relief rolls prior to election are discarded and broken. There never was a more shameless and disgraceful election.

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. PIERCE. The gentleman has seen fit to bring in the good name of the State of Oregon. I wish the gentleman would state the facts now in regard to the manager of Oregon and the letter if you have it. If not I should like to state the facts for you in regard to the appointment of Mr. Liscomb and his removal and the Board in that matter.

Mr. FISH. I must admit I know no facts about your great State except the letter I have. I do not know whether the manager was fired or not. If he was, I congratulate the gentleman and his party. All I can tell the gentleman about the operation of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in the State of Oregon is the letter written and signed by some Home Owners' Loan Corporation beneficiaries to the other beneficiaries, practically demanding that they vote the Democratic ticket, and at this point I ask unanimous consent to | print the letter in the RECORD.

Mr. PIERCE. And I ask that it appear at this place. Immediately Mr. Liscomb was removed and with him every other official in Oregon at heads of the departments.

The letter is as follows:

PORTLAND, OREG., October 29, 1934.

Our Fellow Beneficiaries: Appreciation, in our opinion, is one of the outstanding human virtues. We have been the recipient of the benefits of the Home Owners' Loan Act, which was fostered and put over by our great President. The thing closest to our hearts through this benevolent act of our Government has been preserved for us. Our homes have been saved. We, and we know that includes you, are appreciative. Can we show that appreciation? In our opinion there is a way.

We are confronted on November 6 with the duty of electing a Governor of our State. The party of which our President is the head has a candidate in the field and one who has received his endorsement.

endorsement.

Congressman Charles H. Martin is entitled to your support and our support for the part he played in enactment of this progre piece of legislation. It reflects the ideas which are his and the purposes which will govern his administration. He possesses all the necessary qualifications so vital to fill that position—honesty, intellect, sympathy, and the conscientious desire to render further service to this State. The spirit to serve home owners was there; the desire to protect Oregon's small home owners from losing their life savings was evident; the courage to take this action in the face of opposition and in spite of precedent was manifest. It indicates the consideration which you and I can expect from Charles H. Martin as Governor of Oregon.

We feel that a vote for him is an expression of appreciation of what has been done for us. May we request that you do likewise, and let us show our President on the morning of the 7th of November that we are for him?

The persons whose names are attached have formed themselves into a committee to bring this matter to your attention. We are likewise beneficiaries of the greatest act in the new deal.

Vote for Charles H. Martin November 6—the new deal Governor.

Appreciatively yours,

OLIVER V. LEHMAN. AL J. HUENERGARD. BELLE ROSENTHAL. A. TELZEROW.

Mr. FISH. I am grateful to the gentleman for making that statement. I congratulate his State and I congratulate Mr. Fahey. If that had been done everywhere else there would have been no criticism at all of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. FISH. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to insert these letters.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes.

Mr. FISH. Now, in order not to be considered ultrapartisan, I am going to read a clipping from the Mobile Post on the disbursement of relief money. I looked it up and I found it was a Democratic paper, which is quite natural in Alabama.

The whole relief program thus far has been a farce of the first water and the Government money spent on make-believe recovery could just as well have been kept in the Treasury of the United States for all the good it has accomplished. Today we have more unemployed and needy in this community than ever before in its history. These unemployed are not as strong as they were 2 or 3 years ago. In fact, the majority of them are undernourished, and in many cases unable to do manual labor. There is a reason for this as those who know the situation of those people can tell you. In order to work at his best a man must be well fed and vision security of the future. The unemployed have had neither in the past 6 years. That is the great trouble.

Close observers who have watched the F. E. R. A work in this The whole relief program thus far has been a farce of the first Close observers who have watched the F. E. R. A. work in this locality have been amazed at the way the committee and directors have administered the charity funds. Month by month they have observed the manner of the diversion of these funds toward the well to do and the rich and have further observed the cutting out of the deserving unemployed from getting a fair and just share of the funds which Congress, in the first instance, appropriated to bolster up their morale and give them a kind of temporary security that industry and big business could not do.

Thus we have the situation of a fund, instead of helping the unemployed as it was originally intended, being diverted into the pockets of the offening of petty politicians described and some pockets of the offspring of petty politicians, daughters and sons of the rich, and persons with independent means, who really do not need the money. The whole orgy has been a blot on the national morals of this country and the people of America have just had to stand for it because the whole program was politically set-up.

Mr. HOOK. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. FISH. I cannot yield.

This is a statement from a Democratic paper in the South. I will agree that as far as the F. E. R. A. is concerned, it was a political organization in the North and in the West and that the funds were largely used around election time for election purposes; that needy American people were threatened either to vote the Democratic ticket or starve, and they were intimidated, coerced, and practically driven right up to the polls like a lot of sheep to vote for Santa

Mr. HOOK. Will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] has again expired.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HANCOCK].

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the Committee, the administration and operations of every Government agency are properly the subject of debate by Members of Congress, and in most instances such debate serves a useful and wholesome purpose. I have listened this morning with interest to the discussion regarding operations of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. Most of the discussion has been helpful and constructive in guiding the Members toward a proper understanding of the purposes of the bill which is before us. Parts of the discussion, however, have been unwarranted and confusing, and in my judgment have served no good purpose. This Corporation, without a precedent to follow and under the most trying conditions and distressing circumstances, has by and large fully justified its existence. When this depression has completely faded into oblivion, it is my reasonable judgment that the work of this Corporation will be recollected by all honest critics as one of the outstanding achievements in the history of our Nation. Being an emergency measure and forced to meet emergency problems, it is but natural that when the accounting comes many errors and mistakes will be unfolded. It is my opinion, however, that most of these errors and mistakes will be found to have been made in the interest of aiding a distressed home owner. No other citizen is entitled to greater consideration than those who are entitled to the assistance of this Corporation. I believe that every Member of this House will have occasion to sense a just pride in the part he or she has taken in bringing to pass this great relief effort.

It is a mighty easy thing to criticize. Constructive, specific criticism is indispensable in all governmental activities. Judging by my own experience, I have many times in retrospect been faced with shame when I realized how I had allowed a small, petty incident to control my entire attitude and action. It has been quite unpleasant to me to listen this morning to some of the references which have been directed against those whom the President has intrusted with the responsibility of carrying forward this great humanitarian effort. Like all men, they are subject to errors of judgment and to those natural proclivities which at times might sway their action. Having had many personal contacts, however, with the officials of this Corporation, and particularly with its able and courageous chairman, I say that the Board and a large majority of the officers have acquitted themselves in a most creditable manner and are deserving of praise rather than of censure.

Now let us consider, if we may, the purposes of the bill first, and later its mechanics.

This Congress has two responsibilities to the home owners of this country-first, to provide mortgage relief or refinancing for those who temporarily cannot carry their present obligations or where refinancing funds are not available, and, second, to carefully and constructively perfect those vehicles of Government which serve and encourage the institutions in your and my communities which make possible the buying, building, and owning of homes.

In this connection, let me say that it is my considered judgment that it is not the function of Government nor a desirable private or public policy for Government to lend public moneys directly to millions of its citizens. Generosity and business recovery dictate that we give every consideration and all the funds that are necessary for the assistance of distressed home owners. In giving them, however, it is our duty to see that they are applied exclusively to distressed cases. The bill which is before this House today, increasing the funds of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, would perhaps not have been necessary had the loans of the Corporation been confined exclusively to worthy citizens temporarily without means of repayment but having reasonable equities in their property.

While I realize that substantial benefits flow from liquefying mortgage institutions, I can see little justification for the sweeping of mortgages out of banking institution after banking institution. The relief to mortgages should be a result from and an incident to relief to distressed borrowers and not a prime objective of the Corporation.

There are four of our great Government organizations affected by this legislation—the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the Federal home-loan bank system, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, and the Federal Housing Administration. Each has its sound and useful purpose to serve, and the technical phases of this measure perfect these organizations in light of the experience of the past. One principle should always be before us in considering such legislation, namely, that the source of home-financing funds comes from the savings or thrift capital of persons in the ordinary walks of life in this Nation. Until the entrance of Government in the field, over 80 percent of the home mortgages in the country were made through the long-term savings of persons invested in mutual savings banks, insurance companies, and savings, building, and loan associations. The most important group have been the building and loan associations. They have drawn their funds almost exclusively from the working classes by the teaching of systematic thrift and the payment of more than ordinary returns to such persons who saved a few dollars each week or each month in their shares.

It is essential that we encourage savings in those institutions that will plow it back into the home-financing field. I do not believe that the problem of adequate home financing is solved by excessive development of savings, in contrast to commercial deposits, in our commercial banks or in Postal Savings, to the detriment of savings in those institutions that employ their funds in the buying and building of homes. There is no way to legislate liquidity into longterm mortgages, and the way to make possible ample longterm mortgage facilities is to attract and encourage more and more of the savings of this country into long-term mortgage investments, either directly or through the medium of trustee institutions, such as savings banks or building and loan associations. I believe the time has come for us to give more attention and constructive legislation to the homeloan-bank system, the insurance of savings and loan shares, and titles II and III of the Federal Housing Administration, and taper off the direct relief and financing activities of the Government.

The most important feature in this legislation, from the point of view of business recovery, turns around our policies with regard to future applications and activities of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. We cannot have a normal mortgage market, the public will not borrow from the institutions in your community and mine, as long as there are direct Government loans, with terms and costs which cannot be met by private capital and which are possible on the part of the Government only by using the combined credit of this great Nation. The President and his advisers have repeatedly said that the Government will retire from this direct lending activity when private business can do the job. My study of the question has convinced me that the customers will not let private business do the job as long as Government funds are being actively loaned. There is, among some, an unmentioned hope that interest rates will be cut further by congressional action, that repayment terms will be made even more easy-in fact, there is a secret hope with some persons that the entire debt will ultimately be forgiven by the Government. Nothing should be done to encourage that kind of attitude. This should, however, not deter us in our relief efforts, but should convince us that we should pause, take care about applications, and give private capital a fair chance to function. When the money is loaned which is provided in this bill and which is adequate to clear up all applications now on file and such limited extension as will take care of those who have heretofore in good faith sought relief from the Corporation, the Government will own more than 25 percent of the home mortgages of the country. If that trend goes much farther and we have the situation of not one million plus, but two million persons plus, borrowing directly from the Government, the march of time will cause the whole situation to expand to the point where we destroy thousands of thrift and homefinancing institutions which have done such great service in the cause of home buying, home building, and home owning.

It was my understanding that our chairman would offer a committee amendment extending the time within which applications might be filed 60 days and increasing the total authorization $250,000,000 more. There was a very definite misunderstanding as to when that proposal should be made. No criticism and no fault whatever should attach to him for having failed to present it in his opening statement this morning.

I will unhesitatingly support any legislation designed for and confined exclusively to relief purposes. I think that the Congress, however, should declare it to be its legislative policy that no more applications be taken beyond the time prescribed by the committee amendment; and that after these are worked out, we give the private lending institution the opportunity to function in a normal way. Of course, the situation should be closely watched to see that further foreclosures are halted in all worthy cases.

The ways in which this measure will assist the present situation and perfect existing legislation can be best demonstrated by a section-by-section analysis of the bill, with a brief statement of the reasons for the usefulness of each section.

Section 1 is a minor amendment of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act making it possible for the 3,000 member institutions to pledge mortgages on four-family properties as collateral for borrowings from the 12 home-loan banks. The previous limitation was three-family, and this change to four makes it similar to the eligibility provisions of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation Act of 1933.

Section 2 amends the Federal Home Loan Bank Act by taking away the preference as to accumulated dividends on stock in the Federal home-loan banks owned by the Federal Government. The original act provided for a 2-percent cumulative dividend, and, in addition, the Government stock was to receive the same dividends as stock owned by member institutions if the rate of dividend exceeded 2 percent. Under this amendment all stock will be on the same basis as to earnings and other qualities.

Section 3 inserts a new section in the Federal Home Loan Bank Act and creates a Federal savings and loan advisory council. This council would have a similar function and would fill the same place as the advisory council for the Federal Reserve System. In my judgment, the creation of such a council would have a very desirable effect on the future growth and services of this reserve system for homefinancing institutions. It can be extremely useful, since its recommendations are to be printed as a part of the annual reports made to the Congress by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. Those recommendations will be based on the experience and observations of qualified persons throughout the country who are in daily contact with the small savers and the home owners of the communities which we represent. The point of view which they will present is one that cannot be secured by a Government department, but one which is all important in assisting the Congress, as well as the executive departments of the Government, to adopt legislation and policies most desirable for strong thrift and homefinancing institutions.

This council, which will be elected by the member institutions of the Federal home-loan banks, will render its service without expense to the taxpayers of the Nation. Members of the council will receive no compensation, and their traveling expenses will be paid by the banks from whose districts they come.

The creation of this advisory council is, in my opinion, one of the most useful phases of the legislation.

Section 4 also amends the Federal Home Loan Bank Act. It is a restatement of the types of security on which the Federal home-loan banks may make advances. The only change is one giving power to the banks to lend to member institutions up to 100 percent of the face value of obligations of the United States or of obligations fully guaranteed by the United States. It will make such investments of member associations highly liquid and may prove to be an important factor in maintaining the market for such securities.

There is one outstanding change in that particular section, in that if this bill is passed any amortized mortgage running for a period of as long as 6 years, rather than 8 years, would be eligible for rediscount with the Federal home-loan bank up to 65 percent of the unpaid principal of the home mortgage.

Section 5 contains a further amendment to the Federal Home Loan Bank Act and permits the Federal home-loan banks to make loans on mortgages having 20 years to run to maturity, whereas the previous limitation was 15 years. It is consistent with the provisions of the National Housing Act, which permit insurance of 20-year mortgages, and is in line with the movement to lengthen the maturity, and therefore decrease the monthly payments, on home mortgages. It also permits Federal home-loan banks to make advances on home mortgages up to $20,000 in unpaid principal. The previous limitation was that to be eligible as security for an advance a mortgage must be on property valued at not to exceed $20,000. This is consistent with the change in section 1, permitting advances on the security of four-family as well as three-family or smaller dwellings, and will increase the usefulness of the Federal home-loan bank system in some localities.

Section 6 would permit the Federal home-loan banks to make loans to nonmember mortgagees approved under title II of the National Housing Act on the security of mortgagees insured under that title. The home-loan banks at present can lend to their member institutions up to 90 percent of the unpaid principal of such insured mortgages. This section would give substantially the same privileges, so far as nonmember institutions in the home-loan-bank system are concerned.

The idea has been advanced that one reason why the Federal Housing Administration has not made better progress in connection with insured mortgages is that, as yet, there are no institutions set up to buy such mortgages from approved mortgagees making them, and thus giving them liquidity. As a matter of fact, we have always had in the Federal home-loan bank system the ideal type of institutions to create liquidity for such insured mortgages, and this provision would make these mortgages almost completely liquid and should be very helpful in the development of the Federal Housing Administration program under title II.

Section 7 is a minor and clarifying amendment to the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, making more certain the procedure to be followed in issuing consolidated Federal home-loan bank bonds or debentures.

Section 8 simplifies the financing of the routine operations of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. While the major operating expenses of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board come from assessments on the several Federal homeloan banks and will still be the subject of appropriation by Congress, this is an awkward provision for such things as receipts arising from examination fees when the member associations and Federal savings and loan associations are examined. Since such examination fees are to be based on the actual cost of the examination involved, they may properly be subject to direct collection and expenditure by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Of course, expenditures to carry out insurance commitments of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation must be made shortly after default of insured associations and must have a flexibility not permitted when such funds are subject to congressional appropriations.

Section 9 is the key section with regard to further funds for the relief of distressed home owners. The section, with the committee amendment, increases the authorized bond issue of the Corporation by one and three-quarter billion dollars in order to provide for several additional hundreds of thousands of distressed home owners. It is the judgment of our committee, as well as of the persons responsible for the conduct and administration of this Corporation, that this sum will be more than sufficient.

I am concerned as to the colossal size of this home-financing operation and strongly feel that these Government funds should be applied exclusively to the assisting of persons who do not have present capacity to pay, but who are of good character and have some equity in their real estate, and who will be able to make payments when there has been a substantial increase in employment in the country.

It has not been as effective as it should be, possibly owing to laxity or impossibility of a clear-cut and vigorous administration, or possibly owing to a certain breadth which lies in the language itself. As I understand it, it is the intention of Congress that these funds be used for distressed home owners, and not for the relief of institutions or borrowers who merely prefer a lenient Government loan to their present arrangements.

Section 10 requires that employees of the Corporation be residents of the region or State served by such office and does not go into effect until 90 days after enactment.

Section 11 merely increases the amount of funds that the H. O. L. C. may use for repairs and improvements from $300,000,000 to $400,000,000.

Section 12 authorizes not more than $250,000,000 of the H. O. L. C. funds to be used in the purchase of shares in Federal savings and loan associations and similar thrift and home-financing institutions. We have a clear-cut precedent for such purchases in the more than a billion dollars which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has invested in bank stocks. It is felt that these funds will permit hundreds of institutions to resume mortgage lending where there has not been sufficient incoming funds from savings to make advances or loans in any substantial amounts. The legislation, as originally proposed in the administration bill, confined these share purchases to the new federally chartered institutions. Today these institutions do only 21/2 percent of the business, while the over 10,000 State-chartered building and loan associations do 971/2 percent of the business. The committee insisted that, as the purpose of these funds is to restore a normal mortgage market and make possible a resumption of mortgage-lending activities, there be no discrimination between the new Federal associations and the hundreds of State-chartered institutions, which have been a colossal factor in making America a country of homes and making possible the purchase of homes by persons in the ordinary walks of life. The committee, you will note, specifically says that "such funds shall be made available without discrimination in favor of federally chartered institutions."

The Corporation is also authorized to purchase bonds or debentures or notes of Federal home-loan banks if these banks have use for additional funds. All of this money will flow directly into the mortgage market and will help bridge over the period in which we taper off the relief activities of the H. O. L. C. and insist that community institutions and private capital assume their normal activities and responsibilities. A similar proposal for a larger amount was considered by our committee and passed by this House at the time the National Housing Act was under consideration. Many of us felt that it would bring more direct and immediate action than the proposed national mortgage associations. In support of our judgment a year ago, I would call your attention to the fact that not a single national mortgage association has been organized, and we understand that it will only be possible to organize such associations if the money is furnished by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and by recent action you gave that Corporation such an authorization. We can promise action from this section if it is vigorously and liberally and impartially administered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Section 13 amends section 6 of the Home Owners' Loan Act to continue the work that the Board has been carrying on in the organization and development of Federal savings and loan associations. The attention of the House should be directed to our original action and appropriation, which directed that the funds originally appropriated be used for this purpose and for the encouragement of similar institutions under State or local charters. It developed in the hearings before our committee that these funds had been used exclusively to employ a staff to organize new Federal associations or to persuade existing institutions to leave their present charter jurisdiction or supervision under the State and come into the Federal system. Therefore, in following the request of the board for additional funds for this purpose, our committee added the significant language:

Such funds shall be used impartially in the promotion and development of local thrift and home financing institutions whether State chartered or Federal.

The objective of all this work should be a sound and active thrift and home-financing structure throughout the country, and it makes little difference whether this develops under State control or Federal control.

Section 14 merely makes certain important sections of the Criminal Code of the United States applicable to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and to its employees and to Federal savings and loan associations. In other words, the same criminal penalties and limitations apply as if the persons were direct officers or employees of the United States Government.

Section 15 amends the Home Owners' Loan Act and makes it a punishable crime to charge a Corporation borrower the difference between the market and the par value of bonds received in lieu of the original debt. As I understand it, this amendment applies to future transactions of the Corporation.

Section 16 gives the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation free use of the United States mails and the right to determine its expenditures and assessments without use of the usual appropriation and routine. This is necessary as this Corporation collects insurance premiums and must be in position to pay losses and other expenses, which cannot be budgeted or anticipated in advance.

Section 17 perfects the present Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Act, which requires that an association insured build up at least 5-percent reserves in a period of 10 years. It was found that this is too strict a requirement; and, while institutions will be encouraged, if their earnings permit, to carry out such a program of strengthening their financial position in 10 years, the law is liberalized to give them a 20-year period.

The original legislation also provided, in addition to establishing such reserves and reserve policies as are required by the Insurance Corporation, that the insured institution not be permitted to distribute any earnings in case it made charge-offs to this reserve. This is both unwise and unnecessary, because if it became necessary for a building-and-loan association, say, with 2,000 members, to write off a loss on some mortgage loan, under the present law, even though the institution had ample earnings collected during the period to pay its normal dividend to these 2,000 small savers, it would be compelled to alarm them or destroy their confidence by distributing no dividends because a charge-off had been made to reserves which had been accumulated for the very purpose of paying losses. The purpose of the reserves, in the first place, was not only to keep the institution solvent, but to permit its orderly operation without interruption of dividends and the like on account of losses, for which sufficient reserves have been laid aside. We therefore eliminated the requirement that no dividends be paid if losses are chargeable to reserves, and leave the broad powers in the trustees of the Insurance Corporation to enforce sound policies in the accumulation of reserves.

Section 18 arranges that the admission fee to the Insurance Corporation be based on the reserves which have been accumulated and corrects an error in the original enactment. The original act provided that the charge to those coming in after the first year be based upon the reserves of the applying institution, which was certainly not the intention of the Congress.

Section 19 sets the annual premium to be charged insured institutions at one-eighth of 1 percent, with an additional liability on the part of the insured institution for one-eighth of 1 percent. This means that one-fourth of 1 percent can be collected by the Corporation each year to pay its expenses and losses. In light of such facts as are at hand and the standards which are prevailing in connection with the insurance of individual institutions, this should be ample. I call your attention to the fact that the banking bill, which is now before our committee, proposes an annual premium of one-twelfth of 1 percent for the insurance of commercial-bank deposits. The loss record of building and loan associations is substantially less than that of bank losses, but the building and loan association people are quite willing to pay a premium which is within their means and is from experience adequate, even though it be higher than the proposed program for bank insurance. With this and the other changes perfecting the insurance of building and loan shares, we expect several thousand institutions will avail themselves of this protection for the benefit of their investors. Such protection should restore confidence and institute a normal flow of savings funds back into such associations, to the benefit of the mortgage market and general business recovery.

Section 20 corrects a provision in the original act so that on liquidation the Insurance Corporation, after paying an investor his account up to $5,000, merely stands in that investor's place or his surrogate in participating in the distribution of proceeds from the liquidation. The original act by error was clearly illegal and unworkable.

Section 21 merely permits the Corporation more latitude in dealing with defaulted institutions in restoring them to normal operation.

Section 22 applies to the National Housing Act and authorizes the insurance of advances under title I up to $25,000 for financing alterations, repairs, and improvements on real property improved by apartment houses, hotels, office and other commercial buildings, hospitals, and manufacturing or industrial plants, including installation of new permanent equipment and machinery in such manufacturing or industrial plants. The $2,000 limit is unaltered as regards insurance on the repair, alterations, and improvements of smaller properties.

While this liberalization departs substantially from the original purposes of the Housing Act and deals with the commercial credit field, it was strongly urged by the F. H. A. officials. It is designed essentially to encourage commercial bank loans in this field. This, to me, is the only wild and unsound provision in the bill; and, in my judgment, should be stricken out.

Section 23 reduces the minimum capital required for national mortgage associations under the National Housing Act. This capital was originally set at $5,000,000, and the sponsors of the bill indicated that, as these institutions were to serve as strong reserve organizations for the buying or discounting of mortgages, they must have at least a $5,000,000 capital. It is their present judgment that this capital be reduced.

Section 24 increases the ratio of notes, bonds, or debentures which a national mortgage association may issue from 10 to 15 times its capital. In other words, one of these mortgage companies or national mortgage associations with $2,000,000 capital can issue $30,000,000 of debentures, where previously it could issue $20,000,000. As these securities are to be based exclusively on insured mortgages, it is thought that this liberalization can be justified.

In conclusion, I wish to say that this measure has had extended and careful consideration by our committee and is adequate to deal with the existing situation, in our judgment. In all probability, if the rising tide of business recovery continues, practically no additional legislation on the home-mortgage situation will be needed. Of course, if our business conditions do not improve and home-owner distress increases, the Congress at an appropriate time should take additional steps. The matters dealt with in the bill are to a substantial extent technical in nature, and I am hopeful that this House will concur in the judgment of the committee and hasten the measure on to early consideration and passage in the Senate. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Hancock] has expired.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford].

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I was only recently assigned to the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House—a committee for which I have a very great regard. Being a new member thereof, I congratulate the House on its fairness and nonpartisanship. I know the House will feel perfectly confident that the amendments to the bill have been most carefully considered, and will have confidence in what the committee has done.

I wish to make a few general remarks.

I have been, and I am now, greatly in favor of this legislation, and it is a pleasure to me to be able today to support the administration against the evident desire of the membership of its own party.

The administration, as I understand it, wants only this $1,500,000,000 additional. The Home Loan Corporation itself says that is all that is desired. The President says we must get out of this relief business and that we must begin to taper off, but in spite of that we are assured that amendments will come before the House adding $1,000,000,000 more for this particular purpose.

Certainly I am in hearty accord with the extension of time to be granted applicants. I am in doubt about 60 days, but inasmuch as very sudden notice was given applicants on November 13, while many applications were in process of preparation, and not actually filed, I favor the granting of this opportunity to them. Certainly those applications ought to be considered.

Is it not about time we did taper off? If 58 percent of the urban homes of the country are mortgaged, and the mortgages amount to $22,000,000,000, cannot the Federal Government stop when it takes one-quarter of those mortgages under the plea of distress? We will have five billion, or a little more, of the twenty-one or twenty-two billion dollars of mortgages held in the entire country. Is it not time to stop when we have actually taken care of those who are really in distress? After all we have done in setting up these other agencies, can we not now begin to taper off? Shall we allow another billion and a half and later another billion, when the banks already hold fourteen billions of the twenty-eight billions of United States securities?

The President himself said emphatically in 1932 that the dangerous situation then—dangerous above all else—was the fact that the banks had already been forced to take care of huge deficits. That was highly dangerous; more dangerous even than the taxation which faced the country. And then did you read—and you must have—the recent speech of the Senator from North Carolina wherein he mentioned the present debt of $28,000,000,000 and the fact that we were committed for $4,000,000,000 more, making $32,000,000,000? He asked, "Is there no bottom to the barrel?" It must have been widely read, since many comments regarding it have been made, and it was placed in the Congressional Record. Thirty-two billion dollars! And this week $2,300,000,000 for the soldiers' bonus; and the $4,880,000,000 bill evidently is to be finally enacted; and the banks will have to absorb this two billion now being considered today.

Cannot you on the other side of the House follow your own President when he says that $1,500,000,000 is enough? Why will you proceed to embarrass him further when you know you are determined to pass that $2,300,000,000 bonus bill? I am therefore pleading for the administration today.

All of us may have some criticism of the management of the H. O. L. C., but on the whole it has done a truly wonderful job. But the time has come when this emergency ought to be over; we have had 2 years of this sort of thing. Has it now got to be made a regular condition? Is it now because of an emergency that you are asking for a billion dollars more, or do you really desire it continued permanently and thus declare a permanent period of emergency? I cannot believe that you want to acknowledge that the emergency will continue indefinitely. Have you not done enough already eventually to bring about recovery in this particular situation? Do not permit yourselves to acknowledge that we must follow along this line for several years more.

Senator Bailey stated that should any considerable portion of the $14,000,000,000 now practically frozen in the banks be offered for sale it would be a highly dangerous situation, so dangerous that he did not even care to suggest the consequences.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. GIFFORD. I yield,

Mr. RABAUT. What is the gentleman's feeling toward the great number of people who were cut off by the sudden issuing of this order on November 13? Has the gentleman no interest in their plight?

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I have the very greatest interest and sympathy, as was evidenced by my action in the committee when I voted for the one and a half billion and the 60-day provision, although I think 30 days sufficient to take care of them. I have supported practically every one of these measures for relief which we have considered.

Mr. RABAUT. The gentleman will grant that that amount will not cover it.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I do not yield further. I have as much sympathy as has the gentleman who is trying to interrupt me. These Government bonds, guaranteed bonds, run for a period of 18 years at about 3 percent. The Government gets 5 percent from these borrowers, and the hope is that this 2-percent advantage in competition with private lending companies will take care of the losses. I suggested in reply to a question before the House today that we were recently much disturbed to learn that of the mortgages so lately taken, as stated in the newspapers, 30 percent were over 90 days in default already. We were finally reassured by a statement that by a follow-up process. by sending agents to call on those in default, the default has been cut down to 16 percent. This is heartening, and some people believe the H. O. L. C., because of that profit of 2 percent in competition with private lending, will take care of us so we will not lose very much money. But why continue in competition with these private lending and building associations? Sympathy! Members of the Republican Party have as much sympathy as members of the Democratic Party! We would have to study our own individual lives to determine that; we cannot tell by anyone rising on this floor how unselfish or selfish he may have been in this depression. I have no apology to make regarding my own actions in this respect. We should support the President in this matter, especially as we shall have to face a bonus bill of billions more and be forced to pass on to the next generation, and the next administration, a $40,000,000,000 indebtedness.

There are many features of this bill that will greatly help the mortgage situation. As a matter of helpfulness you should be interested in reading the hearings.

I think the banks will approve this additional amount. They probably desire this extra $2,000,000,000 in order to divest themselves further of these mortgages. Do not say that the banks object, but merely that the building and loan institutions object to its being carried much further. The city of Chicago, I am sure, must approve it. Although the mortgages were taken during the last year, it is stated that in the city of Chicago, under threat that tax sales would | jeopardize the H. O. L. C. mortgage liens, the Corporation has advanced to the borrowers over $2,000,000 with which to pay their taxes.

That brings to my mind this thought: After all the Federal Government has done for the municipalities of this country, how unwilling in most cases have they been to help themselves. Mr. Hopkins has recently been forced to hold back allotments in many cases until the States were ready to contribute. Why, in my own New England town meetings they would not, in many cases, vote to match money given by the Federal Government. But they gladly take all you would give them under the F. E. R. A. Of course, they would take it if they could get it. They will take all the Federal Government seemingly is willing to give them, forgetting that after all they are a part of the Federal Government, and will some time have to pay it back. Somehow we are very careful about the indebtedness of our own municipalities. Some States take 99 percent of this Federal relief money, but will not put up any of their own for relief measures.

Mr. HOOK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan. Mr. HOOK. If the gentleman is against any further expenditures, can he explain why he is voting for this bill?

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I am voting for the one and one-half billion dollars, as recommended by the committee, and I ask that it be not increased, because the President does not want it increased; because the Corporation itself does not want it increased. I think that is a fair attitude to take, with all the other machinery that has been set up to take care of mortgages.

Mr. HOOK. I thank the gentleman for upholding the

Mr. GIFFORD. The dangers inherent in this huge indebtedness we are piling up ought, I think, to be constantly presented to the House. I know it frightens a good many of the Members. I take from my pocket a report from one of our nearby banks with $90,000,000 in assets and find that $54,000,000 are in United States securities. We may well ask, Are they frozen? What would be the effect should they be offered in the market? If and when business needs this money, how are they going to get it? At present Government securities enjoy a ready market, but does anyone really expect that this can continue indefinitely?

Mr. FARLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. FARLEY. When we give authority to a department of the administration in its oversight over $3,000,000,000, should we not give some consideration to their recommendation when they say one and a half billion dollars is enough?

Mr. GIFFORD. The gentleman is exactly in accord with my plea here today. Let us not increase this over what your own administration wants. The newspapers said that the Republicans on the committee were joined by the Democrats in a demand for an increase. That is not so at all. Practically all of the Republicans were against it. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee, there are three instrumentalities of the Government engaged in home financing: The Home Loan Bank System, which was established in 1932; the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, organized in 1933; and the agencies that were set up under the National Housing Act in 1934. This act amends the law regulating the activity of all of these institutions. Some of the changes are merely technical and of a clarifying nature. As to those I shall not speak at all. Others are more important, such as those amendments strengthening the law, widening the field of activity, and providing further funds for the use of these Government institutions.

The purpose of it all, however, is to give additional aid to distressed home owners.

To my mind, there is one important amendment to the which authorizes them to make loans or advances to nonmember mortgagees that have the approval of the National Housing Administration. You will recall that under title II of that act the Government was authorized to insure longterm amortized home mortgages. This provision has not worked satisfactorily for the reason there has been no place to discount that character of paper. It is hoped that this measure making the home-loan banks instrumentalities of discount for that purpose will help remove the log jam in the current of our real-estate securities.

There are two important amendments to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. The one in which we are perhaps more interested is the question of extending the authorization of a bond issue of a billion and a half or more dollars. During the time the Corporation has been in existence there have been in round numbers 1,700,000 applications filed. To date there have been about 800,000 of the applications finally approved and the loans made. There are about 200,-000 in what is now known as the "legal department", most of which, of course, will go through. That takes care of a million of those applications. There are 200,000 that have been either withdrawn or definitely and finally rejected. This leaves in round numbers 500,000 to be considered by the Corporation, some of which will no doubt be rejected but most of which will be approved. The rate of loans so far to applications filed is about 70 percent, but it is not thought that the percentage of rejections will be that high on the applications now on file, for the reason that many of them have already passed the first stage. They have already made the first hurdle. The best estimate that can be made of them is that perhaps 20 percent of them will be rejected, which will leave 400,000 to be considered by the Board. The average loan so far has been $3,000. In round numbers this will require $1,250,000,000 to take care of the loans now on file. Now, the question naturally comes, whether or not we want to open the door, throw down the bars and admit applications for the next 30, 60, or 90 days, or even longer than that. If we do, in my opinion, we must necessarily increase this authorization accordingly. There is no question but that the authorization as provided in the original bill presented here will take care of the applications on file.

There has been considerable criticism of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. I think it should be said that it has been one of the greatest agencies that has been set up by this administration to help the people of this country.

Of course, in the wide activities in which it has been engaged, in respect of these applications it has received, and in the various contacts that have been made, there may have been errors, and mistakes may have crept in and, perhaps, there are those in charge of it whose judgment has not been the best, but I think by and large, on the whole, the administration of these funds has been in the hands of men who are honest, sincere, and patriotic, using their best efforts to distribute and administer these funds in the interest of the needy home owners of this land, and they are entitled to the everlasting praise and gratitude of the American people for what they have done. [Applause.]

There is one other amendment and that is the Corporation is authorized to purchase to the extent of $250,000,000 the bonds of the home-loan banks of this country and to invest in shares of stock in the building and loan and savings institutions.

This is important for this reason. It is hoped that by furnishing this additional money to these home-lending institutions, they will pass this money on to the home owners of this country in the shape of loans.

Then there are, in my opinion, three worthwhile amendments to the National Housing Act.

It will be remembered that under the first title of that act the Government was authorized to insure financial institutions that made loans up to the extent of $2,000 to repair or improve homes. This insurance extended only to 20 percent of the entire amount of the loans of this character made by any institution. This bill extends that in-Home Loan Bank Act, and that is the provision in this bill surance to include loans up to $25,000, for the purpose not only of repairing and improving homes, but for the purpose of repairing or improving apartment houses, hotels, offices, commercial buildings, industrial plants, and even for the purpose of installing machinery in them. This is not in the interest of the home owners, but it is the hope that this provision of the bill will stimulate improvements in the commercial and industrial building of the Nation, will generate business for the durable-goods industry of this country, and furnish additional employment to labor. Finally, there is the amendment which has reference to the reserves that the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation and its member institutions shall have.

The old law required the members of such institutions to build up their own reserves within a period of 10 years. This amendment extends it to 20 years.

The old law levied an annual assessment of one-fourth of 1 percent payable to the Insurance Corporation to build up the reserve. The total levy under the old law was threefourths of 1 percent annually. This was thought to be excessive, and the proposed amendment reduces the total assessment to three-eighths of 1 percent, or just one-half. This is done to encourage members coming into the Insurance

It is thus to be seen that the entire tenor of this act is to give help and encouragement, to enlarge the powers, and broaden the field of activity, and to provide additional funds to the home-financing institutions of the Government.

Home mortgages, some $20,000,000,000 in amount, furnish, perhaps, the largest single item on our national ledger sheet. It may appear to be an indictment against our system that the most important, the one essential and indispensable institution, the one upon which our civilization rests, and that forms the cornerstone of our entire social order—the home should be weighed down by this colossal debt burden. There must be some way found to relieve the situation. Home mortgages must be amortized over a long period of years at a low rate of interest, so the home owner may have a chance to pay out. To do this, the persons or institutions that are able and can make home-mortgage loans must have a place where these mortgages may be discounted in times of stress and strain. We think this measure is a step in the right direction and that it will help.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee, for some days I have been painfully and laboriously fashioning an amendment to this measure, which I confess in its complete state has gotten so long that it probably would be longer than the original bill; and since it would be obviously unfair to the Chairman and members of the Banking Committee and the Members of the House to add that amendment under the 5-minute rule, I am going to introduce it later as an original bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Is the gentleman a member of the committee?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I have an amendment of a dozen words which I will trade with the gentleman and let him put my amendment in the bill.

Mr. DIRKSEN. This bill, amending existing law, is essentially a relief measure. The first eight sections enlarge and liberalize the Federal home-loan bank system, which bears the same relationship to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation that the Federal Reserve banks bear to the national banks. The second group of amendments amend the act passed in 1933 for the relief of home owners, and the last six or seven sections amend the National Housing Act. So this is liberalizing the relief measures that have heretofore been enacted and put upon the statute books of the country.

Mr. CULKIN. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. DIRKSEN. Well, I have only 15 minutes, but I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CULKIN. Does the bill provide any relief for these homes and business places that are occupied jointly for that purpose?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I do not believe it does, unless an amendment were to be written into it. It is a controversial matter, and perhaps will be offered on the floor hereafter. Something should be done for such properties.

Now, we passed the Relief Act, we passed the Home Loan Act, the National Housing Act, the act for the relief of farmers, and many others. The R. F. C. is essentially a relief instrumentality for business, for railroads, and for insurance companies. The Farm Credit Administration provides relief for distressed landowners and for farmers with insufficient funds to seed, produce, harvest, and market their crops. The C. W. A., the P. W. A., and many other agencies were designed to aid in the relief of unemployment. We have attempted to bring relief to every stratum and element of our population with one exception, and that is the holder of real-estate securities who has been the victim of the misfeasance of others. The real-estate bondholder is truly the forgotten man-or should I say the forgotten men and women-because nothing has been done to relieve their distress; and today I am appealing for them, because they dot every congressional district, every village and hamlet, and every city in the United States. There are millions of them. In fact, they represent from 5 to 8 percent of the adult population of this Nation, and have an equal claim to the interest of this Congress and to such benefits as legislation may devise.

It is the holder, or let me say, three or four million holders, of paper that was floated, issued upon all these big, handsome, ornamental buildings that dot the sky line of every city in the metropolitan class. Go out Connecticut Avenue and on one side you see the Mayflower, and away out yonder you see the Wardman Park and the Kennedy-Warren and the Shoreham; every one of those buildings was built because of the frugality and the thrift of the substantial people of this country. Go into Chicago and there you will see silhouetted against the skyline the Wrigley Building, the Edgewater Beach Hotel, the Morrison Hotel, the very pretentious Stevens Hotel-all built because men who sweated in factories and mills and mines are the ones who saved and poured their money into the securities with which they were built. Go into Detroit and there you will see the Barlum Tower, the Hotel Shelby and the Book-Cadillac, and it is all the same. Go into St. Louis or Portland or New York City or Philadelphia and there are all those majestic buildings that were constructed with the savings that accrued from the thrift of the backbone of the people of this country-some three or four million of them as a matter of fact. What have we done for them? We have not done a single, blessed thing, as yet. We are helping the farmer and the home owner, and we are making the pretense of helping business through the industrial loan section of the R. F. C. and through the Federal Reserve. You can scarcely point out a single element that has not received some kind of help, with the exception of holders of billions of dollars of real-estate securities, many of which have depreciated to small value. It seems to me that this Congress will have to address itself to that problem.

Those thrifty, hard-working investors, made the history of this country possible. They made wealth possible and they have become today, in the year of our Lord 1935, truly the forgotten men and the forgotten women. Years ago these buildings were constructed on fictitious values, the purchasers of those securities were not responsible for watering the stock. They were not responsible for the fictitious appraisals of the land values. They were not responsible for the commissions that were grabbed off in floating these issues, and in many instances selling 10 to 15 percent more bonds than necessary, so that Strauss & Co., and Greenbaum & Sons, and the American Bond & Mortgage Co., and all the rest of their ilk could get their ill-gotten gains, and then through flashy newspaper advertisements and highly embossed prospectuses oily tongued salesmen went out and interviewed the carpenters, and the bakers, and the butchers, and the bricklayers, and sold them this real-estate paper. In all sincerity and good intent, these people invested their money and why? They thought when they came to the indigent years when infirmity bent the back, when the luster went out of the eye, they would have a little nest egg and could probably collect 5 or 6 percent interest on those bonds. Lots of Members of Congress invested in some of those bonds, and parenthetically let me say at this point that I do not own a nickel's worth of real-estate bonds on any building anywhere in the United States. I am thinking of all those millions who hold $8,000,000,000 worth of that defaulted paper and it is high time that we were doing something for them. How did they come to do it? Why was it possible to sell so many of these bonds, and why did folks buy them? Oh, as long as everybody had high earning power, the percentage of occupancy in these buildings high and everything was "hunky-dory" and "hotsy-totsy." Then the crash came. Then the values began to go down, and as a natural consequence this whole train of bondholders' protective committees, receivers, trustees, came about, with all the fees that go along with it.

You can believe it or not, but after we passed 74 and 77 (b) as amendments to the National Bankruptcy Act, those amendments in many instances became instruments for more racketeering of this kind of stuff in big cities than we for one moment envisioned in this Congress. I just had notice from Chicago that the gentlemen who got their hands on the fees in that one city alone expect to collect $150,000,-000. Think of it! Setting up corporations and liquidation trusts, with trustees, so as to keep these properties away from the rightful owners—those who own the first-mortgage paper-and they are going to step in there and milk them for every possible dime unless the Congress of the United States, in its capacity as a legislative body, does something for them. They are not going to get any relief from the courts. There are too many crooked judges in the country today, and I am speaking of my own State. Some of them have defied the law to the point where they were selling cooperative apartments in the court rooms of Chicago. God save the mark! It is probably one of the foulest stains that will ever be placed on the history of this country. Can these people go to these judges, sitting in their judicial robes, who have been guilty of that sort of thing, and expect relief from their distress? Can they, in view of the testimony, approach some of our courts with any degree of hope or confidence? No; and it is that kind of thing that has prevailed in many of the large centers of the country that has made it impossible for the holders of $8,000,000,000 of these securities to get relief; and I promise you, gentlemen of the House, now, that unless we do something for them there is going to be a march on Washington by the holders of these defaulted securities, who, under the lash of necessity, are eating dark bread and drinking black coffee where years ago they were living in ease and decent elegance, that will make the first and second bonus marchers look like a lot of pikers in comparison with the number that will come to this city.

Mr. PIERCE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to my distinguished friend from Oregon.

Mr. PIERCE. Is the gentleman a member of the Commission which is investigating this?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am.

Mr. PIERCE. Does the gentleman expect this Government can take up all the losses made by imprudent investments?

Mr. DIRKSEN. No, sir; I do not. However, I think this is what we can do, and this will be the substance of a bill that I am dropping in the basket next week: It will provide for setting up a reconstruction mortgage corporation, with a capital of $250,000,000 subscribed out of the Federal Treasury. With that kind of an instrumentality they can assume jurisdiction over these properties where millions have been used for the purpose of floating these issues and selling them to the public through the mails. All they are authorized to do is to make a reasonable loan of probably not to exceed 50 percent of the sound depreciated value of the property, but in no case to exceed a fair, capitalized percentage of the net income.

Mr. PIERCE. Is it the result of the gentleman's investigation that leads him to this conclusion?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Absolutely.

Mr. PIERCE. What is the report of the Commission?

Mr. DIRKSEN. The report is 20 or 25 pages long. The hearings fill several volumes. They have made no recommendations as yet for definite legislation. So on my own responsibility I am going to throw this bill into the hopper next week, or as soon as completed, because this is a condition that has obtained for years in this country—ever since 1929.

Mr. HOOK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.
Mr. HOOK. Will the gentleman tell us what the Harding and Hoover administrations—

Mr. DIRKSEN. Oh, do not drag any red herrings across the trail. The gentleman is trying to throw some politics into this. This has nothing to do with politics, so leave out Hoover and Harding.

Mr. HOOK. May I say to the gentleman that I asked a Member on the other side of the House, a man who sat before me in Congress, to do the very thing the gentleman today is now advocating, and he did not do it. Probably that is why he is not here.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Well, I do not care about what is passed. That is water over the wheel. So why seek to pull that kind of a herring over the trail? This is a condition and not a theory with which we must contend. It is a real, stark, aggravated problem, embracing wide-spread human despair that rises above politics. Something must be done for these forgotten men and women, most of whom are close to the 55- or 60-year mark, and over, who stand looking despairingly into the future without any hope of being able to husband out the last few years of life with some kind of ease and with some kind of confidence.

Mr. HOOK. I agree with the gentleman. Mr. SIROVICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SIROVICH. I have listened to the eloquent and interesting remarks of my distinguished friend from Illinois. Does he realize he has made a very serious charge against the Federal judiciary of Chicago, and is it the gentleman's intention ultimately to rise on the floor of this House and impeach some of the corrupt judges of whom he has spoken?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Is the gentleman familiar with the statement I made last year about those judges when this matter was being investigated by the Judiciary Committee of the House?

Mr. SIROVICH. I did not hear the gentleman's remarks at that time.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I will say abundantly more about them. I think it is a shame that the Committee on the Judiciary of this House does not bring in some kind of a report upon those who we now have reason to believe have been defiled and who are not fit to sit upon the benches of this country and administer justice and dispense equity today. [Applause ]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Dirksen] has expired.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I yield 17½ minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. STSSON]

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, a point of order. This is a very important subject. I do not believe there is a quorum present. I think we ought to have a quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count.

(While counting:)

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, I wish to yield one-half minute of my time to the gentleman from Florida, either at the close of my remarks or now, as he cares.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida [Mr. GREEN] is recognized for one-half minute.

EXTENSION OF HOME OWNERS' LOAN ACT

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee, I am heartily in favor of the bill before us which provides for further relief by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to the American people. This organization has proven to be one of the best which the Roosevelt administration has created. It has saved from forced sale the homes of thousands of American citizens. The bill before us provides additional funds to take care of applications which have been filed too late to obtain relief from former appropriations. It is believed with this further appropriation practically all home owners of the country who are in real distress will be able to obtain loans and save their homes.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS

At this time I want to also urge the imperativeness of prompt action by the Congress for passage of the administration's national-security plan, and particularly that portion of the plan which provides for old-age pensions. No more worthy legislation can claim the attention of the House than that of providing pensions for the aged of our country who are in need. The legislatures of many States are now in session, or will be within the next few days, and that is one reason why it is so important that the Congress act promptly. It is possible that such bill as we are able to pass may require State administration and State contribution to the old-age-pension fund. If passed immediately, the States in the regular sessions of the legislature will be able to meet such requirements as may be laid down by the Federal Gov-ernment for the States. The passage of old-age-pension legislation will not only take thousands of aged people from Federal and local relief rolls but will carry to these citizens sustenance and will reestablish in them hope and independence. I know of thousands in my State and district who have, during their younger years, exerted every honorable effort for good citizenship and for the maintenance of our civic institutions. During their younger years they have reared their families, educated them, maintained their churches and schools, contributed to charities, gone to the polls and voted their convictions, served on the juries, paid their taxes, supported the Government and all institutions which were for the betterment of their Nation and fellowman. Now, in their old age, it is unthinkable that they may be forced to want or to ask for relief at the hands of charity. It is nothing but right and proper that they be provided for in their declining years.

I am happy to say that our Nation is still a "land of plenty", and in it there are sufficient necessities of life as well as many of the luxuries for all American citizens. It is imperative that the Congress act and act now. May I suggest also the advisability of including within the old-age-pension bill a disability clause which will carry relief to those who are disabled and who have not the necessities of life. [Applause.]

FLORIDA EXEMPTS HOMES FROM TAXES

Last November the voters of Florida adopted an amendment to the State's constitution exempting from taxation homes up to the value of $5,000. This has already proven to be a very wise act. Thousands of citizens are now buying their own homes or farms and are proceeding to build what are in fact real American homes. People from all States in the Union are now moving to Florida, taking up residence, and purchasing their own homes. I mention this in connection with old-age-pension legislation with the hope that the Ways and Means Committee, in the final draft of the bill, may bear in mind the importance of the maximum Federal benefit for those who have resided in the various States for a short period of time. It is obvious that the aged population of Florida will increase greater than that of any State in the Union. It is important that the Federal Government and the States of their nativity be lenient in old-age pensions applying in such cases.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, I raise the point of no quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and one Members are present, a quorum. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Sisson] is recognized. Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield one-quarter minute at the close of my remarks to the gentleman from New York

[Mr. BRUNNER].

Mr. Chairman, this bill, as has been fully and ably explained to you, contains, briefly, amendments to three acts of Congress, namely, the Home Owners' Loan Act, the Home Loan Bank Act, and the National Housing Act. Most of the amendments in this bill are in the nature of perfecting amendments. I do not expect there will be any controversy or very much difference of opinion, if any, about them. The Chairman and several members of the Committee on Banking and Currency have carefully explained not only most of these but also most of the other of what might be called "controversial" amendments.

There are, however, two provisions in this bill which I think will bear considerably more discussion and about which there was a good deal of difference of opinion in the Banking and Currency Committee, enough so that I may say there were two very close record votes upon them. I have not the time, nor is it necessary, to discuss further the other provisions of the bill. I want to speak here, and I hope that it may reach, either from the RECORD or otherwise, both sides of this House, about the fact that while there has been the greatest difference of opinion about some of the controversial features of the bill, there has not been, as one or more of the Members on the Republican side have said, any division at all along partisan lines; and I want to express my appreciation to the Republican members of the committee, and also to the Democratic members, my own colleagues, as well, particularly those who are older in service than I, for the courtesy and forbearance they have shown me, particularly some of the older members of the committee, when I labored mighty hard and was not able to get them around to my way of thinking. They still continued not only to speak to me but to greet me fairly politely; and I wondered sometimes in the heat of the discussion whether they would continue to do so or not.

Just a word or two now about the much-discussed and the very troublesome provision for taking care of distressed home owners, those who still remain, those whose applications perhaps have not technically been filed. I am sure every man on the committee, whether he be Republican or Democrat, did his best to take care of a difficult situation. We appreciate that we are steering between the dangerous rapids of Scylla and Charybdis, for if we continue to finance the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, there is going to be a further unloading of bad mortgages and the possibility that the United States Government is going to be taken for a ride along the line of having a lot of real estate on its hands. On the other hand, we all have the greatest sympathy for a large number, quite a large number, I believe, of persons-and many of them very honest, conscientious, patriotic citizenswho hung on as long as they could, who believed they were going to save their homes under their own power without calling on Uncle Sam, and who delayed along to the close before filing applications. While I have the greatest admiration and respect for the administration of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, nevertheless there was one bad blunder made, in my opinion, and that was in summarily and without notice cutting off the receiving of applications on the 13th of last November, for it caught a great many people, I believe, unawares.

The committee will offer an amendment to the bill, which amendment represents not merely a compromise but, in reality, a composite of the views of the 24 or 25 members of our committee, honest, conscientious men; and I hope the House will not go any further than that.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. SISSON. I yield.
Mr. RABAUT. Why should we not go further than that;

Mr. RABAUT. Why should we not go further than that; why should we not be interested enough to——

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, I did not yield for a speech; I thought the gentleman wanted to ask a question.

Mr. RABAUT. The gentleman said he hoped the House would not go further than that.

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, I refuse to yield further.

Mr. RABAUT. I asked the gentleman why we should not go further than that.

Mr. SISSON. If the gentleman sat here and listened to all the speeches that have been made on this bill today and has not been informed—

Mr. RABAUT. I have not had an answer to it yet.

Mr. SISSON. The gentleman is not going to get a further answer in my time.

Probably the interest of the House is more sharply attracted to the home owners' loan provisions in this bill than to any other section of the bill, but there is one other provision about which I want to speak, a provision which I regard as of great importance; and in taking the position I do, it is disagreeable to me, for I am taking issue with some of the very dearest friends I have on this committee, some of the older members of the committee, my Democratic colleagues. The Housing Administration came before us and asked for an amendment to section 2 of title I of the Housing Act. That title and perhaps one other title of the act has been rather fully discussed, but, in brief, as it has been explained to you, I think, by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. REILLY], they asked for an authorization allowing them to insure loans to a maximum not to exceed $50,000, if and when made for the purpose of improving real property by improving hotels, apartment houses, commercial houses, small factories, and so forth; rehabilitating them by putting in machinery, and so forth; and they produced what I thought was very convincing evidence that if they were given this authorization—and bear in mind this does not call for the appropriation of a dollar-they could generate a great deal of additional business and consequent employment.

It is not a lending operation. It is not an operation in which we are trying to relieve suffering through the dole or by made-work projects. It is purely an insurance proposition. We do not increase the maximum limit of the liability which the Government assumes as placed in the bill last year when the bill was passed; namely, $200,000,000. They came in and they showed us, and I am informed by every other information I have received from them that if they are given this authorization they can generate additional business in the building trades, in the building-supply trades, and the building-material industry to the extent of one and a half billion dollars for this year.

We had a very sharp difference of opinion in our committee in reference to the matter, and the committee cut down the request from $50,000 to $25,000. I am told this is not going to do the job. Why? Because it is perfectly obvious to all of us that to rehabilitate a factory, for instance, and to get the wheels going there are many instances where a loan of $25,000 would amount to nothing, but a loan of $50,000 would do the job. They asked for that authorization. I may say, showing the care which the committee gave to the matter, and I say this is an administration request, that the vote in the committee upon that question was 12 to 11. I happened to be on the losing side, as I am a majority of the time, but being a Democrat I am used to that. I will ask the House to adopt an amendment which I shall offer tomorrow at the appropriate time restoring the authorization of $50,000. I do not know that it is necessary to call the attention of those who were here last year when we passed this bill to the fact that the Government, through the Housing Administration, assumes a liability of 20 percent only on these loans.

In other words, to illustrate what I mean, the lending institutions, banks, and other concerns apply to the Housing Administration for approval to make these loans. If after inspection the institution is regarded as sound to have its loans insured, it is approved for that purpose. This means that such loans as are made and which are approved are insured to the extent of 20 percent of the total amount of the loans; that is, the total loans that that lending institution has made under this section. The Government could lose 20 percent of the entire amount of loans made by these lending institutions, but that is the extent of our liability, and the total authorization remains, as I already stated, at $200,000,000. I have not heard any reason that seems sound or adequate why we should not enable the Housing Administration to carry on this work of restoring employment and setting the wheels of business going by thus putting the furnishing of employment back into the hands of private industry. Bear in mind this is not a proposition of the Government going into business. It is not a proposition of competition of the Government with private business.

As showing the wide-spread interest that the country is taking in this, there have already been over 2,300 lending institutions in the United States that have applied to the Housing Administration during the past 4 or 5 months in which the act has been actively administered for approval, and which have been approved.

One more word about title II. I know that the reply may be made, and the reply has been made, that we have not gone very far with this, but we had to organize the Corporation. We had to educate the country on the proposition. Under title II of the act I want to call attention to the fact that the legislatures of 26 States since the 1st of January have shown their interest and their approval of this act by passing legislation to enable State banks and lending institutions under the jurisdiction of the State in each particular instance to avail themselves of the provisions of title II, namely, they may loan on the insured and amortized mortgages approved by the Housing Administration to the extent of 80 percent of the appraised value of the property. All of you are familiar with the fact that in most States, State banks and similar lending institutions under the laws of the States could formerly lend on or take real-estate mortgages only up to 50 to 60 percent of the appraised value of the property. We are now ready to go ahead. I ask my colleagues to pass the amendments to this bill which the administration is asking for.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York

Mr. BRUNNER. Mr. Chairman, in considering H. R. 6021 you must keep uppermost in your minds that the backbone of the United States is the home.

From time immemorial and down through the ages it has ever been thus. It is instinctive for an American to love his home and country. If we fail to preserve this love of home we naturally are tearing at the very foundation of patriotism.

We can go back to those days when a hearty group of pioneers alighted on Plymouth Rock. It was scarcely a few minutes after setting feet on land that axes were swinging and a section of wooded land cleared for homes in this land of promise. The United States has always been ready to protect the property rights of its citizens, and there is nothing more treasured or essential to peace and good will than a home-loving people, happy in the shelter of four walls and secure under a roof they can call their own.

The spirit of America is the spirit of the home—be it city dwelling, suburban residence, or rural farmhouse.

The keystone of the success of the new deal has been the recognition of this fact. In steering us back on the road that leads up, our great President is conscious of the vital part home ownership will play in bringing a fulfillment of the recovery plan. We in Congress can be proud of what has already been done for the home owner, proud in a great service to the great bulk of our citizenry, a service to our country.

The body economic, laid low, is slowly mending itself, although we must take heed from the wisdom of the old country doctor. We cannot send the patient forth as cured when some ravages of the disease still remain. Should this come to pass, all the good that has been accomplished will have gone for naught. And, applying this thought to the home owners of America, chaos and despair will again ride the highways in place of peace and contentment.

insured to the extent of 20 percent of the total amount of the loans; that is, the total loans that that lending institution has made under this section. The Government could Loan Act. When the H. O. L. C. went into action the private lending agencies were completely disorganized. Hard-working citizens saw years of toil and the resultant savings as represented in their homes being swept away. That was real tragedy, and the H. O. L. C. responded nobly. Its activities have been responsible for averting a tremendous number of foreclosures. Thousands and thousands of dollars in back taxes have been paid to municipal and town governments. Already in excess of $2,000,000,000 in credit has been used to refinance mortgages on approximately 800,000 small homes in the country.

I feel that I can, with justifiable pride, look back with satisfaction to the support I gave the initiation of the H. O. L. C. What has been accomplished needs no mention for me; it is known to everyone. But it is to correct a mistaken impression that the corner has been turned on home and mortgage relief, that I arise to appeal for the continuation of the H. O. L. C. until every deserving home owner of this country has been assisted.

No burst of oratory should be necessary here today to convince you what I am saying is the truth. There is nothing more forceful than figures and I come supplied with them so that the absolute necessity of continuing the H. O. L. C. is brought home to you as it has been brought home to me.

We need not be told of the importance of home ownership. We know that the man or woman who invests in a home is making a good start toward the goal of independence. There should be no sidetracking or shunting about of this admirable ambition. It is the proper function of Government to assist the distressed home owner back on the road toward independence without any unnecessary detours. If the private lending institutions cannot do it, then I say, the United States of America must and will do it.

If only one person in the entire breadth and width of the 48 States was shut off from the benefits that more than 800,-000 fellow citizens have already received—I say then it will be a serious indictment against the new deal and an affront to good citizenship and a slap at genuine patriotism, not to mention the highly turned American sense of fair play.

The home owner invariably is in general a better citizen than the nonhome owner. Therefore it is readily seen that the interests of good government are advanced in direct proportion to the number of home owners we have. Allow me at this point to quote from the Home Owners' Loan Act passed in the Seventy-third Congress. It reads:

An act to provide emergency relief with respect to home-mortgage indebtedness, to refinance home mortgages, to extend relief to the owners of homes occupied by them and who are unable to amortize their debts elsewhere.

That is enough.

It would seem that if it can be honestly established that the emergency still exists, and I am convinced that it does exist and that thousands still face loss of their homes, due to their inability to amortize their debts elsewhere, I repeat, it would seem that we here today must do what those who sat here more than a year and a half ago did to insure the continued security of the home.

While we here in Congress should consider the advisability of continuing the H. O. L. C. strictly from a national point of view I think it important that the Members should know to what extent the H. O. L. C. has furnished relief to the various States.

I am proud of the record made in my State, and at this time desire to pay public tribute to Vincent Dailey, the New York State manager of the H. O. L. C.

New York State is indeed fortunate in having a man of his remarkable ability and great vision at the helm of this most important Corporation.

Less than 60 days after he was appointed he had whipped into shape an organization of well-qualified officials which have been working together earnestly and diligently to the point where on March 1, 1935, over 63,000 people in my State have been able to save their homes. However, this does not relate the whole story and I desire at this time to quote the official figures as of March 1, 1935.

Applications received to date	134, 629
Preliminary appraisals completed	126, 701
Mortgagees' consents obtained	107, 446
Final appraisals completed	88, 074
Closings completed to date, 63,369; in amount of	$327, 704, 673
Loans approved to date, 74,622; in an amount of	$386, 540, 400

Please note that within the next month almost 75,000 home owners in my State will have obtained relief by virtue of this most humane legislation.

And I may also state that $22,950,000 in back taxes have been poured into the coffers of the various municipalities in my State and over 13½ millions of this sum was paid to the city of New York.

My congressional district is one of the largest home-owning districts in the United States. In the county of Queens, New York, there are approximately 200,000 individual homes, hence I feel qualified to speak on the H. O. L. C., what has been accomplished, and what is yet to be done.

When the H. O. L. C. announced on November 13 there would be a cessation in Federal home aid, I immediately expressed grave concern about the wisdom of such a move. I was aware that in Queens County, my district, there have been 23,231 applications made, the majority of them in immediate need of relief. There have been closings on 10,435, and when those still in the legal department of the H. O. L. C. are put through, 11,839 will have had relief, but there will still be about 11,000 in Queens who applied for relief who will have had the door shut in their face unless we do something about it. Multiply the 11,000 in Queens with the thousands and thousands in communities of the other 48 States and the figure is staggering.

It has been argued that possibly not all of the 11,000 are deserving—that the H. O. L. C. took care of the most urgent cases—and, moreover, the banks and lending companies are now in position to extend financial aid. I say these arguments are not based on fact and, even if partially true, do not give a correct picture of the situation.

Only a few days after the first inkling got out that the H. O. L. C. would not be in position to grant loans except to those fortunate enough to have had their applications advanced to the legal department, did the real facts present themselves to me. Letters came to me from hundreds of home owners who had patiently waited for the Federal aid so urgently needed. The terrible specter of foreclosure again loomed more terrible than ever. The pall of gloom again descended on a distressed community.

The words written in these letters told the story. The honesty of content was apparent through the pungent simplicity of appeal. Some were worded in utter bewilderment, others were frantic in the hysteria of distress. These home owners, good, honest citizens all, looked to me to rekindle the spark of hope that burned bright while the H. O. L. C. was functioning on all eight. Sometime before I said that if there was only one deserving citizen of the United States shut off from a home loan it would be criminal. Let me say here and now that in Queens County, a community of over 1,000,000 people, there are 11,000 still awaiting the helping hand of Uncle Sam. I believe that the proportion holds true throughout the country. Unquestionably there are additional thousands who need mortgage relief who never filed applications with the H. O. L. C.

Who is to provide for the relief?

Financial institutions or private lending agencies?

Very fine, if they could. I for one am hardly in favor of putting the Government in the mortgage business. There is no denying that it is the duty and business of the banks or kindred organizations. As long as usurious interest or exorbitant service fees are not charged there could be no better way out. However, from a personal check and from a canvass of banking institutions I can report that the Government cannot escape the responsibility. The banks are not interested in refinancing mortgages of home owners in distress.

Without exception, the loaning institutions I have contacted—and I have contacted all that made loans prior to the depression and are still in business, and they number over 150—have stressed the importance of continuing the Home Owners' Loan Corporation activities. May I quote | what some of them say:

The Jamaica Savings Bank, the largest in Queens County, with total resources over $38,000,000, says: "We have not as yet made any new loans." I quote the president of the institution, Mr. George S. Downing:

I am fully convinced that there is considerable for the Governmen to do yet. If the Home Loan is not furnished with more money there will undoubtedly be hundreds or possibly thousands of home owners who will lose their homes.

Henry R. Kinsey, president of the Williamsburgh Savings Bank, which was founded in 1851, after praising the H. O. L. C. as "the most constructive work that has ever been done", adds this significant observation:

Unless the H. O. L. C. work is continued many more foreclosures will have to carry on.

Then, from Philip A. Benson, distinguished banker and head of the vast Dime Savings Bank of Brooklyn, we hear that the "H. O. L. C. has not quite completed the work it should do." He says:

Additional foreclosures could be avoided if the H. O. L. C. con-

The president of the Bay Ridge Savings Bank, Brooklyn, says this:

The discontinuance of the Home Owners' Loan Bureau was sad news to many home owners.

Of all the relief measures proposed, he said that this was the most important. And, more to the point, added:

Institutions in this city (New York) are making extremely few mortgages, and it is unlikely that there will be much activity in this direction during the coming year.

In my possession are scores of similar letters from the heads of savings banks and building-and-loan associations. From none could I get the least gleaning of hope that the flow of private capital was imminent, as some would have us believe.

An all-time record for the number of foreclosure actions commenced in one month in my county was established in December 1934, according to records of the county clerk of Queens County. In that month 692 foreclosures were started. The next highest month was November, with 671 actions. Here is the proof positive that the wave of foreclosures will prove a veritable tidal wave unless something is done to temper its fury. The record-breaking number of foreclosure actions in the last 2 months of 1934 is an immediate result of the announcement that the H. O. L. C. would make no additional loans except to those applicants fortunate enough to have had their requests advanced to the legal department of the Corporation.

A chart I have in my possession covering foreclosure actions and the number of cancelations during 1932, 1933, and 1934 tells the story of the H. O. L. C. in Queens County. And I contend there is nothing particularly different about Queens which would not apply to other urban communities of the United States.

All of this represents a responsibility which Congress cannot side-step. Something must be done. It is not unreasonable legislation I seek. It is both wise and humane and in accord with the progressive program mapped for this session. The foundation has already been constructed in the creation of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. merely remains for us to build upward.

There is no reason for going beyond the H. O. L. C. for the solution. Running at the peak of efficiency now after 18 months of activity, this Bureau can rehabilitate where private capital cannot. Having exhausted its initial issue of bonds, it can only function further when and if more bonds are made available.

Therefore, at the proper time I propose to offer an amendment making another $3,000,000,000 in bonds available instead of one and one-half billion now set forth in this bill to the home owners of this country who are still facing loss finance 1,000,000 more homes throughout the country. I do not think that in making this broad extension we are throwing the life line a bit too far. Even if the number of approved loans should fall short of this mark and the H. O. L. C. does not require the entire three billions in bonds, there will be no harm done. On the other hand, the psychology of having sufficient to provide for all who may require refinancing will again restore the confidence and strengthen the morale of the individual home owner.

The average amount of all loans to date has been $3,015.

There are only two courses of action open to us: First, either we continue the H. O. L. C., or second, we turn a deaf ear to the pleas of thousands and thousands of home owners.

Does anyone who is really interested in the welfare of the country wish to go back to the chaotic conditions of 1932? Are we moving forward or backward?

As long as the stark threat of foreclosure looms, just so long should we come to the rescue of the oppressed. The success of the H. O. L. C. is guaranteed since it is predicated on the success of the entire recovery plan. Conditions are steadily improving, an indication being the gradually decreasing number of applications for mortgage refinancing. Eventually-just when I do not think anyone can approximate-the emergency will no longer exist. Then, and only then, can we shut down the H. O. L. C.

Let us dismiss all thoughts of chiseling home owners and the other fallacies spread about by those out of step with the times. Let us have faith in our democracy and the inherent honesty of our fellow citizens. Let us extend the helping hand when it is needed. The hand we help will then be there to reciprocate should the occasion arise.

I hope I may have your support of my amendment authorizing the issuance of three billion in additional H. O. L. C. bonds.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SEGER].

Mr. SEGER. Mr. Chairman, as we go on with this discussion we learn some very pertinent truths. A member of the committee from Michigan and a member of the committee from New York have made some very strong statements why this Home Loan Corporation was not a success in the beginning, and I assume they had facts upon which to base their accusations.

In my own State there was a general shake-up in the managing personnel in the first year of operation and, while I do not make definite charges, I might say there must have been some irregularities or, at least, mismanagement. What I am concerned about principally is the fact that this act we are enlarging on now is probably just as important, if not more so, than any relief measure we have before us. I think it can be greatly humanized. Sentiment and business can be combined in this particular case.

I have in mind in my own State an H. O. L. C. office that I visited to intercede for an applicant for a loan, an old lady who had made an application many months before. I was received by one of the underlings in the office as a most unwelcome guest, as if I were approaching with my hat in my hand asking for a personal hand-out. Until I made myself known I was treated with very little courtesy. This situation should be corrected. I think the present manager in the State of New Jersey, Mr. Skiffington, is endeavoring to have his personnel be kind and courteous to these unhappy people fearing the loss of their homes.

I should like to ask a member of the committee, either on the minority or the majority side, a question. I did not know until Mr. Gifford spoke that it was contemplated to extend the period over which these applications may be made to 60 days. I should like to know whether the 60-day period is from the time this act goes into effect or is it 60 days from the time the edict went into effect stopping all loans and applications therefor?

Mr. STEAGALL. The suggestion which the gentleman has in mind contemplates an extension of that length of time after the passage and effectiveness of this measure.

Mr. SEGER. I thank the gentleman for the information, because I have before me a case in point. One of my con-With the new issue the H. O. L. C. would be ready to re- | stituents, not knowing the rules or the proper form of making application, wrote a letter to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation here in Washington and was informed he had made a mistake, and that he must apply to the office in Newark or in his own district. In the interim this order of November 15 went into effect, and unless the period of 60 days is extended from the time we adopt this measure he would be practically cut off from relief.

This extension is going to be helpful in this case as well as

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD].

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, we have heard a great deal of discussion about paragraph 9 (c), in which I am mostly interested because of the fact that some time in November 1934, around the 13th, a notice went out to the people of this country which led them to believe that the doors were closed and that no more loans would be made under the H. O. L. C. Act. That administrative order, of course, shut off many people in distress whose homes are affected by reason of the fact they have no way to secure the money to finance the mortgages that are due.

I think it is highly important that the time for accepting applications be synchronized as best we can, with the little known facts we have in the way of statistics, so that other people will not be led to believe by reason of something which is in the law, or by reason of some administrative ruling, that they will receive consideration of an application, when there is no money forthcoming with which to take care of the application. It is a very serious matter to a person who is in financial straits and about to lose his home to have a Federal law of this kind lead him into the belief that relief is available to him when, as a matter of fact, the $1,500,000,000 proposed will not care for additional applications which may be made. If my understanding of what has been said this afternoon is correct, $1,500,000,000 is all that will be available for the purpose of taking up applications now on hand, and which were filed on or before November 13, 1934, and consisting of, roughly, 700,000 applications-and probably about 200,000 of which will be denied.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. CRAWFORD. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. Does the gentleman know that the average loan in the State of Michigan is $2,750, and in the Nation about $3,000? If we have 500,000 applications on hand, will not the $1,500,000,000 be sufficient to cover the entire number of applications, not even considering those applications that might be ineligible for loans?

Mr. CRAWFORD. As I understand, we have something like 700,000 applications on hand which came in prior to November 13, probably 200,000 of which will be eliminated, leaving, we will say, 500,000 applications eligible under this law, for the purpose of absorbing the $1,500,000,000.

I further understand that Mr. Fahey or the Board seems to think that probably $1,250,000,000 will be required to accommodate such applications as were on hand November 13 and as may be finally accepted. If this be practically true, you will then have about $250,000,000 to salvage loans out of the remaining 200,000 applications and take care of such border-line cases as may develop.

It is my belief—and I do not know much about this, and I am sorry we have not more statistics, and I do not know just how they could be secured—that if a notice is sent out across this country that this new bill has been passed, appropriating an additional $1,500,000,000, and that the doors are now to be opened for a period of 60 days only, and that the doors shall then be closed once and for all 60 days after the passage of the act, you will have applications filed that will require anywhere from two to four billion dollars of additional funds. Therefore, we should not be guilty of misleading the people again and thus be a party to making them believe the money is provided to care for their applications when we know it is not forthcoming. I stated to the Rules Committee the other day, I believe, in my own district at home we will receive 30 percent of as many loans after this date, when it is reopened, as we have received up to date. This is a rough estimate. There is no way to secure statistics. It is an agricultural district, where there are small towns and villages, and in such districts they are more inclined to hang on longer in the hope they may meet their obligations and in some way get by. I am sure there are many homes there which need this assistance and relief which Congress originally intended to give. This whole case as now presented here this afternoon indicates the administration is now anxious to discontinue this service to the people of this country. It is another illustration of how quickly the public-fund pump runs dry, of how utterly impossible it is for centralized government to substitute itself for the spontaneous activities of a great people when they have confidence and when they are going ahead without thought of Federal paternalism. It is no wonder loan companies and trust companies and banks are now pleading that governmental lending agencies be discontinued. It is no wonder the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board comes before us and requests that laws be passed which will make it possible for Government to step down off the lending block to the end that financial institutions, owned and operated by private capital and management, may again assume the role of lending money on homes and farms. Great undertakings of this kind cannot be successfully and satisfactorily handled by political machines and parties, whether it be Democrats or Republicans. Under our form of Government, the Federal Treasury cannot successfully substitute itself for the natural and free-flowing activities of 100,000,000 of free-acting adult

However, here is a case where hundreds of thousands of our home owners have had this assistance and where we now know hundreds of thousands cannot now secure similar assistance because the well is going dry. This will naturally lead to a feeling among many of our people that discriminatory tactics have been resorted to; that fair dealing has not been dealt; that the new deal was a bad deal for some and a good deal for others who were fortunate enough to get their loans cared for by the Federal funds, while others have to resort to the high interest rates and short-time loans and heavy commissions which will naturally be charged to them by the private lending agencies now that the H. O. L. C. has reached its end insofar as the receiving and lending on new applications is concerned. Our people would feel better about all of this if they were given fair notice that the period of filing, with reasonable expectancy of a loan being granted, was stated in advance of closing the door either by setting a filing date limit or by determining the maximum amount that can be loaned in advance of our knowing how much would be required. It all reminds me of an advance in the commodity or stock market, when one group is taken care of at the low price in effect before the advance, while others are forced to take their goods at the higher quoted price. If the deal is to be closed, then I think we should give fair treatment and consideration to all in distress just as Congress intended when the original act was passed. This is not a waste of funds; it is lending money on the best security on earth-the American home. Personally I favor setting in advance the closing date, and then providing the necessary funds to care for all applications which qualify, to the end that all distressed home owners be treated alike and discrimination avoided.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL].

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Brown].

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, in my opinion the Home Owners' Loan Corporation is one of the best features of the new deal in providing security for the individual citizens under the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933. Prior to this act the auctioneer's hammer was hanging over the heads of millions of our home owners. Many were the householders paying 10- and 12-percent interest on their mortgages. This law provides funds with which to refinance such obligations at a lower rate of interest. The bonds of the Corporation, together with the interest, are guaranteed. The homes of thousands and thousands of our citizens have been saved, and many more will be saved upon enactment of the pending bill, H. R. 6021, providing for additional home-mortgage relief. The assurance of peace and contentment was substituted for the terror of impending eviction.

The good the Home Owners' Loan Corporation has already accomplished is really incalculable. In my own State nearly $2,000,000 of back taxes have been paid, giving the State, counties, cities, and towns money with which to operate. Millions have been spent in making repairs, giving employment to all classes of labor. Mortgagors and mortgagees have equally been relieved. Values have become stabilized; and the public morale has been greatly improved.

In Georgia there are no lending agencies to take the place of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. The insurance companies have abandoned the home-loan business just as they did the farm loans, and there are not enough building and loan associations and other lending agencies with sufficient capital to take care of the demand.

This Corporation was created to function until June 1936, but it has ceased to accept any further applications for loans and is not even considering applications which were filed but which had not reached the legal department by November 13. The public expected, and had a right to expect, that the operations of the Corporation would continue until June 1936. Many prospective applicants for loans for various reasons did not file their applications or filed them too late for consideration unless additional relief is granted.

The law creating the Home Owners' Loan Corporation started it on a firm business basis. Its bonds are issued at 2¾ percent and its loans are made at 5 percent, giving it a spread of 2¼ percent for expense of administration and losses. With economical administration of its affairs the Government should make a profit out of the enterprise.

The very existence of the H. O. L. C. has been productive of great good. The fact that this corporation has been ready to take applications—that its offices were open—has prevented lenders from pressing their borrowers. The tax officials have withheld advertisements of sales for delinquent taxes as soon as they learned that the delinquent had made application for a home owners' loan.

To wind up the business of the H. O. L. C., and to take no more applications, will mean that lenders and tax gatherers will immediately press for payment, and the poor home owner, with no other agency lending, is at the mercy of his lender and in jeopardy of having his home sold for taxes which he is unable to pay.

While the H. O. L. C. has already done much good in Georgia, it had really only begun work when it suddenly ceased receiving applications in November, and the work is by no means finished. The larger cities naturally received the first benefits from the corporation, but in the smaller cities and towns the H. O. L. C. had just begun.

It is most important to the successful operation of any business that the executive officers should understand the customs and traits of those under them, and also be familiar with the business conditions and characteristics of the people and territory they serve. When executives and personnel officers from one section of the country are placed in charge of an office in another section the best results cannot be obtained. Therefore, I am quite sure that the adoption of section 10 of the pending bill will be most helpful and beneficial in correcting the errors in the policy of the administration of the regional offices of the H. O. L. C. This section reads as follows:

SEC. 10. Subsection (j) of section 4 of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"No person shall be appointed or retained as an officer, employee, agent, or attorney in any regional or State office of the corporation, who was, at the date of the establishment of such office, not a resident of the region or State served by such office. This amendatory provision shall go into effect within 90 days after the date of enactment thereof."

It is a sound principle that Federal jobs should be filled with persons from the territory to be served. This is true not only with the agency serving the home owners but also of every other Federal agency. This fact has been recognized by the Government for many years, as proven by the fact that all field positions under civil-service regulations are filled by applicants residing in the territory to be served.

Certainly just as capable and efficient executives and employees can be found in the region to be served as can be found in outside territory.

Of the 11 regional divisions of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation a large majority are headed by outsiders, in most instances men not even from the same section of the country, and therefore not familiar either with business conditions or the characteristics of the people they serve. This is also true in almost the same proportion for the assistant managers. The people in each locality to a great extent resent this.

In order to make a success of anything it is necessary to have local public sentiment behind it.

The H. O. L. C. has rendered splendid aid to distressed home owners, but its affairs are far from being in the businesslike condition in which they should be after nearly 2 years of operation. Unquestionably an immediate improvement will result from the replacement of the so-called "outsiders" in each field office by capable and efficient executives and workers from the territory served.

Some argue that it is rather late to make this change, but the regional office is now permanent in character and will serve for many years in the foreclosure of mortgages and the collection of money loaned. Therefore the adoption of this section will be a movement toward the return to representative government. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama has 7 minutes remaining.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. FARLEY] such time as he desires.

Mr. FARLEY. Mr. Chairman, on the 13th of June 1933 the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was authorized, and in the brief time it has operated it has distributed more money than the largest corporation in America, starting from a standing start. From some discussion here this afternoon I thought possibly the word might go out that this is a benefit organization entirely. This Corporation was organized to refinance the mortgages on homes of people who were in distress. It looks now, from all indications, that this Corporation will not cost the Government of the United States a single dollar but will be self-liquidating.

I want to call particular attention to some of the provisions of H. R. 6021 to provide additional home-mortgage relief and to amend the Home Loan Act of 1933, and likewise amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act. One of the important things in the Home Loan Bank Act is that a Federal saving and loan advisory counsel is to be set up with the same number of members as the home-loan bank districts. It is thought advisable that there be changes in the administration of the bank. There is a growing feeling that ultimately the functions of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation will cease and that it is advisable to have the other one loaning institution strengthened to take care of the situation when it arises. When this act was first passed in 1933 there was dire need and necessity for quick action to save the distressed home owners. Many people had, for no act of their own, gotten in such a position that they were about to lose their shelter and it does not take anyone long to realize that the American home is the foundation of our system. No matter how poor or proud the home, there is an inherent desire in the hearts of our people to own and retain their homes.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation started with an appropriation of $200,000,000 in cash, and was authorized to issue bonds up to a total of $3,000,000,000 which might be exchanged for mortgages or disposed of to secure funds. Out of this original fund $100,000,000 has been assigned to provide capital for Federal savings and loan insurance corporations.

No act of the Seventy-third Congress has been more universally praised, or beneficial, except it might be the Deposit Insurance Act. Since the passage of this legislation there have been set up organizations to reach into each county in the United States and approximately 400 offices set up for the purpose of handling this tremendous business.

There has been some complaint of administration of the act, but when you stop to consider that this was a new venture and that an organization had to be created to carry out the purpose of the law, I think a great deal of most excellent work has been done.

To be sure each application that was placed could not be granted. Many home owners had gotten themselves into such a situation that there was little equity left and little possibility of their ever being able to take care of or save their homes.

The Board, in my judgment, has been very liberal in their appraisal of many of these properties and while a great many have been refused you must consider that the organization has handled, in round numbers, to date 1,750,000 applications. We have already found that many of these applications come from those who are actually not distressed, and there were also many that came from people who were seeking to reduce their interest rate, which could not be granted because it was not the intent of the law.

Notwithstanding this the Government has saved for home owners nearly 800,000 homes. The social result of this saving has been to provide homes for 3,000,000 persons at a time when the country was at a great tension and marked unrest. You cannot overestimate the value of the activities of this corporation.

I presume that in the campaign of 1934 more Congressmen now, who are in this House, praised and lauded this one measure more than any other, and there is almost a universal demand here that these operations be continued and that additional authority shall be given to take care of the still hundreds of thousands of distressed property owners.

It has been criticized that the large percentage of funds have gone to building and loan associations, savings banks, commercial banks, life-insurance companies, mortgage companies, and investment companies. This is correct, as the following would indicate: Thirty-five percent to building-and-loan associations, 30 percent to savings banks, 13 percent to commercial banks, 8 percent to life-insurance companies, 5 percent to mortgage companies, 4 percent to investment companies, and about 3 percent to individual mortgagees.

However, it must not be overlooked that many banks—and that means depositors in these banks—have been directly benefited. Financial institutions of this character have been given a new lease of life, and while the percentage in the above indicates only 3 percent to individual mortgagors, it must be borne in mind that the institutions which have handled this money are the regularly organized institutions that have handled the home-lending business for many years. I am not inclined to criticize this action; I think it is commendable. It must be borne in mind that this institution was set up, not as a charitable organization but a great corporation, whose principal purpose was to refinance mortgages, and after all criticism has passed, it must be conceded that these millions of people who have had their homes saved are the beneficiaries of this act.

Not only has it saved homes; it has distributed dividends in cash to hundreds of thousands of depositors and been of inestimable value in reopening and reorganizing many financial institutions. Further, counties and municipalities have received in taxes approximately $143,000,000. The provisions in the act of the second session of the Seventy-third Congress giving opportunity to repair and remodel has placed in the hands of contractors $47,000,000. The organization of attorneys and appraisers, together with insurance premiums paid, has placed in circulation another $95,000,000.

I contend that this has served a useful purpose in adding to the purchasing power of the people in our great emergency.

I have been told by one close to the organization that many thousands of people have been interviewed and have either been discouraged in filing applications or have been cited to lending agencies where they could secure this accommodation. It is obvious that mortgages cannot be handled where there is no chance of repayment. There has been likewise criticism that these transactions have not been handled speedily and that undue time has elapsed. You must take into consideration that the laws governing these transactions in various States widely differ and that the process of title search and other operations incident to the closing of mortgages would cause delay and will continue to cause it in the future. The benefits of this act have been so universally accepted and approved that it is thought that the operations should be extended, and accordingly the committee are recommending that the capital structure of the Corporation be increased to $4,750,000,000. We likewise recommend an increase from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 for the purpose of reconditioning. To me this is a very wise business procedure. As an individual mortgagee it is important that the physical property be maintained and not allowed to deteriorate. This is equally important with the Corporation. It is not considered improbable that in time some of these mortgages will be foreclosed and the property become the property of the Corporation. The better physical condition these properties are in the easier they will be sold, and consequently much less loss to the Corporation.

The Home Owners' Loan Act provided for purchasing of bonds in the Federal Savings Loan Association, and likewise Federal home-loan banks. It has been desired by the building and loan organizations, chartered under State authority, that they might be included, so that a sum of $250,000,000 has been set up for the use of not only purchasing bonds and notes in Federal organizations, but likewise that they may immediately purchase shares in building and loan associations, savings and loan associations, homestead associations, and cooperative banks operating under State charters.

This will greatly strengthen the business of these organizations and in the end will start new operations by these institutions. These funds are to be made available without discrimination.

There has been much complaint of the administrators of the act having moved men indiscriminately from one State to another. In order to prevent this abuse in the future, subsection 10, as amended, will eliminate this practice. I, personally, do not feel that this is a slap at those in authority, but a strengthening act that will help in the administration and at the same time relieve embarrassment and ofttimes unkind criticism.

In my own State of Indiana the Corporation has functioned with great success, and in my own district there has been a wide distribution of relief and the operations almost universally praised. My congressional district is made up of in excess of 275,000 people, and I want to pay my compliments to the fine work that has been done by the administrator in handling the work in that district, as the following results will show, by counties:

County	Loans closed	Amount	Applications on file, not completed
Adams Allen DeKalb. Lagrange Noble. Steuben Wells Whitley	81	$165, 347, 36	52
	2,827,	8, 173, 685, 67	1, 141
	93	159, 765, 95	119
	16	19, 327, 75	11
	42	89, 106, 40	124
	36	70, 449, 36	50
	107	135, 754, 38	62
	78	114, 135, 89	47

We can do no better thing for the rank and file of home owners, than to pass this bill and let it become a law.

Want to pay my compliments to the painstaking, courteous, untiring efforts of my associates on my committee, and particularly, the fine attitude displayed by the chairman. This measure has been carefully handled and am inclined to think that our most excellent chairman, Henry B. Steagall, has made a place for himself that will be remembered many years, probably second to the Guarantee Deposit Act.

We are on the way out of our terrible situation brought on by the depression and let us not do anything to retard but take steps forward in what I think the right direction.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Sweeney].

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise to make a brief statement. My time is limited. I am for this bill. I hope no Member of this House will think because I have been the instrument in seeking an investigation of the H. O. L. C. that I am opposed to the legislation itself. When it is amended it will be a good bill, divorcing from it entirely the wholesale divisions where most of the trouble arose. I have no quarrel with any State manager. The impression has been created in some quarters that I am opposed to Mr. Vincent Dailey, State manager of New York. Mr. Dailey is a fine gentleman, and from many reports received about him, is doing an honest piece of work. I received an affidavit from a gentleman in New York City. I thought it my duty to present the affidavit which contains serious charges, sworn to, to the committee. That I did. I am not responsible for the newspaper publicity or editorial comment concerning these charges. I care not what the Members of Congress think of my attitude in pressing for this investigation. Reports are current around the Capitol that I am making myself disliked because of my interest in this subject. I do not care if I am to be known as the most disliked man in America. When I see graft or maladministration, whether it is in a Democratic or Republican administration, I am going to do my best to show it up. I do not think we will get this investigation. I do not think the Rules Committee will let the resolution come out, because I think some members are afraid of it, but whether we get it or not, we have at least done this: We have made it a little easier for Members of Congress during the time that the rest of the act will be administered. You will not get the headaches listening to complaints that you had last year and I am sure you will be treated with a little more courtesy when you go to the Home Owners' Loan Office in Washington or in your district. Old men and old women-distressed home owners in general-will be given more attention than they heretofore have had, thanks to the exposure of maladministration.

They will not have to go to a ward leader or a State leader or a district leader to get the attention they were entitled to under the act. The act was designed to help the small-home owner. Congress intended that distress should be the sole test of eligibility. That was not carried out in many cases. As a result, large banks in liquidation profited by it and in many cases the act has helped directors and stockholders who were responsible for the failure of these banks to reduce their double liability by bailing out the banks in the wholesale division. The purpose that motivated me in starting this move for an investigation was because I sat in my office last year for months and saw and heard a parade of distressed citizens who came to me complaining about the unnecessary delays and favoritism in the administration of this law. I think this is the experience of most of the men and women in this House. I know what I am talking about. I have interviewed scores of Representatives on this subject.

This legislation is absolutely necessary to the country, and I am heartily in accord with the committee's proposed recommendation that the wholesale division of this Corporation be eliminated, because much of the criticism directed against the management of the H. O. L. C. is confined to the operation of the wholesale division. There a great number of loans were made to individuals who were not in distress.

Whether you believe it or not, the management of the H. O. L. C., by its failure to make distress the sole test of eligibility, and forcing these banks in liquidation to first attempt to finance mortgages that were salable assets of those not in distress through other agencies before liquidating them through the H. O. L. C., has caused in many cases the minimizing of double liability against the directors and stockholders of certain banks. In some cases the officers of certain banks are now in jail as a result of their playing with other people's money.

In proportion to the number of nondistressed loans made in the wholesale division, just so many applicants who were actually in distress were denied the relief that Congress intended they should have received. Many banks not in liquidation took advantage of the facilities of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

As I have indicated before, it is apparent to me and to many Members of the House that the Rules Committee will not submit to the House the question of deciding whether or not an investigation of the affairs of the H. O. L. C. should be had. This much has been accomplished. The spotlight of publicity has been turned upon the activities of this branch of the Government, and I predict in the administration of future funds a higher and better standard of efficiency. This, however, does not relieve this Congress and this administration from proceeding to expose whatever maladministration has occurred since the inception of this legislation.

Congress should know why it was necessary for the H. O. L. C. to purchase a building in the District of Columbia known as the "Acacia Insurance Building" for a consideration of $1,060,000, which transaction, I have been informed. took place in July 1934, and that it had the approval of the emergency council. Obviously the intent was to provide quarters for the Corporation. Shortly after this transaction was consummated, the Board of the H. O. L. C. decided to decentralize. Twelve regional offices have been, or are now being, set up in 12 different sections of the country. Where the Washington office required 12 key men, such as chief counsel, chief appraiser, chief of loan review, and so forth. the 12 regional offices will now require 12 key men in each regional office, making a total of 144 key men, so called, as against the 12 original key men functioning before the decentralization. It is my information that the regional offices will complete every detail with few exceptions in the negotiations of these loans, hence it seems to have been poor business policy on the part of the Board to establish regional offices with a building containing 23,000 square feet on its hands, and which ultimately will be used only for a repository for files, or a morgue for useless papers.

The Chairman of the H. O. L. C., on Monday, March 4, appeared before the Rules Committee. He read a very carefully prepared statement containing 23 pages reciting the activities of the Corporation under his management. He recited the number of applications filed, the number of loans granted, and the amount of mortgage obligations entailed. With this phase of his presentation none can take issue.

He did, however, reveal some startling facts to the committee in disclosing that there are now pending in the criminal section of the H. O. L. C. 732 cases of alleged willful violations of the law; that there are at present 104 indictments in the hands of the United States attorneys for prospective action. Many of these indicted are employees of the H. O. L. C. charged with petty graft, and so forth. He recites that 44 State directors and assistant State managers have been removed, or their resignations requested; that 1,227 complaints involving alleged violations of the law have been reviewed in the legal department; that there were cases which involved embezzlement and misapplication of funds. In addition, there were violations of the Corrupt Practices Act which involved the illegal solicitation of funds for political purposes. He made the statement that all of those against whom suspicion was directed with respect to these charges were removed from the service, and their cases are now in the hands of the Department of Justice.

It seems to me that Congress should ascertain just who are these individuals, the nature of the crime charged against them, and what, if any, penalties were meted out, as provided by existing law.

eligibility, and forcing these banks in liquidation to first attempt to finance mortgages that were salable assets of those H.O.L.C. that a specific complaint which concerns a loan on a hotel in Milford, Conn., was a loan that should not have | been made, but he is discretely silent as to whether or not steps are being taken to recover by the Government the bonds that were transferred in this negotiation. We have reason to believe that there are many similar transactions.

The report submitted is a lengthy one; when it appears in the Congressional Record it should be read carefully by every Member of Congress. To my mind, there were sufficient statements made therein to justify any fair committee having under consideration the question of whether or not there should be an investigation to act in the affirmative.

On March 1, 1935, by registered mail, I requested the Chairman of the H. O. L. C. to send to me certain reports which were taken at the meetings of the legal division over a certain period, for the privilege of examining the files to ascertain the number of deeds of property voluntarily surrendered to date to H. O. L. C., and the number of foreclosures now pending. The requested information has not been received from the Chairman to date, nor has the request made by me to examine the list of illegal loans refused by the Corporation been given any recognition.

There must have been something radically wrong in the administration of the H. O. L. C. when from the very elaborate and well-prepared statement of the Chairman we learned that during the past year 1,178 lawyers were dropped from the service, many of them because of the unsatisfactory character of their work. In addition thereto, admission is made in the statement that 2,116 appraisers were dropped because their work disqualified them from further employment. This number of employees, together with the 44 State managers and assistant managers, makes a sum total of 3,338, better than 20 percent of the entire personnel of the Corporation. This means that one out of every five employees was separated from the service because of incompetence, inefficiency, violation of the law, and other reasons. Certainly the intelligence of this Congress will not let pass without proper investigation the defense submitted by the Chairman of the

The President of the United States and the administration in general are not receiving the loyalty, honesty, and efficiency that by every right they should expect in the management of this important branch of the Government, as evidenced by the indictment that comes not from the Members of Congress who want to see this Corporation function as they fully intended but from the present officials in charge of the H. O. L. C.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. RABAUT].

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Chairman, the greatest loan in the world is the loan on a man's home. It has been mentioned here that the Government has taken some of the poorer mortgages from the banks. If so, let us stay in this business for the benefit of the home owner who suffered at the hands of the private banks and stay in it to take the better mortgages that remain. This business of home-loan mortgages has been recognized by the banking interests and of later years by the insurance companies throughout the country, in fact, a manager of the Prudential Insurance Co. informed me that this type of investment had proved itself to be the best, even in the darkest days of the depression.

Why is it, therefore, that this bill seeks silently to abide by the decision of the Federal Home Loan Board, wherein it arbitrarily set a date as final for applications for loans, and that day, if my memory serves me right, was November 13 last? Why is it that this bill coincides, so to speak, with the action of the Board wherein thousands upon thousands of needy home owners throughout this country have been denied suddenly, because of the arbitrary rule of the Board, the right to share in the benefits of the relief intended by the act of Congress, from which grew this most worthy agency of relief to the small home owners of the Nation?

For my part, I believe, when the pages of history relative to the Seventy-third Congress shall be reviewed by the student and the thinker, perhaps no single act of that legislative body shall receive more favorable comment than the of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation—that corporation. which, under the authority of this distinguished body, was to depart, so to speak, from the consideration of industrial schemes, from the problems of banker and merchant, away from the factory and the mine, and devote itself to the people at the very keystone of construction in the governmental unit, the place most sacred and cherished, "the home." But has the intention of the Congress been carried out to the people in small homes? Have they received the aid that was the purpose and the intention of the Congress to give, or has not this very relief been transferred to the closed banks, building and loan associations, and others who found themselves in financial straits, rather than to the relief of the home owner for which the act was originally intended?

For my part, Mr. Chairman, I wish to go on record as favoring an adequate appropriation for the continuance of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. That this continuance should be along lines tending to serve those in need of refinancing their homes, doing away with the red tape that has grown up within the system, showing respect and an ambition to help the home owner as was the original intent of Congress; and for that reason, Mr. Chairman, I will introduce tomorrow, when the bill is read before the House, an amendment asking that a definite period be assigned in which those desiring to seek the relief, as offered by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, shall have a sufficient period of time in which to make application for a loan, as was the original intent of the Congress. This will be nothing more than keeping faith with those whom we were determined to help. This will be nothing more than the duty of the great legislative body of the Nation to look after the home owners of the country who have had at least enough interest in this land to build a home, and form one of the units for which we ask additional appropriations for a great Army and a great Navy for national defense. What do we wish to defend? Are we primarily more interested in oil wells and industry, or have we closer at heart the homes and the people of the Nation?

I hope, Mr. Chairman, that tomorrow, upon consideration of this bill, ample opportunity will be given me to plead for an extension of time so that those in distress shall have occasion to obtain an application for home-loan relief, under the provisions of this act, and that a suitable appropriation will be made by the Congress to continue this office for the benefit of those people who still cherish and love the ideals of home, who are proud to list their address at a given spot in the Nation, who point with pride to neighborly friendships of long duration. Yes, Mr. Chairman, even for the least of these I make my appeal.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield now to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ELLENBOGEN].

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, the bill which is before the House for consideration is, on the whole, an excellent bill as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough.

Section 9 of the bill amends the Home Owners' Loan Act by giving to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation authority to issue an additional $1,500,000,000 of bonds. Two hundred and fifty million dollars must be deducted from this amount for investment by the Board in the bonds and securities of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and for other investments under section 12 of the bill.

This leaves a net additional amount of $1,250,000,000.

From official figures supplied to me by the Board of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, it appears that as of February 28, 1935, 817,773 loans totaling $2,468,743,899 have been closed. As of the same date, February 28, 1935, 421,679 applications were still pending and undisposed of. The average loan up to this date for the entire country amounts to $3.015.

It is thus clear that the net amount of additional bonds authorized to be issued under the bill pending before us will only be sufficient to take care of pending applications. No provision is made to issue bonds for new applications to be filed hereafter. In fact, the bill on page 6, section 9, lines creation of the legislation that gave birth to the existence 23 and 24, expressly provides that the bonds to be authorized by the bill should be used only for applications heretofore filed. This is a serious shortcoming of the bill.

In the State of Pennsylvania there are thousands upon thousands of home owners who are in distress and in danger of losing their homes. Many of them did not file their applications because they were discouraged from doing so by the slow and inefficient administration of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. In Pennsylvania it has taken altogether too long a period of time to close a loan after the application has been filed.

In a very large number of cases the home owner who was threatened with foreclosure went to the mortgage holder and asked him if he would accept the bonds of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and sign the consent form required by the Corporation. Often, altogether too often, the home owner was advised by the mortgagee that the latter would not sign the consent form because he had already signed many consent forms which were pending in the office of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation for a long time without being able to obtain final disposition of the cases.

I could enlarge on this point, but I do not have the time to do so. The fact is that thousands upon thousands of distressed home owners in Pennsylvania would have filed their applications, but were discouraged or prevented from doing so by the slow operation of the offices of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in Pennsylvania. Therefore, in many of these cases, the failure to file an application is not due to the fault of the home owner, but is due to the method in which these offices have been operated in Pennsylvania.

I must therefore state, with all the emphasis at my command, that it is not fair, at least for my own State of Pennsylvania, to prevent or prohibit the filing of new applications by distressed home owners.

The indications are that in their good judgment the Chairman and the members of the Committee on Banking and Currency will agree to change the bill so as to provide for the filing of new applications and to increase the amount of the bonds authorized to be issued. We must be careful to see that the time allowed for the filing of new applications will be sufficient and that a sufficient amount of bonds will be authorized. This brings me to another point.

On November 13, 1934, to the surprise of all of us, out of a clear sky and without previous warning, the Board of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation issued an executive order which provided two things:

First. It prohibited the receipt of further applications.

Second. It suspended further action on all applications already received and which had not yet reached the legal department.

This order was justified on the ground that the amount of bonds which the Corporation was authorized to issue was only sufficient to take care of applications which had already reached the legal department.

This order, I submit, was a mistake.

It was based on the supposition that Congress would not authorize further funds or perhaps on a conviction reached by the Board of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation that it should not request Congress for further funds.

After Congress convened on January 3, 1935, it became quite apparent that the sentiment among the Members for further appropriations to the H. O. L. C. was strong.

The Board changed its position, came before a congressional committee and asked for further funds for the purpose of taking care of applications already received. It seems that the Board of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was still of the opinion that no funds should be requested which would permit the filing of new applications.

Whatever may have been the justification of the order of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation of November 13, 1934, this order was changed on or about January 28, 1935, when instructions were issued to the State regional and district offices of the Corporation to resume further action on all applications already received. No change was made in the order prohibiting the receipt of new applications.

The resumption of further action on applications already in the hands of the Corporation was made, although no funds had been appropriated. It was evidently inspired by the conviction that Congress was determined and could be depended upon to grant authority to issue the necessary additional amount of bonds.

I believe that it is now clear that Congress will authorize the issuance of new bonds not only for the purpose of taking care of applications already received but also for the purpose of taking care of new applications filed within a limited time in the future.

In order to give to the home owner the full benefit of this action of Congress, which may be expected with confidence in the very near future, the Board of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation should immediately rescind its previous order and permit the filing of new applications. There is just as much justification for the immediate receipt of new applications as there is for taking further action on applications already received and not yet in the hands of the legal department.

I hope that these remarks made on the floor of the House and the justice of the proposition will induce the Board of the H. O. L. C. to make this change in its order of November 13.

The bill before us should also be changed in other respects. A grave injustice has been done in the past to a home owner who was denied a loan because his property contained one or two storerooms and was therefore termed "commercial." The bill should be amended to provide loans on homes with commercial features.

The bill should also be amended in other respects, and I hope it will be. I do not have the time just now to go into the details of these proposed amendments, but I hope to be able to point them out tomorrow, when the bill will be read section by section for amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired, and the bill will be read for amendment.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Celler, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 6021) to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, etc., had come to no resolution thereon,

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that immediately after the reading of the Journal and disposition of matters on the Speaker's table on Monday next, I be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Form]?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'Connor] or someone to tell us what is the order of business for Monday. Will this request interfere with the business of the day?

Mr. O'CONNOR. It may very well. According to present indications, the District of Columbia Committee has the call on Monday, and it may take 2 hours. If this bill continues tomorrow, the plan was to take up the bill as to the "pink slip" on Monday. As the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin] knows, for some years, especially under Speakers Longworth and Garner, the House took a position against granting, too far in advance, permission to address the House.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I think the gentleman would be quite correct if he followed that plan now.

Mr. O'CONNOR. It has developed into a practice during the last year or two—and I do not like to object to requests to address the House, but they should not be made more than 1 day in advance. The gentleman from Mississippi might know better tomorrow afternoon what the business before the House will be.

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. The House gave me this permission but adjourned before I could be reached. Of course,

I do not want to take up any of the time of the House

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. We do not like to object, but we do not like to interfere with the regular business of the day. I suggest that the gentleman withdraw his request. Perhaps he can renew it on Monday.

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may withdraw the request just made and make the request that I be allowed to speak tomorrow, after the special orders.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman withdraws his request to speak on Monday and renews it for tomorrow?

Mr. STEAGALL. Reserving the right to object, I appreciate the position of my friend from Mississippi, and I was about to intercede for him a moment ago to get permission for him to speak on Monday; but in view of the urgent desire of the House to finish the bill now under consideration tomorrow, I must ask the gentleman to defer his request for the present.

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw that request and ask that I be granted that permission to address the House on Tuesday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi that on Tuesday next, after disposition of business on the Speaker's desk, he may address the House for 20 minutes?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, may I be informed if there are any special orders for Tuesday?

The SPEAKER. There are no special orders for Tuesday. Mr. O'CONNOR. I have no objection, Mr. Speaker. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Ford]?

There was no objection.

THE LATE JUSTICE OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a concurrent resolution and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Concurrent Resolution 15

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That for the purpose of holding memorial services in honor of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, the two Houses of Congress shall assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives at a time to be fixed by the representatives of the Senate and House of Representatives in charge thereof.

That a joint committee consisting of five Members of the House of Representatives and five Members of the Senate shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President of the Senate, respectively, which is empowered to make suitable arrangements for fitting and proper exercises for the joint session of Congress herein authorized.

session of Congress herein authorized.

That invitations to attend the exercises be extended to the President of the United States of America and the members of his Cabinet, the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, the Diplomatic Corps (through the Secretary of State), the General of the Armies, the Chief of Staff of the Army, the Chief of Naval Operations, the Major General Commandant of the Marine Corps, and the Commandant of the Coast Guard, and such other persons as the joint committee on arrangements shall deem proper.

ments shall deem proper.

That the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States is hereby invited to address the American people at the joint session of the Congress in commemoration of the life and services of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the House concurrent resolution?

There was no objection.

The House concurrent resolution was agreed to.

On motion by Mr. TREADWAY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the House concurrent resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

THE UPPER PENINSULA OF MICHIGAN

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD on the bill H. R. 6484.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House, about 10 days ago the Michigan emergency relief administration issued its first compiled report, covering the period from July 1933 to November 1934. I have not as yet had an opportunity to examine this report in detail, but I do have one item of information that is of vital interest.

The emergency relief administration is quoted in the press as saying that one-sixth of upper Michigan's population "must eventually move on to some area of greater economic opportunities or remain permanently dependent." I want to challenge this conclusion of the emergency relief admintration. I want to say emphatically that it is my opinion that any organization that concludes that 50,000 have to be moved from the Upper Peninsula of Michigan because of a lack of economic advantage is taking a narrow, shortsighted view of the problems that confront this particular region.

It has become something of a fashion nowadays among a portion of our so-called "professional sociologists" when confronted with staggering problems of relief to jump to the conclusion that people must be moved. If all the people in the United States were moved who have been indicated as helpless in their present circumstances, we would witness an exodus that would astonish the world. I recognize, as we all must, that there are maladjustments at present in certain areas between population and economic opportunity. I will not admit, however, that the Upper Peninsula of Michigan is one of the areas so affected.

Everyone has probably heard that the Upper Peninsula of Michigan is one of the two blackest spots on the relief map of the United States. I realize that. I know that probably more than one-half of the population of this area has received Government aid of one kind or another in the past few years. I know that the forest resources of that area. originally as magnificent as any in the North American Continent, have been squandered and depleted. I know that the iron mines and copper mines have curtailed activities and that large numbers previously employed in these industries are now unemployed. I know, too, that these industries, the largest employers of labor in the Upper Peninsula, will never be able to take up all the slack that exists. Technological development will make necessary the employment of fewer and fewer men. The picture does look black. To the pessimist it may appear futile. Without action it is undoubtedly hopeless. I contend, however, that it is foolhardy and malicious to speak of tearing people from their homes and transporting them to new areas until an investigation has been made of the possibilities of enabling them to stay where they are. I maintain that until a full and complete survey of the natural resources of the Upper Peninsular of Michigan has been made, that until we have information as to the possibilities of this area, that talk of one-sixth of its population remaining on permanent relief should cease.

I am introducing a resolution calling for such a basic data survey of the natural resources of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan. I am convinced that when the economic possibilities of this region are known that it will be apparent that not only can the present population be adequately taken care of but that there will be room for those from truly distressed areas. But, first, we must know what these economic resources are. I have merely scratched the surface; yet I know that the potentialities of development are enormous.

I know, for instance, that a complete survey of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan would show that this region possesses one of the most salubrious summer climates in the United States. Lying, as it does, adjacent to Lake Superior and Lake Michigan, the Upper Peninsula knows no intensive heat. The temperature for the summer months averages for June 59 degrees; for July 65 degrees, and for August 64 degrees, while the metropolitan areas of Chicago and Detroit are sweltering in the heat the Upper Peninsula plays in a climate of perpetual springtime. There is, too, in the Upper Peninsula natural scenery unsurpassed for beauty. Countless rivers, streams, and lakes well stocked with fish, an abundance of wild game, thousands of acres of forested lands, make possible a diversity of recreational activity in this region.

The Upper Peninsula has all this, and yet the tourist and resort business is sadly undeveloped. Laudable programs of development are now under way. The advantages of the Upper Peninsula as a vacation land will be advertised. The tourist business will increase, the greatest need in this connection at present is for highways. A comprehensive program of road development must be worked out to obtain the maximum advantage of the possibilities of a tourist and resort business. We ought to know what is needed and only a thorough survey can tell us. We ought to know what can be done by way of setting up State and National parks, game preserves, and the like. The possibilities along this line are unlimited. I mention only the proposal to convert Isle Royal into a national park, a proposal that I am heartily in favor of, as one of the possibilities.

I know that a survey of the resources of the Upper Peninsula would disclose the fact that its timber resources are wellnigh exhausted. Once heavily timbered, this area presents a picture now of slashings and stumps. The same ruthless, heedless exploitation that destroyed the forest resources of other areas brought devastation here. Almost too late Americans have awakened to the fact that their forests were not inexhaustible. But we are facing a fact, and there is nothing to be gained by sitting down and wringing our hands over what might have been. Where forests grew once they will grow again. Reforestation is not a lost art. There is still time to conserve those resources that still remain. Only last month the National Forest Reservation Commission approved a project for two counties in the Upper Peninsula which, if carried to completion, will go far in time to repair some of the damage that has been done,

The National Forest Reservation Commission is to be complimented highly for its far-sighted policy in connection with this and other programs which it has approved.

It is estimated that this project of reforestation and conservation will go far toward stabilizing the economic life of a large portion of the inhabitants of these counties. I see no valid reason why, in place of the dilapidated sawmills, in place of the ghostly remains of once bustling sawmill communities, in place of cut-over, unsightly acres, we cannot look forward to operating mills, thriving communities, and forested acres. That the United States should follow a program of reforestation is so obvious as to require no argument on my part, and I submit that no region at the present time offers greater oportunities for this type of work than the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

A complete survey of the natural resources would show, I am sure, that practically no advantage has been taken of the agricultural possibilities of the region. This is a region of abundant rainfall. It faces no hazards because of possible drought. It is a region of fertile soil. It is estimated that one and one-half million acres in the Upper Pensinusla are suitable for agriculture. But a fraction of these acres are now under cultivation. There is no valid reason why dairying, the growing of vegetables, forage crops, poultry should not play an important part in the economy of the Upper Pensinsula. But, again we should know the facts before we act.

I am convinced, given sensible social planning, that an economy, partly agricultural, partly industrial, is admirably adapted to this region. For many, part-time employment in the forest industries, pulp-wood mills, veneer mills, or in the mines, or in industries based on fishing or in connection with the resort business, and part-time employment on farms would be welcome. Until we have pursued such possibilities to the end and found them hopeless we are not ready to talk of moving people out of this area.

Much in the way of economic development waits in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan upon the development of its power resources. I do not propose at this time to elaborate on the possibilities of power development. These are practically unlimited. Again we need a survey, however, before acting. I am positive that the development of electrical power in this region would be ample to inaugurate a program of rural electrification on an intensive scale. The production of cheap power in the Upper Peninsula will make possible the refinement of magnesium carbonate of which there are extensive deposits in Schoolcraft County. Dow metal manufactured from magnesium carbonate is one-quarter lighter than aliuminum and has the same tensile strength and modulas of elasticity as steel. With the increasing demand for lighter equipment by railroads, by airplane, this mineral wealth should serve as the basis for employment of hundreds. Cheap power would be the basis of a revived lumber industry. It could be the basis of numerous seasonal industries based on agriculture, such as vegetable canneries, cheese factories, and others.

I have said that mining no longer can serve as the sole basis for employment in the Upper Peninsula. It is particularly true that the copper mines are no longer able to take care of the men once on their pay rolls. A complete survey of this region might disclose the reason for this. The curtailed activity is not due to an exhaustion of copper ore; nor is it due to the stress of domestic competition. The copper mines have closed, their employees thrown out of work and forced to seek relief, primarily because of the competition of cheap foreign copper. We have today an excise tax of 4 cents per pound on foreign copper imported into the United States. So far as protecting the American producer is concerned it might as well not be in existence. The cost of production for the average American mine is so much in excess of 4 cents per pound that foreign copper produced by peon and semislave labor can pay the tax and still be sold below the American ore. I am reliably informed that all of the noninsulated copper wire strung in the Upper Peninsula today came from Canada. Yet we speak of moving people out of a county, rich in copper ore whose mines are idle. They need not be idle. There is an American market for copper and I intend to introduce legislation in the near future that will give that market to the American producer.

It has not been intended that these remarks should cover completely the scope of the natural resources of the Upper Peninsula. I emphasize that only a complete survey can tell us what these resources are. I do not believe, that I am wrong in asking that such a survey be made. To talk of moving 50,000 people is a serious business at any time; to talk of moving these from a region that has an abundance of natural resources seems to me foolish in the extreme. I respectfully ask that Congress grant the appropriation that I have called for in my resolution.

PUBLIC UTILITIES

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein an address delivered by Mr. Roberts, people's counsel of the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address of William A. Roberts, People's Counsel for the District of Columbia, before the National Municipal Ownership League, at the Willard Hotel, February 23, 1935:

It is a rather remarkable thing that in the Capital of the Nation, a city requiring special services, and under the immediate eye of the Congress, that there is no publicly owned utility. The telephone messages from the governmental departments, and even from the White House, are carried by a commercial company, whose officers and directors are vitally interested in the activities of the Government. Indeed the interpurse telephone with the contraction of the commercial company.

whose officers and directors are vitally interested in the activities of the Government. Indeed, the interbureau telephone, switching from one Government department to another, is handled by an exchange of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. on a permessage basis, the operators being employed by that company. There is no doubt but that the constant threat of Government ownership has caused a higher efficiency of utility management in Washington than exists in most jurisdictions. Like a mild attack of measles, the abortive efforts to establish publicly owned power plants have apparently strengthened the resistance of the corporations operating here and developed their technique in protracting and delaying congressional action so as to defeat any attempt at acquisition of the present properties.

You must bear in mind that the residents of the District of Columbia have no franchise. This means, in effect, that the person seeking high Government office in the District must trim their sails so as to avoid public antagonism and at the same time to profit by the invisible but powerful wind of the favor of the city's largest commercial enterprises—the utilities. It is true that occasionally some citizens' association—one of the 70 or more organized in the city—will adopt a resolution in favor of Government ownership. However, the complex method of enacting legislation in effect here, requiring as it does the action of both the House and Senate, is made even more difficult by the necessity of the action by separate Appropriations Committees. Thus it almost literally true that no District legislation can pass Congress except by unanimous consent, and it is always comparatively easy to secure at least one objector and to defeat any proposal which is not satisfactory to the utility interests.

erson seeking high Government office in the District must trim

Illustrative of this difficulty is the history of development of hydroelectric power from the waters of the Potomac River. For many years Senator George Norms, of Nebraska, has sponsored and studied such development. Exhaustive reports have been prepared, usually by the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army, but by the time the reports were completed the immediate interest in the project has materially diminished. I hope I may be pardoned if I express a skeptical attitude toward the reports which have heretofore been made. The most recent engineer study indicated that it would be impossible for the Government, even with its low interest rate, to produce electric current at Great Falls, only 15 miles from the District of Columbia, for less than 5 mills per kilowatt-hour. In the January hearing on the rates of the Potomac Electric Power Co. it was revealed that that than 5 mills per kilowatt-hour. In the January hearing on the rates of the Potomac Electric Power Co. it was revealed that that than 5 mills per kilowatt-hour. In the January heading of the rates of the Potomac Electric Power Co. it was revealed that that company was obtaining hydroelectric power in enormous quantitites from the Safe Harbor hydroelectric development in Maryland at a price which averaged for the year 1.5 mills per kilowatt-hour delivered in the District of Columbia. It is true that this is not a firm power rate, but, nevertheless, the supply was so nearly constant that the company suspended in part the operation of one of the most efficient steam-producing plants in the United States and relied upon the hydroelectric power. Incidentally you will be interested to know that the cost of generation of current by steam for the Potomac Electric Power Co. for the year 1934 was 3.2171 mills per kilowatt-hour, a reduction from the prior year, 1933, when the cost was 3.3403 mills. With the introduction of the hydroelectric power from the Safe Harbor highline the average cost of all current distributed in the District of Columbia and its environs was 2.996 mills; in other words, the average of steam and hydro was approximately 35/100 of a mill less than the cost of steam production in one of the finest powdered-coal plants yet constructed.

less than the cost of steam production in one of the linest pow-dered-coal plants yet constructed.

These production costs are comparatively low, but it must be borne in mind that they do not include profit nor the cost of distribution. They do, however, support the contention that hydroelectric development of the Potomac River is financially practicable. It is my contention that the construction of a dam at Great Falls and of a dam at Chain Bridge together with storage at Great Falls and of a dam at Chain Bridge together with storage reservoirs in the upper Potomac is fully within the constitutional power of the United States Government regardless of the Tennessee Valley decision. The Government is a large consumer of electric current in the District of Columbia for its own purposes, and the local government, too, consumes great quantities of current. At present the cost for the lighting of public spaces, streets, and parks is in the vicinity of $1,000,000 per annum. Furthermore, the construction of the Chain Bridge dam could avoid an imminent expenditure of about one and one-half million dollars for a bridge at that point and the Great Falls Dam could carry on its crest a highway permitting great saving of travel time from western Maryland to the South. As you know, the Potomac and Anacostia Rivers in the vicinity of Washington are tidal streams, and the condition of these waterways due to primitive sewerage disposal system is an increasing health menace. The storage of water for power production would permit a controlled flow during the summer months and would alleviate the unsanitary conditions now existing.

I have been present at conferences lately where conservative engineers expressed alarm at the possibility of tremendous damage to the hundreds of millions invested in Government buildings in down-town Washington in the so-called "triangle area." They were considering the construction of an enormous dike to prevent the flooding of the area which has an elevation considerably below the creek of the Potomac River as shown in historical records of previous flood conditions. previous flood conditions. The proper development of hydroelectric reservoirs on the Potomac River would avoid the expenditure for these dikes.

There remains the question of the practicability of additional producing facilities for Government use only without taking over the commercial market in the District of Columbia. Frankly, I doubt that the Federal and District requirements alone would justify an efficient power development of the river. However, consumption in the District has more than doubled in the last 10 years and there are signs of industrial awakening in nearby Virginia. Several high-cost separate governmental plants could be retired and the increasing demand for water in the District will retired and the increasing demand for water in the District will soon cause the suspension of power production at Dalecarlia Reservoir. May I call your attention, also, to the fact that the Pennsylvania Railroad has been electrified as far south as the Potomac yards on the Virginia side of the Potomac River and that the operation of the railroad alone affords considerable market in addition to providing high tension connections to the vast industrial area of Baltimore only 40 miles away.

In the so-called "Rau report", prepared for the House Appropriation Committee by Otto M. Rau, there is a comprehensive analysis of transmission and distribution system in the District of Columbia. For some unknown reason the Rau report and its predecessors, which cost the District of Columbia $50,000, have been buried in obscurity. Even if the contention of the utilities that the report underestimates the necessary investment costs is assumed to be correct, the report contains valuable fundamental data which could be used in subsequent studies of the situation. I would like to refer to the so-called "Washington Plan" of electric-rate regulation. In the National Municipal Review for November 1934, was published an article of mine which analyzes the so-called "sliding-scale method" and at the same time conveys a warning against attributing to this system of regulation all of the admitted benefits by way of rate reduction which the District has enjoyed. Differences in taxation alone account for a great part of the favorable showing of the local operation. During the a warning against attributing to this system of regulation all of the admitted benefits by way of rate reduction which the District has enjoyed. Differences in taxation alone account for a great part of the favorable showing of the local operation. During the year 1934 the total local taxes paid, exclusive of Federal income and current tax, amounted to but 4 percent of the gross receipts of the power company. I am advised that the average of State and local taxes in the United States is in excess of 13 percent. The additional of $1,200,000 to the taxes paid by the power company to establish a parity with the taxes paid by other taxpayers in this jurisdiction would require an upward adjustment of rates which would destroy the pretty picture now offered.

There are many other factors including comparatively low labor costs and an excellent load factor which account for the present rate level. I am advised that an adjustment of all labor rates of the Potomac Electric Power Co. field employees has recently been effected which will add a number of hundreds of thousands of dollars to its operating costs. The sliding-scale method of rate control has broken down by reason of tremendous, and I contend, unnecessary additions to plant which have increased the investment base from $32,500,000 in 1924 to $66,000,000 for the weighted average of the year 1934. The total reduction on the $12,000,000 gross bills of local consumers for this coming year is only $140,000. I predict that it will not be long before an upward adjustment of rates must take place unless regulatory methods are improved or the present sliding-scale formula is sharply amended. Legislation intending to increase the tax burden of the company so that it will pay a reasonable portion of the city's operating cost is now in course of preparation and cannot be avoided. The passive approval of the local consumers can and will change to an insistent demand that "something be done" as soon as the sliding scale starts to slide upward instead of downward.

While the ownership of utilities.

Certain novel proposals for city-owned garages and parking areas are also current and have likewise met objections on theoretical

In summary, I might say that from past history and present indications, the District of Columbia will remain a stronghold of private operation and holding-company ownership. Our most pressing problem is, therefore, the improvement of the regulatory system to the greatest efficiency of which it is susceptible.

If any of you are interested in these other local projects, I would be glad to correspond with you rather than to take further time at this meeting.

PUBLICITY OF INCOMES

Mr. O'CONNOR, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged report for printing in the RECORD:

House Resolution 155

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of H. R. 6359, a bill to repeal certain provisions relating to publicity of certain statements of income." That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER. May the Chair make this statement? There has grown up, as has been stated, a custom to get permission to address the House 3 or 4 days in advance of the day upon which the address is to be made.

As has been stated, this frequently interferes with business which may come up on that day. Gentlemen will recall that on yesterday, on account of several special orders which had | been made, one of the important committees of this House was denied a full day on Calendar Wednesday; and the Chair is disposed, without making any statement to that effect, in the interest of fairness hereafter, not to recognize gentlemen who make such requests certainly more than 1 day before the speech is to be made, and possibly only on the day on which it is to be delivered, because it is impossible 3 or 4 days in advance to determine whether such special orders will interfere with the urgent business of the House. [Applause.]

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

A joint resolution of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred

S. J. Res. 77. Joint resolution authorizing printing and binding for the Federal Power Commission; to the Committee on Printing.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to: accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 33 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, March 8, 1935, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARING

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS

(Friday, Mar. 8, 10:30 a. m.)

Continuation of hearings on bill (H. R. 3019) providing for certain amendments to the Public Domain Grazing Act, room 328, Old House Office Building.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

261. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for participation of the United States in the California Pacific International Exposition, to be held at San Diego, Calif., in 1935 and 1936, to be immediately available and to remain available until June 30, 1936, amounting to $350,000 (H. Doc. No. 132); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

262. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated March 5, 1935, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustrations, on a preliminary examination and survey of New York and New Jersey channels, deep water in vicinity of Sandy Hook, N. J., through Lower New York Bay, Raritan Bay, Arthur Kill, Staten Island Sound, and Kill Van Kull to deep water in Upper New York Bay, including channel north of Shooters Island, authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved July 3, 1930 (H. Doc. 133); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

263. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a proposed amendment to section 2 (a) of the act entitled "An act to create the White House police force, and for other purposes", approved September 14, 1922 (42 Stat. 841), as amended by section 2 of the act entitled "An act to authorize a necessary increase in the White House police force", approved May 14, 1930; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. CULLEN: Committee on Ways and Means. H. R. 6359. A bill to repeal certain provisions relating to publicity of certain statements of income; without amendment (Rept. No. 313). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BURCH: Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. H. R. 3612. A bill to provide for adjusting the for the relief of the Jay Street Terminal, New York; with-compensation of post-office inspectors and inspectors in charge to correspond to the rates established by the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; without amendment (Rept. No. 315). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mrs. JENCKES of Indiana: Committee on the District of Columbia. S. 403. An act to amend the act of Congress approved March 1, 1899, entitled "An act to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to remove dangerous and unsafe buildings and parts thereof, and for other purposes", and to further amend said act by adding at the end thereof new sections nos. 5 and 6; without amendment (Rept. No. 318). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mrs. JENCKES of Indiana: Committee on the District of Columbia. S. 406. An act to amend an act approved May 1, 1906, entitled "An act to create a Board for the Condemnation of Insanitary Buildings in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes"; without amendment (Rept. No. 319). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. LANHAM: Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. H. R. 108. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act for the relief of contractors and subcontractors for the post offices and other buildings and work under the supervision of the Treasury Department, and for other purposes", approved August 25, 1919, as amended by act of March 6, 1920; without amendment (Rept. No. 314). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. TURNER: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 609. A bill for the relief of Newton C. Stalnaker; without amendment (Rept. No. 316). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. TURNER: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 2107. A bill for the relief of Frank Kroegel, alias Francis Kroegel; without amendment (Rept. No. 317). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. H. R. 2186. A bill for the relief of John Kelly; with amendment (Rept. No. 320). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4146. A bill for the relief of Mrs. Olin H. Reed; with amendment (Rept. No. 321). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. NICHOLS: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4800. A bill to authorize the settlement of individual claims for personal property lost or damaged, arising out of the activities of the Civilian Conservation Corps, which have been approved by the Secretary of War; with amendment (Rept. No. 322). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. NICHOLS: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4817. A bill for the relief of Matthew E. Hanna; without amendment (Rept. No. 323). Referred to the Committee of the Whole

Mr. TOLAN: Committee on Claims. H. R. 4844. A bill to provide for the reimbursement of certain enlisted men and former enlisted men of the Navy for the value of personal effects lost, damaged, or destroyed by fire at the naval radio station, Eureka, Calif., on January 17, 1930; with amendment (Rept. No. 324). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GWYNNE: Committee on Claims. S. 282. An act for the relief of William Kemper; with amendment (Rept. No. 325). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. S. 559. An act to authorize settlement, allowance, and payment of certain claims; without amendment (Rept. No. 326). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. RAMSPECK: Committee on Claims. S. 563. An act out amendment (Rept. No. 327). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. S. 1053. An act authorizing adjustment of the claim of the Rio Grande Southern Railroad Co.; without amendment (Rept. No. 328). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Committee on Claims. S. 1057. An act authorizing adjustment of the claim of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co.; without amendment (Rept. No. 329). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BURDICK: A bill (H. R. 6499) referring the claims of the Turtle Mountain Band or Bands of Chippewa Indians of North Dakota to the Court of Claims for adjudication and settlement; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. COLLINS: A bill (H. R. 6500) to amend the act entitled "An act authorizing the attorney general of the State of California to bring suit in the Court of Claims on behalf of the Indians of California", approved May 18, 1928 (43 Stat. L. 602); to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. ELLENBOGEN: A bill (H. R. 6501) to release veterans from the liability to pay interest on loans secured by adjusted-service certificates, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GRANFIELD: A bill (H. R. 6502) to fix rates of compensation of certain employees in the employ of the War Department; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. JONES: A bill (H. R. 6503) to provide for reduced interest rates on mortgages on certain small farms; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. McREYNOLDS: A bill (H. R. 6504) to amend an act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor"; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MORAN: A bill (H. R. 6505) to provide for the construction of three vessels for the Coast Guard designed for ice-breaking and assistance work; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. PIERCE: A bill (H. R. 6506) providing for the final enrollment of the Indians of the Klamath Indian Reservation in the State of Oregon; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. QUINN: A bill (H. R. 6507) to regulate the transportation in interstate commerce of moving-picture films showing or representing professional prize fights, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GRISWOLD: A bill (H. R. 6508) to prohibit employers from influencing the vote of their employees in national elections; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota: A bill (H. R. 6509) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Rainy River at or near Baudette, Minn.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mrs. NORTON: A bill (H. R. 6510) to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. MEAD: A bill (H. R. 6511) to amend the air mail laws and to authorize the extension of the Air Mail Service; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. VINSON of Georgia: A bill (H. R. 6512) to authorize the crediting of service rendered by personnel (active or retired) subsequent to June 30, 1932, in the computation of their active or retired pay after June 30, 1935; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6513) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to acquire a suitable site at Pearl Harbor, Territory of Hawaii, for a rear range light; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BACON: A bill (H. R. 6514) to provide for the application of the 2-cent rate on first-class mail matter for delivery within the confines of any incorporated city and to contiguous cities; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6515) to amend section 1001 (a) of the Revenue Act of 1932; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FULMER: A bill (H. R. 6516) to amend an act entitled "An act to divide the eastern district of South Carolina into four divisions and the western district into five divisions" by adding a new division to the eastern district and providing for terms of said court to be held at Sumter, S. C.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. McLEOD: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 199) to create a commission to study the navigation laws, rules, and regulations, and report with recommendations on their revision to insure maximum possible safety at sea, reduction of excessive operation and overhead expenses, proper discipline, and to promote efficiency of inspection and supervision of vessels; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 200) for the preservation and restoration of the frigate Constellation as a national museum, and making Newport, R. I., its home port; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mrs. NORTON: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 201) giving authority to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to make special regulations for the occasion of the Seventieth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, to be held in the District of Columbia in the month of September 1936, and for other purposes, incident to said encampment; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ARNOLD: A bill (H. R. 6517) granting a pension to William E. Kimbrell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. AYERS: A bill (H. R. 6518) for the relief of Mike Chetkovich; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BARDEN: A bill (H. R. 6519) providing for an examination and survey of channel connecting Back Sound and Lookout Bight, N. C.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. CASTELLOW: A bill (H. R. 6520) for the relief of Preston Brooks Massey; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. COLLINS: A bill (H. R. 6521) granting an increase of pension to Mary Lehnen; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH: A bill (H. R. 6522) for the relief of Asa C. Ketcham; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KNUTE HILL: A bill (H. R. 6523) granting a pension to Jennie Ledford McNeill; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NICHOLS: A bill (H. R. 6524) for the relief of Cooper E. Davis; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. REILLY: A bill (H. R. 6525) for the relief of the West Bend Brewing Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. RICH: A bill (H. R. 6526) for the relief of Harry W. Guild; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 6527) granting a pension to Francis Collins; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROMJUE: A bill (H. R. 6528) granting a pension to Sarah Jane Clutter; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUDD: A bill (H. R. 6529) for the relief of Henry J. Benudert; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. STACK: A bill (H. R. 6530) granting a pension to Sallie J. Moore; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 6531) for the relief of Bob Quillen; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. TOLAN: A bill (H. R. 6532) for the relief of C. J. Murrill; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

3101. By Mr. ANDREWS of New York: Thirty-eight petitions, containing approximately 400 names of residents of the Fortieth Congressional District of New York, protesting against the enactment of House bill 5423; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3102. By Mr. BLAND: Petition of 123 members of the Veterans' Administration facility, Virginia, favoring House bill 1; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3103. By Mr. BOYLAN: Resolution unanimously adopted at the public meeting at the Town Hall Club, sponsored by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, urging the passage of the Wagner-Costigan bill which would make lynching a Federal offense; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3104. Also, petition signed by Hon. Herman W. Beyer and other residents of New York City, opposing the passage of the Wheeler-Rayburn public-utility bill (S. 1725 and H. R. 5423); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3105. Also, resolution adopted by the Association of Master Painters and Decorators of the City of New York, opposing the passage of the 30-hour-week bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3106. Also, petition signed by Charles T. Goll and other residents of New York City, opposing the passage of the Wheeler-Rayburn public-utility bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3107. Also, letter from the president and officials of the E.R. Merritt Spring Co., New York City, urging the repeal of the "pink slip" amendment to the Revenue Act of 1935; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3108. Also, letter from the Geiger Products Co., Inc., 108 South Street, New York City, favoring the passage of House bill 8584, by Congressman Bland; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

3109. Also, petition signed by Charles Auth, of the Auth Electrical Specialty Co., engineers and manufacturers of New York City, and others, opposing the passage of the Wheeler-Rayburn public-utility bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3110. By Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota: Petition of Verney M. Lanman, of Gonvick, Minn., commander of the Gonvick (Minn.) Post, No. 304, of the American Legion, and members of the post, favoring the Vinson bill (H. R. 3896) to make the immediate cash payment of the soldiers' adjusted-service certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3111. Also, petition of Albert Mandt, commander, and Carl T. Torgerson, adjutant, and members of the Comrade Post, No. 349, of the American Legion, Department of Minnesota, of McIntosh and vicinity, in Minnesota, favoring the Vinson bill (H. R. 3896) to make the immediate cash payment of the soldiers' adjusted-service certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3112. By Mr. CROWTHER: Petition of Group 53 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States, Schenectady, N. Y., urging enactment of House Joint Resolution 81; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3113. Also, petition of citizens of Schenectady, N. Y., opposing passage of House bill 5423; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3114. By Mr. DUFFEY of Ohio: Petition of Rosa Steele, 444 Somerset Street, and 34 other citizens of Toledo, Ohio, urging the enactment of House Joint Resolution 69, creating in the Department of Justice a Bureau of Alien Deportation; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

3115. By Mr. FORD of California: Petition of the marble shop employees of Los Angeles, and other marble workers in California, asking Congress that marble work be not eliminated from the Government construction projects, and that the Secretary of the Treasury be requested to have the same specifications on marble work that have been the standard with the Treasury Department for many years; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

3116. By Mr. FULMER: Concurrent resolution by the House of Representatives of the State of South Carolina, memorializing the Congress of the United States to include in its scope of relief work the restoration of tenantless lands due to soil erosion, so as to provide profitable work for the unemployed; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3117. Also, concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives of the State of South Carolina, urging the Congress of the United States to include drainage districts in its program of internal development; to the Committee on Foreign Commerce.

3118. By Mr. GAVAGAN: Petition concerning the repeal of the so-called "pink slip" provision of the revenue-income tax law; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3119. By Mr. HANCOCK of New York: Resolution of Group 1260 of the Polish National Alliance, of Syracuse, N. Y., asking that October 11 of each year be set aside as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3120. By Mr. HOOK: Petition of Edwin Anderson and 36 farmers of Dickinson County, Mich., urging the Congress of the United States to enact into law the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3121. Also, resolution passed by Lions Club of Iron Mountain, Mich., requesting the Congress of the United States to accord to copper a measure of protection sufficient to enable domestic mines and home owners to realize the proper and consistent benefits of the home market by placing an embargo on copper imports; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3122. By Mr. JOHNSON of Texas: Memorial of Josie I. Coleman, postmaster, Tehuacana, Tex., favoring House bill 2890; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

3123. Also, memorial of H. L. Gilbert, Robert Evans, H. P. Grizzard, R. H. McSpadden, E. A. Roberts, W. G. Johnson, R. C. Cole, W. C. Ellis, J. G. Milner, D. H. Burleson, H. B. Cole, Wayne Milligan, J. B. Coleman, H. M. Burleson, W. E. McKissack, W. B. Teer, J. O. Lewis, and John L. Bonner, of Streetman, Tex., opposing House bill 5585; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3124. Also, memorial of Hyder Brown, Roy Bishop, Whit Robertson, Alva Hill, Jim Vaughan, Arthur Dossett, O. Mc-Clain, Jim Anderson, Hazel Sanders, Dock Robertson, Cecil Bishop, John Wynne, Robert Belote, and Will Siddons, of Hillsboro, Tex.; and S. S. Skinner, C. O. Williams, W. B. Boyett, H. C. Russell, and W. C. Clements, of Purdon, Tex., opposing House bill 5585; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3125. By Mr. KENNEY: Concurrent resolution of the State of New Jersey, requesting the Congress of the United States, without further delay, to pass the Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bills (S. 212 and H. R. 2066); to the Committee on Agriculture.

3126. By Mr. KRAMER: Resolution of the Poultrymen's Cooperative Association of Southern California, relative to relief to the poultry industry through the adoption of the proposed excise tax and such other relief measures as will tend to maintain a steady demand for domestic poultry production, etc.; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3127. Also, resolution of the Los Angeles City Council, relative to the proposal of providing funds to inaugurate a works program for the relief of the unemployed, etc.; to the Committee on Appropriations.

3128. Also, resolution of the California Mutual Water Companies Association, relative to refinancing loans, etc.; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3129. Also, resolution of the Oil Producers' Agency of California, relative to the further Federal control of the oil industry, etc.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3130. Also, resolution of the Holy Name Society of Los Angeles, relative to the existing situation in Mexico, etc.; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

3131. By Mr. MORAN: Joint resolution of the State of Maine Legislature; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

3132. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of Rollins Burdick Hunter Co., New York City, concerning House bill 5585; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3133. Also, petition of the Merchants' Association of New York, New York City, concerning House bill 5292; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3134. Also, petition of Milton Dammann, president American Safety Razor Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning the repeal of section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3135. Also, petition of the Bon Ami Co., New York City, concerning repeal of section no. 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act as provided in House bills 3263, 3610, and 5362; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3136. Also, petition of Milton Dammann, president American Safety Razor Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning the public-utility holding-company bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3137. Also, petition of the American Federation of Government Employees, New York Naval District Lodge, No. 36, Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning House bill 200; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

3138. Also, telegram from the Malt Diastase Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning Senate bill 1807; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3139. By Mr. RICH: Petition of citizens of Mansfield, Pa., favoring House bill 2999; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3140. Also, petition of citizens of Williamsport, Pa., protesting against the passage of House bill 5423 and Senate bill 1725; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3141. Also, petition of citizens of Galeton, Pa., protesting against House bill 5423 and Senate bill 1725; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3142. By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Petition of J. D. McGruder and numerous other citizens of Akron and Sawyerville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3143. Also, petition of G. W. Grant and numerous other citizens of Bolling and Greenville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3144. Also, petition of Gaston J. Wrenn and numerous other citizens of Daytona Beach, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3145. Also, petition of Dick Russell and numerous other citizens of Coushatta, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3146. Also, petition of William E. Gibson, Sr., and numerous other citizens of Plaquemine, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3147. Also, petition of Grant Butler and numerous other citizens of Aiken, S. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3148. Also, petition of Will Robson and numerous other citizens of Marianna, Rondo, and Lexa, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3149. Also, petition of J. P. Chaves and numerous other citizens of La Jara, Colo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3150. Also, petition of Alvin Bridges and numerous other citizens of Comer, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3151. Also, petition of John M. Dome and numerous other citizens of Pitts, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3152. Also, petition of B. S. Adams and numerous other citizens of Commerce, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3153. Also, petition of Wesley James and numerous other citizens of Choctaw, Edna, and Pennington, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3154. Also, petition of W. A. Davis and numerous other citizens of Parrottsville and Newport, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3155. Also, petition of Jim Pryor and numerous other citizens of Jasper, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3156. Also, petition of Pat Keith and numerous other citizens of Wartburg and Lancing, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3157. Also, petition of Frank Rosson and numerous other citizens of Parsons and Lexington, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3158. Also, petition of Eldridge Harris and numerous other citizens of Sawyerville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3159. Also, petition of A. D. Noble and numerous other citizens of Blackwell, Roscoe, and Sweetwater, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3160. Also, petition of P. H. Tucker and numerous other citizens of Groesbeck and Martin, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3161. Also, petition of H. L. Lewis and numerous other citizens of San Antonio, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3162. Also, petition of Russell Feimster and numerous other citizens of Pottsboro and Gordonville, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3163. Also, petition of G. T. Grubbs and numerous other citizens of Center and Shelbyville, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocks, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3164. Also, petition of A. L. Hail and numerous other citizens of San Antonio, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3165. Also, petition of E. M. Howard and numerous other citizens of Ranger and Cisco, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3166. Also, petition of John Louis and numerous other citizens of Simonton, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3167. Also, petition of S. A. Davis and numerous other citizens of Madisonville, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3168. Also, petition of J. M. Maggerson and numerous other citizens of Fulton, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3169. Also, petition of R. P. Ewing and numerous other citizens of Glenwood, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3170. Also, petition of R. A. Gammill and numerous other citizens of Nashville, Center Point, and Dierks, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3171. Also, petition of H. T. Griffith and numerous other citizens of Cecil, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3172. Also, petition of R. W. Lipps and numerous other citizens of Clarksville, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3173. Also, petition of G. Snow and numerous other citizens of Grady, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3174. Also, petition of Harry Tolbert and numerous other citizens of West Helena, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3175. Also petition of Clemons Caldwell and numerous other citizens of Nashville, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3176. Also, petition of Raymond Bell and numerous other citizens of Covington, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3177. Also, petition of Pedro B. Salazar and numerous other citizens of Monte Vista, Colo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3178. Also, petition of Frank Duncan and numerous other citizens of Kansas City, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3179. Also, petition of Soloman Carver and numerous other citizens of Abita Springs, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3180. Also, petition of Jimmie Holmar and numerous other citizens of Bonita, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3181. Also, petition of Wiley Benny and numerous other citizens of Shreveport, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3182. Also, petition of Willis T. Owens and numerous other citizens of Haynesville, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3183. Also, petition of S. W. Keefer and numerous other citizens of Sand Patch and Meyersdale, Pa., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3184. Also, petition of J. C. Owens and numerous other citizens of Bermuda and Repton, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3185. Also, petition of R. E. Fretwell and numerous other citizens of Marion and Suttle, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3186. Also, petition of Theodore Green and numerous other citizens of Birmingham, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3187. Also, petition of Fred Davis and numerous other citizens of Mobile and Wilmer, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3188. Also, petition of Dock Murphy and numerous other citizens of Cloverdale and Waterloo, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3189. Also, petition of John Borden and numerous other citizens of Talladega and Alpine, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3190. Also, petition of W. T. Clem and numerous other citizens of Elkmont and Vito, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3191. Also, petition of E. D. Turner and numerous other citizens of Duncan, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 per month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3192. Also, petition of Claud Morris and numerous other citizens of Glendora and Minter City, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 per month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3193. Also, petition of John Burner and numerous other citizens of Shepherdstown, Rippon, and White Post, W. Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3194. Also, petition of B. B. Miles and numerous other citizens of Moorhead, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3195. Also, petition of Elijah Bright and numerous other citizens of Yazoo City, Miss., favoring House bill 2356, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3196. Also, petition of C. H. Mintar and numerous other citizens of Guthrie and Crescent, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3197. Also, petition of T. T. Gilbert and numerous other citizens of Morrison, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3198. Also, petition of Henry Ackerman and numerous other citizens of Danville, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3199. Also, petition of Frank Carron and numerous other citizens of Prairie du Rocher, Renault, and Fults, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3200. Also, petition of Charles E. Walcott and numerous other citizens of McHenry and Oakland, Md., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3201. Also, petition of Bruce Friend and numerous other citizens of Fearer, Friendsville, and Hazelton, Md., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3202. By Mr. RUDD: Petition of the American Safety Razor Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3203. Also, petition of the Denobili Cigar Co., Long Island City, N. Y., concerning section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3204. Also, petition of W. J. Hamilton, Corona, Long Island, N. Y., concerning section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3205. Also, petition of the Van Iderstine Co., Long Island City, N. Y., concerning section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3206. Also, petition of the Imperial Metal Manufacturing Corporation, Long Island City, N. Y., concerning section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3207. Also, petition of the Queencrest Development Corporation, Beechurst Manor, Incorporated, Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y., regarding section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3208. Also, petition of Mayer & Lowenstein, Long Island City, N. Y., concerning section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3209. Also, petition of the Columbia Cable & Electric Co., of Long Island City, N. Y., concerning section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3210. Also, petition of the Krug Baking Co., Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y., concerning section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934: to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3211. Also, petition of Martin Gehringer, of the Manufacturers' Trust Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3212. Also, petition of Richet, Browne & Donald, Maspeth, Long Island, N. Y., concerning section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3213. Also, petition of the Tompkins-Kiel Marble Co., New York City, concerning section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3214. Also, petition of F. H. Ingalls, Brooklyn, N. Y., and six other citizens, regarding the Rayburn-Wheeler publicutility holding companies legislation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3215. By Mr. SCHAEFER: Petition of the people of Springfield and central Illinois, in mass meeting assembled, representing all phases of religious beliefs, endorsing the resolution in Congress calling for an investigation of religious persecutions in Mexico as they affect the United States and its people; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

3216. Also, petition of Council No. 61, Polish National Alliance, East St. Louis, Ill., requesting Congress to designate October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day:

to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3217. Also, petition of Council No. 627, Polish National Alliance, East St. Louis, Ill., requesting Congress to designate October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3218. By Mr. SHANLEY; Petition of Group No. 2327, Polish National Alliance, Wallingford, Conn.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3219. By Mr. TRUAX: Petition of E. E. Enderle and other inspectors, of Cleveland, Ohio, respectfully requesting support of House bill 4464, providing for the classification of United States customs inspectors; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3220. Also, petition of Ohio State Association of Township Trustees and Clerks, by their secretary, Charles P. Baker, Jr., Painesville, Ohio, favoring the appropriation of Federal funds for the improvement of secondary roads, including roads not on Federal or State highway systems; that such funds be allocated directly to the proper authorities of the local subdivision having in charge the improvement of such roads, as counties, townships, and road districts; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

3221. Also, petition of the Federation of Women's Clubs of Greater Cleveland, with a membership of 25,000 women, by their president, Mrs. C. W. Walters, and secretary, Irene Branch, expressing its unqualified opposition to lynching and all other forms of mob violence and urging their Congressmen to support antilynching bills; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3222. Also, petition of the Columbus Stationers' Association, Columbus, Ohio, by their executive secretary, R. Reid Vance, opposing the passage by the Congress of the United States of a 30-hour-week bill at this time; to the Committee on Labor.

3223. Also, petition of J. C. Sipe and other citizens of Toledo, Ohio, regarding income-tax publicity as a wanton, meddlesome, and pernicious invasion of their privacy-it being their opinion that the responsibility for apprehending violators of the income-tax laws rests upon the duly constituted agencies of the Government and not upon busybodies. meddlers, snoopers, and self-appointed spies-and opposing a law that will permit and encourage every citizen to spy upon his neighbor and meddle in his affairs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3224. By Mr. TURNER: Petition of W. T. Croft and numerous other citizens of McEwen, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3225. By Mr. WITHROW: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, memorializing the Congress of the United States to provide a relief program adequate to maintain a decent standard of living, and to accomplish other purposes; to the Committee on Appropriations.

3226. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, memorializing the Congress of the United States to provide jobs for persons who have secured loans from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and from other sources, and who because of unemployment are unable to meet the required payments; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3227. By Mr. WOLCOTT: Petitions of George F. Horn, of Anchorville, Mich., and 281 other members of Farmers Unions in St. Clair and Macomb Counties, Mich., urging the prompt enactment of the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

SENATE

FRIDAY, MARCH 8, 1935

(Legislative day of Monday, Mar. 4, 1935)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. Robinson, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day of Thursday, March 7, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 15) for the holding of memorial services in honor of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 2881) authorizing the adjustment of contracts for the sale of timber on the national forests, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LEWIS. I note the absence of a quorum, and ask for a roll call.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams Ashurst Austin Bachman Balley Bankhead Barbour Bilbo Black Bone Borah Brown Bulkley Bulow Burke Byrd Byrnes Capper Carey Clark Connally Coolidge	Costigan Couzens Cutting Dickinson Dieterich Donahey Duffy Fletcher Frazier George Gerry Gibson Giass Gore Guffey Hale Harrison Hastings Hatch Hayden Johnson Keyes	La Follette Lewis Logan Lonergan Lonergan Lonergan McAdoo McCarran McGill McKellar McNary Maloney Metcalf Minton Moore Murphy Murray Neely Norbeck Norris Nye O'Mahoney Pittman	Radcliffe Reynolds Robinson Russell Schall Schwellenbach Sheppard Shipstead Smith Stelwer Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Townsend Truman Tydings Vandenberg Van Nuys Wagner Walsh Wheeler White
Copeland	King	Pope

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Davis] is absent on account of illness. I ask that the announcement stand for the day.

Mr. LEWIS. I wish to announce that the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are absent because of illness, and that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] is necessarily detained from the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Ninety-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a petition of several citizens of Laurinburg, N. C., praying for the passage of old-age-pension legislation, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Board of Supervisors of Monroe County, N. Y., favoring the ratification of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Deep Waterway Treaty, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the Rochester Borough Council, of Rochester, Pa., and the Common Council of the City of Blue Island, Ill., favoring the passage of pending legislation proclaiming October 11 in each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WALSH presented a petition of sundry citizens of Springfield, Mass., praying for the enactment of old-age-pension legislation, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented memorials and papers in the nature of memorials of sundry citizens of Easthampton and Boston, Mass., remonstrating against the publication of personal income-tax returns, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Boston and vicinity, in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the enactment of legislation providing immediate cash payment of adjusted-service certificates of World War veterans, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Fifty-seventh Branch of the Lithuanian Alliance of America, S. L. A., Worcester, Mass., favoring the enactment of the so-called "Lundeen bill", or similar legislation, providing for old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented resolutions adopted by a meeting of the Massachusetts Women's Constitutional League held at the Women's College Club, Boston, Mass., opposing the adoption of the so-called "Borah resolution", being the resolution (S. Res. 70) protesting against religious persecutions by the Government of Mexico and authorizing an investigation thereof by the Committee on Foreign Relations, and also opposing and favoring the passage of sundry other legislative proposals, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented the memorial of Erik Borg and sundry other employees of the Morgan Construction Co., of Worcester, Mass., remonstrating against the enactment of the so-called "Black-Connery 30-hour-week bill", or other measures designed to reduce the working hours in the machine-building industry, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MURRAY presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, favoring the enactment of legislation granting to the State of Montana a site containing a hotwater spring to be used for the benefit of an infantile paralysis sanatorium, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

(See joint memorial printed in full when laid before the Senate by the Vice President on the 5th instant, p. 2958, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

Mr. BARBOUR presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, favoring the prompt enactment of the so-called "Frazier-Lemke farm-refinancing bill", which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

(See concurrent resolution printed in full when laid before the Senate by the Vice President on the 7th instant, p. 3080, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

Mr. BARBOUR also presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Concurrent resolution requesting that the Congress of the United States enact an amendment to the United States Internal Revenue Act of 1934, preventing the imposition of a tax upon any State or Territory of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any political subdivision, agency, or district thereof

Whereas the construction given to the United States Revenue Act of 1934, by the Commission of Internal Revenue of the United States and the collector of internal revenue of the district of New Jersey, intends to classify every public utility operated by the several municipalities of the State as not being an exercise of an essential governmental function; and

Whereas the said aforesaid construction of the said United States revenue act affects every such public utility operated by the several municipalities of the State in that they are subject to the payment of the taxes provided for in the said United States Revenue Act of 1934; and

Whereas many of the municipalities of this State operating public utilities have acquired water distribution systems and are supplying pure and wholesome water for public and domestic consumption, including water for the use of their respective fire departments for the prevention of fire and for the use of their respective street departments for the cleaning of their streets and sewers, and for their public-school systems and other like public purposes; and

Whereas the various collectors of internal revenue, judges of the United States district court and judges of the United States circuit court of appeals have rendered conflicting opinions as to the intent, meaning, and construction of the language used in the said United States Revenue Act of 1934; and Whereas there is no express provision in the said revenue act that the States and their political subdivisions are in a Federal taxable status; and

Whereas any Federal tax upon said States, their agencies, political subdivisions, or districts, is contrary to public policy: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Assembly of the State of New Jersey

(the senate concurring):

(the senate concurring):

1. That the Congress of the United States should enact an amendment to the said United States Internal Revenue Act of 1934 preventing the imposition, directly or indirectly, of a tax upon any State or Territory of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any political subdivision, agency, or district thereof.

2. That a copy of this memorial, duly authenticated, be forwarded by the secretary of state to the President of the United States, the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each Senator and Representative in Congress from this State.

sentative in Congress from this State.

LESTER H. CLEE, Speaker of the House of Assembly. FREDERICK A. BRODESSER, Clerk of the House of Assembly. HORACE G. PRALL, President of the Senate. OLIVER VAN CAMP, Secretary of the Senate.

SIX-HOUR DAY IN RAILWAY INDUSTRY

Mr. CONNALLY presented resolutions of Wichita Lodge, No. 652, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BROTHERHOOD OF LOCOMOTIVE FIREMEN AND ENGINEMEN,

Beotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen,
Wichita Lodge, No. 652.

To the Members of Congress of the United States:
Whereas there are approximately 50 percent of employees once in the service of the railways of the United States that are at this time out of service, and for the most part are on relief rolls, with no apparent prospect of being returned to their former positions, or other employment; and
Whereas certain conditions of contractual relations between the railways and certain of their transportation department employees permit of a condition where men are, on a mileage basis, permitted to work the equivalent of from 32 to 48 days per month, in some instances no limitation having been applied; and
Whereas our committees have utterly failed in their efforts with the management to effect any equitable distribution of mileage allowances, the management often giving every advantage and comfort to the senior employees in their piratical efforts to appropriate more mileage to their selfish selves; and comfort to the senior employees in their piratical efforts to appropriate more mileage to their selfish selves; and

Whereas there is at this time a bill before the Senate and Congress of the United States having for its purpose the establishment of a 6-hour day in the railway industry: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we petition the Congress of the United States to enact into law these bills now pending before these honorable bodies making a 6-hour day for the railroad industry of the United States; and be it further

United States; and be it further

Resolved, We do especially urge, in the name of suffering humanity, now crying to high heaven for relief, a portion of the bill be made to fix an equitable maximum of days per month, or the equivalent thereof in miles, or any arbitrary allowances, an employee may be permitted to work, and providing a penalty for the violation thereof.

J. W. Parker, T. H. Boggan, J. E. Worthen, H. Hendrix, O. B. Allred, S. B. Bacher, J. K. Simmons, E. R. Blount, F. A. Reader, G. F. Strother, J. T. Ricks, W. C. McCollough, T. F. Tucker, H. A. Tanner, O. B. Brooks, E. B. Corley, R. M. Lay, V. J. Hess, M. Pye, E. L. Kimmerly, H. L. Koken, H. W. Wilborn, H. G. Kuykendall, W. K. Sparks, W. D. Alsobrook, Neal Rowland, T. J. Nichols, R. G. Gomer, J. H. Marberry, L. L. Spilhmann, H. H. Halsey, R. D. McIver, L. C. Rodgers, D. B. Sewell, M. M. Scarbrough, E. A. Stewart, N. R. Whited, W. J. Baker, W. C. Greenwood, T. R. Hanks.

"PINY SUR," PROVISION OF INCOME, TAY, LAW.

"PINK SLIP" PROVISION OF INCOME-TAX LAW

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, each day for the past 10 or 12 days I have received upward of a dozen telegrams from valued constituents in Arizona urging me to vote to repeal the so-called "pink slip" provision of the income-tax law.

In order not to burden the contingent-expense account of the Senate with telegraph tolls, I here announce that I am in favor of the repeal of the "pink slip" provision. The is a report from the full committee?

"pink slip" serves no one and assists no one except the kidnaper, the highjacker, and the blackmailer.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 875. A bill for the relief of Michael F. Calnan (Rept. No.

277); and

S. 881. A bill for the relief of Leo James McCoy (Rept. No. 278).

Mr. CAREY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2029) to authorize naval and Marine Corps service of Army officers to be included in computing dates of retirement, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 279) thereon.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 5032) for the relief of the dependents of Carl Lindow, known also as "Carl Lindo", reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 280) thereon.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 560. A bill for the relief of the Western Electric Co., Inc. (Rept. No. 281); and

S. 908. A bill for the relief of Edwin C. Jenney, receiver of the First National Bank of Newton, Mass. (Rept. No. 282).

Mr. TOWNSEND, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1821) for the relief of Frank White and others, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 283) thereon.

Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1864) for the relief of the State of Nebraska, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 284) thereon.

Mr. GIBSON, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 37) authorizing the Comptroller General of the United States to settle and adjust the claims of subcontractors and materialmen for material and labor furnished in the construction of a post-office and courthouse building at Rutland, Vt., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 285) thereon.

Mr. WAGNER, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 82. A bill to authorize the disposal of surplus personal property, including buildings, of the Emergency Conservation Work (Rept. No. 286); and

S. 1065. A bill to further extend the period of time during which final proof may be offered by homestead entrymen (Rept. No. 287).

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT RELATIVE TO RICE

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, I report back favorably, with amendments, the bill (H. R. 5221) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act with respect to rice, and for other purposes, and I submit a report (No. 289) thereon. I call the attention of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Robinson] to the

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

GOVERNMENT OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

Mr. TYDINGS. From the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, on behalf of the subcommittee composed of Mr. Metcalf, Mr. Clark, and myself, I report a resolution requesting an investigation into the affairs of the Virgin Islands, and ask that it be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the report will be received and the resolution referred as indicated by the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, may I inquire if this

Mr. TYDINGS. The full committee voted that the subcommittee should prepare the resolution and tender it to the Senate.

The resolution (S. Res. 98) was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, as follows:

Resolved, That a special committee of five Senators, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, is authorized and directed to make a full and complete investigation of the administration of the government of the Virgin Islands. The committee shall report to the Senate as soon as practicable the results of its investigations, together with its recommendations, if any, for necessary legislation.

For the purposes of this resolution, the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places during the sessions and recesses of the Senate in the Seventy-fourth and succeeding Congresses, to employ such clerical and other assistants, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, and to make such expenditures as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words. The expenses of the committee, which shall not exceed $25,000, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. SHEPPARD, as in executive session, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the nominations of several officers for appointment, by transfer, in the Regular Army, which were ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BULKLEY:

A bill (S. 2188) for the relief of the estate of Frank B. Niles; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. McNARY:

A bill (S. 2189) granting a pension to Jean L. Jadwin; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LOGAN:

A bill (S. 2190) to provide public educational facilities for certain children where adequate educational facilities are lacking; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. VANDENBERG:

A bill (S. 2191) granting a pension to Francis K. Puckett (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 2192) granting a pension to Marion Wells (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KING:

A bill (S. 2193) to provide for the construction, extension, and improvement of public-school buildings in Duchesne County, Utah; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. GUFFEY:

A bill (S. 2194) for the relief of Robert M. Foster; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 2195) to amend section 8 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, by providing a system of crop insurance; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

A bill (S. 2196) to authorize the operation of stands in Federal buildings by blind persons, to enlarge the economic opportunities of the blind, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. BYRD:

A bill (S. 2197) to permit construction, maintenance, and use of certain pipe lines for petroleum and petroleum products in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BONE and Mr. SCHWELLENBACH:

A bill (S. 2198) to amend Public Law No. 383, Seventy-third Congress, relating to Indians, by exempting from the operation of certain sections thereof the Yakima Indian Tribe of the State of Washington; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. NYE:

A bill (S. 2199) relative to the reasonable regulation of competition; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. HASTINGS:

A bill (S. 2200) for the refund of estate tax erroneously collected; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. BYRNES:

A bill (S. 2201) for the relief of William Leo Wurthmann; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. POPE:

A bill (S. 2202) to add certain lands to the Cache National Forest; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma (by request):

A bill (S. 2203) to promote the development of Indian arts and crafts and to create a board to assist therein, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. CUTTING:

A bill (S. 2204) to regulate the value of money in pursuance of article I, section 8, paragraph 5, of the Constitution of the United States; to create a Federal Monetary Authority; to provide an adequate and stable monetary system; to prevent bank failures; to prevent uncontrolled inflation; to prevent depressions; to provide a system to control the price of commodities and the purchasing power of money; to restore normal prosperity and assure its continuance; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

A bill (S. 2205) for the relief of Thomas F. Cooney; and A bill (S. 2206) for the relief of the State of New Mexico; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GORE:

A bill (S. 2207) to establish in the Department of Agriculture a Soil Conservation Service to control flood waters affecting the navigability of streams, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. VANDENBERG:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 79) authorizing the President to present in the name of Congress a medal of honor to J. Harold Arnold (with an accompanying paper); to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

HOUSE BILL AND CONCURRENT RESOLUTION REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 2881) authorizing the adjustment of contracts for the sale of timber on the national forests, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 15) for the holding of memorial services in honor of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes was referred to the Committee on the Library.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

On motion of Mr. Sheppard, the Committee on Military Affairs was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 2569) for the relief of the estate of R. A. Wallace Treat, and it was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

POWER REVENUES ON RECLAMATION PROJECTS-AMENDMENT

Mr. HAYDEN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1924) to provide for the distribution of power revenues on Federal reclamation projects, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation and ordered to be printed.

WORK-RELIEF PROGRAM-AMENDMENTS

Mr. KING submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 117) making appropriations for relief purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed, as follows:

On page 3, line 20, in the committee amendment, after the words "flood control", to insert "irrigation and reclamation."

Mr. COSTIGAN submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 117) making appropriations for relief purposes, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed, as follows:

In section 3, on page 5, line 20, to strike out the word "and" following the semicolon, and on page 6, in line 4, to strike out the period after the word "appointed" and add the following: "and

(c) utilize the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works established under title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act without regard to any limitations imposed by said act, and said Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works is hereby continued until June 30, 1937, and is authorized to perform such of its functions under said act and such functions under this joint resolution as may be authorized by the President. All sums appropriated for carrying out the purposes of said act shall remain available until June 30, 1937."

On page 3, line 20, after the comma and before the word "flood", to insert the words "water conservation, transmountain water diversion, irrigation and reclamation."

GOLD-ARTICLE BY THOMAS T. HOYNE

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have published in the RECORD an article on Gold and Its Use as Money written by Thomas Temple Hoyne, a student of finance, and financial writer of Chicago, Ill. While this article is covered by copyright, I have the consent of its author to insert it in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LOVE-O'-GOLD

Since Christopher Columbus, poor weaver, who forsook his trade for the sea, commanding a company of 120 adventurers aboard the Santa Maria, the Pinta, and the Nina, drove westward across the Atlantic in 1492 on the first of his four brave voyages of discovery, the world has produced 35,000 tons of virgin gold.

Thirty-five thousand tons! Long tons of 2,240 pounds each! Gold enough to rear a column of splendor 20 feet in diameter, 196 feet high—a tower of solid gold for all the millions of all lends in all climes to worship.

lands in all climes to worship.

And worship the millions would, in abject humility, for gold is the only thing so loved by man that it is eagerly sought in exchange for every other thing by every people, from the lowest to the highest, on the slippery steps leading upward from savagery to

DOLLARS, DOLLARS, DOLLARS

DOLLARS, DOLLARS

That glittering 35,000-ton pillar of pure gold, untarnishable, indestructible, pointing magnificently at the stars, would represent in our money of January 1, 1933, approximately twenty-three and one-half billion dollars; in our new money of January 1, 1935, approximately $39,000,000,000.

It would be worshiped as the recognized embodiment of the Protean power that in countless forms whips onward the affairs of men in order and in disorder; inspires the most earnest industry; instigates the basest crimes; makes the best brains wise masters or cringing servants; lays low the courageous; or puffs up cowardice into semblance of bravery.

This power is beyond accurate gage by statisticians poring over lifeless bank statements, corporate earnings, bond issues, price indices, and other laboriously grouped figures supposed to divulge the inmost secrets of economic progress or retrogression.

It was born of adoration of gold as a fetish, first aroused by the fancied resemblance of gold to the sun in the primitive minds of sun worshipers. Pieces of the sun they thought pieces of gold actually were, and they adored and treasured them as such.

BEFORE THE MINT

The sun god was worshiped throughout the ancient world. As Mathras by the Persians; Baal by the Chaldeans; Belphegor by the Moabites; Moloch by the Canaanites; Osiris by the Egyptians. In his glorification Babylonian and Assyrian temples blazed with

As "kin" the Mayas, ruling race of Yucatan when America was discovered, exalted him in their word for gold—"takin", meaning "excrement of the sun god." In the picturesque language of the Aztecs the word for gold, "teocuitlatl", had a similar meaning.

The alchemists took note of man's oldest religion when they called gold by the name of the old Italic sun god, "Sol."

THE FIRST COINAGE

The inherited effect of religious worship of gold for thousands of years still safeguards it against possibility of depreciation as a universal medium of exchange. Many a monetary denomination records this tradition of intrinsic value.

An old French coin, the "sol", was replaced at the time of the French Revolution by the "sou." In Peru, once land of the sunworshiping Incas, the "sol" is today the monetary unit, equivalent to 48.7 cents of the former United States dollar.

But it was the ancient Lydians, claiming descent from Lud, son of Shem, son of Noah, who invented the coining of gold.

of Shem, son of Noah, who invented the coining of gold.

PAPER MONEY

Paper money, however, had no worshipful origin in the traditions of the Middle Ages. According to Goethe, it was the invention of the devil himself.

In Faust the Chancellor reads to the Emperor the noble promise appearing on the first paper money, as follows:

"To all whom it concerns: let it be known Who hath this note, a thousand crowns doth own.
As certain pledge thereof shall stand
Vast buried treasure in the Emperor's land.
Provision has been made that ample treasure,
Raised straightway, shall redeem the notes at pleasure."

THE FIRST INFLATION

Later the Steward, describing the heady effects of this new currency, says:

"The flight of notes we could nowise prevent;
Like lightning notes were scattered on the run.
The changers' shops ope wide to everyone;
And there all notes are honored, high or low,
With gold or silver—at a discount, though.
From these to butcher, baker, tavern hasting,
One-half the world seems thinking but of feasting.
The other strutting, its new raiment shows; The other, strutting, its new raiment shows;
The draper, cuts the cloth, the tailor sews,
In cellars, 'Long live the Emperor!' is the toasting;
There platters clatter, there they're boiling, roasting."

Mephistopheles remarks sardonically:

"Nor gold nor pearls are half as handy as Such paper. Then a man knows what he has."

WORTHLESS CURRENCY .

The subsequent tale of ruin was a poetic warning from the master mind of the German people, to which in modern times they paid no heed.

After the World War Germany thought she did not have sufficient money and plunged into an orgy of currency inflation. Late in 1924 the value of the mark, once monetary unit of the proud German Empire and worth 23.8 cents, had all but vanished.

A single United States dollar could buy 4,200,000,000,000 paper

"No complaint is more common than that of a scarcity of money", wrote Adam Smith, author of Wealth of Nations, in the last half of the eighteenth century. "This complaint, however, is not always confined to improvident spendthrifts. It is sometimes general through a whole mercantile town, and the country in its neighborhood. Overtrading is the common cause of it."

IN THE WORLD'S PURSE

So it was in recent years in this country.

At the depth of the present depression the cry went up that there was not enough money with which to do business. But at that very time the amount of money in circulation was the largest in our history, and the volume of business that could be done was woefully small compared with the volume a few years before.

The world's monetary stocks of gold had grown to more than $11,000,000,000 in 1931 from approximately $5,000,000,000 in 1913.

The late Joseph Kitchen pointed out in the London Economist of January 31, 1933, that from 1913 to 1931 these monetary stocks had increased faster than economic activity.

No lack of gold accounted for the low level of prices in 1932. It was hoarding that made gold seem scarce—hoarding by individuals and nations.

and nations.

OUTPUT OF GOLD

During that period (1913 to 1931) the record year of gold production was 1915, when the world's output was 22,593,833 fine troy ounces. In 1930 the output was 20,385,000 ounces—the largest

A new record of 24,226,000 ounces was set in 1932. In 1933 that record was beaten with 24,282,000 ounces, and in 1934 the output for the first 9 months (19,617,000 ounces) promised another new record annual production.

The British Empire accounted for 62 percent of the world's output in 1914; 70 percent in 1932. From mines in the Transvaal came more than one-half the total production for 1930.

In 1931 Canada moved up into second place as a producer of gold. The United States stepped down into third.

This country, France, Switzerland, Holland, and Belgium had 44 percent of the world's monetary stocks of gold in 1913; 71 percent

On January 1, 1927, the monetary gold of the United States had increased from less than $2,000,000,000 before the World War to $4,492,000,000—nearly one-half of the monetary stocks of the world.

This store of gold decreased to $4,375,000,000 by January 1, 1928. But it began to climb again, and on September 16, 1931, it stood at the peak of $5,016,000,000—equal to 44.54 percent of the world's total monetary stocks.

Five days later (Sept. 21, 1931) came suspension of gold payments by Great Britain, and the wrecking of the gold standard began.

PANIC AND HOARDING

Panic swept over Europe. Nations and individuals went mad with the love of gold. Seeking some place of safety, they shifted it from country to country, stowed it away in vaults and safety-deposit boxes, buried it, hid it under mattresses, in teapots, cupboards.

At the end of 1931 the United States still had $4,461,000,000 in gold; France, $2,699,000,000; England, $588,000,000; Switzerland, $444,000,000; the Netherlands, $361,000,000; Belgium, $355,000,000; Italy, $296,000,000; Germany, $234,000,000.

Important decreases for the year were: Germany, $290,000,000; the United States, $135,000,000; England, $130,000,000.

France gained $600,000,000; Switzerland, $310,000,000; the Netherlands, $190,000,000; Belgium, $170,000,000.

OUR BUSINESS WRECKED

Banks were tottering and crashing behind their paper bulwarks, the only defense they had against the attack of hoarders trying to get solid gold for intangible credit.

The net profits of 900 corporations in the United States, that had shrunk during 1930 from $2,162,000,000 in 1929 to $1,258,000,000, shriveled away in 1931 to $592,000,000.

The profits of 38 iron and steel companies fell 99.9 percent under 1930; of 28 petroleum companies, 97.9 percent.

The number of business failures in this country during 1931 was 29,054, with total liabilities of $2,280,829,316.

January 1932 set a new high record for the monthly number of failures—3,214, with total liabilities of $308,273,000.

END OF THE GOLD STANDARD

In spite of the high record production of gold in 1932, 33 countries were listed that year by the United States Department of Commerce as "officially" off the gold standard, and 11 more as "practically" off.

At the end of September 1932 the United States, France, Switzerland, and Holland had 69 percent of the world's monetary stocks of gold.

gold.

At these holdings ponderous pedants of an old and out-worn school of economics pointed the awkward finger of unconvincing explanation. In the words of one of them:

"This accumulation of gold in a few countries which did not need it for currency or credit purposes depressed the movement of prices and retarded the making of international payments. Although gold continued to be the only commodity acceptable to creditors, in a number of European countries, it ceased to perform its primary function as a basis for credit and currency." perform its primary function as a basis for credit and currency."

SOMETHING ABOUT MONEY

No wonder Mr. Arthur Brisbane frequently wrote in his entertaining column:

"Nobody knows anything about money."

The chief function of money has altered since the Victorian era. Then it was to act as a direct means of bringing about desired exchanges of things and services.

Bank checks and other forms of credit do most of that work nowadays. The chief function of money no longer is its direct use in effecting exchanges, but its service as a measure of value. Correctly to denote prices it must really be what it pretends to be.

THE 40-PERCENT FALLACY

Half a century ago, before so many financiers had learned to live by debt alone, hard cash played a more important part in the daily affairs of life. In this country no investment trusts stood at one end of the scale, no installment-selling plans at the

A wholesome memory of our paper-money experiences during Civil War days still survived. To be on the gold standard meant that money calling for redemption in gold must really be redeemable in gold at any time.

But this memory faded, with only recurrent flashes of vividness at longer and longer intervals. Meanwhile a banking convention grew into the financial obsession that only a portion of the gold represented by an issue of paper money need actually stand behind it to keen it sound hind it to keep it sound.

The old invention of Mephistopheles!
Forty percent came to be regarded as a requisite coverage. Why, nobody knows. Probably on no better authority than the confidence in 1929 that a share of stock must be worth from 15 to 20 times its annual earnings.

A GLITTERING FICTION

No mystery obscures the reason why England was driven off the gold standard, and why every other country was driven off, including the United States. That reason is crystal clear. There was not enough gold to redeem the paper currencies issued

Those who had paper money, seeing all around them the ruin wrought by credit infiation in everything else, feared that their money might have been vitiated in the same way. When they rushed to get the gold it called for, they found their fears were

The gold standard was a glittering fiction. A $10 bill, unless it happened to be a gold certificate (in effect, a warehouse receipt for $10 worth of gold delivered to the Treasury of the United States to be returned on demand), was not sound money at all.

It was merely an instrument of credit, like a bank check or an individual's promissory note, that might, or might not, be worth what it pretended to be worth.

THE WAY WE WERE

On February 28, 1933, the issues of paper money in this country, exclusive of silver certificates, were: Gold certificates, $1,250,621,-639; national-bank notes, $879,878,433; Treasury notes of 1890, $1,214,500; United States notes, $344,939,233; Federal Reserve notes, $3,677,350,720; total, $6,154,004,535.

The monetary stock of gold behind this paper money was $4,379,539,509

But $1,250,621,639 worth of this gold stood dollar for dollar to redeem the $1,250,621,639 of gold certificates. This left $3,531,728,727 of gold behind the remaining $4,903,382,896 of paper money.

In other words, there was $1,371,654,169 more paper money than there was gold to redeem it.

THE WAY WE ARE

What is the situation since the value of gold has been raised from $20.67 an ounce to $35 an ounce by Presidential proclamation, January 31, 1934?
On the first of last November it was this:

On the first of last November it was this:

The total volume of money in circulation, including silver certificates, silver dollars, subsidiary coins, and $139,000,000 of gold certificates still outstanding, was $5,453,684,537.

The monetary stock of gold behind this was $8,001,522,568.

In other words, there was $2,547,838,031 more gold than there was money of all kinds in circulation—more than $1.46 in gold behind every dollar of that money.

WORLD'S SOUNDEST MONEY

Furthermore, even if that $8,001,522,568 of gold were reckoned at its old value of $20.67 an ounce, instead of at its present value of $35 an ounce, the total amount would be more than the monetary stock of gold on February 28, 1933, by over $400,000,000.

No evidence of impaired Government credit is discernible in this condition of our currency.

The money of the United States is by far the soundest money in the world.

It is unimpeachable.

THAT GOLD IS OURS NOW

And lest we forget: Every dollar of that $8,001,522,568 is now owned by the Government of the United States.

No longer are nearly three and three-quarter billions of it ($2,225,068,000 under the old valuation on February 28, 1933) an exclusive asset of the Federal Reserve banks, and thus owned by their member banks and, indirectly, by the individual stockholders of those member banks.

Every dollar of that $8,001,522,568 in gold belongs to the people of the United States of America.

That gold stands as their more than adequate guaranty, one to That gold stands as their more than adequate guaranty, one to another, that the billions of paper dollars in circulation are 100 percent sound. And no one, except in accord with governmental limitations, neither international banker nor domestic miser, can lessen that guaranty by taking out of the Treasury to ship abroad or to hoard at home, so much as a single dollar's worth.

NO GOLD FOR PAPER

How utterly the world has abandoned the gold standard was made clear in the foreign news during the third week of last October, when representatives of the seven countries composing the so-called "gold bloc" met at Brussels, talked vaguely, did nothing, and adjourned to this month (January 1935).

Not one of these countries was really on the gold standard. Not in Switzerland, Holland, or Belgium was gold to be had for paper francs, guilden, or belgas. In Italy no gold was given in exchange for paper lira. France was the only country where paper money was exchangeable for gold; and there only in one way, which required approximately $8,000 worth of paper francs and plenty of patience. Presenting this sum at the Banque de France and demanding gold for it, would eventually obtain the gold in the form of a solid bar.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

British economists, voicing the international point of view—which is the English point of view—sagely was their heads and tell us we must stabilize our money for the benefit of worldwide trade.

Stabilized our money already is, as firmly as it ever was, and in exactly the same manner—by Federal law. But what about the pound sterling?

pound sterling?

Ever since Great Britain suspended gold payments the pound has jumped around between a low of $3.14½ on November 29, 1932, and a high of $5.52½ on November 16, 1933. Daily it wobbles like a jelly. England shows no inclination to stabilize the pound.

It looks like good business for England not to stabilize it. If through machinations of foreign exchange the pound could be forced up to a temporary equivalence with, say, $5.25, note how much more cotton in this country and probably wheat in Canada a pound would buy; and then, if it could be let down again to temporary equivalence with, say, $4.75, note how much easier it would be for English manufacturers to attract the purchasing power of importers here and probably in Canada.

FOREIGN PROPAGANDA

The most depressing influence in the United States is psychological. Commonly described as "want of confidence", it is, in fact, woeful blindness to our own advantages that breeds a commercial inferiority complex upon which international propaganda plays effectively.

We are in more danger of economic poisoning from this kind of propaganda than from the thin, tricky logic of communistic

For months we have been told that we are lagging far behind the rest of the world on the road to recovery. What is the truth?

Take inventory of our economic blessings.

SEEDS OF PROSPERITY

Our money is the soundest in the world; our tax burden probably the lightest among civilized nations; our average standard of living the highest; our opportunities the greatest.

Our national debt, not even considering disparity in population, is small compared with Great Britain's.

We are threatened neither with internal dissension—like France, Spain, Mexico, Germany, the Balkan countries; nor with possibility of war—like Japan, Russia, and those European nations that may become involved in disputes left in the wake of the settlement of the Saar controversy.

We need no currency inflation. Between eight and ten billion dollars of established bank credit stands unused, ready to express itself in industrial activity that will mean increasing employment, the instant business requires credit for justified expansion.

Stocks and commodities are full of promise of a higher price

OUR FUTURE IS HERE

Our greatest market for our own products is here at home where they are produced, not thousands of miles away. What ingredients of prosperity that compare with this one alone has any foreign country?

Before another year rolls around developments abroad may make clearer to eyes over here the financial, economic, and social miseries that stalk through Europe. The wisdom of our alcofness from that incomprehensible turmoil of racial hatreds may become more manifest.

Those foreign countries, expounding the benefit of cooperation, urging us into closer international relations, owing us more than $11,000,000,000 they refuse to pay—are they unmoved by love of Note: The statistics in this issue are taken from, or based upon. Note: The statistics in this issue are taken from, or based apon, the figures of Dr. Adolph Soetbeer, Joseph Kitchen, the National City Bank Bulletin, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics, the Director of the United States Mint, the United States Department of Commerce, the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank, the Encyclopedia Americana. If social and economic effects of varying production of gold interest the reader, he may find entertaining Intrigue on the Upper Level, a recent novel by the editor of the Economic Forum, which describes life in 2050 A. D., when the secret discovery of how to manufacture gold at insignificant cost suddenly becomes public property.

THEORY OF COLLECTIVE BARGAINING-ADDRESS BY FRANCIS BIDDLE

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a very instructive and very able address delivered by Francis Biddle, Chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, before the Community Forum at Carnegie Lecture Hall, Pittsburgh, Pa., March 4, 1935, on the Theory of Collective Bargaining.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

H. G. Wells says, in his Experiment in Autobiography: "We are waking up to the fact that a planned world-state governing the complex of human activities for the common good, however difficult to attain, has become imperative, and that until it is achieved the history of the race must be now inevitably a record of catastrophic convulsions. * * No real going back to the old, comparatively stable conditions of things is possible. * * * We are, therefore, impelled to reconstruct the social and economic organization until the new conditions are satisfied."

I take it that an essential premise of the new deal is that our American world here about us can be planned; and that we cannot go back to the old condition of things. Planning involves stabilization. Thus, in industry an attempt was made from within to eliminate cutthroat competition and outlaw unfair trade practices. Monopoly, where monopoly was desirable, was to be permitted under the watchful eye of the Government.

There are perhaps few economic theories with which most of There are perhaps few economic theories with which most of us could agree. To swing right, to swing left, is hardly the definition of a plan. Nor is the itch to change any more than the desire to stay inert—and let nature take its course—more than a very simple description of emotion. The words radical and conservative hardly more than describe a state of mind. They do not chart a direction in which we should go—or stay. Yet some general economic formulas are acceptable, even in the welter of prophecies and convictions. One such theory I shall take today as a starting point of my discussion. Simply, it may be stated as follows: Our domestic consumers' market in the past 5 years has been gradually drying up. The national income between 1929 and 1934 has been cut in half. We do not produce too much to consume, measured in terms of need; but our national income cannot absorb goods on a scale large enough to keep our vast plants running at capacity, or to put men back to work on anything like a ning at capacity, or to put men back to work on anything like a predepression basis. Our problem then is to increase consumption, to broaden buying power. The alternative of curtailing production, except as a temporary emergency, is hardly calculated to create wealth.

How to increase the national income?

At this point, roughly speaking, two schools of thought divide. The first, its emotional outlook largely determined by its own easy comfort, fixed in the naive faith that a "comparatively stable condition of things" can again be achieved if the Government will only let business alone, uses the simple watchword of "recovery." Recovery first, reform afterward. Lower wages, and business men can sell at a profit. Profit will tempt capital. Take away the restrictions and the profit motive, regulated by the ordinary law of supply and demand, will stimulate business activity. New factories will spring up. The unemployed will go back to work. The inevitable course of nature will have its way.

As a general rule, that is the ready philosophy of a majority of American business men. Their most cogent argument is historical. It has always worked this way, and it will, therefore, work again. But those who believe that reform is essential before recovery, can be heard to question the method as well as the ideal. What himself a superior the method as well as the ideal.

kind of recovery do we want? Even in 1929 the national per capita income was definitely inadequate for a decent living. Production then was as inadequate from the point of view of need as it was overexpanded from the consideration of the adequacy of the national income to consume. Overconcentration of wealth was a historia because of the consideration of the consideration of the consideration of the constant was a historia because of the constant of the constant was a historia because of the constant of t toric phenomenon accentuated during the great boom; a tendency which progressively increased in the lean years. As wealth shriveled it also concentrated. The vicious circle closed in on a shrinking market.

And the process, accelerated since the Great War, has been going on for years. In 1849 the wage earners' share in each dollar created by manufacture was 51 percent; in 1919, 42 percent; and in 1933, 36 percent. In other words, the share going to profits and overhead and other costs has increased from 49 percent to 64 percent over the 84-year period. On the other hand, between 1919 and 1933 the average worker's producing capacity almost doubled; production per worker per hour in our manufacturing industries increased 71 percent, while their share, as I have said, dropped 6 percent.

The new deal—a new economic way of thinking—was based, partially at least, on a conviction that to sustain our economic structure, wealth must be more quickly and evenly distributed. None of us question that the wealth is there—the natural resources, the huge plant, the man power, the technological skill. How to spread it? For to sustain the very structure itself, topheavy with maldistribution, the fruits of field and factory must be more widely consumed.

I believe that in the 2 years that have passed we have come to realize these truths, to hold them self-evident; that prosperity must have a broad basis; that it cannot balance on the apex of the pyramid; that we cannot drift back into good times; that lower real wages tighten the circle of economic destruction; that the profit motive, uncontrolled, will not distribute wealth; that we have been for many generations interfering artificially with the we have been for many generations interfering artificially with the natural law of supply and demand, so that it no longer works, if indeed it ever did work in a society maintained by the haphazard balancing of everyone's individual striving for advantage; that a few must be content with less if indeed they are to get anything at all; that the future, the very present, in fact, demands an economy consciously controlled to the desired end.

How then should these controls be exercised?

A definite attempt of our people to exercise control through its Government found expression in N. R. A. It is easy now, when the start has been made, when the first difficulties have been put behind us, to say that N. R. A. has broken down, that it should be the start has been made, when the first difficulties have been put behind us, to say that N. R. A. has broken down, that it should be scrapped. We forget its lasting achievements—the virtual abolition of child labor, the elimination of competitive excesses in many fields, the increase of employment and pay rolls in many industries, resulting from codes. I do not believe that the social philosophy behind the N. R. A. will be abandoned. Other or modified social controls will undoubtedly be found. And perhaps we can find the reason for failure in those fields where failure has evisted. has existed.

The theory of code structure was that industry would police itself. Minimum prices and wages were to be fixed by industry from within itself, instead of being forced on us by an inexperienced Government.

enced Government.

One basic clause written into all codes was the famous section 7 (a), a declaration of the right to organize and bargain collectively. But it was hardly more than the bold declaration of a right. Rights are not self-enforcing. If hours of work, wages, and basic working conditions had been the subjects of collective bargaining in code making; if labor, as well as industry, had written the codes and been equally represented on the code authorities; if the provisions of the codes then could and would have been enforced, I believe that today we should have had higher wages, a broader market, and more basic economic improvement. I believe in reform, therefore, because it builds a sounder recovery. In these last 2 years the banks have been saved and are sound, even if they do comparatively little business. Corporations are again figuring in black instead of red. The return from income taxes has increased. The combined index of business activity (Annalist) stood at 75 in December 1934, as against 69 in December 1933. The factory employment index (Bureau of Labor Statistics) was 79 for 1934, as against 75 for the year before. (The index of 100 is the 1923-25 average.) The Bureau's combined factory and nonmanufacturing index of average earnings from pay rolls was 101 in 1934, as against 94 in 1933.

The demand for consumers' goods has not kept pace with these One basic clause written into all codes was the famous section

The demand for consumers' goods has not kept pace with these apparent signs of improved conditions. Heavy industry is still at a standstill. Unemployment is almost as great as ever. In December, according to the survey of current business of the Department of Commerce, "over 19,000,000 persons, or about 15 percent of the total population, were receiving Federal relief, the cent of the total population, were receiving Federal relief, the largest total for any period since the present program has been in effect." The report on the operation of the National Industrial Recovery Act, just issued by the Research and Planning Division of N. R. A., shows unemployed in December 1934 of 10,830,000, as against 10,613,000 in December 1933. The basic market, the broad consumers' market, on which the whole system rests, in spite of the vast priming poured in by the Government, appears to be at a standstill. Without that priming the process of shrinkage would continue with far more disastrous results.

How about wages? Factory workers in 25 industries, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, averaged $20.71 a week in December 1934, as against $18.50 a week in December 1933. Common labor averaged $0.40 an hour in December 1934 as against $0.38 an hour in December 1933. In short, there was an increase of a little over 10 percent in the weekly wages of factory workers, and of 5 percent in the hourly wage rate of unskilled labor. But the cost of living in the same period has gone up about 5 percent, in which the largest increase is food—about 10 percent. Therein which the largest increase is food—about 10 percent. Therefore, in the past year there has been substantially no change in the earnings of factory workers and unskilled labor.

What has happened to profits over the same period? In 1932, instead of any profit there was a loss in manufacturing business of 5.8 percent per share; in 1933, with an increased production of 19 percent, a small profit, nearly 1 percent on capital stock was realized. From figures thus far available it would appear that in 1934, with an increase of 4 percent in production, this profit has been further substantially lifted. According to a business survey in the New York Times the average dividends of 600 companies rose through 1934 to $1.27 a share as against $1.11 the year before. In December 1934, $231,000,000 was paid in dividends as against $191,000,000 in December 1933. The total market value of shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange increased almost a billion dollars in the year.

dollars in the year.

The N. R. A. report makes the following comparison of profits between 1926 and 1934:

between 1926 and 1934:

"Even more startling is the light placed upon the lot of those receiving dividends and interest by historical comparison. Although pay rolls in December 1934 were only about 60 percent of the total in 1926, dividends and interest were 150 percent of their total in 1926. In short, the income enjoyed by those who received dividends and interest was 50 percent higher than in 1926, even though the national income has declined nearly 40 percent even though the national income has declined nearly 40 percent since that date and volume of production has declined by one-third. Rough as the compilations are, clearly the recipients of profits have not failed to enjoy their proportionate share of the increase in industrial recovery."

Nor would it seem that the machinery of codes has effected any real redistribution of income. In some industries, the report finds, earnings have increased, whereas they have decreased in others. And any redistribution effected is often merely among the workers themselves. Thus, although female workers in the cotton-textile industry in the North enjoyed a real income in October 1934, higher by 7 percent than in July 1933; and in the South a real income higher by 16 percent—nevertheless the real income of the best paid two-thirds of the male wage earners in the North was smaller in October 1934 than in July 1933; and the upper 10 percent had a real income 8 percent smaller. The real income of the upper three-fifths of such workers in the South was also less in October than in July; and the upper one-tenth had 10 percent the upper three-fifths of such workers in the South was also less in October than in July; and the upper one-tenth had 10 percent less real income (Bureau of Labor Statistics).

Profit rests on large-scale production which cannot live on the small market of the few wealthy, but must be absorbed in the vast and general market of the masses. To buy, the many must have the means. Consumption is the ultimate test of wealth. The few can consume only on a limited and vicarious scale. We have thought of consumption in terms of need and desire. But there is plenty of demand in that sense. "Demand", in the sense used when we speak of "supply and demand", involves the ability to pay as well as the desire to consume. It is the demand that can find satisfaction only through money; and, for an overwhelming majority of us, out of what we earn.

It cannot be denied that where collective bargaining exists, where unions are well-established and recognized, real wages are large-scale production.

It cannot be denied that where collective bargaining exists, where unions are well-established and recognized, real wages are higher, and work more regular. Moreover, any tendency of minimum rates fixed by codes toward pulling down the higher wage scale in a given industry would, of course, be checked by collective bargaining. If it were otherwise, if collective bargaining and unions meant lower wages and longer hours, we should have for them the enthusiastic support of employers of labor. But we do not. Employers are, not unnaturally, afraid of increased wage costs if the union is recognized. But without increased wages we cannot have the broad market necessary to absorb the fruits of large-scale production.

There is, too, another factor involved, in considering the need for an increased wage income to workers. We have come to believe that unemployed men must be supported by the State where private charity is unavailing. If the base market is broadened by absorbing the unemployed under the demand of increased production stimulated by mass purchasing power, and higher wages, profits may be less. But so, too, will taxes. For a vast share of taxes, very much the greatest part today, goes into supporting the unemployed. It is a definite choice. You can't have your cake and eat it. Employers can have their profits taxed to be turned back eat it. Employers can have their profits taxed to be turned back by the Government through the medium of a dole paid to the unemployed, or they can forego some of the profits—get less but keep more—by paying higher wages. I can think of no alternative between a dole existence and a wage existence. If that is true, there can be no choice if we are to be free men.

For freedom to work and to live decently no longer means the theoretical freedom of a man to make a contract with the steel corporation. There is no freedom of contract where power is all on John Lewis, with half a million miners behind him, can make a contract, because he, too, with this vast power of collected labor, can say, "Take it or leave it." The forces are balanced; the game There are two theories about the relationship of capital and labor. One is the partnership theory, the other the class-war theory. The first insists that since both employer and men depend for their living on the success of the business they are necessarily partners and must cooperate to a common end. The boss and his workmen, under this conception, are the members of the partnership. Employers like this theory because it puts them in a position to object—with logic if you accept the definition—to any form of strike, agitation, unionization in fact, which interferes with the relationship. relationship.

The other approach is exactly the opposite. Class war, so it runs, the other approach is exactly the opposite. Class war, so it runs, is an inevitable result of our economic system. The interest of employer is absolutely opposed to the interest of his men. He is after as much profit as he can squeeze out of his men; they are alone interested in the highest wages they can get out of the

A little thinking will show that both these generalities

A little thinking will show that both these generalities are partly true; that each taken alone is misleading; that together they are not only not inconsistent but complementary. For the interest of each partner in any partnership agreement is to get all he can out of the business. If one gets more the other must get less. But that does not mean they cannot agree on the share of each, on the theory that their joint endeavor, mutually regulated, will be more satisfactory to both in the long run.

There is, however, one real flaw in the argument that the relationship is one of partnership, which is usually overlooked. A partnership is the result of agreement and presupposes equality of bargaining. This condition does not, as we have already said, apply to an individual seeking a job. The partnership is created as the result of an agreement. Thus it becomes fair to describe the relationship as a partnership only after an agreement has been as the result of an agreement. Thus it becomes fair to describe the relationship as a partnership only after an agreement has been entered into by the parties from some equality of bargaining power. Such agreements are collective bargaining agreements, signed by employer and union, and are real partnerships, which carry with them the joint good will and spirit of team play of real partnerships.

Therefore if employers are sincere in their insistence that labor Therefore if employers are sincere in their insistence that labor is a partner of capital; if they wish to work in cooperation with their employees instead of in continual struggle with them; if, in a word, they wish peace and not industrial war, they will say frankly, "We wish to bargain in groups; we will not exploit our labor by hiring individuals, but will honestly and sincerely treat labor as an actual and not merely as a nominal partner in the joint enterprise." Industry, instead of welcoming the Wagner bill, is preparing to fight it on all sides. It is a bill primarily intended to bring about by collective bargains that true partnership of which I have spoken. And yet on February 23 the Journal of Commerce characterized it as founded "upon the theory that there is a perpetual conflict between employer and employee." But the truth is that most employers do not want to treat labor on a basis of equality. They want neither alternative—free con-But the truth is that most employers do not want to treat labor on a basis of equality. They want neither alternative—free contracts or industrial war—because they are embedded in the passing doctrine that a workman should take what he can get. They do not mind occasionally "improving" his lot, if the improvement comes from the top down—the old gesture of charity. But free men hate charity as much as they cherish independence. So that collective bargaining has come to mean industrial freedom to American workmen.

This inconsistency rups through the whole concept adorted to bargaining has come to mean industrial freedom to American workmen.

This inconsistency runs through the whole concept adopted by industry. Thus in its now famous "platform for recovery" the National Association of Manufacturers for the United States frankly expresses its view that the same principles need not be applied when dealing with industry as are called for in labor disputes. What is sauce for the goose is evidently not sauce for the gander, according to the association, which shies at the majority rule applied to employees. The desired result "demands that employer and employee be free to bargain collectively or individually"; and that we should "recognize the equal right of minorities or individuals to bargain for themselves, directly or through representatives of their own selection." All very well for employees. But no such limitation to collective bargaining should, according to the "platform", affect industry. For industry the majority rule is often advisable. The "platform", a little later, says: "Under appropriate safeguards the approved competitive practices and prohibitions submitted by the properly defined majority of a group, trade, or industry should be binding on the minority." The Wagner bill, in section 9 (a), provides: "Representatives designated * * by the majority of the employees in a unit appropriate for such purposes, shall be the exclusive representatives of all the employees * *." The parallel is not without interest.

That is why company unions, however effective for handling indinot without interest.

That is why company unions, however effective for handling individual grievances, cannot bargain collectively in any selective sense of the words. They don't and they are not intended to. The classic statement of such intent is a letter quoted in the Supreme Court's decision in 1930 in the case of the Texas & New Orleans Railway. The railway's vice president wrote the president explaining that to bargain collectively with a labor union under Government board arbitration proceedings would cost wage increases amounting to $340,000, while to bargain "with our own employees" might cost only $75,000. To this blunt dollar-and-cents end, the railway formed and fostered a company union "of our own employees." A man inside his shop is not free to bargain for his fellows. If he presses his bargaining too hard, he loses his job. But the trade-union representative is paid by the union to do the union's bargaining—not by an employer whom he is trying to convince. Of course, employers dislike outside interference, and like to sneer at "walking delegates." He cannot dominate them by the That is why company unions, however effective for handling indi-most effective means which every employer has, and is loath to give up—the fear of the man's losing his job.

I do not underestimate racketeering in organized labor. It exists, unfortunately, as it exists in politics, in industry, among lawyers, and with bankers and brokers. Leadership is a crying need in this field as in the others. And I am convinced that there are today in our country employers who have some vision of the new industrial democracy that is bound to come, that is growing, here at our feet, inexorably; who will, perhaps, be leaders side by side with the leaders of labor. For with power grows responsibility. Democratic tradition cannot be built on the fear of consequences. It must be grounded in faith and courage and patience. If the faith is not justified, our institutions are, indeed, of no value. For ultimately men and not theories determine the achievements of our civilization.

THE CONSTITUTION-ARTICLE BY CHARLES HALL DAVIS

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President, I ask leave to print in the RECORD an article by Charles Hall Davis, of Virginia, on the Constitution. Mr. Davis argues that the new deal will eventually and logically destroy individual and political liberty through delegation of power to bureaucrats to administer as they wish. This transfer of power has been on the theory that "the forgotten man" cannot be protected under our Constitution, but that his welfare requires a strong centralized government as in Russia, Italy, and Germany.

The result of an application of this philosophy is the destruction of the American philosophy of Government that the individual has certain inalienable rights such as life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, and that he instead depends on the benevolence of his ruler and his privileges are granted him by his Government. His inalienable rights are wiped out and in their place he has privileges granted him by his ruler, and if the ruler is harsh or cruel or indifferent to his welfare the individual suffers. "The forgotten man" can only be protected if he has certain rights which he cannot alienate, and with which no despot or President can interfere, and which are superior to the rights of the Federal Government.

It is a contradiction in fact and in theory to delegate powers to the President that no branch of the Federal Government has. Nowhere in the Constitution is Congress given the right to delegate power to the President to deprive any citizen of his inalienable right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. In Russia and in Germany and in Italy this philosophy is practiced. Elsewhere in Europe the philosophy is gaining ground with no apparent help to "the forgotten man." But in the United States this philosophy can only be practiced at the cost of a revolution in Government and at the sacrifice of the Constitution which our fathers handed down to us. A step so momentous was not contemplated in the elections of 1932 and has no justification in theory or in practice. The 57 Heinz varieties of bureaus of our Federal Government, after a 2-year term, can only show 22,000,000 on the dole and 11,000,000 unemployed, and a business stagnation rapidly reaching the zero point. Meanwhile our public debt has mounted $10,000,000,000 with the end not in sight and with the shoals of bankruptcy right in front of us.

The burden of these debts will rest on "the forgotten man" till discharged. Meanwhile the Roosevelt administration will not even leave him his constitutional rights if it is permitted to follow in the course of Germany, Italy, and Russia.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE NEW DEAL WILL REENSLAVE "THE FORGOTTEN MAN'

By Charles Hall Davis, of the Virginia bar

The proponents and advocates of the so-called "new deal" claim that it protects and safeguards the rights and interest of "the forgotten man."

Is such a claim well-founded? Or is it true that the succe carrying out of the administration's program must necessarily de-prive the humble citizen—"the forgotten man"—of the rights and powers inherent in him as a sovereign under our American theory and plan of government?

The rights and powers of citizens of the United States represent the culmination and fruition of thousands of years of struggle for human freedom. If the so-called "new deal" jeopardizes this priceless heritage of American citizenship, every man, woman, and child should be warned and should be on guard to protect our national birthright.

The so-called "new deal", if carried to its logical conclusion as apparently intended by the present administration, must eventually wipe out individual and political liberty, destroy American citizenship, and again reduce the humble and forgotten man to the position of political, economic, and social slavery which he held for thousands of years, and from which he was finally freed by the only new deal in history—that of 1787, which established the United States of America.

United States of America.

The political and social problem of "the forgotten man" is as old as history. The protection of the humble citizen, of the poor man, of the man of small influence, of the man who does physical labor, of the man who is the employee of another, of the toilers, and of the weak and helpless has been the most vital problem of the philosophers and sages of the past, who have repeatedly endeavored to formulate some political philosophy that will assure justice and equality of opportunity to each human being for the development of his personality and for the pursuit of his individual development of his personality and for the pursuit of his individual happiness.

"The forgotten man" can be fully protected only when he holds his individual rights and powers under such a title and under such guaranties that no one can deprive him of them under any circumstances. If he holds them as privileges granted by government, then the same government which granted them can withdraw them at its whim; and in that case a tyrannical or dictatorial ruler can be the received to the properties of the properties.

at its whim; and in that case a tyrannical or dictatorial ruler can reduce any portion of the people to practical slavery whenever he desires to do so.

But if the rights and powers of the individual are held under a title superior even to that under which the government holds its powers, then the weak individual can be protected against the aggression and injustice of stronger men, and even of rulers, and true liberty can be preserved.

When the founders and framers of the American Republic attempted to formulate a governmental plan for the United States, they recognized that the rich and powerful needed little protection, in comparison with the humble, the lowly, the helpless, and the poor. They adopted a political philosophy which they believed would assure equality of right, equality of burden, and equality of opportunity to each citizen of the American Republic, a system under which "equal rights to all and special privileges to none" would be made possible.

In order to attain this end they recognized that the rights of each citizen, however humble, were equal to the rights of every

In order to attain this end they recognized that the rights of each citizen, however humble, were equal to the rights of every other citizen, however powerful; and to sustain this claim they recognized that those individual rights of each must be derived from the same source, and must be established as of such supreme dignity and as held under such a supreme title, that they could not be successfully invaded by any man or group of men, however strong and powerful, and could not justly be assailed even by the collective force of the community acting through its governmental agents.

In the Declaration of Independence the founders and framers

In the Declaration of Independence the founders and framers formulated and stated our political philosophy, whereby they undertook to protect "the forgotten man." In that great instrument they declared:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it and to institute new government, laying its becomes destructive of these ends it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

This charter of our American liberties is based on principles so generally accepted and so universally recognized that they are declared to be self-evident, needing no proof.

The first statement declares that there must be equality of right, opportunity, and burden in any system of just government, by asserting the political equality of each human being with every other human being.

The second statement recognizes that man derives his individual by asserting the political equality of each human being with every other human being.

The second statement recognizes that man derives his individual rights from the Creator Himself by direct endowment. Holding these rights under such a supreme title, man cannot be deprived of them nor restrained in their use by any lesser authority, save by his own consent. This being true, it necessarily follows that government can exercise only such restraints upon the individual as the people may entrust to government as their agent; and hence that government must derive all its just powers from the consent of the governed.

It is here further recognized that the sole purpose of government is to secure the individual in the exercise of his God-given rights; and that while the individual derives his rights from Diety by direct endowment, government is delegated its entrusted powers by human beings, and can properly exercise only such powers as are delegated to it. The position of government as a limited agent and servant of the people is asserted, and the reserved rights of the people as sovereigns over government (and as its creator) to alter and abolish the agency, and to institute new government, with such delegated powers as they may choose to grant, is expressly recognized; with renewed emphasis on the fact that the only purpose of government is to effect the safety and happiness of the people.

Under this political philosophy "the forgotten man" is protected so long as that philosophy is maintained and enforced. The humblest citizen holds his rights by endowment from the Creator, under such a solemn and supreme title that the most powerful citizen cannot deprive him of them; and government itself, representing the collective force of the community, cannot justly take senting the collective force of the community, cannot justly take them away. Tyranny and arrogance on the part of rulers is provided against by declaring that rulers are mere agents and servants, removable by the people at will, and having no powers save those entrusted to them by the people, which powers can be exercised only in accordance with the terms of the entrustment.

save those entrusted to them by the people, which powers can be exercised only in accordance with the terms of the entrustment. To enforce and effectuate this political philosophy the Constitution of the United States was adopted. That Constitution was merely a means to an end. It provided the machinery for carrying out and administering certain enumerated powers delegated to the Federal governmental agent under its terms, and expressly stated that "the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively or to the people."

It limited the powers to be administered by enumerating them, expressly reserved from Federal governmental control all powers not delegated; and then proceeded to outline how the entrusted powers should be exercised.

A marvelous system of checks and balances was provided to prevent any usurpation of additional powers, and to guard against any attempted extension of the powers delegated to one department through usurpation of those entrusted to other departments. A supreme court was provided for, so that any attempted extension of the granted powers, or any invasion of reserved State rights, or any invasion of individual liberty by any department of the Federal Government could be restrained.

Under this American political philosophy and governmental plants.

Under this American political philosophy and governmental plan the "forgotten man" was not dependent upon the whims of his temporary rulers for the recognition and maintenance of his rights or for protection in his pursuit of his own happiness along lines of his own choosing.

Each man had the unalienable right to pursue his happiness as he chose, provided that he did not interfere with the similar and as he chose, provided that he man being to pursue a similar course. equal right of every other human being to pursue a similar course. Each had a right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, which last the Supreme Court has said means the right to acquire, which last the Supreme Court has said means the right to acquire, use, and own property. To exercise these rights no franchise or grant of privilege from government was necessary. The rights were recognized as inherent in each human being, and the task of the Government was to secure these rights—not to interfere with them or destroy them. A man could own and use property as a natural right. He did not have to secure a permit or a certificate of necessity from government in order to carry on a legitimate business. Government could not deprive him of this right; nor could the Government use its resources to engage in competitive business with him.

The function of the Government was to govern—that is, to business with him.

The function of the Government was to govern—that is, to secure each individual in the exercise of his unalienable rights—and this was its sole purpose. It was not authorized to use the sovereign powers entrusted to it for the purpose of granting special privilege, or for benefiting one class as against another, or for the redistribution of wealth through taxation or by any other means, or for dispensing charity, or for developing the natural resources of the country, or for providing jobs for the unemployed. These are not proper functions of the Federal Government. No such powers were granted to it.

Such powers were granted to it.

Our Government was, moreover, designed as a government of law rather than of men. It was based on eternal principles of right and justice—not on the benevolence or malevolence of indiright and justice—not on the benevolence or malevolence of individual rulers. To it was not entrusted any authority to seize and exercise additional powers whenever the governmental agents thought that such a course would be wise. On the contrary, it was expressly declared that the powers not delegated to it by the Constitution were reserved to other parties; and the Federal Government was definitely inhibited from exercising any powers in addition to those granted, unless and until a further grant had been made.

The entire power of the Government was made available for use in the protection of each individual in the exercise of his God-given rights whenever those rights were infringed by other more powerful individuals. Even if some branch of the Government itself attempted to override the rights of the private citizen, the Supreme Court stood as a bulwark of liberty, ready to defend the humblest citizen against injustice and oppression, even if attempted by the President of the United States or by the Abuses and injustice naturally arose, even under this system, for the system had to be administered by imperfect and selfish men, many of whom were constantly attempting to use the delegated power for the benefit of themselves or their friends. But these abuses arose from a distortion of the plan rather than from any fault of the plan itself. Chiefly they arose from the abandonment by the governmental agents of their proper function of restraint, and the assertion by them or some of them of the power to grant privileges or rights.

Government in the United States has no rights, but exercises Government in the United States has no rights, but exercises only delegated powers; and when government attempts to grant rights or privileges, it has distorted its real purpose, and has become tyrannical; for when special privilege is granted to one citizen over another, this destroys the very equality of opportunity guaranteed to each citizen under our political philosophy and by guaranteed to each citizen under our political philosophy and by our constitutional plan.

The present administration came into power at the time of the culmination of a great economic depression, when "the forgotten man" had been noticeably oppressed and exploited by those of power and influence—when the ordinary citizen was struggling to make a living under economic conditions brought about by a distortion of our governmental theories and plan that made such a struggle a foredoomed failure.

Government had been used, not to secure the individual in the exercise of his unalienable rights but to grant special privileges and powers to favored groups, largely to corporate enterprises, which had been created by government for the convenience and use of human beings but which had become so swollen and arrogant with their combination of wealth and privileges that they had assumed to become the masters of the people and had in many cases reduced them to a position of economic slavery. Government, moreover, had unconstitutionally extended its functions and activities to such an extent that it had become topheavy and oppressive, and a great body of bureaucratic officers had been established who systematically oppressed the people.

Under these circumstances the Democratic nominee called attention to "the forgotten man", whose rights had been disregarded under these conditions. Those rights had been violated by distorting the plan and purpose of American Government, by an unconstitutional extension and enlargement of its powers, by the attempted grant of privileges to certain groups, and by the use of the entrusted powers for purposes other than those provided for by the entrustend powers for purposes other than those provided for by the entrustend powers for purposes other than those provided for by the entrustend of the ends set out in that philosophy as being its sole purpose, and in again enforcing the limitations on governmental powers set out in the Constitution which had been adopted in order to effectuate that philosophy.

To this program, the Democratic candidate solemnly pledged himself; and on the faith of that pledge, he was overwhelmingly elected. In the whole history of the United States, it is doubtful if there has ever been formulated and adopted a fairer or more admirable political platform than the one adopted by the last Democratic Convention at Chicago, on which Mr. Roosevelt was elected and which he pledged himself to carry out.

Upon taking office, the President took a solemn oath to "pr

But the administration has apparently abandoned and scrapped our political philosophy, and has violated and disregarded the limitations on governmental powers imposed by the Constitution. Pretense has been made that the rights of "the forgotten man" retense has been made that the rights of "the forgotten man" cannot be preserved under our political philosophy and constitutional plan; and the people have been urged to condone unprecedented usurpations of power by the Federal Government on the plea that only by vesting the President with dictatorial powers can the present situation be met. The benevolent intentions of the President have been advertised, and the advantages of a benevolent despotism have been widely proclaimed.

A benevolent despot is a contradiction in terms. However wells.

A benevolent despot is a contradiction in terms. However well-intentioned may be the ruler, yet a despot is one who seizes undelegated powers; and the good intentions of the ruler do not excuse his rape of authority. Moreover, the possession of power invariably leads to tyranny and oppression.

The present administration has undertaken to establish govern The present administration has undertaken to establish government as a partner of the people, rather than as their agent and servant. It has attempted to utilize government as a means of redistributing the wealth of the Nation, as an organization for the conduct of great business enterprises in competition with individuals, as a charitable organization, as a dispenser of jobs, as a developer of the natural resources of the country, as a means of diverting the wealth of one group for the benefit of another, and as a controller of the business of the country to such an extent that the individual can do little business without a permit from the Federal Government, and must then do it in conformity with rules and regulations established by bureaucrats in Washington, which may be changed from day to day, and which are enforced by the power of the Federal Government.

The Federal Government has ceased to be the servant of the

The Federal Government.

The Federal Government has ceased to be the servant of the people and has become their master. It daily asserts its mastership and its right to control all the details of their daily lives. It has rejected the theory of the supremacy of the individual over government, and asserts the supremacy of government over the people. It denies the right of each man to pursue his own happiness as he chooses and to develop his personality along lines of his own selection and occurrent the right of covernment to avernit the him to set tion, and asserts the right of government to permit him to act only upon a grant of permission or privilege. It has abandoned the theory that the people must support the Government, and attempts to establish the theory that government must support the people.

In carrying out this plan it has imposed an unbearable burden In carrying out this plan it has imposed an unbearable burden of taxation, and has mortgaged the future of the American people to an unbelievable extent. It has trained the people to dependence on Washington for material help and business leadership, has impaired the initiative and resourcefulness of the American citizen, and has made him a mere subject of a dictatorial group. It has attempted to establish and is establishing the governmental philosophy and plan of the socialist school of thought. It is destroying the American Republic and rapidly driving us into a bureaucratic despotism, where the cry is for ever more power in the Government, and ever greater restrictions on individual and political liberty.

The real issue today is not whether a further concentration of power in the Federal Government will afford some temporary economic relief, but whether we shall abandon the political philosophy adopted by the founders and framers, and the instruments established by them for effectuating it. They were familiar with dictatorships, with regimented states, with bureaucracy, with price fixing, and with all phases of governmental absolutism. These had been repeatedly tried in history and had always failed. They rejected all of these tried-and-proven failures and set up a government of laws rather than of men, a government founded on eternal and unchanging principles of right and justice, safeguarded by the most perfect instrument that ever came from the mind of man for the preservation of liberty, for the protection of "the forgotten man", and for the prevention of tyranny and oppression, namely, the Constitution of the United States.

Shall America become a mere province of an international so-the Constitution of the United States.

Shall America become a mere province of an international socialist state, governed from some other country in the interest of a class? Or shall it return to the faith of the fathers and continue its great destiny as the citadel of individual and political liberty, the land where man may develop the personality with which the Creator has endowed him, with the least possible interference by government, and with the greatest possible respect for the similar rights of every other human being? Shall we be governed by dictatorial and tyrannical rulers and bureaucrats, or shall we govern ourselves? Shall we enforce equality of opportunity, of right, and of burden, or shall we have a government of special privilege, where government permits are needed before we can engage in the pursuit of happiness, and where the wealth and resources of the country must be seized to pay the cost of an army of bureaucrats employed to enforce curtailment of our essential liberties?

If economic welfare can be secured only at the price of such a sacrifice, it would come too dearly. We may temporarily escape economic vassalage to the powerful business corporations, but we are substituting therefor political and social slavery to a permaare substituting therefor political and social slavery to a permanent governmental bureaucracy. So long as the sovereignty of the people over government is maintained, economic abuses on the part of the favored classes and of corporate enterprises can be remedied; but when government is made sovereign over the people who create it, individual and political liberty disappear; and "the forgotten man", divested of his God-given rights, and exercising only such privileges as his rulers may grant, becomes the subject of despotic power, which ever seeks to enlarge its authority and to impose constantly increasing burdens and restrictions upon the great mass of the people.

Our past has shown that under our system of free government.

Our past has shown that under our system of free government, man can attain a position of economic welfare, of happiness, and freedom not possible under any other form of government yet developed. Distortions of our governmental plan have been responsible. sible for our troubles.

The reestablishment of our political philosophy and the reenforcement of limitations on governmental powers as set out in the Constitution will restore the United States of America to its old Constitution will restore the United States of America to its old position of leadership among the nations, and to its far more important position of protector of the weak and helpless, the only safe guardian of "the forgotten man", the citadel of human liberty, and the hope of mankind for the preservation of individual and political freedom.

"The forgotten man" was rescued from age-long helplessness and servitude under America's unequaled system of free institutions and of the sovereignty of the people. The new deal of 1787 accomplished this after thousands of years of struggle for human freedom.

human freedom.

The so-called "new deal" of today advocates an abandonment

The so-called "new deal" of today advocates an abandonment of these gains and a return to governmental despotism.

If the present administration program is carried to its logical conclusion, liberty will disappear, individual rights will be submerged in a flood of governmental privilege, and the "forgotten man" will be buried in the graveyard of the Sadducees, beyond the hope of resurrection, until in some distant age a more virile people, resentful of slavery, shall make another supreme sacrifice of blood and treasure to regain the freedom which Americans once had but supinely surrendered at the behest of theorists.

The so-called "new deal" will divest "the forgotten man" of his supreme dignity as a sovereign, strip him of his inalienable God-given rights, and make of the free American citizen a servile subject of autocratic and tyrannous power. Already, while we retain the forms of a republic, our rulers exercise the powers of dictators; and American citizens can act in many vital matters only by the consent of government, and then only in accordance with bureaucratic regulations. All too obviously, under such a system, "the forgotten man" must eventually "live and move and have his being" only at the whim of autocratic despots.

It was Thomas Jefferson who said, "Talk to me no more of confidence in man, but bind him down from mischief by the chains of dence in man, but bind him down from mischief by the chains of the Constitution."

THE ARMAMENT RACE

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, I ask leave to have printed in the Congressional Record an editorial in the Washington Post of this date entitled "The Armament Race." It seems very opportune at this time.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, Friday, Mar. 8, 1935] THE ARMAMENT RACE

The British military estimates for 1935, representing an increase of almost exactly $50,000,000—at current exchange rates—over those of last year, are not in themselves a serious evidence of the world-wide growth of militarism. No single step of this nature ever is. Moreover, His Majesty's Government can, and doubtless will, argue that the increased expenditure which it asks is far less than that which our own services are now demanding from Congress. Great Britain's proposed national defense budget, totaling approximately $590,000,000, contrasts not unfavorably with the $792,000,000 requested for this purpose in President Roosevelt's last Budget message last Budget message.

Much more significant than the actual figures is the fact that Great Britain is abandoning, as this country has abandoned, its undoubtedly sincere efforts to secure at least a measure of disarmament. And it is a matter for very sober reflection when Great Britain and the United States join the general hysterical stampede which, if continued, can only result in another world war.

Behind such national "preparedness" programs there are always powerful forces. Their influence in any country is greatly augmented when other nations begin to arm heavily. A victous circle is then created which steadily becomes more difficult to cut. For this reason the collapse of the Disarmament Conference and the reckless programs of military expenditure on which virtually all countries are embarking as a result are matters of grave concern to all who possess any power of foresight.

In this situation no intelligent person will be satisfied by the superficial argument that Nation X must arm because Nation Y is arming. It is too apparent that the nationals of Y are using exactly the same argument in reverse. At the closing end of this exactly the same argument in reverse. At the closing end of this chain of reasoning—blaming it on the other fellow—lies the com-

exactly the same argument in reverse. At the closing end of this chain of reasoning—blaming it on the other fellow—lies the completely catastrophic war which the great majority of people everywhere wish to avert. But what lies at the opening end? What has started the armament race which is now pressing with ever greater intensity on a world still staggering from its last debauch of belligerency? Is any solution suggested if the historical sequence is carefully examined?

At the close of the World War a great opportunity to start fresh on the subject of national security was presented to mankind. In the launching of the League of Nations, in the energetic preliminaries for the Disarmament Conference, in the tangible achievements of the Washington Naval Conference, are seen the valiant efforts which were made to seize that opportunity. They have failed neither because of munition makers nor because mankind wants war. They have failed primarily because of a simple blunder with two separate parts—the attempt to enforce compulsory disarmament on the defeated powers, while refusing to honor the pledge in the Treaty of Versailles which made that specified disarmament a preliminary to universal action in this field.

Soon or late the failure of the victorious nations to redeem that pledge was bound to result in surreptitious arming by Germany.

pledge was bound to result in surreptitious arming by Germany. Such action, particularly under fanatical leadership, could only cause fear, and therefore further arms increases, among Germany's reighbors. The atmosphere of growing suspicion, unsuccessfully disguised by the ineffective idealism of Geneva, inevitably encouraged the realistic Japanese to grab while the grabbing was good. The result: More fears, more arming, an ever-widening spread of the malignant prairie fire of thinly veiled antagonisms and ominous preparations.

Today recriminations in these matters can only feed fuel to the ames. The problem of civilization is not futile argument over who has the greater responsibility for what has come about. The problem is how to stem the mounting tide. Only in two ways can this be done. One is by resuming the collective effort for disarmament on a basis of real equality among the negotiating states. The other is by a truly courageous stand on the part of states. The other is by a truly courageous stand on the part of those nations which have least to fear from their neighbors. The first method could end the present vicious circle by liquidating it; the second method could end it by a cut.

From an objective viewpoint it is becoming apparent that the Anglo-Saxon Nations are today laggard in giving more than lip service to the cause of peace. Great Britain is inclined to meet the collapse of the Disarmament Conference by arming against, instead of treating with, Germany. The United States is disposed to throw its hat into the armament ring with a belligerent shout. Of course, the policy of both Governments can be explained, excused, and justified. There are lots of stones to throw at the glass houses of others. But hurling those tempting stones will do less than nothing to solve the problem at hand. The present administration has had the courage and the statesmanship to try to break the vicious circle of mounting tariff barriers. It is curious that it should be so apathetic in face of the far more serious trend which is rapidly turning the world into a cluster of armed camps. camps.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New York to reconsider the amendment, on page 50, line 3, adopted on motion of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison].

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I will merely ask for a | division on the motion.

On a division, the motion was rejected.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I have a letter from the Secretary of War calling attention to the fact that the Budget had estimated the contingent expenses of the War Department at $200,000. We had testimony on the subject, but did not take any action, apparently; and the Secretary asks, after the word "expenses", on page 5, line 22, that "$180,000" be stricken out and "$200,000" be inserted in lieu thereof. I think it should be done for the reason as stated by the Secretary in his letter, which I will ask to have printed in the RECORD. I offer the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from New York proposing, on page 5, line 22, to strike out "$180,000" and insert "$200,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. I now ask that the letter from the Secretary of War, to which I have referred, may be printed in

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT

Hon. Royal S. Copeland,

Chairman Subcommittee in Charge of War Department Appropriation Bill,

United States Senate. Dear Senator Copeland: The Army appropriation bill just reported to the Senate fails to restore the $20,000 deducted in the House from the appropriation "Contingent expenses, War Department." While the amount involved is relatively small, the failure ment." While the amount involved is relatively small, the failure to provide it will deprive the War Department of supplies and services which are indispensable in administering the Army, and which cannot be secured from any other source due to the restrictive language of the bill.

Accordingly I am availing myself of this opportunity to urge that this sum be restored on the floor of the Senate when the bill comes up for consideration. The amendment required is as follows:

Page 5, line 22, after the word "expenses", strike out "$180,000" and insert "$200,000."

and insert "$200,000."

The reduced appropriations of recent years have exhausted stocks of supplies and prevented replacement of worn-out equipment. Recently prices have doubled in several instances, the average increase being approximately 20 percent. Five hundred and fifty-four typewriters and 134 adding and calculating machines are from 10 to 16 years old. Practically all equipment was purchased during the World War, and replacement cannot be longer deferred. Unless relief is granted, it appears certain that the War Department will be seriously embarrassed in carrying on essential office work, and this embarrassment will be reflected in the field. the field.

Your assistance in the matter will be appreciated.

Sincerely yours,

GEO. H. DERN, Secretary of War.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I wish to read an affidavit handed to me this morning.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. Would the Senator be willing, because of the fact that I have to go to another committee, to allow the War Department bill to be disposed of? He may then take the floor.

Mr. LONG. I am not going to take very long.

Mr. COPELAND. Very well.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have an affidavit which reads as follows:

United States of America, District of Columbia,

City of Washington. Before me, the undersigned authority, personally came and appeared Albert Caya, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That he was formerly business agent of the Carpenters' District Council of Washington, D. C., and vicinity; that while he was performing his duties as business agent it came to his attention that immediately after the window glass was taken out of the crates in which it was delivered from the manufacturer to the James Stewart Construction Co. job on the I. C. C. and Labor Building at Fourteenth and Constitution Avenue, these boxes were burned; that he was further informed by the glazers who worked on this job that the labels on each and every glass were removed immediately, obviously, and in his opinion, for the purpose of concealing the inferior quality of the glass, which did not comply with the specifications, and to conceal the name of the manufacturer and the materialman; that all of the facts and allegations made herein are true and correct. are true and correct.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 8th day of March 1935. [SEAL] My commission expires September 1, 1937. CHAS. E. ALDEN.

Mr. President, this gentleman, who is business agent of the local union, says that he can see no reason why the labels were removed from the inferior glass that Stewart & Co. was using other than to keep from having an identification made as to who was selling that glass. They also went to the extent that the minute the glass in this Stewart contract was used they would not only burn the boxes in which the glass came but would put water on the label and erase the label.

Now, I want to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that the Stewart Co. referred to in the affidavit of Albert Caya is the one buying materials from James A. Farley's interested concern. In other words, that peculiar matter occurred with regard to him.

Mr. President, I am going to send to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads what I thought might already have been considered by them. I am going to send to them a statement supplementing my statement on the floor and before that committee to the effect that campaign contributions being taken from Federal employees had been solicited by letters issued with the knowledge and with the understanding of Mr. Farley. I am not going to disclose the letters I have nor the names of those to whom the letters have been addressed, because manifestly those employees would be immediately dismissed from the service; but I have in my possession those letters and can produce them if a hearing is ordered in this case.

I expect before I conclude my remarks, as my clerk is on the way over here with it, to submit a copy of a letter, which has been photographed, from the files of the United States Treasury Department. I have noticed in the newspapers a statement by Mr. Norman Davis and by Mr. Farley that these charges are not true. It seems that the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads is trying this case, trying it to see whether or not the charges are false or true. They are not having an investigation. They are taking what I send in there, and Mr. Farley is being called on to say, "Is this so or not?" and Mr. Davis is being called on to say, "Is this so or not?" Mr. Norman Davis comes into town, and he, along with Mr. Farley, has sent an affidavit or statement to the committee.

As soon as my clerk reaches here I shall have a photostatic copy of a letter written not by the United States attorney in Tennessee but by the Treasury Department to the United States attorney. My secretary has just handed me the letter. I have that letter before me now. Here is a photostatic copy of it. It is not a matter that originated with the United States attorney who has been dismissed. It is a matter against the Davis brothers running that bank down there, the case having been originated by the Treasury Department under instructions to the United States attorney. I send a copy of the letter to the desk and ask that it may be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY, Nashville, Tenn., August 12, 1933.

A. V. MCLANE,

United States District Attorney,
Middle District of Tennessee, Nashville, Tenn.
Sir: You will be advised that during the course of the regular periodical examination of the American National Bank of Nashville, Tenn., which examination was begun on July 6, 1933, the following unusual, "if not irregular", transactions are brought to our attention, which are in violation of section 5209 of the National Bank Act. COMPTROLLER'S CALL FOR REPORT OF CONDITION DECEMBER 31, 1931

A note for $600,000, signed by Nashville & American Trust Co., A note for $600,000, signed by Nashville & American Trust Co., carried in the assets of the American National Bank, was eliminated over the period through the following procedure: A note of the Fourth and First Banks, Inc., carried by the Nashville American Trust Co., for $884,238.47, was discounted at par with the First National Bank of St. Louis, Mo., with a repurchase agreement signed by both the American National Bank and the Nashville American Trust Co. However, the books of neither show this repurchase Hability. (On Dec. 31, 1931, the National bank gave the State bank credit for $500,000 on its books, showing this amout due to and from the State institution, and the State bank set up corresponding entries increasing its cash and due from banks $500,000.) No cash was involved in the transactions, the entries were 200.) No cash was involved in the transactions, the entries were purely fictitious on the part of both banks, and said entries reversed on January 5, 1932, hence, it can readily be seen that such untrue statements are deceiving.

The records reveal that the cashier of the American National Bank, M. E. Barr, was granted a loan by said bank under date of June 26, 1933, for the sum of $2,500, which is a strict violation of the Banking Act of 1933.

COMPTROLLER'S CALL FOR REPORT OF CONDITION JUNE 30, 1933

Transactions between the American National Bank and the Transactions between the American National Bank and the Union & Planters National Bank, of Memphis, Tenn., which are no more or less than fictitious entries for the purpose of padding or window dressing, and which transactions lend aid to deceiving the supervising officials of the banking business, namely, Comptroller of the Currency, Chief National Bank Examiner, and field examiners, and the depositing public, and such as is shown by the following tabulation of dates and accounts:

Date	Due from Union & Planters Na- tional Bank	Due to Union & Planters National Bank
June 28, 1935.  June 27, 1935.  June 28, 1935.  June 29, 1935.  June 30, 1935.  July 2, 1935.  July 2, 1935.  July 3, 1935.  July 4, 1935.  July 4, 1935.  July 5, 1935.  July 6, 1935.  July 6, 1935.	$21, 520, 56 22, 477. 44 15, 122, 50 15, 961, 70 217, 423, 79 218, 823, 64 218, 823, 64 223, 582, 52 221, 675, 22 24, 608, 29	$303, 276, 39 279, 091, 31 295, 127, 14 999, 020, 48 1, 400, 797, 26 1, 006, 955, 66 1, 018, 352, 79 1, 018, 352, 79 636, 214, 31 294, 750, 89

Hence it can readily be seen such entries compiled for purpose of window dressing over the period which it was known there would be a call for published statement.

Respectfully submitted for your consideration.

F. A. Guiles, National Bank Examiner.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, there never were stronger charges of criminality and fraud and rascality contained in a letter relative to bank operations than in that letter. I have here a photostatic copy of the letter. The Department have not the only copy of it. They think they have all the records, but we have a few photostats which they did not take back. We have some other photostats.

There is a letter—the gentleman, I think, is still in the employ of the United States Treasury Department-from the banking department setting out one thing right after the other of rascality and fraud, and demanding action to be taken by the United States attorney in the middle district of the State of Tennessee.

I have submitted my own statement and I have affidavits from these men that when they were arranging to prosecute the cases, through the agencies of Mr. Farley, the United States attorney to whom this letter was addressed and to whom other matter was sent was removed and a special man was sent from Washington, D. C., who appeared on the scene and in 1 day's time made an hour's speech against indicting the men and, according to the affidavit of four of the jurors, undertook to and did succeed in convincing them that the grand jury should recommend that no action be taken in the matter.

There is the letter. The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar] has said he knows all about this matter and that there is not a word of truth in the charges. There is one of the letters, and it is not half of what we have. There is the letter, which was not written by the United States attorney. There is the letter written by the Treasury Department, a photostatic copy of which I have in my hand, in which the writer points out the rascality in the Davis Bros. bank and various other things that we have offered to prove.

Mr. President, I understand there are some misgivings on the part of some members of the Post Offices and Post Roads Committee, so I send to the desk a further memorandum which I ask may be referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. It reads as follows:

Gentlemen, I beg to advise you that I have letters and witnesses to establish that under Mr. James A. Farley and with his consent, collections from Government employees in Washington have been solicited by him.

Yours sincerely.

HUEY P. LONG. United States Senator.

I ask that the letters and affidavit which I have sent to the desk be referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

The VICE PRESIDENT. They will be so referred. Mr. LONG subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask to have incorporated at the end of the preamble to Senate Resolution 74, providing for an investigation of Mr. Farley. the matter which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEELY in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

Add at the end of the preamble the following:
"Whereas it is alleged that the said Farley has been connected with and the manager in charge of collection of money from employees of the United States for political purposes."

Mr. McKELLAR subsequently said: Mr. President, I understand that, while all the members of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads were out of the Chamber earlier in the day, the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Long] proposed the following amendment to the preamble of Senate Resolution 74:

Whereas it is alleged that the said Farley has been connected with and the manager in charge of collection of money from employees of the United States for political purposes.

I do not know exactly what that means, and for the present I make a motion to reconsider the action by which the amendment was ordered to be inserted in the resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion will be entered.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, before the pending War Department appropriation bill is passed I feel that I should state the reasons why I shall vote against it; and while doing so I desire to express the hope that there may be a roll call upon the measure.

The bill provides the largest appropriation for the Army that has ever been provided in peace time. I think it constitutes a challenge. If not to nations that look with a degree of suspicion upon our intent and purpose, it is a challenge to the people of the United States.

Only 17 or 18 years after a "war to end war" we find ourselves engaged in mapping a larger program of preparation for more war than civilization ever before knew in peace time.

Included now in this bill is a provision, voted there yesterday, calling for an increase of 47,000 men in the personnel of the Army. Assuredly this, our challenge, is going to invite a competition which will find us back here next year listening to men setting forth what Japan and Russia and others have done since we increased our Army by 47,000 men, and we are going to be called upon to afford another increase. It invites, as it always has invited, further competition from those very nations, those very peoples against whom we argue ourselves into believing we must afford a larger national defense. Our naval program of the past few years has been such an invitation to competition.

This summer is going to find our fleet out in the Pacific in its so-called "maneuvers." Japan, which we heard so freely talked about yesterday, is also, in answer to that, going to conduct her maneuvers out in the Pacific. Just how near together the fleets of the two countries are going to be has not yet been determined. On the whole, what we are doing now is continuing in a game of bullying, in a game of enticing, in a game of encouraging the very thing that no one here will rise and defend.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. NYE. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. FLETCHER. I rise merely for the purpose of correcting the record. I know the Senator means to be accurate. While it is not so important, the actual increase in enlisted men is 46,250, not 47,000.

Mr. NYE. Oh! I beg the Senator's pardon for my terrible inaccuracy.

We are justifying this increase in personnel primarily upon the activities of other lands that have seen fit, during the past year, to increase their budgets in preparation for more wars.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NYE. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. I cannot let that statement pass. It so happened that by the turn of the wheel of fate I was in charge of the bill. So far as I am concerned, I have never made an argument in favor of the increase in the strength of the Army on any such ground as the Senator has mentioned.

Mr. NYE. I am glad to have the Senator from New York enter his thought. It certainly is in keeping with his attitude during these days of controversy upon the bill; but we were made yesterday to listen to Senators who had Japan and Russia in agreement, with the assurance that Russia was going to get Alaska for furnishing the army, and Japan would take what was left of us for furnishing the navy, to do to Uncle Sam what they evidently were agreed ought to be done to Uncle Sam.

The point I am trying to make is that while we seek to justify our enlarged appropriations for military preparedness on the basis of the expenditures of others, others actually are doing the same identical thing. Our increase in personnel of 46,000 men tomorrow or today will be or is being heralded in Japan as a challenge which very soon will have Japan with at least 46,000 more men under arms. I say "46,000" now, not "47,000." Next year, I repeat, we shall be reminded of the increases which have been afforded in other lands; and if our attitude then is what it seems to be now, we shall listen closely. We shall provide the additional force asked for. The question arises, Where and what is to be the end of this race?

The facts are that if we were today to authorize additional personnel of a million men, next year would find us wholly without a so-called "adequate national defense."

Today the United States is spending almost three times what it expended in 1915 in the name of national defense; and yet the facts are that we have no better, no more adequate national defense today than we had in 1915. This is because every time we have taken a step forward in the direction of a more adequate defense, other nations have kept pace with us. Our defense is no better today than it was 20 years ago, and that in spite of the fact that we are expending millions upon millions more now than then.

I hope the time will never come when there shall devolve upon us the task of determining who is the pace setter in the mad military race which the world is witnessing today. I hope we shall never have to face a challenge by other lands which will carry an insistence that the United States is responsible for this mad race; yet we might well face the facts for whatever they may be worth.

Since 1913, the year before the World War came, and going up to 1930, every power on earth shows an increase in its appropriations for military purposes. From 1913 to 1930 Russia, Italy, France, and Great Britain have increased their costs of military maintenance all the way from 30 to 44 percent. During the same years Japan has increased her budget 141 percent. Over the same span of years we have increased ours quite 200 percent, to a point which finds our country today spending more money than is being spent by any other power on earth in getting ready for more war.

We needed 46,000 more men, so we were told, to provide a more adequate national defense. I wish it had been the privilege of every Member of this body to sit along with the members of the committee investigating the munitions industry, and there enjoy the advantage which has been that of members of the committee of knowing what "national defense" really means.

The facts are that there is not an admiral, there is not a general in our Military Establishment who will venture to say how many battleships we must have or how many men we must have enlisted to have an adequate national defense—not one—and when we called upon the War Department to indicate to us what was going to be the cost of an adequate national defense they virtually laid before the committee their blueprints for the next war. Those blueprints, Mr. President, do not call for a war here at home. They do not anticipate a war upon our shores. They do not anticipate a war in our own waters. They anticipate in every detail the cost and the need of preparation for getting men—3,000,000 men, to use their own figures—across thousands of miles of ocean. That is what they call "national defense."

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. NYE. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Has the able Senator from North Dakota any authorized statements from Army sources of the sort he is now summarizing indicating the objectives of this elaborate program of military preparation?

Mr. NYE. I think the Senator will find most enlightening the testimony of Colonel Harris, of the War Department, before the committee, and particularly his statement, which required something over an hour to be read into the record. I urge the Senator from Colorado that he give that testimony and statement his consideration.

The Senator from New York yesterday deplored the cost and profit of war, as we all deplore the cost and profit of war; but I think that equally shameful, yea, disgraceful, is the cost and the profit of preparing for war here and elsewhere in the world.

Of course, it can be and has been said that the increased cost occasioned by the enlistment of between 46,000 and 47,000 new men in our Military Establishment is quite paltry, quite insignificant, that it should not bother us at all. What is twenty or forty million dollars of increase in a bill calling for $400,000,000? We should not worry about things like that, especially when our national defense is at stake! Yet we, who consider in that wise the paltryness of $40,000,000, have stumbled and dilly-dallied to keep down suggested appropriations of much less than twenty or forty million dollars when other departments of Government were involved.

Our financial difficulties today are like those being experienced all over the world. We are wholly unable here, in these Halls, to balance our Budgets; but we must not let that worry us, except when we are dealing with affairs of State, or except when we are dealing with the enforcement of law, or when we are dealing with enlargement upon our commerce. Then must we try to balance Budgets. But when the War Department and the Navy Department call for increased appropriations, shut yours eyes to the need of balancing Budgets; that is no place, it would seem, to give consideration to affairs of Budget balancing.

Mr. President, here in Washington, the Capital City of our land, the greatest capital in all the world, in order to balance budgets and meet these desperately hard times we turn off half or more of the lighting facilities of the city. In many States besides my own, schools are closing; but Congress cannot be interested for the moment in the appropriation of the millions that would be required to assist the people of this country to keep their schools open!

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. NYE. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Does the Senator think he is quite fair? Does he not know that last year, at least, contrary to the money and make gifts to a number of States to assist them in keeping their schools open?

Mr. NYE. The point I make is that, in spite of that help, there is desperate need for much more of it. There has not been enough help to keep the schools open. They are closing day after day in many States of the Union. The minute we get down to the consideration of additional appropriations to keep the schools open we are going to be shown how desperate is the need for balancing the Budget. "Where are you going to get the money", we are going to be asked. But no one is worrying about where we are to get the money to afford the increase for the Army and the Navy that is being asked this year. No one is worried about where the money is to come from. No one is asking why there should be any concern about it.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. NYE. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Has anyone suggested that there is danger of an unbalanced Budget as a result of the very liberal War Department appropriations proposed in the pending bill?

Mr. NYE. I have not heard any concern expressed about the condition of our Budget in connection with the consideration of the pending military bill.

Mr. President, we have appropriated large sums of money to take care of unemployment. Last year it cost the Army $20,730 for saluting ammunition, and do Senators know where the money for that saluting ammunition came from? It came from the public-works funds allocated to the War Department. But we should not worry about that: that was in the name of national defense! Unemployment is quite another matter, and we can afford less for unemployment relief for a few men, so as to afford saluting ammunition, which is very, very necessary to the sustaining of our national defense!

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to Mr. NYE. I am glad to yield to my colleague.

Mr. FRAZIER. I was wondering whether my colleague had any information as a result of his investigation of munitions companies, as to the profit on the ammunition used in

Mr. NYE. I do not have at hand the information which might reveal how much profit anyone made out of this saluting ammunition; but I noted that the "economy" leagues and the "liberty" leagues, noting the Liberty League particularly because of the large interest in it of one of America's leading munition makers, have not yet seen fit to protest the increased appropriations for the Army and the Navy. There is not a word of protest from them relative to the budgets for these two Departments.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? Mr. NYE. I yield.

Mr. KING. The Senator just suggested that from the P. W. A. funds a certain amount was allocated for the purchase of saluting ammunition. Has the Senator any information as to the aggregate amount taken from the publicworks funds, which we supposed were for the purpose of giving employment to the idle, and allocated to the War Department and the Navy Department, notwithstanding the very large appropriations which were carried in the appropriation bills for those Departments a year ago?

Mr. NYE. Roughly, the total taken from public-works funds and allocated to the Army and the Navy for those two Departments was $400,000,000.

Mr. KING. If the Senator will pardon me, I do not believe a single Senator, when the public-works bill was under consideration, understood or even suspected that a dollar of the money would be devoted to military and naval purposes, in view of the fact that the appropriation bills for the Army and the Navy carried more than $700,000,000, as a matter of fact, approximately $800,000,000.

Mr. NYE. I say to the Senator that the first allocation of public-works funds was in the amount of $238,000,000 to usual custom, the Federal Government did appropriate | the Navy Department for its continued naval construction, Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield

Mr. NYE. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I cannot agree with the statement made by the Senator from Utah that the Senate was not aware that this might be done, because one of the sections of the Public Works Act contained a provision granting specific authority to the President to transfer funds from the publicworks appropriations for the purpose of naval construction, and efforts made to eliminate that provision from the bill were unsuccessful.

Mr. KING. I think the Senator is correct in that statement. I had in mind the allocation to the Army, rather than a specific fund for the Navy.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, may I say to the Senator from Utah that the allocation of $238,000,000 to the Navy Department was on the first day of the life of the Public Works Administration. The law had just been passed. That was the first move made to get money into circulation in order to afford relief for unemployment.

Mr. KING. If the Senator will permit one more question, I shall then desist. The Senator is a member of the Committee on Appropriations, from which there has just been reported to the Senate a bill carrying $4,880,000,000 for certain public works. Is there any prohibition in the bill to the effect that no part of that stupendous sum shall be devoted to the Army or to the Navy?

Mr. NYE. There is absolutely no provision within that bill forbidding a continuation of what has been practiced in the past. In all fairness it should be said that the President has made it very clear to me that he means to use none of the new public-works appropriation for naval construction. That does not mean that there will be no expenditures for military purposes.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Dakota yield to me while I offer an amendment to the $4,880,-000,000 public-works bill, which I should like to have read, and then to lie on the table?

Mr. NYE. I yield to the Senator for that purpose, and I hope the proposed amendment may be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read the amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. Borah to House Joint Resolution 117, as follows:

That no part of this appropriation or money herein provided shall be expended or used for military, naval, or aviation (when connected with military or naval enterprises) purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will lie on the table and be printed.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I am delighted to see the amendment offered, and it is undoubtedly going to afford one of the most interesting battles of this session of Congress. No end of effort will be made to show how the enlargement of our Army and Navy means relief, means less unemployment. Yet, if we were to follow that course to its full extent, in the end we would find ourselves paying a penalty that would many, many times offset any benefit that might be derived from the expenditure of these moneys for these purposes.

Returning to the thought I was trying to express as to our differing minds—the mind as it exists first when we are considering appropriations for the ordinary purposes of the Government, and then the new mind which exists when we consider appropriations for our military establishments.

Mr. LEWIS rose.

Mr. NYE. Does the Senator from Illinois wish me to vield?

Mr. LEWIS. I would thank the Senator, if it would not disturb the thought of his present thesis, if he would let me bring him back to the subject matter he was just discussing before entering upon any new theme.

Mr. NYE. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I desire to submit to the Senator from North Dakota a query on the subject he was discussing. I was waiting for him to reach a period in that branch of the subject, as I do not like to disturb him after he has entered upon a new phase of his discussion. My query is this: If it be true, as I am sure it must be from the Senator's statement, that under the provisions of the publicworks bill the sum to which he has alluded was transferred to the uses of the War and Navy Departments, I ask him, was not that money spent in the yards and in the works of those Departments?

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, of the $238,000,000 which was allocated to the Navy not more than one-third has been expended. The whole amount cannot be expended in any period short of 3 years, and what has been expended, I think the testimony clearly reveals, might well have been expended for goods and supplies which were in stock. Only a small part of the total amount that has already been expended has been used to furnish new employment or additional employment for men.

Mr. LEWIS. Then, as I understand the Senator from North Dakota, that which was expended was expended in the yards and the enterprises of the Government, giving employment at home to our own people, by our own Government, and that which has not been expended, as I understand the able Senator, is still available to the Treasury—not yet spent—and therefore is yet the property of the Government?

Mr. NYE. Yes, Mr. President; but I suggest that if the Senator went to those in authority and sought a transfer of that allocation or any part of it to a department which needed the money to carry on relief work he would find himself with an exceedingly difficult task on his hands. Very jealously are they guarding against that money getting out of their fingers for one minute, however desperate may be the need in other fields.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, to that I am unable to reply, because I do not know the demand that was made on the Army and Navy to transfer their funds to any other department; and I am not sure, so far as I am concerned, that there is any provision of the law which would authorize the Army and Navy to transfer their funds to other departments without some act of Congress authorizing such transfer or whether a demand has been made in that direction.

Mr. NYE. During recent weeks, as was true once before, the Relief Administration found itself running short of funds awaiting our action in Congress. Extreme difficulty was experienced in finding funds available anywhere. The Relief Administration finally wiggled through, but they never touched this $238,000,000 allocation or evidently even thought of touching it to bring it into use to tide over the time which was causing such distress to the Administrator of Relief.

Mr. LEWIS. Does the Senator contend that it would have been within the power of the Army and Navy Departments to take the funds which had been allocated to them by Congress and transfer those funds to another department merely upon the request of that department itself?

Mr. NYE. No; I do not so contend; but I do contend that it is within the power of the President to do that very thing; and it was left to the President to ascertain where the money to be used for relief purposes was coming from. He finally found the place.

Mr. LEWIS. Then, may I ask my able friend, did the President make any demand upon the Army and the Navy for transfer of their funds?

Mr. NYE. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. LEWIS. Is the Senator aware that a request was ever made by the President for such transfer?

Mr. NYE. I am not aware that any such request was ever made.

Mr. LEWIS. If the able Senator says it was within the power of the President to do so, and that the War and Navy Departments were sources from which money could be obtained, had the President made such demand, and if the Senator says there was no demand that such transfer be made, but such transfer could have been made had the President made such demand, why is the Senator now condemning the President because it was not done?

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I am at a loss to know the point which my friend from Illinois is trying to make.

Mr. LEWIS. The point is, Mr. President, that my able friend, the Senator from North Dakota, is making condemnation because of failure to do something which could not have been done legally, but, admitting that the President of the United States could make the request of the Army and Navy to transfer part of their funds for other uses, I ask my able friend, was such request ever made? To which he answers he does not know. Does he know whether any one ever made a request of the President to make such request?

Mr. NYE. I do know that when once before a similar emergency existed in the Relief Administration a suggestion was made that the moneys which had been allocated to the Navy might be in part used to tide over, but that suggestion was never followed.

Mr. LEWIS. Will the Senator say whether that suggestion was made from a source which had power to make the suggestion, and whether or not it was made to the President?

Mr. NYE. It was made, I am reliably informed, directly by one who stood in very high authority.

Mr. LEWIS. To whom does my able friend say that the suggestion was made?

Mr. NYE. I think, Mr. President, that the Senator will not insist upon an answer to that question. If he does, I should be very glad to ascertain within a few hours whether it would be at all embarrassing to any individual if I were to reveal that fact.

Mr. LEWIS. I seek no private information nor the revelation of any secrets. I only wish to say that it is unfair to condemn a government for not doing something when the government was never asked by any legal authority to do it.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, now, seeking once again to get back to the thought I was trying to impress upon the Senate in my very feeble way, I wish to show what different minds we have, and what a different mind we use when we are concerning ourselves with military appropriations compared to the mind we use when we are considering other appropriations.

I think, perhaps, there is no department of our Government which experiences such a struggle from year to year to gain the sizable appropriations it ought to have to carry on its very worth-while work as the Children's Bureau. For the Children's Bureau, to which I now refer, we appropriated for this year $403,380, and every one of those dollars which that Bureau got, it obtained only after the most earnest kind of insistence, working as hard as it knew how to demonstrate the great need of those few paltry dollars, $403,380, for the Children's Bureau. There was appropriated last year $2,977,-000 for the care and maintenance of the horses owned by the National Guard of the United States. For the children, in consideration of their needs, $403,000; and every one of those dollars came like a tooth that was being pulled! Two million nine hundred and seventy-seven dollars for care and maintenance of the National Guard horses!

The State Department, the only Department of our Government exerting itself, as a Department, in the interests of peace, comes here pleading year after year for paltry additions to its appropriation. Mr. President, you and I know how well they have fared. This year the appropriation which we have already made for the conduct of the entire Department of State is $13,904,100; and yesterday without batting an eye we appropriated between $20,000,000 and $40,000,000—twice the total amount allowed the State Department—in order to bring about an increase in the enlisted personnel of the Army of between 46,000 and 47,000.

For the Justice Department we have appropriated about $34,000,000 for the fiscal year, and we quibble annually about what we appropriate for them. But an additional $40,000,000 to the Army—oh, pay no attention to that! Let not that worry us or give us concern!

For the Commerce Department, devoting itself to the advancement and enlargement of our commerce, we have appropriated for the next fiscal year approximately $34,000,000; and yesterday, without hardly batting an eye, I repeat, the Senate with ease surrendered between $20,000,000 and $40,000,000 to enable between 46,000 and 47,000 more men to be enlisted in the Army.

The Labor Department, engaged in the wonderful work which occupies its attention—oh, what a time they have annually getting what their budgetary plans call for! For next year we are going to give them $15,000,000 with which to carry on the work of that Department. Had it been suggested that there be an increase of $20,000,000 in the appropriation for the Labor Department what warfare we should have had right here in this very Chamber! But when the $20,000,000 or $40,000,000 is added to the War Department appropriations-no; we should not give ourselves concern about that!

This new year is going to find the United States appropriating in excess of a billion dollars to maintain its Army and its Navy-a billion dollars-while all the other departments of Government are being conducted for much less than that.

Mr. President, I think I need not say more to convey the thought that will prompt me to vote against this bill appropriating money for the War Department for the next fiscal

Mr. BONE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Pope in the chair). Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. NYE. I yield to my friend from Washington. Mr. BONE. I should like to have one thing made very plain at this point, and, in order that it may be made plain, I should like to ask the Senator to repeat his statement of a moment ago to the effect that the appropriations for the Army and the Navy this year will exceed the appropriations for all the other activities of the United States Government. Is that correct?

Mr. NYE. For all the other normal departments of the Government.

Mr. BONE. That is what I mean. I think that should be emphasized in the Senator's remarks, because it will be a very interesting and diverting fact to the people.

Mr. NYE. I am sorry I am without the exact figures before me concerning the cost of the various departments, but, in order that the Senator may obtain an idea as to how that cost runs, let me remind him that the appropriations for the coming fiscal year for the State Department are $14,000,000, in round figures; for the Department of Justice, $34,000,000; for the Commerce Department, $34,000,000; and for the Department of Labor, $15,000,000. There are four of our great departments the appropriations for which are less than a hundred million dollars.

Mr. BONE. A radio commentator recently referred to the fact that the pending Japanese budget requires that approximately 49 percent of the budget for this year should go to the Army and Navy of Japan, and he expressed great horror over that fact and grave concern lest it affect the peace of the world. It is rather startling to find this Government of ours spending 50 percent of its total Budget for the Army and Navy.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, where are the billions we are now needing coming from? We are worried about that when we consider the billions needed for human relief; we are worried about that when we are giving consideration to the appropriation of money for public works, or to meet the bonus demands. Where is the money coming from, we ask ourselves time and time again, excepting only when we are considering the billions to be appropriated for the Army and Navy. No one seems to be concerned about that; no one worries about that. "Where is it coming from?" "Why, we will borrow it: we will borrow it, of course; and we are thoroughly justified in borrowing when our national defense

Speaking of borrowing, Mr. President, there are today thousands of people wondering and wanting to know why, with our Government's credit the base for the issuance of money, the Government should have to pay toll to the bankers for every penny of that money the Government borrows. Those same thousands of Americans, and more, sooner or later, are going to discover something that will intensify their existing headaches. Our $30,000,000,000 national debt calls for a tremendous interest payment annually. We shall awaken one of these days to discover that this payment is to bankers who loaned Uncle Sam his own credit. We shall at the same time learn how our financing through this depression is actually accomplishing larger concentration of money and banking resources than ever known before the money changers were presumably thrown out of the temple.

Puzzled by the complex explanations concerning our money and banking machinery, and finding myself a most miserable student when I sought better to ascertain its operations, I had quite resigned myself to what did not seem to be right but which must be right to have stood up and functioned for so very many years. If bankers and statesmen insisted our money base was sound, sound it must be. If they insisted any other base would bring complete wreckage to our economic structure, then we must not even contemplate any other base. I have thought at times that a farm of productive ground, here today, here tomorrow, and here forever, might be a good base for money, but those who knew better have said that it would be a dangerous thing to depart from gold as such a base. All in all, I repeat, like many others, I had become resigned to let others who claimed to know more about money have their say and do their way about matters of national monetary policies. But now I am rudely awakened by the knowledge that we are functioning quite well even though considerably removed from gold as a base. Currency, even though not redeemable in gold, is being accepted without any discounting whatever by those I owe. None are questioning the worth of the great amounts of American currency changing hands each day; yet behind that present-day currency, Mr. President, there is not much, if anything, more than quite alone the good name and credit of the United States Government. The situation is rather bewildering to me.

Through recent years our Government has needed billions of dollars to battle the depression. It has issued its bonds. Each time our bonds have been offered they have been times oversubscribed. The bankers have bought them in great blocks by giving the Government their checks or drafts in exchange for the bonds. The bonds drew and are drawing interest. The bankers, without losing the right to collect interest on these bonds from the Government, have, in turn, taken their bonds to the Federal Reserve banks which they, the bankers, own, and placed them there as collateral against an issue of bright, new Federal Reserve bank notes, for which they paid only the actual cost, virtually, of printing the notes.

This new money the banker has taken back into his bank and used it to buy more Government interest-bearing bonds or to loan to you and to me at the prevailing rates of interest. None are refusing to accept this kind of money; none are doubting its worth; none are calling it flat money or printingpress money; yet, if I understand the process at all, there is behind this special money, in the main, nothing more than the promise of the Government to pay. This money buys groceries; it buys clothing; it pays for homes and pays for land; it pays interest and it pays debts; even the bankers accept it as good money; yet this money is based quite alone, I repeat, upon the credit not of the bankers but the credit of the United States Government.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. NYE. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. I ask the able Senator to return for a moment in his reflections to the query as to where we will get the money to pay the debt of the billion dollars which it is contended by certain persons, and approved by myself, as necessary to the national defense. Knowing as I do the able Senator has been conducting, with the aid of his committee, a most commendable investigation on behalf of the public touching both the question of the production of munitions and the general defense of the country, I ask the Senator would he not say, if the time should come when the country was in peril of its life and called on to defend itself, that it would be rightful to take the money from those who have wrongfully taken it from the people and with that to pay the debt for the defense of this Nation and its protection?

Mr. NYE. Of course, I agree thoroughly with the Senator from Illinois; and I wish he would lend his very able mind to formulating the kind of legislation that will do that thing. He can have little conception, until he has tried, how difficult is the task of making the burden of war rest where it ought to rest. Our committee, within the next few weeks, is going to devote its entire time to the study of that very question; and I hope if the Senator has a valuable thought upon the subject—and I am confident he does have—that he will give the committee the benefit of his knowledge. We can make splendid use of it.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. NYE. I yield.

Mr. KING. Perhaps this will not be quite in harmony with the suggestion made by the Senator from Illinois or the position taken by my friend from North Dakota, but, if he will pardon me. I invite his attention to the fact that, according to the accepted statistics, the people of the United States and their Government and the States and their political subdivisions are owing now at least $175,000,000,000. The fact is that there are only five or six billion dollars of money, so-called "currency", in the country. I wonder where we are to get the money to pay our debts. Supposing that war were declared tomorrow and we needed ten-, fifteen-, twenty-, or forty-billion dollars, we could not get it by taking houses and lands; and if we should lay our hands upon them, under the sovereign power of the Government, we could not find purchasers for them; so that, after all, when it is said that we will take the money from those who have it to the extent of thirty or forty or fifty billion dollars, we are going to have a very difficult task, because they have not got it: the Government would have to take the property, and the property would be just as valueless in the hands of the Government as it would be in the hands of the owners when there is no opportunity for them to make disposition of it.

Mr. NYE. The Senator from Utah clearly senses the very grave difficulty which confronts any man or any group of men who try to find a way and devise a means of making those who enjoy the profit out of war pay the bill for war.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. NYE. I yield.

Mr. BONE. The statement of the Senator from Utah intrigues me. He asks where we are going to get the money. The last war cost $30,000,000,000. The Senator said there was only $5,000,000,000 of money in the country. I am rather curious to know how we translated that $5,000,000,000 into $30,000,000,000 to carry on the war. When that question shall be answered we will have a little more light on our difficulties, it seems to me.

Mr. KING. We obtained a very large part of it from the $15,000,000,000 or $16,000,000,000 or more of tax money of those whose earnings were very great, paid in excess-profits taxes. I am in favor of levying high excess-profits taxes. After we had extracted from the people or taken from them under the taxing power the large amount to which I have referred, there was still a deficit and we then sold bonds to the American people. The American people purchased those bonds by borrowing money from the banks. I know a number of men went to the banks and borrowed money because of their desire to be patriotic, and have not paid the banks to this day the amounts they borrowed. They borrowed money to purchase bonds because the Government could not prosecute the war without money. Unless the bonds could have been sold, they would have been valueless so far as raising funds with which to prosecute the war is concerned.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, we have gone rather far afield from the subject of immediate consideration. I have been seeking to show the bewilderment which was mine over the readiness or willingness of those who have long criticized any departure from so-called "sound money" to take the new present-day money. Even the banker is willing to take it.

Having demonstrated, as I presume I have, my frightful ignorance upon the money question, I come to the Senate frankly seeking knowledge. I join with the thousands of others in asking why, with the Government's credits as the base for the issue of money, the same Government should have to pay toll to bankers when it wants and needs money based upon its own credit.

Desire for a genuine answer to that question, and desire for an airing such as will justify or fail to justify the existing money and banking policy, has prompted me to introduce Senate bill 2162, which has been referred to the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency. I shall soon be asking that committee to give consideration to the measure and a hearing upon its general purpose to such as shall ask to be heard. A companion to this bill, House bill 6382, has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Representative Sweeney, of Ohio.

In offering this measure, which proposes the reform of our monetary system, the bill is presented as a base for consideration. It is presented partly in the hope that authorities will, by attacking it, undertake to establish and prove the merit of the existing system over the one proposed and clear bewildered minds like my own.

Several are the factors which have brought to us the worst economic break-down our Nation has ever known. However, it seems to me that not the least of these factors has been the private control of money and credit. True, this private control has existed through times of prosperity, but not without considerable of bolstering by the Government. Private control has existed in bold defiance of the plain letter of the Constitution of the United States. Some day someone will prepare and present an interesting digest of all the enactments of Congress to improve the facilities affording a medium of exchange down through the many generations living under that Constitution. I am sure such a digest would show constant and insidious encroachments by private privilege against the interest of the whole people.

By way of illustration, let us but look to one of the great efforts extended to restore to Congress larger control, in keeping with its constitutional duty, over our monetary system. Such an effort was that which witnessed the birth of the Federal Reserve Act of 1913. This bank, to all intents and purposes, was to be a central bank controlled by an agency of Congress. Great expectations were raised by it. Of the law, Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, then Chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee of the Senate, said in presenting the bill:

Under this system panics will be made impossible. Anybody actually entitled can get currency, and therefore no man with a deposit in a bank need be afraid that the bank cannot furnish currency while it is honestly and efficiently conducted. This will prevent runs on the banks and in preventing panics it will also prevent unfair and undue constriction of credit, with its consequent paralyzing effect on business and on the productive energies of the Nation. Business enterprises therefore will have a stability unknown in the past history of the United States. Men will not be thrown out of employment wholesale throughout the country by the fright of financial and commercial panic, but finance and commerce will become steady. Men will be regularly and systematically employed. Men will not be ruined by violent and abrupt changes of values. Hundreds of thousands of men will not be suddenly thrown out of employment during these national waves of depression. There will be no national waves of depression nor undue feverish buoyancy. The consequences will be that the national energies of our people will be employed upon a firm basis that will be continuous. It is impossible to exaggerate the extreme importance of this work. We have been studying this problem for many years and have now reached a point of national knowledge and certainty, where we not only know what the difficulties are, but we completely understand how to get stability both to our commerce and to our finance and put this country upon a basis of enduring prosperity.

That was the voice of the then Chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency when reporting the Federal Reserve bill of 1913 to the Senate of the United States.

Our good colleague and friend the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass] at that time was Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House of Representatives. In presenting the Federal Reserve bill to the

The bill enables the Government to resume and exercise function which for 50 years has been confided to private corporations. * * * Now, Mr. Chairman, sure of our ground, yet conscious of human limitations, we submit this bill to the judgment of the House, challenging a fair consideration of its provisions and describe invalidations of the provisions of the pro visions, and devoutly invoking the patriotic cooperation of our colleagues in what should be a great service to the country and a memorable achievement of the Sixty-third Congress.

Our colleague of today and former Senator Owen were not alone in their belief, back in 1913, that in the Federal Reserve Act there had been found at last the way to give Government control over its money, its credit, and its banking. William Jennings Bryan, at that time Secretary of State, summed up the high purposes of the act in these

The bill involves these fundmental principles:

First. The notes issued must be issued by the Government and not by the banks.

Not by the banks.

Second. The issue must be controlled by public servants and not by private institutions and individuals.

The bill, as prepared, observes these requirements. The right of the Government to issue money is not surrendered to the banks; the control over the money so issued is not relinquished by the Government; and the banks are not given a monopoly of the benefits from the issue of these notes.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, with reference to what bill was William Jennings Bryan speaking?

Mr. NYE. With reference to the Federal Reserve Act of 1913.

Shortly before his death, however, Mr. Bryan felt quite differently about the entire matter. He seems to have had occasion to change his opinion of the act, for in 1923, 10 years later, he wrote as follows:

The Federal Reserve Bank, that should have been the farmer's greatest protection, has become his greatest foe. The deflation of the farmer was a crime, deliberately committed, not out of enmity the farmer was a crime, deliberately committed, not out of enmity to the farmer but out of indifference to him. Inflation of prices had encouraged him to buy, and then deflation delivered him into the hands of the money lenders. The Federal bank can be a blessing or a curse, according to its management. If the Wall Street speculators are in control of it, they can drain the agricultural districts and keep up a fictitious prosperity among the members of the plunderbund. While the Federal Reserve Bank Law is the greatest economic reform achieved in the last half century, if not in our national history, it would be better to repeal it, go back to the old conditions, and take our chances with individual financiers than to turn the Federal Reserve Bank over to Wall Street and than to turn the Federal Reserve Bank over to Wall Street and allow its tremendous power to be used for the carrying out of the plans of the Money Trust.

In brief, the great achievement of that period-the great effort to wrest ourselves free from the domination of Shylock-failed, and is today a failure; and that failure we can charge to amendments, administration, and manipulation. How and when shall we get rid of the fetters that bind us? Never until we get back to the money of the Constitution of the United States.

That is what is proposed in Senate bill 2162. The bill is not in the interest of any particular class-merchants, farmers, or industrialists. It is not class legislation. The preamble of the bill states very clearly the purposes of the measure and is self-explanatory.

The bill provides for a Bank of the United States as the sole agency of Congress to issue the money of the United States. It is placed under the control of a board of 48 directors, 1 from each State. These in turn elect an executive board of seven from the membership of the larger board. The powers and duties of the board of directors and of the executive board are set forth in the bill. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency are made ex-officio members of the executive board.

The principal office of the board of directors will be in Washington, with branch offices in each State; and they may provide banking facilities in any trading center denied adequate banking facilities by private bankers.

All existing issues of currency are to be withdrawn and replaced by United States bank notes, which are made legal tender for all debts, public and private. The Bank of the U. S. A. is authorized to buy Government bonds now outstanding, by which a vast amount of tax-exempt funds are House in September 1913 he said, in concluding his re- released and a great burden of interest removed from the necks of the people. The bank of the U.S. A. is authorized and directed to buy the capital stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and their branches and take over the Federal Reserve System in the name of the United States. It is authorized to buy and sell gold, silver, and foreign exchange in the financial markets of the United States.

Aside from the purpose of taking control of our monetary system out of the hands of private corporations, there is also the purpose of taking from such corporations the power to inflate and deflate credit—a power which since 1929 has been shown to be much greater and more dangerous in the hands of ruthless individuals than even the control of actual coin and currency.

My hand has been only one of many which have worked for several weeks in the drafting of this bill. While I gladly sponsor the legislation, I shall not seek to hog credit for such merit as it may prove to have. In acknowledging this cooperation of others, I desire to make special reference to one who has been proving himself a giant in fields of reform and in education-one who, though I do not always and fully agree with him, must be acknowledged as an unceasing and uncompromising champion of social justice in our land. Repeatedly has he challenged a selfish order. Repeatedly has he asked questions which men seem to choose to ignore in the hope that the questioner will ultimately spend himself and make unnecessary any direct answer, while those who ought to answer respond to his charges and questions by resort to such name calling as "Catiline", "Judas", "prostitute", "lunatic", "Pied Piper", and "demagogue." I have reference to the Reverend Charles E. Coughlin and his associates.

It seems to me that those who so bitterly denounce Father Coughlin and others who advocate challenging the banking crowd, which has so long controlled the very lifeblood of an economic structure, might take the time to try seriously to answer the things he is saying and seek to correct the public mind, if he has, as they say, poisoned that public mind on the money, credit, and banking question. There are far too many of us who believe that the Detroit man, who has dared challenge openly and public American plutocracy, has been operating on solid, if embarrassing, ground. Moreover, he seems to be rather well reinforced by recent decisions by our Supreme Court concerning the power of Congress over the monetary basis of our country.

If in the past the Nation has accomplished little, it is chiefly because we have entrusted money policy to those who had not the interests of the people at heart. We have said to the banker, "You are a superman. We trust you to handle this intricate problem." We forget that in the far greater problem of building a republican form of government we entrusted that task to men who had no ex-. perience in rule of the people and who were guided alone by a desire to secure the blessings of liberty and of rule by the people.

I am not at all underrating the ability and power of the opponents of any such measure as Senate bill 2162. To bring about such a reform as this bill proposes is to challenge all the combined powers of aggregated wealth with all their plutocratic, dominating, and conscienceless methods of warfare. Secretary of the Treasury Chase, in Lincoln's day, made a prophecy which is about to be realized. He foresaw a time such as this-

When the people will be arrayed on one side and the banks on the other in a conflict such as we have never seen in this country.

We must enter the fight or submit to a system which Horace Greeley foresaw to be as cruel as that of the old system of chattel slavery. Will we permit this to go until the Republic is destroyed, as was feared by Lincoln? Will this generation see our independence, as William Pitt prophesied, 'a mere phantom "? The challenge is upon us, and to every good citizen throughout this country.

What will we do? Will we agree that the citizens of this great land shall be manacled and bound in economic servitude, or will we demand that they shall be freed-free to toil and labor and enjoy the fruits of their intelligence and | thrift? Then, Mr. President, it is high time that we sought the end of a control that has men and governments paying tribute and paying tolls that will ultimately break the backs of men and of governments.

I hope Senate bill 2162 will have the earnest, conscientious consideration to which I believe it is entitled.

I ask unanimous consent that Senate bill 2162 may be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEELY in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill referred to is as follows:

A bill to restore to Congress its constitutional power to issue money and regulate the value thereof; to provide for the orderly distribution of the abundance with which a beneficent Creator has blessed us; to establish and maintain the purchasing power of money at a fixed and equitable level; to restore the values of property to just and equitable levels; to increase the prices of agricultural products to a point where they will yield the cost of production plus a fair profit to the farmer; to provide a living and just annual wage which will enable every citizen willing to work and capable of working to maintain and educate his family on an increasing level or standard of living; to repay debts with dollars of equal value; to lift in part the burden of taxation; and for other purposes and for other purposes

Whereas the Constitution of the United States in article 1, section 8, clause 5, provides that Congress shall have the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof and of foreign coins; and

whereas the present practice of issuing book credits by commercial banks, and transferring the title of said credits by check, provides a supplementary medium of exchange, abrogating the said constitutional provision and establishing a separate, private, and independent monetary system; and

Whereas the permanent welfare of the people and the protection of the economic life of the Nation are dependent on the establishment of a monetary system wholly subject to the control of Congress which will promote the interests of agriculture and labor, of industry, trade, commerce, and finance for the economic well-being of all citizens by the maintenance of price levels which will avoid excessive expansion or disastrous contraction and which will avoid excessive expansion or disastrous contraction and which will protect the national credit and currency at home and in the world markets: Now, therefore

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby created a central bank, which shall be known as the "Bank of the United States of America", which may be abbreviated as the Bank of the U.S. A.

Ica", which may be abbreviated as the Bank of the U. S. A.

SEC. 2. The Bank of the U. S. A., so created, shall be the sole agency of the Congress of the United States to issue the money of the United States, to control the value thereof, and the value of foreign moneys, and it shall be the custodian of all monetary stocks and of all moneys and the guardian of the public credit of the United States. It shall be the central depository of all reserve funds of all banks, banking institutions, and banking firms under the jurisdiction of the United States. It shall be the sole fiscal agent of the United States Government. All acts of Congress providing for the issue of circulating notes by national banks are hereby repealed. hereby repealed.

hereby repealed.

SEC. 3. (a) There is hereby created a governing board of the Bank of the U. S. A., which shall be known as the "Board of Directors of the Bank of the U. S. A.", which shall be the monetary authority and agent of Congress of the Government of the United States. The Board of Directors of the Bank of the U. S. A. shall be composed of one representative from each State, elected by the people thereof at the same time and by the same method as Representatives in Congress, for a period of 12 years. Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided by lot equally into six classes; the seats of the directors of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; the seats of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year; the third class at the expiration of the sixth year; the fourth class at the expiration of the tenth year; the sixth class at the expiration of the twelfth year; so that one-sixth may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen by resignation or otherwise the executive of the State affected may make a temporary appointment until the next general election to fill the vacancy. The Board of Directors shall choose from among their own number an executive board consisting of seven members and including a governor and Directors shall choose from among their own number an executive board consisting of seven members and including a governor and a vice governor selected by a majority of the 48 directors. The salary of each director shall be the same as that of an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States and be paid out of the funds of the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated. The directors shall not during their term of office hold any direct or indirect financial interest in any bank, banking institution, banking firm, financial institution, or any firm or corporation as stockholder, director, or officer either in the United States or in any foreign country. The Board of Directors shall assemble on the first Monday in December and remain in session at least nine months during each year. A majority shall constitute a quorum. The Board may determine the rules for its proceedings, and Congress may, by the process of impeachment, remove a director. No director shall, during the term for which he is elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States or of the State or Territories or possessions, nor be a Member of either House of Congress. Any director shall be eligible for reelection. Upon attaining the age of 70 years, each director shall retire, with an annual pension for the rest of his natural life equal to $1,000 per year for each year of service or major fraction thereof: Provided, That the maximum annual pension shall be $12,000, which shall be paid out of the funds of the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

(b) The Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency shall be ex-officio members of the Executive Board of the Bank of the U.S.A.

Bank of the U. S. A.

(c) The members of the Federal Reserve Board at the time of the enactment of this act shall serve as members of the Executive Board of the Bank of the U. S. A. until their successors are elected and qualify, as herein specified.

SEC. 4.(a) The Board of Directors of the Bank of the U. S. A. is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of a president and vice president and such other executive officers, examiners, economists, and other experts as may be necessary to carry out its functions under this act, without regard to provisions of other laws applicable to the employment and compensation of officers and employees of the United States; and, in addition thereto, the Board may, subject to the civil-service laws, appoint such further officers and employees as in their judgment may be necessary, and fix their salaries in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

(b) The Board of Directors of the Bank of the U. S. A. shall have its principal office in Washington, D. C. It shall establish branch offices in each State of the United States and in its Terribranch offices in each State of the United States and in its Territories and possessions and may establish agencies to conduct a general business of banking and to provide banking facilities in any recognized trading center of the United States which is denied adequate banking facilities by private institutions. It shall formulate policies and regulations for the management of such branch offices and agencies. Branch offices shall be designated by States, as Maine branch, Bank of the U. S. A.; California branch, Bank of the U. S. A., and so forth.

SEC. 5. (a) After the passage of this act no currency shall be issued under the authority of the United States, except notes of the Bank of the U. S. A. of the same size as the present Federal Reserve notes and of such denominations as may be determined by the Executive Board of the Bank of the U. S. A., which said bank notes shall be full legal tender at face value for all debts public and private within the United States or its Territories or possessions.

(b) Within I year from the passage of this act, all present Federal Reserve notes, Federal Reserve bank notes, national-bank notes, gold certificates, silver certificates, Treasury notes of 1890, and United States notes issued and outstanding, shall be recalled for redemption, and those turned in for redemption shall be retired and threed states notes issued and obstanding, shall be recained for redemption, and those turned in for redemption shall be retired and destroyed, and notes of the Bank of the U. S. A. herein provided shall be issued in exchange, it being the purpose of this act to substitute the notes of the Bank of the U. S. A. herein provided for all other forms of paper currency of the United States.

SEC. 6. In the exercise of its jurisdiction as agent of the Congress of the United States to issue money and to control the value thereof, the executive board of the Bank of the U. S. A. may from time to time order and direct the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to engrave or cause to be engraved, and to print or cause to be printed, United States bank notes as provided in this act, in such quantities and denominations as the said board may deem necessary, and to hold the said United States bank notes subject to further order of the said board.

SEC. 7. The Secretary of the Treasury of the United States shall, upon receipt of directions or instructions or orders from the executive board, duly authenticated in such manner as may be prescribed by the board of directors, execute the said directions, instructions, or orders forthwith, by engraving, printing, and discretions of the East of the East prescribed by the board of directors, execute the said directions, instructions, or orders forthwith, by engraving, printing, and disposing of the said notes of the Bank of the U.S. A. as specified in said duly authenticated directions, instructions, or orders, and the said duly authenticated directions, instructions, or orders shall at all times be considered and construed to be the direct acts of the Congress of the United States through its duly authorized agent, the Bank of the U.S. A.

SEC. 8. (a) Immediately upon the passage of this act, the Bank of the U. S. A. is hereby authorized and directed as soon as possible to purchase the capital stock of the 12 Federal Reserve banks and branches, and agencies thereof, and to pay to the owners thereof in the notes of the Bank of the U. S. A. the paid-in value of said stock, with 6 percent per annum interest from the last dividend date.

(b) That all member banks of the Federal Reserve System are (b) That all member banks of the Federal Reserve System are hereby required and directed to deliver forthwith to the Bank of the U.S. A. all the stock of the said Federal Reserve banks owned or controlled by them, together with any and all claims of any kind or nature in and to the capital assets of the said Federal Reserve banks, it being the intention of this act to vest in the Government of the United States the absolute and unconditional ownership of the said Federal Reserve banks.

SEC. 9. Upon the purchase of the stock of any Federal Reserve bank by the Bank of the U. S. A. as herein provided, the said Federal Reserve bank shall immediately become a branch of the Bank of the U. S. A. and subject in every respect to the jurisdiction of the board of directors of the Bank of the U. S. A. herein provided for, and the terms of the officers of the board of governors of the said Federal Reserve bank shall immediately cease and terminate: Provided, however, That the chairman of the board of governors of the said Federal Reserve bank and all the executive officers or employees thereof shall continue to perform their customary duties and obligations in the operation of said Federal Reserve bank until their successors shall be appointed by the elected board of directors of the Bank of the U.S. A.

Sec. 10. (a) All individuals, firms, associations, or corporations engaged in the business of banking as defined by law and among other things receiving deposits of money or credit from the citizens or firms, corporations, or associations of any State and transferring or transporting said money or credit or the title thereto to other banks or individuals firms associations or corporations. to other banks or individuals, firms, associations, or corporations of any other State or States, Territories, and possessions of the United States, are hereby declared to be engaged in interstate commerce, and as such are subject to Federal jurisdiction and to the jurisdiction of the Bank of the U. S. A. and all the provisions commerce, and as such are subject to Federal jurisdiction and to the jurisdiction of the Bank of the U. S. A. and all the provisions of this act.

(b) Within I year after the passage of this act, all banking institutions under the jurisdiction of the Bank of the U. S. A. shall be required to keep on deposit with the Bank of the U. S. A. or in its vaults, United States bank notes herein provided for a full 100 percent of its deposits which are subject to check and payable on demand; and, in addition thereto, it shall keep within its vaults the further sum equal to 5 percent upon all savings or investment deposits commonly known as "time" deposits.

(c) For the purpose of creating the lawful money reserve hereinabove required, the Bank of the U. S. A. shall purchase from banks in the United States bonds of the United States Government.

SEC. 11. The Bank of the U. S. A. is hereby authorized to purchase or sell gold, silver, and foreign exchange in the financial markets of the United States, at such times and in such quantities as in its discretion is necessary to carry out the purposes of this act, namely, to regulate the value of money of the United States and of foreign countries.

SEC. 12. (a) The Bank of the U. S. A. shall have jurisdiction over and shall control and supervise all banking institutions whatsoever of the United States and territories and possessions thereof, subject to law, and shall have the power to prescribe such rules and regulations not inconsistent with the law as it may deem desirable for the safe and proper conduct of the banks and banking institutions within its jurisdiction.

(b) The Comptroller of the Currency and all officers of the Government of the United States exercising any supervisory powers or desirable for the safe and proper conduct of the banks and banking institutions within its jurisdiction.

(b) The Comptroller of the Currency and all officers of the Government of the United States exercising any supervisory powers or duties over the banks of the United States, or any of them, shall carry out and perform such rules and regulations for the conduct of banks and banking institutions in the United States or Territories or possessions thereof as may, from time to time, be prescribed by the Bank of the U. S. A. through its duly designated officers.

SEC. 13. Directly upon the passage of this act, the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor shall be transferred to the Bank of the U. S. A., and such Bureau shall thereafter be under the supervision of the board of directors of the Bank of the U. S. A. The statistical department of the present Federal Reserve Board, together with the statistical department of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Secretary of the Treasury, and of the Treasurer of the United States, shall all be consolidated with the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and the name of the consolidated bureau and departments shall be the Bureau of United States Statistics. The duties of said Bureau for bureaus and departments consolidated therein, in addition to all those now prescribed by law, shall be to collect, assemble, and analyze authentic data, for the purpose of determining the true and correct relation of the total amount of money in actual circulation, including both currency and credit money, commonly called "demand deposits", to prices, wages, industry and ing the true and correct relation of the total amount of money in actual circulation, including both currency and credit money, commonly called "demand deposits", to prices, wages, industry and commerce, the standard of living, employment and unemployment, to the end that the board of directors of the Bank of the U. S. A and the executive board thereof may scientifically and accurately determine the rate at which progressive additions to the stock of circulating money, including coin, currency, and credit, must be made in order to maintain an even and stable purchasing power, and to promote a constantly rising standard of living for the people of this Nation, unlimited except by the extent of natural resources and the willingness of the people to work.

Sec. 14. It is hereby made mandatory upon the board of directors

SEC. 14. It is hereby made mandatory upon the board of directors of the Bank of the U. S. A. and the executive board thereof to of the Bank of the U. S. A. and the executive board thereof to provide such stable purchasing power of money and such equitable price levels, first, by the progressive purchase of the bonds of the United States and the creation of the 100-percent reserves behind demand deposits, and, further, if necessary, by increasing the money in circulation by paying the extraordinary and then the ordinary expenses of Government by currency issue until the average commodity price level reaches the index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics for 1926. The board of directors of the Bank of the U. S. A. will determine a true and equitable commodity price level to succeed that of 1926, and it is made mandatory on the board of directors to provide issues of currency which will maintain this level

SEC. 15. The board of directors of the Bank of the U.S. A. shall recommend to Congress the retirement through taxation of such excesses of currency as may be necessary to keep the price level from rising above the level prescribed by section 14 of this act.

SEC. 16. All laws or parts of laws in conflict with this act are bereby repealed.

SEC. 17. If any provision of this act or the application of such provision to any person or circumstance shall be held invalid, the remainder of this act or the application of such provisions to persons or circumstances other than those as to which it is held invalid shall not be affected thereby.

Sec. 18. This act shall take effect July 1, 1935, or sooner by proclamation of the President.

Sec. 19. This act may be cited as the "National Banking and Monetary Control Act of 1935."

THE N. R. A. AND THE ANTITRUST LAWS

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, upon yesterday Mr. Donald Richberg testified before the Committee on Finance. Ordinarily I should not discuss hearings which are going on before committees; but the statements made by Mr. Richberg have been published far and wide, as was proper, and I think it appropriate to refer to some of his statements.

His statement covered some three or four matters which are of very great concern to the public, as I take it. I cannot agree with the views which he expresses. I think it worth while, therefore, to take the time to present the other side of the question.

In this statement Mr. Richberg says:

The general proposition that the effect of the codes upon small enterprises has been harmful cannot be sustained. The steady decline of business failures, particularly among small concerns, since the beginning of N. R. A., is a complete refutation of this charge.

Mr. Richberg denies the effect of the codes upon small business, and contents himself by citing figures as to failures during the last year or year and a half. The question is not so simple as that.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me to have a quorum called?

Mr. BORAH. I yield. Mr. GLASS. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Costigan	La Follette	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Couzens	Lewis	Reynolds
Austin	Cutting	Logan	Robinson
Bachman	Dickinson	Lonergan	Russell
Bailey	Dieterich	Long	Schall
Bankhead	Donahey	McAdoo	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Duffy	McCarran	Sheppard
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Shipstead
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Smith
Bone	George	McNary	Steiwer
Borah	Gerry	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Brown	Gibson	Metcalf	Thomas, Utah
Bulkley	Glass	Minton	Townsend
Bulow	Gore	Moore	Trammell
Burke	Guffey	Murphy	Truman
Byrd	Hale	Murray	Tydings
Byrnes	Harrison	Neely	Vandenberg
Capper	Hastings	Norbeck	Van Nuys
Carey	Hatch	Norris	Wagner
Clark	Hayden	Nye	Walsh
Connally	Johnson	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Coolidge	Keyes	Pittman	White
Coneland	King	Pone

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Ninety-one Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, we will soon be considering the bill to extend the National Recovery Act, therefore candid debate upon the subject cannot be out of place at any

There are three particular matters which interest me and which Mr. Richberg covered in his testimony. They are: The situation with reference to small business, the restoration of the antitrust and antimonopoly laws, and the question of whether or not, if they are restored, they can be enforced. In his statement before the committee with reference to small business, Mr. Richberg said:

The general proposition that the effect of the codes upon small enterprises has been harmful cannot be sustained. The steady decline of business failures, particularly among small concerns, since the beginning of the N. R. A., is a complete refutation of

The effect of the codes upon small business cannot be adequately tested by R. G. Dun & Co.'s reports as to failures. It is not alone the question of how many-and there have been enough—have actually been driven out of business, but the question is whether the small business man shall be compelled to live upon the ragged edge of bankruptcy while the larger business interests under the same codes are enjoving vast profits.

A year ago when this matter was up for discussion as to the effect of the codes upon small business. I received thousands of letters from small business men stating the effect | the code maker being the large concerns refuse to allow relief of the codes upon their businesses. When the matter approached us again I sent out letters to these same business men asking them to give me their views after another year's experience.

Literally hundreds of replies to these letters have come back advising me that the business had liquidated; that this or that firm which had written me at the time had gone out of business. In my opinion it will be found that that is only a slight indication of the effect of these codes upon small

I have been able to discover only one code which seems to me to effectively protect the small business interests in that code, and that seems to be true in that particular instance. But in the other instances the codes have been framed by large business, written by large business, and enforced by large business, and it has been utterly impossible, however desirous those in authority might be, to prevent the large business interests from really directing and controlling the course of business in the particular industry. The result has been that the small business man is constantly struggling against actual bankruptcy while the larger interests, in the same industry, are enjoying sometimes as high as 100 and 160 percent net profit. That is the phase of the matter which concerns me, not as to the particular number which have failed, but as to those who have been able to remain in business. Is it fair, is it just to place the small business man under a system which either forces him into bankruptcy or keeps him at a point near bankruptcy while the large business concerns enjoy large profits.

I am going to call the attention of the Senate to the letters which came to me in one mail, and that this morning's mail-and only to a portion of those-in order to give an indication of the struggle which small business is making under the codes which have been written by the large business interests. And let me say that the fact that these codes have been written by large business is natural. It is almost inevitable. They were the ones who would be present at the time of the framing of the code. The small man could not afford to be there. If he could get there, as one of them wrote me, he could not afford to stay indefinitely until the code was framed. Therefore it was natural, it was inevitable that when the final shaping of the code occurred it would be such as was framed and conceived to be in the interests of large business.

I am calling attention to a few of these letters in order that I may present what I conceive to be the real effect of these codes upon small business. I have a letter here from the Globe Carved Moulding Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich., under date of March 4, in which the writer says:

If you want to see monopoly at its height please refer to Code No. 260 of the ornamental moulding, carving, and turning industry. Especially note section 4 of article 9, and also article 10. Those clauses were put in the code through the determined insistence of the largest operators of our industry. In order to let you behind the scenes we are quoting from bulletin no. 6 of the Ornamental Moulding, Carving, and Turning Association:

"1. The Design Registration Bureau of the Code Authority was launched with a rush of 65 registrations in the first month.

"2. You can protect your outlet from cut-price duplication in cheap products.

cheap products.

"3. You can partially remove a registered product from price competition and to a large degree stabilize your prices."

We have written the Code Authority in Washington several times and explained our predicament in detail. Although it is true that we received an answer each time to our correspondence, the answer was worthless as the N. R. A. dodged the issue entirely.

We have come to the conclusion that the N. R. A. is a farce and should be abolished by Congress. The good points of the N. R. A., namely, abolishment of child labor, minimum wages and maximum hours, and collective bargaining could be salvaged from the wreckage and placed in another bureau for enforcement. We would also like to see the Sherman Antitrust Act restored with sharper teeth than ever before.

That illustrates the situation of the small business man when he has a cause of complaint; he is compelled to take it up by mail. The large interests are on the ground to explain and to nullify the charges, and the result generally is that the small business man receives no real relief from the conditions which surround him. I have hundreds of letters relating how vain have been their efforts to get relief because or change.

I read another letter which I received this morning:

We have been in business since 1913, and have a good record and reputation for service and square dealing.

All of our employees have been kept on the pay roll during the entire depression, no one having suffered distress or having to apply

I should say that this is from the Pittsburgh Carbon Brush Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.

We were placed in the position of either submitting to the dicta-We were placed in the position of either submitting to the dictation of some of the larger units in our industry or having the price of some of our essential materials used in the manufacture of our products raised to prohibitive figures. We refused to submit.

At present we are unable to purchase these materials at the same prices as other companies in the same line of business, and we feel that there has been a discrimination against us.

In other words, one of the methods by which the large interests crush the small business man is to make it impossible or difficult for him to secure the material which it is necessary for him to have at any reasonable figure or figure which he can afford to pay.

We have protested for over one and a half years and submitted statements at the hearings had in Washington January 4 and February 8, 1934, in addition to filing a brief under date of February 21, 1934, and writing numerous letters to various officials of the N. R. A., all of which cost us considerable time and money.

We have also requested the National Electrical Manufacturers association, which is our code authority to take stone toward.

We have also requested the National Electrical Manufacturers Association, which is our code authority, to take steps toward getting us fair and impartial treatment at the hands of those who control our essential raw materials, but nothing has been done. The companies from which we must purchase these materials are members of the National Electrical Manufacturers Association, which we understand is essentially a private organization organized for the profit and for furthering the interest of its members. It has had delegated to it authority which, in effect, amounts to legislative authority which can be used to make it extremely difficult for small companies like ours. cult for small companies like ours.

The large business interests not only have the power to make the code and legislate upon the subject but the extraordinary situation prevails that when a small business man violates a code he is subject to fine and to other penalties. I suppose that nowhere, in no country, has it ever before been an established law that large business interests might in reality write codes which, in fact, become laws, the violation of which by some small business man would send him to jail. Neither Charles the First nor Stalin of today had the slightest conception of arbitrary government.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BORAH. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Yesterday, in his testimony before the Finance Committee in the hearings on the proposed extension of the National Industrial Recovery Act, Mr. Donald Richberg testified, in effect, that the antitrust laws have for a long time been largely unenforced and ineffective. We all recognize a certain measure of truth in that general observation. For one, I shall be obliged if the able Senator from Idaho will state to what extent he has concluded that the antitrust laws were effective before the enactment of the N. I. R. A. and to what extent, in his opinion, efforts to enforce the antitrust laws have been in the nature of shadow

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, that is one of the subjects which I indicated I should touch upon before I closed my remarks.

I read further from the same communication:

We feel that the odds are greatly against us, as our large com-

We feel that the odds are greatly against us, as our large competitors and those who control our sources of supply are in a position to indirectly control our business under the present set-up. Ours is a long story. * * * The situation at present is as bad as ever, and unless we get relief we will be obliged to consider liquidating our business, which provides steady employment for 11 persons, when our present inventory is exhausted.

We believe the strict enforcement of the antitrust laws and Federal Trade regulations will help small business organizations like ours.

I am not unmindful of the fact, Mr. President, that there are those who, like General Johnson, believe that the time has come for the small business man to pass out of the picture. That is their philosophy; that is their belief. General Johnson declared last night in his speech-and I was happy to find that I had not misstated his views-that advancing civilization would necessarily eliminate the small business man in this country, and as I understood his speech from the rather inadequate report in the newspapers, said that we in the United States would come to be controlled and dominated by vast corporate interests, and the small man would necessarily be eliminated from our civilization. I pay General Johnson this well-deserved tribute: He is candid and he is courageous. No one need be in doubt as to his views and opinions. His philosophy is cold and cruel and false, but his unfaltering defense of it excites my admiration.

It may be that General Johnson is wise enough to know what is going to happen; it may be that, as Shakespeare said, he can—

* look into the seeds of time
 And say which grain will grow and which will not.

It may be that the small man will ultimately be crushed out of our civilization. I do not think so; I do not believe so; I pray God it may not be so; but let us suppose that it will be so. It is not so as yet, and so long as the small business man is here he is entitled to fair treatment; he is entitled to the protection of just and equal laws. I am not contending today, Mr. President, against corporations as such; I am not contending against big business as such; I am contending against the practices and methods of some corporations and some big businesses, which practices and methods are adopted for the purpose of willfully destroying small business. I am contending against the practices and methods of large business which no one except one possessing the greed of a highwayman would employ, and no one who did not believe in the highwayman's technique would defend.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, the Senator might go further and say that General Johnson also stated that the powers of Government should be used and exercised to bring about the very result of which the Senator complains.

Mr. BORAH. Yes; I understand that to be General Johnson's view, that not only are we to admit the proposition of the effect of big businesses upon small businesses in and of themselves as between themselves, but that it is the province of Government to come to the aid of large business and to eliminate small business. Why? Because it is not economically sound to have small business the independent business; the small businesses have no place in the great modern scheme of pelf and plunder, of greed and grandeur.

Mr. President, we have been confronted by the question of small business and the little man since the dawn of civilization. He is still here. There was a time in the history of England when the monarch, the king, during his hunting days, had the right to kill two peasant workmen as a matter of sport. It was an inconsequential matter. His destruction of the small man added to the pleasure and the ambition of the greedy. There were those in those days who defended that kind of a thing. It was thought that the small man, the inconsequential peasant, was an uneconomic factor, an unnecessary factor, and that if it suited the pleasure and comfort of the king in the exercise of the kingly power, he could be eliminated for the sport of the king. There are peasants in England today but if any king of England should on his hunting day, as a matter of sport, kill a peasant workman, public opinion of England would drive him from the throne. Now there are corporations, not all of which proceed upon the same theory and to gratify like

While you may defend the economic philosophy of eliminating small business you cannot change the eternal laws of right and wrong; you cannot change the laws of humanity and inhumanity; you cannot change the laws of brutality and decency. They will ultimately triumph. There is something in the eternal fitness of things besides the economic man—there is the man with a soul.

Those who are speaking for small business today are seeking just laws, humane laws, laws which recognize the common dictates of justice under which small business may have an opportunity to operate. If it be true that small business is making its last struggle for existence, even so it should be permitted to make it under fair laws, under just laws, under laws which protect it in its rights. A government which would not protect the weak against the strong would be a disgrace to the map of the world. A government which would declare or admit that it could not, as some claim, protect the weak against the strong would be a libel upon the name of government.

Therefore, I say to General Johnson and his friends, it is not merely a question of big business or of corporate existence; it is a question of establishing right rules of conduct for corporations and big businesses and which will prevent great economic power from being unjustly and brutally used against small business.

In many instances the corporations today are not to be criticized, and nobody desires to criticize them, but those corporations or those great economic combines which use their power unjustly for the purpose of willful destruction of a small competitor should be restrained, controlled, or, if necessary, destroyed just as you destroy the man who is running amuck against organized society.

Let me read further. I cannot take the time of the Senate to read all these letters, but I am going to have them put in the Record. They are for the purpose, as I said, of illustrating not the contention that large corporations as such or big business as such should be destroyed or eliminated, but that they should be required to utilize their power in accordance with the ordinary rules of justice and fair dealing.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator for a moment there?

Mr. BORAH. Yes.

Mr. FLETCHER. I do so not for the purpose of taking issue with the Senate; for I quite agree with the general position he is stating, and I am in harmony with it; but by way of giving an experience which may be explained on one ground or another—I am not saying how it should be explained.

For over 20 years I have been a member of the Joint Committee on Printing. That committee has to do with the letting of contracts for supplies for the Government Printing Office. Its service is something like that of a board of directors of the Government Printing Office. We annually advertise for bids, for instance, for paper. We prepare specifications and call for bids and let the contracts, under the usual rules, to the lowest and best bidder, and so forth. Up until last year we usually had from 10 to a dozen bidders for this paper supply. The cost of this paper is about $3,000,000 per annum. We usually let the contract either for 6 months or 12 months. Those bids came from large plants, large manufacturers, and 10 or a dozen were all the bids we could get. The small man never bid, because he was afraid he would have to bid against the big fellows and he might bid too low and lose much money on his contract if he succeeded in obtaining a Government contract.

At the last opening of bids there were fifty-odd bidders—I think 58 bidders—representing over a hundred manufacturing plants in the country. Today, under the operations of the N. R. A. or the authority in control of it, the industry, it seems, have gotten together and have ascertained the actual cost price of manufacturing the paper and under the rules of the N. R. A. no bidder can bid less than the cost price.

The result is that nearly all of them bid practically the same thing, except that there is a rule which allows a bidder to bid 15 percent less than the cost price or the minimum figure. The result has been that the small plants have come into the field and are seeking Government contracts. The small enterprises, the new enterprises, the men who have heretofore been afraid to bid and did not bid, are coming into the field. As I said, they nearly all bid practically the same thing, but new bidders are coming in all over the country. Mills and manufacturers to the number of 110 or 115 were represented in the last letting of contracts March 4. Usually we have had about 10 or 12 big plants and the small manufacturers remained out of the field.

have an opportunity to operate. If it be true that small | I merely mention this as our experience and observation business is making its last struggle for existence, even so it for the Senator to consider in connection with the question of whether the small man is being eliminated or whether he is being taken care of. For the first time in all my experience we are now getting bids from small plants, small enterprises, new plants, where we did not get any such offers before

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, it may be that under the order which the President made-and very wisely madethat there might be a bidding down of a certain percent, the small man has had an opportunity to get in on the business. There may be instances of that kind, and I am not, of course, undertaking to say there may not be exceptions to the general rule which I am invoking. I do not know about that.

As I said in the beginning, there is one industry where I think they have succeeded. The small men got together themselves and had brains enough and energy enough to write their code; but they are the only ones I know of who have been able to do it.

Mr. President, I read one more letter before I pass from this subject:

I wish to give you the following information about the Owens Illinois Glass Co., who are acting today as one of the most vicious monopolies in industrial field. You can confirm any of this if you so desire:

They own the largest bottle factories in the country.
They own the American Bottle Co.
Through William Levis, their president, they own the largest block of stock in their largest competitor, the Hazel-Atlas Glass Co.
They have a working monopoly on beverage, milk, and prescription bottles, the three most profitable lines. They own or control every perfected glass-bottle manufacturing machine and obtain royalties thereon. They own a bottle-cap company. They own a corrugated paper-box factory. Through William Levis they own a large part of stock in the largest paper company in the country. They own a company making and selling bottle machinery of all kinds, including a coffee-packing machine for which their bottles alone can be used. They own a scientific glass manufacturing company.

That would be an ideal corporation in the mind of General Johnson. That is what he conceives to be a proper economic unit. That meets all the demands of his philosophy.

They dictate all prices to all glass companies and require adherence through the Glass Container Corporation. They obtain it by quoting their own prices on all big business and by retaliation wherever necessary. They use business bribery in sales methods. They own a large part of stock in the National Distillers Co. and Schenley Products Co. and control the placing of their bottle

They own other liquor businesses and several large breweries. They own other liquor businesses and several large breweries. Through William Levis and his holding company, the Illinois Glass Corporation, they have acquired great power and wealth. They boast of their influence with the present administration. They dominate the Glass Code Authority.

It is utterly impossible for a small business like mine to contend against such a situation in view of the fact that they may fix prices and do fix prices in accordance with what they think is necessary for a profit for themselves.

for a profit for themselves.

Mr. President, passing from that issue, I wish to call attention to the statement of Mr. Richberg.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. BORAH. I yield. Mr. GLASS. If it will not divert the Senator, permit me to say I should be glad to furnish the Senator with many scores of letters of the same nature as those he has presented.

Let me in a word give a brief illustration of General Johnson's attitude that perhaps would be more enlightening than his own speech night before last over the radio. In person I took to General Johnson, while he was at the head of the N. R. A., a complaint from some cannery factories in Virginia setting forth that in the preceding 2 years they had lost a total of $17,000 in their business, and that if compelled to operate under the N. R. A. code which had been presented to them they would simply have to go out of business entirely and refuse to employ the people in their locality.

General Johnson's response to that complaint was that they ought to go out of business; that concerns which could not afford to pay the wages which were being paid by the larger competitors of those small canneries had no business in the trade.

I again presented a case to General Johnson in person of two young women in my own town who had initiated and built up, by hard work and intelligent activities, a handbag business. They were paying the minimum wage required under the handbag code, but the code authorities in New York, representing big business in that particular manufacturing industry, were insisting that they should pay the same wage in this little rural town of 45,000 people that prevailed in New York City, with its millions of people, and were constantly threatening the two young women with fine and imprisonment if they did not pay that wage. The young women protested that it would drive them out of business.

I will say to the credit of General Johnson that he most definitely promised me that the young women should not be molested any more. They were molested again by the same code authority and threatened by the same code authority. Then I received, not from General Johnson, because he was ill in the hospital, but from his secretary, who said she was entirely familiar with the circumstances, a promise that they should not be molested again. But they were molested again and again. Whether they have been driven out of business or not I am not advised.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I have no doubt these illustrations could be multiplied many times. I have never myself had the pleasure of personal contact with General Johnson upon these subjects, but I know the effects of the operation of the codes.

Mr. GLASS. These are two of scores of cases that I shall be glad to submit to the Senator if he wants to present them to the committee.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, Mr. Richberg said, in subdivision 12 of his statement:

The present exemption from provisions of the antitrust laws should be restricted and defined so as to provide that cooperative activity, legalized by code provision, shall be lawful only when the codes themselves have been written in compliance with the antimonopoly requirements of the act.

I do not know exactly what that means. There is no amplification, there is no explanation, and I do not know with certainty that I understand the statement of Mr. Richberg. I infer, however, that he proposes to leave the matter precisely where it was left when the National Recovery Act was passed. That is exactly the position which was taken at the time the National Recovery Act was passed—that the code should be binding only when written in compliance with the antimonopoly requirements of the act.

It will be recalled that when the National Recovery Act came before the Senate I offered, in addition to the provision with reference to monopoly, the following amendment:

Provided, That such code or codes shall not permit combina-tions in restraint of trade, price-fixing, or other monopolistic

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. STEIWER. Is that the amendment which was agreed to by the Senate and lost in conference?

Mr. BORAH. That is the amendment which was agreed to by the Senate, but afterward taken out in conference. Big business interests made a violent protest against it.

It was contended upon the part of those who were supporting the conference report that if these codes were in contravention to the inhibition of monopoly they would be void. In that discussion I said:

It is difficult for me to understand what was in the minds of the conferees. It must be that the conferees and those sponsoring the bill are of the opinion that price-fixing is not a monopolistic practice; it must be their view that combinations in restraint of trade are not monopolistic practices. I can perceive no clarity in the amendment as the conferees have changed it and as it is in the amendment as the conferees have changed it and as it is now found in the bill, except upon the theory that those sponsoring the measure are of the opinion that neither price-fixing nor combinations in restraint of trade are monopolistic practices. In other words, it is the view, I take it, of those in charge of the bill that under the bill there may be formulated programs of price-fixing and that there may be combinations in restraint of trade and there may be conspiracies in restraint of trade—

And still not be in violation of the National Recovery Act.

The only answer I had to that was by the able Senator | from New York [Mr. WAGNER], who said that if combinations in restraint of trade, conspiracies in restraint of trade, and price-fixing were monopolistic, then they were inhibited by the National Recovery Act. If they were not, then they were not inhibited by it. And thus surveying the act, it has been ever since, and monopoly has passed under

Mr. President, combinations in restraint of trade are a most powerful instrument in the hands of monopoly. Conspiracies in restraint of trade are a powerful instrument in the hands of monopoly. Price-fixing is a powerful instrument in the hands of monopoly. In fact, they are the instrumentalities by which monopoly secures and maintains its power. By means of these, monopolies are created; by means of these, monopolies are maintained; and by means of these, small competitors are destroyed.

If I understand Mr. Richberg correctly, he is not proposing to change that. All he proposes to do is to say, as was said then, that if any of these things is in contravention to monopoly, the codes in that respect shall be void.

Notwithstanding that interpretation placed upon the National Recovery Act when it was passed, however, we know that monopolies exist, and that combinations in restraint of trade have been their chief instrumentalities of destruction. General Johnson says there is scarcely a code of all the codes written that is not a combination in restraint of trade. There is scarcely a code, in my opinion, that is not a conspiracy in restraint of trade, and at least 137 of the codes provide means and methods for price-fixing, which is all monopoly asks in order to maintain its power.

Mr. President, if this matter is to stand with no further explanation than that given by Mr. Richberg, it will not change the situation at all, or in any respect, from what it is Monopoly is one thing, technically speaking, and the instrumentalities by which monopoly is built up and maintained are sometimes denominated another thing in law; but if we permit combinations in restraint of trade, if we permit price-fixing, if we permit price-cutting, in order to drive a competitor out of business, we are making monopoly possible, and there is no way, if these things are permitted, by which we can prevent its destructive operation against small business. If we are to protect consumers against extortionate prices, if we are to protect the small business traders, we should restore all laws against monopolies, against trusts and combines, strengthen them, and enforce them. There should be no compromise on this point. There will be no compromise if we discharge our full duty to the people whom we have volunteered to serve.

The able Senator from Colorado [Mr. Costigan] asked me if Mr. Richberg was not correct when he said as follows:

Our legislative, administrative, and judicial efforts to enforce the principles of the antitrust laws have been a deceitful failure and a continuing public injury for 45 years. For the first time we have acquired the ability now to give an honest protection to workers and consumers against the abuses of economic power.

Passing over for a moment this question of protecting consumers against present conditions, and so forth, let us go back to the question of the enforcement of the antitrust

When the antitrust law was passed, it inhibited and prohibited all combinations, all conspiracies in restraint of trade. It made no exceptions. It was the determination of those who passed the law, as the debates clearly disclose, to inhibit and prohibit all contracts and all combinations and all conspiracies in restraint of trade. Trade was to be free, commerce was to be free. It was not the intention of the lawmakers to prevent such combinations as were unduly in restraint of trade or unreasonably in restraint of trade. Their idea was that if there was economic power somewhere that was restraining trade to any extent, it was inhibited by the antitrust law of 1890. The antitrust was a statute of freedom, of liberty.

That continued to be the policy as announced by the Supreme Court for 15 years. On two or three different ocof the United States-in the trans-Mississippi freight case and another case the name of which I have forgotten for the moment—the specific question was raised whether this prohibition of combinations in restraint of trade should be applied to all restraints of trade, or to all contracts restraining trade, or whether it should be applied only to those contracts which unduly or unreasonably restrained trade. The Supreme Court said the lawmaking body had said that all combinations and all contracts in restraint of trade were prohibited and, therefore, the Supreme Court must interpret the law as the Congress has enacted it; that if it was desired by the lawmaking body to prohibit only such combinations as unduly restrained trade it was for the Congress and not for the Supreme Court of the United States to so declare.

That continued to be the law of this country by the decisions of the Supreme Court, as I have said, for 15 years. Finally, there came before the Court the Standard Oil Co. case and the American Tobacco Co. case; and there for the first time the Supreme Court, as it seems to me-and I think it is conceded-going directly contrary to its previous decisions, held that only such contracts as were unreasonably in restraint of trade or unduly in restraint of trade were prohibited by the act of 1890. This marked an era in the matter of controlling trusts and destroying monopoly in this country. Not only were previous decisions overruled, not only were previous announced principles of law rejected, but the antitrust law was rewritten not by the Congress but by the Supreme Court of the United States. It was a flagrant invasion of the lawmaking department of the Government. These are plain terms, but they are based on indisputable historic facts.

That, in my opinion, was the beginning of the downfall of the antitrust law. It administered a fatal blow to the antitrust law.

When President Theodore Roosevelt became President he entered upon an execution of the antitrust laws, and for a time he was successful. But under these decisions the task was a difficult one. No man in this country has ever stated more specifically or more comprehensively the question of monopoly and the evils of monopoly than President Wilson in his campaign for the Presidency and in his messages to Congress. He took the position that monopoly in any form was an evil; that it was a form of economic power which must necessarily prey upon the rights of the more helpless in the economic world. He made the pledge that as President he would enforce the law against monopoly. I have always felt that had it not been for the World War there would have been an effective enforcement of the antitrust law. It would have been strengthened and enforced. But the World War came, and everything gave way to its prosecution.

It is true, therefore, as Mr. Richberg says, and as intimated by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Costigan], that the enforcement of the antitrust laws has not been successful. It has not been satisfactory. It has not been sufficient and efficient. The fault, however, lies not in the law but in the apparent unwillingness or inability, under certain circumstances, of the administrations in power to enforce the law. The courts and the executives must share the blame.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, in the whole 45 years of the existence of the antitrust law, was one tithe as much effort made to enforce it as has been made in the past 2 years to enforce this abominable N. R. A. law, and to use all the powers of the Government to intimidate and to boycott the small industries of the country?

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the Senator does not know how thoroughly he is expressing my opinion.

I desire to ask this question of Mr. Richberg and those who object to restoring the antitrust laws in full before I go further to the discussion of its enforcement.

What is prohibited in the antitrust laws that anyone wants to do under the N. R. A.? Wherein do the antitrust laws conflict with the declared purposes of the N. R. A.?

The antitrust laws prohibit combinations in restraint of trade. Does the N. R. A. want to protect combinations in restraint of trade? The antitrust laws prohibit conspiracies in restraint of trade. Does the N. R. A. want to protect concasions when the law was brought before the Supreme Court 'spiracies in restraint of trade? What is it that is wrapped up and protected under the N. R. A. that would be reached by restoring and strengthening the antitrust laws if they were enforced?

It is said that unfair or cutthroat competition is involved. The antitrust laws do not prohibit and never have prohibited fair competition. The Supreme Court has decided over and over again that the antitrust laws were designed, not to prohibit fair competition but to protect fair competition. The only thing the antitrust laws prohibit is the destruction of competition. Fair competition is not prohibited. In my opinion, there is no principle incorporated in the antitrust laws which ought not to be the design and purpose of the National Recovery Act.

Mr. President, can the antitrust laws be enforced? For 45 years both the old parties, in every campaign, have declared to the voters that monopoly is a great evil, that combinations and trusts are the enemies of the people, and have declared that they would and that they could, if given power, enforce the antitrust laws.

There has never been any question in a campaign, the question has never been raised, that these laws could not be enforced. It has been a conceded proposition in every campaign that they could be enforced. During the campaigns there occurred to no one that they could not be enforced and the people fully protected. The change came after the election was over. Both the old parties, in my opinion, have utterly refused to exercise the power which they have, as a Government power, to enforce the antitrust laws of the United States. I answer the Senator from Colorado: Therefore, yes; the trust laws can be enforced if you can find an administration with as much courage after the election as it has before the election.

As is said by the able Senator from Virginia, if the same zeal, the same purpose, the same determination, were applied to the antitrust laws as have been applied to the N. R. A. in my opinion, they could be effectively enforced throughout the country. We must enforce them.

Unless we accept General Johnson's proposition that monopoly is a natural condition of affairs, that big corporations should dominate, that big corporations should control, unless we accept that theory, there is no alternative to that of enforcing the antitrust laws and the antimonopoly laws. To admit that you cannot control or destroy monopoly is to admit that monopoly is stronger than government, it is to admit that the Government is subservient to monopoly, that it must leave the people a prey to monopoly. Who is ready to make that cowardly admission?

Can it be said that the Government of the United States cannot prevent combinations in restraint of trade? Can it be said that the Government of the United States cannot prevent conspiracies in restraint of trade? Why? If there is any reason why it cannot, it is in the want of will power and the want of purpose of those who control the Govern-

I venture to say that the great source of the concentration of wealth in the United States, the great source of this power which now exists in a very few men to dominate the economic power of the United States, arises out of the fact that we have been unwilling to enforce the antimonopoly laws of the United States. It is useless to inveigh against the concentration of wealth while monopoly prevails.

When the depression came in 1929 about 2 percent of all the corporations in the United States controlled 75 percent of all the income of all the corporations of the United States, and less than 2 percent of the people of the United States enjoyed 80 percent of all the recorded income of the people of the United States. That condition cannot long exist under a republican form of government. A republic cannot be maintained on any such basis as that. It cannot rest on any such foundation for any great length of time. There must be a greater distribution of wealth.

I do not believe in taking property from A and giving it to B. I do not believe in repudiation or confiscation. But I do believe that there should be laws, that there should not permit B to take it away from A through force or fraud and add it to his already overgrown coffers. In other words, there must be something in the nature of the laws which we have which will give to each and all a fair distribution according to their efforts and according to their energy as applied in the production of wealth.

If we do not have that, we do not have a republic, because those who control the economic power of a nation will, in the end, control its political power. Those who control 2 percent of the income of a nation will in the end dominate its political power. While the people may go to the polls and register their ballots, if, as a matter of fact, the laws are so shaped that they cannot secure their just earnings, their ballots will have been cast in vain.

Mr. President, I am in favor of restoring the antitrust laws. I would strengthen them. I would enforce them. All these proposals about distribution of wealth, of sharing of wealth are idle so long as monopoly dominates the economic system. You might divide your wealth on Monday and Saturday night monopoly will have undone your great deed of beneficence. No; give the people of this country not equality of wealth, but equality of opportunity and the people will distribute the wealth of the country in accord with merit and justice. I would deny no man the fruits of his industry, of his ability, of his genius, but I would deny to every man the right or power to amass economic power and use it contrary to equity and fair and honest dealing. I look upon monopoly as the descendant in the economic world of Dick Turpin on the London road-taking by deceit and surprise and fraud and violence the legitimate possessions and earnings of others.

The President in his message said that he was opposed to monopoly; he does not want monopoly. Monopoly cannot be destroyed if the laws with reference to monopoly and trusts are suspended. I take it, therefore, that the President, having witnessed some things which have happened under the N. R. A., feels that he is willing to have the aid of the antitrust laws. Bear in mind, Senators, that the antitrust laws are in aid of the N. R. A. if the N. R. A. is to be carried out in accordance with the declared purposes of the N. R. A.

General Johnson said last night that the President of the United States had saved more small business men than Senator NyE or I ever preached to. I admit that the President restrained to some extent the general decimation of small business that was going on. But General Johnson was the man who administered this law and he was true to his faith and to his philosophy. I happen to know of my own personal knowledge that the President had quite a different idea of protecting the small business man of the United States than that which prevailed in the mind of General

Although I do not, of course, speak by authority, I am of the opinion that the President has reached the conclusion that, instead of the antitrust laws being a detriment or a weakening of the N. R. A., they would be a strengthening of it if we are to accept it in the light of the declared purposes.

Mr. President, I ask permission to insert in the RECORD certain letters.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BLOOMINGTON, IND., March 2, 1935.

The Honorable WILLIAM E. BORAH,

The Honorable WILLIAM E. Borah,

Senator from Idaho, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator Borah: In a recent message to Congress President Roosevelt stressed protection of the little fellow. Nevertheless, at that very time, in the South, 8,000,000 share-croppers were and are now struggling along the highways and byways—lonely figures without money, without homes, and without hope—as a challenge to the new deal. Mother, father, little ones—most of them barefoot—they are living symbols of a civilization that has failed them, a bargain that never worked.

In the plumbing business the handy man who formerly was

In the plumbing business the handy man who formerly was able to pick up odd jobs in this line of work has been warned by N. R. A. to cease competition with established plumbing firms.

And in the artificial-flower trade all women who have been so skillfully doing a part of this work in the quiet environment of be economic and financial systems, which will give to A what he justly earns and what he is entitled to have, and of this kind. Thus the organized monopolists, aided by N. R. A. price fixing, continues to knock off all outside workers and small businesses.

My understanding was that N. R. A. was to automatically end as soon as the emergency which necessitated its existence was passed. But the latest report is the drafting of a legislative program to carry the principles of N. R. A. into permanency.

Are wide-awake Congressmen going to stand by and allow this monopolistic piece of legislation to permanently fasten itself into the vitals of our private and commercial life? If so, in the name of heaven, what is to be the final fate of the now hard-pressed and struggling little fellow in all the legitimate lines of business who is fighting for an existence against the employer-dominated N. R. A. and its discriminating price codes?

who is fighting for an existence against the employer-dominated N. R. A. and its discriminating price codes?

Mr. Borah, the thousands of us little fellows have no one to look to for a break but the fearless, far-seeing Senators who are so valiantly fighting for the equal rights of all the people, regardless of administration hobbies and views. No contempt or criticism is too severe for those rubber-stamp Senators who have sold their birthright to the administration. That's why I'm not bothering to write my own State Senators. So far as I'm concerned, I'm just marking time on them lcism is too severe for those rubber-stamp Senators who have sold their birthright to the administration. That's why I'm not bothering to write my own State Senators. So far as I'm concerned, I'm just marking time on them.

In connection with the thousands of small businesses that have been ruined by the dominated N. R. A. price-fixing codes, I am herewith giving an account of my own true experience with the N. R. A. price-fixing code.

I'm a married man with a family of four to support. By trade I'm a cabinetmaker in one of the larger furniture factories of the country. For more than 5 months our plant has been down and the men, including myself, have had no means of support. Many of my buddies, during this long shut-down of our plant, were forced onto the Government relief roll. But rather than do likewise I bought a small hand printing press with the intention of getting small jobs of printing. To facilitate my efforts I printed some advertising blotters, but after handing out just two of them I was at once reported by one of the inside gang to the code authorities, who lost no time or words in a curt admonition, "I want to urge you to pay code assessment promptly, since there is a penalty provided by the Government for nonpayment."

I endeavored to explain, to no avail, that I was not a regular job printer, only just an amateur with a very small outfit which I was using to get some extra jobs that would carry me over until I could get back to my cabinetmaking work, which I intended to do just as soon as our plant started operating. "But," warned the sleek, well-fed administration manager, "you are in competition with established printing offices that have invested thousands of dollars in the business." "In competition (?)." At that very time one of the N. R. A. shops daubing the Blue Eagle on everything which he printed was printing at bootleg prices 500 bridge raffle tickets, perforated and numbered, and then changed form for 100 additional tickets, 600 in all, for $2.50. That was worse than anything I did

Very sincerely yours,

LEE HARMON.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., March 5, 1935.

Hon. WILLIAM E. BORAH,

Hon. William E. Borah,

United States Senator, House of Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator Borah: You will find enclosed herewith copy of complaint which we filed with the Federal Trade Commission relative to collusive bids made on large gate valves. You will note that the prices are uniform to the penny although we called attention of all bidders to the fact that the President's Executive Order No. 6767 was issued for the purpose of (1) giving cities the benefit of discount on quantity purchases and (2) for the purpose of creating an area of competition in order that laws requiring the award to the lowest responsible and competent bidder could be complied with. complied with.

Uniform bids such as have been presented would lead eventually to a return of the spoils system in the award of public business. Please note that the 36-inch valve has doubled in price since June 1932.

It is clearly evident that these bids were made as a result of a collusive price agreement. Anything you can do to expose and wipe out these illegal practices will be appreciated by all American cities.

Respectfully yours,

Jos. W. NICHOLSON. Special Representative United States Conference of Mayors.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., February 28, 1935.

Hon. WILLIAM E. BORAH,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We small business men will be sunk without trace if this iniquitous law is continued. There is only one Blue Eagle for us, the American flag.

I have been harassed, intimidated, and threatened by the racketeers who have been lining their pockets on this law. Two years ago I was framed and it was politely suggested I leave town. However, these parties did not reckon on several factors which I have put to good use and have increased my business by paying no attention to delegated laws and parasites who live off of them.

I will be glad to hear from you at any time.

May you be successful in your battle for the right.

Sincerely yours,

THE D. R. ELLINGER Co., D. R. ELLINGER.

Youngstown, Ohio, March 6, 1935.

Hon. WILLIAM E. BORAH,
United States Senator, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Re: Unfair competition-the steel code

Re: Unfair competition—the steel code

MY DEAR SENATOR: With further reference to our complaint of February 20, filed with you as to the restraint of trade monopoly in violation of the Sherman-Clayton Antitrust Acts of the steel code, we have today filed with Willard L. Thorp, chairman of the advisory council, National Recovery Administration, a brief, per copy enclosed, as to the coercive, oppressive, and destructive operation of the steel code and its unfair competition in relation to independent jobbers, middlemen, and distributors.

Anticipating the enclosed may be of some service to you in addition with our complaint of February 20 and thanking you kindly for the interest already demonstrated, we remain,
Yours very truly,

The Sheet Metal Manufacturing Co.

THE SHEET METAL MANUFACTURING CO., THOMAS E. FARRELL, President.

Youngstown, Ohio, March 6, 1935.

Mr. WILLARD L. THORP,
Chairman Advisory Council,
National Recovery Administration, Washing

Re: In accordance with office memorandum no. 333, public hearing March 12, 1935. Distribution differentials, unfair competition, the steel code.

DEAR SIR: We herewith submit allegations of the unfair methods Dear Sir: We herewith submit allegations of the unfair methods of competition in the distributions from the manufacturer to the retailer and/or consumer practiced and operative under the steel code, provisions of which were intended to correct—

(a) As to the nature of the unfair methods of competition among the channels of distribution from the manufacturer to the retailer which steel code provisions were intended to correct.

(1) The steel code provides for minimum selling price schedules to be filed by each steel manufacturer with the steel code authority. These filed minimum schedules have in practice at all times been the maximum selling price schedules.

(2) The schedule of prices, so filed, are alike applicable to the wholesaler, jobber, broker, or middleman, without any allowances or differentials whatsoever, and are likewise applicable to the consumer or retailers.

sumer or retailers.

(3) Effective prohibition has thereby been established against the distributor competing with the manufacturer for carload business, effectively restraining competition in this class of business solely to the manufacturers where a close monopoly is had owing to the system of open price filing, effectively eliminating any price competition.

(4) Covering less car-lot shipments quantity differentials are charged by the steel manufacturers which are applied on the purchases of the middleman as well as the consumer or retailer, thereby permitting the manufacturer which has proved under the operation of the steel code a very destructive fact to invade, disorganize, and disrupt the competitive field of the middleman by the manufacturer. the manufacturer.

organize, and disrupt the competitive field of the middleman by the manufacturer.

(5) Under the open price-filing system of the steel code, wherein no provision whatsoever is made for a schedule of differentials applicable to the middleman's purchases, the manufacturer successfully and absolutely precludes competition from the middleman in either carload or less carload business.

(6) Through wholly owned subsidiary, distributors, and middlemen who are not, under the steel code, required to quote selling prices in excess of the minimum filed selling prices of the parent company which are the minimum cost prices of independently owned distributors or middlemen, the manufacturers are prosecuting a totally unfair and wholly destructive competition through wholly owned subsidiaries, distributors or middlemen against the independently owned distributors.

To concretely illustrate: The Wheeling Steel Corporation, member of the steel code, wholly owns the Wheeling Corrugating Co., a distributing middleman of steel products. The Wheeling Corrugating Co. in any of its warehouses located in all of the largest cities in the country, as a wholly owned subsidiary do not have to, nor do they quote selling prices in excess of the minimum prices filed with the steel code authority by the parent company, the Wheeling Steel Corporation, which minimum selling prices of independently owned middlemen or distributors competing in any of the said cities against a warehouse of the Wheeling Corrugating Co.

(c) As to the degree to which present code provisions of this type are not operating in the public interest.

(c) As to the degree to which present code provisions of this type are not operating in the public interest.

(7) Clause C. As to the degree to which present code provisions of this type are, or are not, operating to the public interest. The provisions of the steel code are operating entirely against public interests, eliminating from business and throwing out of employment the employees of the independently owned distributing and warehouse companies, formerly engaged in profitable business and rapidly being displaced by the unfair competition of the wholly owned subsidiary, distributor, or warehouse men.

(8) The penalization imposed by the steel code at the rate of $10 per ton for any violation by an independent distributor of the filed minimum selling prices of his supplier works a detriment to the public in artificially raising and maintaining an unjustifiable level in the prices of all steel products to the consumer.

sumer. Most members of the steel code and all of the larger members are now unfairly and illegally competing against jobbers, middle-men, warehousemen, and other small independent industries who men, warehousemen, and other small independent industries who sell or consume products of the steel industry; through the unsair operation of the steel code whereby such wholly owned subsidiaries, regardless of their classification and the field of trade in which they operate are not required to sell their products at a greater price than the minimum selling price posted by the parent company, which in all cases is the minimum cost price of an independent competing company. These provisions of the steel code were drawn with but one purpose in mind—to eliminate as rapidly as possible all independent companies engaged in the fabrication and distribution of steel and steel products.

For the reasons stated herein we submit this request for relief from the present oppressive and destructive operations of the steel code and pray for an alteration of the steel code to establish a fair schedule of distribution differentials and the elimination of wholly owned subsidiary competition.

tion of wholly owned subsidiary competition.

Very truly yours, THE SHEET METAL MANUFACTURING CO.,

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. President, following the address of the distinguished Senator from Idaho [Mr. Borah], I wish to insert in the RECORD a quotation from a former President of the United States, one of America's foremost students of government affairs, Woodrow Wilson. He made this state-

Regulation by law is judicial, by fixed and definite rule, whereas regulation by commission is an affair of business sense, of the comprehension and thorough understanding of complex and various bodies of business. There is no logical stopping place between that and the actual conduct of business enterprise by the Government

Government.

Such methods of regulation, it may be safely predicted, will sooner or later be completely discredited by experience. Commissions in the future as in the past will reflect rather public opinion than business discretion. The only safe process, the only American process, the only effective process, is the regulation of transactions by the definite prohibitions of law, item by item, as experience discloses their character and their effects, and the punishment of the particular individuals who engage in them.

I wish also to call attention to another matter which follows out the very line of discussion to which we have listened this afternoon. Very few of those who voted for the Agricultural Adjustment Act ever expected that we were going into the business of killing pigs and reducing the food supply. Out in the Middle West we are feeling the effect of that policy. Only a few days ago the Sioux City packing plants closed down, putting 1,500 workmen on the streets, and many of them on the relief rolls of that city. That was due to the lack of a supply of pork.

At the same time the supply of pork for consumption in this country is decreasing. The price is going up and it is being shown all along the line that the economy of scarcity reaches one end, that is, that when the price goes high the consumer does not consume, then the processing plants close down, and there is no market even for that which is produced.

Mr. CAREY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Byrn in the chair). Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. DICKINSON. I yield.

Mr. CAREY. Is the Senator aware of the fact that a representative of the Department of Agriculture yesterday stated before the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry of the Senate that the killing of 6,000,000 pigs had resulted in there being more pork? He explained that the reason for it was the drought; that had those 6,000,000 pigs lived the other pigs remaining now would not have been so fat, and therefore there was more pork by reason of the killing of 6,000,000 pigs.

Mr. DICKINSON. As it happens, I come from a section of Iowa where a good many porkers are fattened, and I wish to say to the Senate that we could have fattened a good many more of them there with the corn crop we had this year.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DICKINSON. I yield.

Mr. KING. Is the Senator a member of the Committee on Agriculture?

Mr. DICKINSON. No; I am not.

Mr. KING. I was wondering if the recent statements, if I understand them correctly, are to be carried into effect in a proposed new law which will broaden the powers of the A. A. A. and give additional authority to slaughter animals and to contract the acreage of lands which are being cultivated, and thus reduce production?

Mr. DICKINSON. I think there is no question that the whole purpose is to control and reduce production, and that the amendments to the A. A. A. Act would give power additional to that which the A. A. A. officials may have exercised under the present law, but concerning which there seems to be some doubt as to whether or not they have the actual authority. The vicious phase of the new amendments of the A. A. A. Act, as I see it, is that the A. A. A. officials are going to have the right to license the processors and handlers of food products to the point where they can say, "We will not permit you to process the product of a man unless he joins in the program of crop production." Therefore, that is practically licensing the farmer. Although they are not saying that they want to license the farmer or producer, it does have that effect.

Mr. KING. In the light of the discussion by the able Senator from Idaho [Mr. Borah] to which we have just listened, would not such action by officials of the A. A. A. tend to a monopolistic control of food products and of the processing of food products?

Mr. DICKINSON. It would, Mr. President. There is no question about it. In line with that suggestion, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the Congressional Record, following my remarks, the article appearing in the Wall Street Journal of today entitled "Small Packers Forced to Close Pork Plants."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The article referred to is as follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal of Mar. 8, 1935]

SMALL PACKERS FORCED TO CLOSE PORK PLANTS-WHOLE INDUSTRY LOSING MONEY ON PRESENT HOG-SLAUGHTERING OPERATIONS-IN-VENTORY STILL AIDS BIG UNITS

CHICAGO.—The meat-packing industry is running into a period of slack production and is operating its plants as a whole at only 50 to 60 percent of capacity.

Furthermore, not a few small packers throughout the hog coun-

Furthermore, not a few small packers throughout the hog country have found it necessary to close down their hog-slaughtering divisions because of the impossibility of getting their costs out of the swine. Losses of $1 a hundredweight or more are accruing to them as a result of the recent rise in price. The processing tax adds $2.25 a hundredweight to the price of swine, and pork products have not advanced in proportion to the animals.

The present low rate of production, traceable to the decimation of 6,000,000 pigs by the A. A. A., plus a reduction in weights and numbers as a result of drought, is likely to continue unbroken over a substantial part of this year. Regaining of more normal production depends primarily upon the quantity of the 1935 corn crop. Given a good corn crop this coming summer the hog raisers of the Nation can fatten their hogs to substantially larger proportions and thus tide over the period until new crops of pigs are produced.

As a consequence of the present situation the packers are dependent for a return from their business entirely on the substantial inventories of cheaper pork laid down during last fall and up to the end of 1934 from the then excessive runs of swine.

BIG PACKERS AIDED BY INVENTORY

All the important packers, while unavoidably losing on current slaughter, are in a position, thanks to their previously created inventories, to move along at some profit at the present time. Naturally, as has been pointed out before, profits of the industry this year will be impaired by the fact that volume will be around 40 percent below normal. It is volume first and last upon which the industry depends for its profits. Without volume, costs mount disproportionately, eating rapidly into the always small unit profit.

While the industry believes it will come through the year with a fair return because of the fat mark-ups on inventory laid in at prices which now appear low, it makes no pretense of expecting full-sized returns just because prices have advanced materially. It is probably safe to say the larger part of 1935 net incomes were obtained in the first 4 months of the year. As inventories are further drawn upon and replacement is rendered temporarily impossible profits will naturally diminish.

EMPLOYMENT IN 1935 LOWEST IN YEARS

Perhaps the greatest hardship resulting from the severely reduced plant activity is the additions thereby to unemployment relief rolls. There is not a company in the industry that has not had to lay off men on production lines, and employment in 1935 in this industry men on production lines, and employment in 1935 in this industry will be the lowest in years.

Meat packers, box and barrel makers, salt companies, sugar merchants, paper companies are all feeling the result of the hog and beef-cattle shortage this year, and their pay roll lists are being shortened proportionately.

As a consequence of the present hog shortage, the big packers are all quietly on the lookout for small plants in key hog areas which they might buy. While the plant provides them with no really useful productive capacity this year, they thus obtain an additional receiving point for hogs which would not be marketed through them if they did not own the plant. Plants thus acquired will be useful under conditions when our hog population is normal and can accordingly be charged practically to future years.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KING. At what period in the rapid progress of the passage of this bill before us will it be permissible to submit a motion to recommit?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has the right to make the motion to recommit now.

Mr. BONE. Before that motion is made by the Senator from Utah, Mr. President, may I offer the amendment to House bill 5913, the pending bill, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 63, after line 5, it is proposed to add the following:

The basic rates of pay upon which compensation is calculated for employees at the arsenals and elsewhere within the jurisdiction of the War Department in continental United States for all for employees at the arsenas and elsewhere within the jurisdiction of the War Department in continental United States for all mechanics, workmen, helpers, and laborers shall be adjusted to not less than the basic rates provided for at the nearest navy yard covered by the "laborer, helper, and mechanical service" of the "Schedule of wages for civil employees under the Naval Establishment" for corresponding or similar trades and occupations specified therein: Provided, That the minimum and intermediate rates of pay provided for in the "laborer, helper, and mechanical service" of the "Schedule of wages for civil employees under the Naval Establishment" shall be confined to the first and second years of service, respectively, for all employees embraced within such schedule of wages after having served their 4-year apprenticeship or its equivalent; and that all employees whose services would be satisfactory if employed or continued at the present rates of pay shall be regarded as satisfactory for any higher rate hereby accorded them: Provided further, That the schedule of wages for any establishment covered by this paragraph shall not be less than the schedule of wages in effect at the Philadelphia Navy Yard as hereby adjusted: Provided further, That nothing herein shall operate to reduce the pay of any employee. reduce the pay of any employee.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I shall be compelled to make a point of order against the proposed amendment. It is clearly legislation and obnoxious to rule XVI.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I had hoped that none of my colleagues would make the point of order against this proposed amendment. I recognize that possibly it falls within the category of legislation, but it is merely an attempt in the piece of legislation which is now before us to provide an equitable wage scale in the arsenals of the country, and to pay to the employees of the arsenals the same schedule of wages for the same type of work done in the navy yards of the country. There is also an effort in the proposed amendment to localize the pay, so far as possible, so that there shall not be disproportionate pay in one part of the country as against another. I hope I may induce the Senator from Virginia not to press his point of order. I recognize that probably under our rules the amendment is subject to a point of order. I do not want to place myself in the position of introducing, and I have so far refrained from trying to introduce, legislation into appropriation bills. This amendment is not a dangerous one. It is merely an attempt to equalize the wages in a way that I think would be very just. It would not affect the ultimate purpose of the bill. I do not want the Senator from Virginia to think that I am trying to do something which ought not to be done. There is nothing in my amendment which can ultimately affect adversely the purposes of this bill in any way. I hope the Senator will withdraw his point of order.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, of course I realize the good purpose of the Senator. I do not question that in the slightest degree, but the Senator will recognize the fact that I am under obligation by a standing rule of the Senate Committee on Appropriations to make a point of order against legislative proposals, and I am obliged to insist upon the

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I appreciate the fact that the motion which I am about to submit, in view of the votes which have heretofore been taken upon this bill, will not receive the support which I should be glad to have it receive.

The Senate adopted yesterday an amendment adding $20,000,000 to what the bill contained when it was reported from the Senate committee. It is conceded that that $20,-000,000 is but a small part of the additional expense which will result from increasing the number of enlisted men of the United States by 30 percent. It was stated by the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], who at the time had charge of the bill, when he was interrogated by the able Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], that the $20,000,-000 needed to pay the per diem of the enlisted men for the next year must be taken, doubtless, from other appropriations contained in the bill, and as I recall, in answer to one of the questions propounded, it was said that there was a cushion in the bill, or that some of the items had been so padded that $20,000,000 could be taken from those various items with which to meet the $20,000,000 required to pay the per diem of the soldiers. So it is evident, Mr. President, that there is in the bill a considerable cushion, that there is in it a considerable latitude, that there are provided in it funds which are not indispensably needed to meet the various provisions of the bill.

I am opposed to the bill with the extremely large appropriation which it carries. As I stated yesterday, in view of the enormous appropriations which are being made by our Government for military and naval purposes, appropriations which this year will aggregate more than a billion dollars, we are no longer in a position to charge other nations with imperialism or with militarism, and, because of the enormous appropriation carried in this and in other bills for military purposes, which will be submitted, I move that this bill be recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to reduce the aggregate appropriations carried in the bill by the amount of $50,000,000.

Mr. McNARY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum is suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Byrnes	George	Logan
Ashurst	Capper	Gerry	Lonergan
Austin	Carev	Gibson	Long
Bachman	Clark	Glass	McAdoo
Bailey	Connally	Gore	McCarran
Bankhead	Coolidge	Guffey	McGill
Barbour	Copeland	Hale	McKellar
Bilbo	Costigan	Harrison	McNary
Black	Couzens	Hastings	Maloney
Bone	Cutting	Hatch	Metcalf
Borah	Dickinson	Havden	Minton
Brown	Dieterich	Johnson	Moore
Bulkley	Donahey	Keyes	Murphy
Bulow	Duffy	King	Murray
Burke	Fletcher	La Follette	Neely
Byrd	Frazier	Lewis	Norbeck

Norris Nye O'Mahoney Pittman Pope Radcliffe Reynolds

Robinson Russell Schall Schwellenbach Sheppard Shipstead Smith

Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Townsend Trammell Tydings

Van Nuvs Wagner Walsh Wheeler White

Mr. LEWIS. I announce the absence of the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overtow], on account of illness; and the absence of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], who is necessarily detained from the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McADOO in the chair). Ninety-one Senators have answered to their names. quorum is present. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Utah [Mr. King] to recommit the bill with instructions.

The motion was rejected.

JUSTIFICATION FOR A NEW NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY ACT Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have here a copy of the N. R. A. Act, from which I wish to read section 1. It is as follows:

DECLARATION OF POLICY

SECTION 1. A national emergency productive of wide-spread unemployment and disorganization of industry, which burdens interstate and foreign commerce, affects the public welfare, and undermines the standards of living of the American people, is hereby declared to exist. It is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to remove obstructions to the free flow of interstate and foreign commerce which tend to diminish the amount thereof; and to provide for the general welfare by promoting the organization of industry for the purpose of cooperative action among trade groups, to induce and maintain united action of labor and management under adequate governmental sanctions and supervision, to eliminate unfair competitive practices, to promote the fullest possible utilization of the present productive capacity of fullest possible utilization of the present productive capacity of industries, to avoid undue restriction of production (except as be temporarily required), to increase the consumption of industrial and agricultural products by increasing purchasing power, to reduce and relieve unemployment, to improve standards of labor, and otherwise to rehabilitate industry and to conserve natural resources.

Mr. President, the succeeding sections of this act in title I go on to prescribe, of course, the many things which may be done, and the many things which they authorize others to do and which they authorize others to authorize others to do, and by which they authorize those who were authorized to authorize others to set up various and sundry departments in order that the things may be done.

The act, Mr. President, cannot be completely understood unless it is realized that it is like the Constitution of the United States. Many of us, of course, are tempted to think that when we have read the articles of the Constitution of the United States we have made a study of what the form of government is; but in order that one may understand today what the Constitution of the United States is he has to regard as a supplement to that document the various decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States and probably some of the decisions of the intermediary and subordinate courts of the United States. So it is, Mr. President, in the case of the National Recovery Act. In order that it may be understood one has not only to take the act itself, but he has to take the codes that have been written under the act and also consider the various and sundry regulations and regulators who are operating and administering this law.

There used to be a time in this country when the only way by which you could make a man aware of a law was by passing the law and promulgating it in some official journal. Down in my State we provide that in order to enact a law it is necessary to pass it through the house and then through the senate or through the senate and then through the house, as the case may be, and, then, after the law has been passed, it must be signed by the Governor and it must be promulgated and published in the official journal for a period of, I think, 2 or 3 days, at least, and then the legislature must have adjourned for 20 days before that law goes into effect. We have been criticized for acting somewhat hastily in that State in cases, but, none the less, when we have acted we have always published the law so that people knew what the law was, and we have waited 20 days after the legislature adjourned in order that the citizen might know what he might be expected to adhere to.

In order that I may make clear what I have in mind with respect to the N. R. A., let me say that today it is not only necessary to consider the various and sundry sections of the N. R. A., but, in addition, in order to know what it is all about, one has to become acquainted with the 900 catalogs that have been published containing sundry regulations, rules, and orders, and must also explore the files in Washington and the files in the subdepartments and agencies scattered throughout the United States, and then he must explore in that connection those who have been employed; he must explore what powers have been given to those who have been employed under these 900 codes; and then he must go out and look these men up and find out from them what they have prescribed up to the last 30 minutes or maybe up to the last 1 minute. The rules are not published in any newspaper; they are not contained in any bound volume; and I am told, though this may be an error, as it is based upon publication in the newspapers, that, in one instance, when a man who had already plead guilty reached the Supreme Court of the United States they could not find the rules and regulations nor the rule book containing the regulations which the man was supposed to have violated, and, therefore, they had to turn him loose.

So, Mr. President, in connection with the present N. R. A., as I have been told, we are going to be presented with another bill and are to have another N. R. A. to carry on the present N. R. A. I do not know just whether it is intended that it will have the administration of the explosive. temperamental character that it started off with last time, because it started out almost like a hurricane accompanied by a ball of fire in the person of Mr. Hugh S. Johnson.

However, Mr. President, I hope that if we give it the sign of the Fascisti, known as the "Blue Eagle" or the "double eagle", or whatever they call it, we will at least let the eagle have a chance to live by itself. It is all right that the Germans have their Fascist sign in the form of a swastika: it was all right that the Mussolini-ites or the Fascisti in Italy have their sign in the form of a black shirt, and it may have been all right that the Fascisti in America have their emblem in the form of a double eagle, but at least we ought to have given that emblem the right to have lived and to have thrived. I really believe, Mr. President, that we almost condemned that eagle to death in advance when we published the eagle looking squarely into the countenance of my good friend, Hon. Hugh S. Johnson, because I do not see how the eagle ever looked at Johnson and lived as long as it did. [Laughter.]

So that it may not have an unceremonious life again under the provisions written into this new instrument at a time when it has almost suffered its demise, I merely sound that note of warning.

We are going to have to have something on which to hang an excuse for the operations of the N. R. A. This is legislation out of the ordinary, so therefore we are going to find out what our legislation is. I was wondering whether or not it might not be a good idea if the Senate would find out what the law is at the present time. In other words, before we proceed with something that might change the law, before we undertake to enact more legislation, either to modify or to continue in effect legislation of the character we now have, I am wondering if it might not be a good thing if we find out what the law actually is. In other words, before we amend regulations which may have devitalized the country and industry, we ought to be careful that we are not enacting legislation that is not going to annul some of them. I am not able to tell what the legislation is or what the law is. There is nobody in the Senate who can tell what the legislation is or what the law is. There is not anybody in the N. R. A. or in any other department of the United States Government who can tell what the law is today insofar as the rules and regulations, codes, and other things under the N. R. A. statute are concerned.

However, we are going to have to provide a preamble for the new law, and, in order to write the preamble, we will probably have to eliminate section 1 of the existing law.

Section 1 justifies the succeeding sections. Section 1, in other words, gives the reasons why we are acting. It tells the people that the country is in a deplorable fix. If we are going to reenact the N. R. A. statute, I should like to find out some things, maybe, from some of my more learned colleagues. I want to be careful in the Senate, because I do not want to reach the point where I will be subjected to an impeachment such as the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass] visited upon the junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] the other day. I therefore say I am not saying I want to be advised by my learned colleagues, but that I want to be advised by those colleagues of mine who are more learned than I am, and on that score the Senator from Virginia and I will never have any argument, unless the Senator changes.

Therefore, I am going to inquire of those more learned than I am in the N. R. A. and other lines what is going to be the cornerstone in enacting another N. R. A. law. I do not know that there is going to be another N. R. A. law enacted. I think I shall be told about that in due time, probably about the same time the President is told. The Presiding Officer may learn it a day or two ahead of me, or I may learn it a day or two ahead of the Presiding Officer, as the case may be; but when I do reach the stage of having the information that there will be, should be, or must be, and therefore is to be, another N. R. A. statute enacted, I will naturally first expect to read the cornerstone section to find out what is the basis and justification upon which the next N. R. A. is to be based.

Are we going to say we shall recopy section 1? If so, to copy section 1 would mean that for 2 years we have explored into the mire of distress and still have it. I therefore want to warn those to whom has been given the difficult proposition of designing the act not to copy section 1, because that would be the same as admitting that all this folderol would be destroyed by the act being brought here in that form. Therefore I say that to those who may be the draftsmen of the new legislation, or rather to those who will be in contact with those who are the draftsmen of the legislation; if I were called into consultation with this learned group of draftsmen to whom I am now addressing myself, I would consider I had entered into the recesses of knowledge and into the realms of high instruction, which, of course, I am not asking to be done; but to those who may reach that source, which I am not undertaking to reach at this time, I would say, "Beware, lest you get into the bill something that will add serious disaster to the situation and upset the claims we have made that we have already recovered."

The National Industrial Recovery Act, section 1, says that it is enacted because "a national emergency, productive of wide-spread unemployment and disorganization of industry, exists." Be careful that you do not come in here day after tomorrow, or at whatever hour it is decided to pass the law again, and say again that "a national emergency, productive of widespread unemployment and disorganization of industry, exists", because if you do you are going to be right in the same wagon rut that you said you were in 2 years ago. I am fearful something like that may be found to exist in the new legislation.

Has that condition been corrected under the N. R. A.? Let us read a little further. It is said that this condition "burdens interstate and foreign commerce." I wonder what foreign commerce it burdens. As I said, these things have been changed; the regulations relating to foreign commerce have been changed from time to time so as not to hurt individuals. There is an exception in the importation and exportation of gold that has to be considered, but that has reached a fairly elastic condition.

First, the gold clause only provided that the man who had gold in this country had to bring in the gold, and it did not affect the man who wanted to ship the gold out of the from Louisiana into an investigating committee?

country. Next, a provision was incorporated that the man who had gold to send out of the country could not send it out; he had to bring that gold in, too. Then, under some subsequent ruling that was adopted, they amended all the other acts so that they might change even that, and it was provided that newly mined gold could be exported out of the country. Of course, if we can export $100 worth of newly mined gold to England, where we find it can be matched up with the American dollar devalued down to 59 cents, then the newly mined gold is worth 40 cents more on the dollar than the old piece of gold. In other words, that gold is worth 41 cents less than the newly mined gold.

I am not modern in this matter. I only kept in touch with this matter until last month. I do not know what the regulation may be today.

A cargo of gold newly mined is worth 41 percent—no, it is worth about 78 percent or maybe 80 percent more than old gold. I have not figured that out exactly. If I had time I could take a pencil and figure out just what it is; but a cargo of newly mined gold for export is worth about 80 percent more than a cargo of old gold for export under the newly made regulations.

Who is the authority that has been checked up and examined and placed in charge of the rules and regulations which have been prescribed by the N. R. A. code for the handling of gold in the United States? I have not been able in the little search I have made to find out who it is that is in charge of any of the regulations.

Mr. President, I rose somewhat out of order while we were considering the War Department appropriation bill. I want to admit and confess my inability to be very much informed on what are the provisions of the War Department appropriation bill. I have not read the bill because it would not make any difference whether I read it or not as matters now go. I have not gone into these unnecessary things that do not do any good. I save my time. In other words, I do not go around here and waste my time delving into things that I have no business inquiring into. I have learned better than to do that. I am a member of a legislative body, not a law-enacting body. I have realized that there is a distinction there whether there is any difference or not. Therefore I have not wasted my time reading the various and sundry bills which are introduced and brought before the Senate. I wait until somebody tells what it is all about and I do not particularly inquire about the necessity for them. I wait for results to speak for themselves.

But I want to enter my protest against being blamed for the consequences of these laws. I want to enter my protest and I expect my good friend, the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lewis] to carry my protest back to the proper place where it ought to be taken and inform them that I have protested against being blamed for anything that has been done here in the last 2 years.

I want further to say that I desire to enter an official protest and demand the protection of the United States Senate from outsiders and insiders heaping upon me any blame for what is going on in this country, because the Lord knows there is nobody on earth who has had as little to do with what is going on in the United States as I have. I am going to expect that protest to be entered on the proper journal and to be carried to the proper sources. I am going to expect the protection of the Senate from this time on in case any spokesman for or against the administration undertakes to charge me in public or in any other way with having anything to do with the wreckage of the present day and time.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. LEWIS. May I ask my able friend, since he has committed to me the transmission of some message in his behalf, since he says he does not know whether this is a legislative body or a law-making body, whether he recognizes that it has been converted by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana into an investigating committee?

Mr. LONG. The last time I saw them they were investigating. I just take whatever light is behind me for the light that is in front of me.

Mr. LEWIS. Does the able Senator from Louisiana feel that he ever got any light from anywhere?

Mr. LONG. I do not know. That is something to consider. The point I am expecting of my friend from Illinois is this: I am not appealing to my friend in any except his official capacity. In a way the Senator from Illinois is a hired man of ours here. He is the "whip" on this side of the chamber. "Let him who is the greatest exalt himself the least." In other words, the Senator is a servant of the balance of us. I am a free agent of my own. But those whom we have called and placed in a capacity of influence are the ones to whom we look to guard us from unnecessary persecution. What I am going to expect in the future is that I be divested of any charges of wreckage for anything that has occurred in this country, because the Senator knows I could not have had anything to do with it even if I had wanted something to do with it.

Mr. Hugh Johnson, who was here under the N. R. A., made a little speech, and the Senator from Arkansas says I did not answer Mr. Johnson. True, I made a radio speech last night. My friend the Senator from Washington [Mr. Schwellenbach], who sits back of me here, will certify to the fact that I made a radio speech at a very late hour, for he said to me this morning that he listened to me for 10 minutes, and it was such a very wonderful speech that he immediately went to sleep. [Laughter.] Therefore, Mr. President, assuming that the speech had the same effect on all the rest of the Members of the Senate as it had on that Senator, no answer has been made to this body, and General Johnson's statement still stands extant, and no one knows of any reply that has been made to it.

I do not think we should proceed hastily with legislation today. I think there is confusion about this War Department bill. The fact of the case is, I do not think half of us understand it. I do not know whether that makes any difference or not, but there are some letters piling in from constituents inquiring from me just what the provisions of the bill are, and I should like to be able to write them and tell them what the provisions are before I vote on the bill, because when I get back home I am supposed to understand it. So I do not think we ought to proceed in haste on this legislation today. I should like to see the motion of the senior Senator from Utah [Mr. King] postponed. I should not like to see hasty action taken on it. That is a very drastic motion.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana does not seem to realize that the motion has been disposed of. [Laughter.]

Mr. LONG. Oh, it has? Is that so? I thank the Senator, but there is a disagreement in the Senate. Another Senator insists that it has not been disposed of.

Mr. GLASS. The motion to recommit has been voted down.

Mr. LONG. No; it was not passed on.

Mr. GLASS. Well, let us see.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair ruled that the motion to recommit was lost.

Mr. GLASS. That is what I said.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I was trying to get the floor at the time, and the Chair never did announce anything, did he? I was doing all I could to secure recognition.

Mr. GLASS. But the Senator did not get the floor quickly enough. [Laughter.]

Mr. LONG. Then I shall have to enter a motion to reconsider that vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognized the Senator from Louisiana after the vote had been taken, and regrets that he did not observe that the Senator was trying to obtain the floor while the result of the vote was being announced.

Mr. LONG. That being the case, I am certain the occupant of the chair will not object to setting the vote aside and letting us take it over again when I shall have concluded my argument on it, because I was trying to get the floor. Mr. GLASS. The Senator is at liberty to speak on the matter even though it has been disposed of, because everybody else speaks to something that is not before the Senate.

Mr. LONG. That is the general custom, I understand.

Mr. GLASS. I may say, incidentally, that I have here a resolution, which I am going to offer after a while, to prevent a repetition of that sort of thing.

Mr. LONG. I am afraid the Senator's own vote will be the only one he will get for it.

Mr. GLASS. Oh, no; the Senator from Louisiana is mis-

Mr. LONG. I should hate to have to go back and apply that rule to the Senator from Virginia, because I should have missed hearing some very good speeches that he made when I first came here.

The first day I came to the United States Senate, after I had been sworn in-because I went back home a day or two later; I took the oath here, and then I went back home to get my clothes-when I got back the Senate had up some motion to confirm some man for some office. When I reached the Senate Chamber on that day, the first man I heard speaking was the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. speaking under the head of the confirmation of somebody for something, I believe. It might have been a bill. I do not think it was; but the Senator from Virginia was trying to disengage himself from an imagination as to whether or not what he saw on the head of the Secretary of Agriculture was a turnip or a head. I listened to that speech, and while I did not exactly understand the particular way under which it came, I later found that it was entirely relevant and was within the rules of the Senate.

I hope we shall not have any effort made here to change those rules. I do not know whether or not I am speaking on the War Department bill yet, because I am going to come to that matter. The fact of the case is, I do not know what the War Department bill is. I have heard some discussions here, but how am I to know whether the speeches that are made by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark] are about the War Department bill or something else? How am I to know what these speeches are all about unless I take what I hear here on the floor of the Senate and what I may have a chance to read in the bill? But who knows what is in the N. R. A.? Why have us go to the worry of considering a mere five or six pages when none of us knows what is in 900 books?

I am told that one of these books is as big as a Sears-Roebuck catalog. One of the books prescribing the rules and regulations under which one of these industries operates is as big as a Sears-Roebuck catalog! That is what I am told. They had a rule that they were proposing for hotels, I am told, under which a hotel man, if he had a good friend, could not even give him the right to sleep in his hotel free at night; he had to charge him for lodging. If a man who was running a hotel had a good friend, he could not even compliment his friend with a free meal of victuals; he had to charge him for it. If a man was running a barroom, he could not even give a friend a drink, but he had to charge him for it. That was all in the code.

A number of years ago I heard a story of how a man went into a barroom, called for a drink, and had the drink. After he drank the drink he told the fellow at the bar to charge the drink to him. The bartender yelled back to the boss of the barroom, and said, "Is this man good for a drink?" The boss said, "Has he had the drink?" The bartender said, "He has had it." The boss said, "He is good for the drink." [Laughter.]

How is the code going to work in a case like that? They have a rule on it. They have a rule that a man cannot be given anything at all in a hotel, it does not make any difference what it is. They have a rule that undercharges cannot be made. They have a rule as to the hours between which charges have to be made and services have to be performed; and that does not end the rules. The agents they appoint have the right to walk out and, under their hats, carry a pad, and take out a pencil and a paper and write out another rule, and that is just as much law as the Constitution of the United States is a law. That is the N. R. A. When one of these agents goes out under the N. R. A., or one of these rule committees, or whatever you want to call them, they have the right to write out the rules.

Now, let me tell you how that works.

Down in Louisiana State University we needed a number of uniforms for a band down there, 150 uniforms. We ordered these uniforms for the band. The uniforms were due to be delivered at a certain time. We had been invited to go up to the State of Tennessee to attend a ceremony there, to be held at Vanderbilt University in the city of Nashville. Lo and behold, when the time was about up when we were to go, we did not have any uniforms to wear. The band did not have any kind of uniforms, or the cadets, either. I believe it was the cadets who did not have the uniforms.

What did I have to do? Why, Mr. President, I telephoned down to the man to whom we had given the contract to make uniforms for Louisiana State University, and he informed me that under the code there were rules and regulations that forbade him to make the uniforms except along a certain line and at a certain time, and that it would be about 2 or 3 more weeks at the very earliest before he would be allowed to deliver the uniforms to us, regardless of what he wanted to do.

I said, "Is not there some way in which I can correct that?" He said, "Well, you ought to know. If there is any way to correct it, you ought to know." So I sent for the book of rules, and they brought me up a book of rules and a lot of subrules and regulations, and I went through the thing there for about 6 hours. Finally I telephoned to some fellow up here in New York City whose name I saw printed in it as being chairman of something, and I said to him, "Here, I do not know anything about this rule book. I am only a lawyer. I cannot understand this book. The man who has the goods to make down here does not understand the book. I am spending $25 to telephone you to see if you cannot tell me what I can do to get uniforms to put on the backs of these men. These men need the uniforms to wear. We want to buy the uniforms. The man who has the order wants to make the uniforms. Now, you tell me how I can get the uniforms."

He said, "I will tell you what to do. You arrange through Mr. So-and-so, who is the chairman of this thing, and he will tell you whether they can get a suspension of rule so-and-so, and of section so-and-so, and of some other subdivision so-and-so, and of some other subdivision of some other subsection." [Laughter.]

I said, "Where is that man?" He said, "He is off for the week-end." [Laughter.] He said, "This is Friday night, and he will be back from the country next week. Monday is a holiday, and he ought to be back here about Tuesday at noon."

I said, "I cannot wait until Tuesday noon to find the man, because that will be 4 more days gone, and our train has to leave about Friday night. Does anybody know where that man goes during the week-end with the rule book and the law underneath his hat? Where", I said, "can I find the law?"

He said, "I don't know where he goes. He has a camp, I think, out here in Connecticut somewhere. Perhaps you can find him over there."

So I got back on the telephone, and I telephoned to a couple of men I knew in New York, and I said, "Won't you please go out and ascertain for me how I can find out where this man is? Hire an automobile and go and locate the law. I want to find the law, so that I can get suits of clothes to put on the backs of 700 young men who are going to Nashville to attend a ceremony at Vanderbilt University. We have a big day coming up there. I have five special trains. I have bands and everything ready to go, and I want to get some clothes for the young men to wear. You go and locate the law. Spare no expense."

About 3 o'clock in the morning one of them rang me and said, "I think by this time tomorrow I shall be able to send you a telephone number where you can reach the man who has in charge regulating that thing." [Laughter.] I said, "All right; but see if you can't telephone me a little sooner." Lo and behold, about midnight the next night he telephoned me and gave me a telephone number and said, "I have solved the problem! I have found him! I have found the law! Here is a telephone number." He said, "Now, don't you let anybody know how you got this. Don't say anything to anybody to the effect that I gave it to you. Here is a telephone number where you can find the man who is the chairman of that particular division of the code governing this matter."

So I got on the telephone, and I spent $25 more, and I rang him up and I said, "This is Huey Long talking. I am United States Senator from Louisiana. I am down here in Baton Rouge, La., and I have a bunch of students that want to go to Nashville, Tenn. We have ordered about seven or eight hundred or a thousand uniforms that we cannot get made down here because the rule book will not let the man make them." I said, "Now, will you just help me out of this thing? If you will, if at any time anything ever comes my way so that I can do you a favor, you can certainly count on my doing it, if it is legitimate and proper." I do not know whether I said the last part of that or not. [Laughter.]

I said, "You just let me know."

He said, "This is rather late. I will have to think that matter over."

I gave him the name and address. I said, "I understand that all in the world you have to do is to write out a telegram and change the law insofar as it affects these uniforms going to the Louisiana State University; that you can say that, inasmuch as this is a purchase to be made by the State, and inasmuch as there is an emergency existing, you suspend these rules, and let me hire men to make up the coats and the pants as fast as they can make them."

He said, "I will see about it and let you know right away."

Lo and behold, he did. At the end of 2 days' time he located everything, and the man wired back, after I had spent $150 in telephoning, and perhaps a little bit more, and said it was all right; they could go ahead and make the uniforms. So they went ahead and made the uniforms, and just before it was time for the train to whistle and go out, we put the last pair of pants on the last student and went to Nashville and beat the Vanderbilt football team.

I have not seen or heard of the man since. If, in order to maintain him in any job he has, it was necessary to vote for some amendment of the N. R. A., I would be tempted to do it. But who is to tell me what the law is next year, next week, or next month? That is why I do not want to have to vote on this military bill.

Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Virginia—I understand the next thing that is to come up is the works bill, and I should like to see the works bill put off right now. There is a lot of confusion about the works bill, and I should like to see it put off, and I will tell the Senate why I say that.

The newspapers are saying that there is an attempt to switch some votes, and they say some of the gentlemen are being called in and told what they will get in their States if they will change their votes and go for the bill.

Mr. President, I have friends on both sides of this question. I do not know whether there is any truth in those newspaper reports or not, and I do not know whether it is proper or not; but I do know what is fair and what is right, and I am going to insist that my friends over here and over on the other side who have been voting against the McCarran amendment are entitled to just as good treatment as are those men who come over. In other words, I do not think it is fair to say to a man over here, "You have been voting for the McCarran amendment. If we can get that McCarran amendment out of the way, we are going to spend $150,000,000 in your State, and this is how we will spend it "—and leave these gentlemen here, who have already been voting against the McCarran amendment, without getting anything. That is not fair.

How do I know but that I might be in the market, if that thing is right? [Laughter.] I might be open to a bargain about this matter. In other words, I am mighty well convinced that the principle of the McCarran amendment is right. But, you know, circumstances alter cases [laughter], and you can never tell just what is going to change the situation.

It is not right, it is not fair, to come here in a big hurry and take up this bill and make a promise to just one or two of us, and then not remember that you ought to promise something to the balance of us over here, some of us who have always been against the McCarran amendment, and some of us who might be pulled off if we got the right consideration.

My vote counts for just as much as anybody else's. My vote is just as much as anybody else's vote. It is just 1, but that vote is 1 vote, and if they need but 2 votes, I resent anybody calling on anybody for a trade without calling on me first. [Laughter.]

What right have they to go out and call some man who voted for this McCarran amendment and tell him what they are going to do for him and leave me out? Why should they discriminate? Why not indicate how much it is worth to get a vote and give me a chance to bid first on that matter? I might cut the price a little bit. [Laughter.] I do not approve of this kind of a system.

Then, again, I am a party man. I am a dyed-in-the-wool party man. I do not know just what party I am in right now, but I am for the party! [Laughter.]

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I wonder whether the Senator from Louisiana thinks the administration ought to call for bids before presenting one of these bills?

Mr. LONG. I did not say that, but I am making objection. It would be better than the way the newspapers say it is being done. In other words, we always let anybody bid on any public contract we have in my State. We just advertise the thing. We advertise that we need a man for a job, or somebody to do the work. We advertise and the low bidder gets it.

When a vote or two is needed to take out the McCarran amendment, I do not see what right they have to call in the Senator from Washington and give him the first chance to switch, when I might be willing to do it for less. [Laughter.] In other words, it does not seem fair.

As I was saying, I am a party man. I do not know what party I belong to, but when I get there I will be bitter; I will be convinced, and when I find out where I belong in this matter, nobody is going to switch me. I do not know where that is. I am very bitter on this McCarran amendment, but for all I know I might be just as bitter the other way; I do not know.

I do not think there is anything that will affect anybody that will not affect me. I think I am just as easy to get as anybody else, and I am resenting the fact that I have never been given a chance. I have been condemned without ever being given a hearing. They have not even considered the Senator from Washington, who asks this question. He sits over here and votes against the McCarran amendment, and his vote would be just as good as anybody else's vote against the McCarran amendment. He voted for it, and his switch-over would have the same effect as anybody else's switch-over. I dare say they never thought to call in the Senator from Washington and make him that proposition.

Let us have some honor about this thing and do it the right way. I am not going to say that that is not right; that is not exactly the way I would do things if it were left to me. I do not say that they even have done it; I can only say what the newspapers say they have done or what they want to do. But I do say, let us have this thing on an honorable basis. That is what we ought to do.

Mr. President, all lines and occupations are out of existence. This N. R. A. system has extended to many people. They tell me that second-story workers have a code, too. It was not under the N. R. A., but they tell me they have a code. Manifestly, if a second-story worker went out at 10 o'clock and another went out at 11 o'clock, that would be unfair, and destructive competition, and some of those men would be working 7 hours and some of them would be working 6. So they tell me they have an understanding that nobody goes out before everybody is notified, and they all come in at the same time. They work on a uniform basis. They may have a code or they may not.

However, at least the United States Senate can have itself an N. R. A. code. That is how we can justify another N. R. A. law. I am going to make a motion that the Senator from Virginia amend the resolution, and I am going to move—and I move now, and I want this taken down—I move that we have a code under the N. R. A. prescribed for the United States Senate as to the terms and conditions upon which a vote may be changed here in consideration for public work to be done in one State. I move that there be a committee of three appointed to draft that code. I move that I be made chairman of that committee. [Laughter.]

Mr. DUFFY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. DUFFY. Would the Senator be willing to amend his motion so as to provide that the Senator from Louisiana should be limited to one speech a day? [Laughter.]

Mr. LONG. Well, if I get what I want, I might make less than that. [Laughter.]

I think we ought to have this committee appointed. Let us have rules and regulations. The Senator from Nevada has been presenting the McCarran amendment on the basis of logic and law and principle. I have not heard any argument the Senator from Nevada has made except one based on the difference between right and wrong, good and bad. That is the only weapon my friend the Senator from Nevada has to fight with, and those of us who are enrolled today under what we think is the logic of his argument have nothing at all with which to appeal to Senators except the plea to decide whether it is right or wrong, whether it is good or bad.

If the newspapers are to be believed—and, of course, I have an abiding faith and confidence in the newspapers—there is nobody in the Senate who has expressed as much dependence upon the eminent newspapers and public journals of this country as I have from day to day; there is nobody who now sits in this body who believes in the truthfulness and the reliability which can be attached to the public press, probably, as much as I do; and there is nobody who is as deeply indebted to the newspapers of this country, particularly those of my own State, as I myself. So, even though I undertook to disagree with the newspapers, of course I would have to accord them prima facie the acknowledgment that they were right and correct.

The newspapers say—of course, they may not be right and the statement may not be true—that the drive is on to get enough votes to beat the McCarran amendment, and they say that they have called in certain Senators and have told those certain Senators, "Up here in this State or over here in this State or down here in this State, what do you want? You want this over there at Possum Neck, you want this over at Coon Hollow, and you want this at this point and this over here. Let us see. That gives you a hundred and some odd million."

He says, "That is not enough."

They say, "We will put something else in there. You would like to have something else? Just what is it you want?"

He says, "I do not know. You know, over there in so and so I should like to have something else."

They said, "All right, we will put that in there. How much do you want?"

He says, "Hold on; I can not make a deal by myself, I got some of the people to go home and talk about this thing, and tomorrow morning maybe I will bring you back somebody with me and see what he wants."

Then he comes back the next day, and says, "Here I am."
Do you think, Mr. President, that I ever thought I would be worth $100,000,000 in the Senate? Do you think I ever imagined any such exaggerated value of myself? I know there are a great many of my colleagues who think I am an egotist, and a great many who are not my colleagues who think that; but never in my exaggerated imagination of myself did I think I would be worth $100,000,000.

That is too much money to talk about. I claim to my people that I am unbribed and unbribable, but I have never had $100,000,000 offered to me, Mr. President; and I should like to weigh the circumstances to see what the effect would be. I do not think it would be all that some might hope for, but I should like to weigh the circumstances and see. I should like to have the honor of having that offered to me, whether I take it or not. That is how I feel about this thing.

If it is necessary to change 2 votes on the McCarran amendment, what we ought to do is this: Let us pause a while and think over this matter. Let us get the Senator from Vermont to postpone this joint resolution until Monday, and between now and Monday we will all get off among ourselves, and I will say this: If that amendment has to be voted down, and if they have, say, two or three hundred million dollars to pay to get the additional votes, I move that we split it up and divide it among us, and not let any one man have it all. [Laughter.]

I move that we just put this thing on an equitable basis. Perhaps the original discoverer of it would be entitled to a little bit more than the balance of us. Give him proprietary rights as the adventurer who made the original discovery, but, within certain limits, give us all something of it. It is not right to leave it all to one. That is what I want to do, I want to hold this thing up.

Now, here is the thing to proceed under if you are going to have to draft the N. R. A. Act again: We shall have to come in here with an amendment to the N. R. A. statute; and let us amend the N. R. A. statute so as to provide that legislative bodies can have a code. You may say, "These things would not be legitimate in a legislative code." Well, neither was a violation of the antitrust law legitimate before they had the N. R. A., Mr. President. If we can excuse the corporations and combinations who go into private agreements and labor arrangements for uniform understandings, why can we not excuse Members of the United States Senate who go in here for uniform understandings? Neither one of them is what is called in law a "malum in se crime." understanding is, from my study of criminal law, that there were two forms of criminal offenses, one called "malum in se" and one called "malum prohibitum." I think the last classification has something to do with prohibition, and things like that, because they are prohibited. There is no "malum in se" crime in members of the legislature having an understanding any more than there is any "malum in se" crime in corporations and combinations having an understanding and a monopoly fixed as to prices and other agreements.

So, therefore, let us amend the N. R. A. statute and broaden the language so as to write in the Senate, and write in the House of Representatives.

Mr. President, it may be that some Senators feel that T have not been speaking on the facts. Some of the Members of the Senate have taken this matter entirely too lightly. I have not resented the laughter. I have not resented the mirth. Of course, I know the matter was taken very lightly, and I am not going to resent the fact that many of my colleagues have smiled as I have gone over the facts; but what I am submitting are the facts.

The poor laboring element are on the outside, pleading for the prevailing wage. The poor laborer has not a thing on God's earth to offer you but his heart and his hand; that is all. That goes a certain distance with some people and then, after that, it fails to go, of course, in the circumstances that naturally come about. But we have the joint resolution here; we have the argument and the logic of the laboring man, the argument and the logic of the other people who say that the whole thing is a mess. They are depending upon argument and upon logic; and the argument and logic, according to the newspapers, are met by the fact that we Senators who may be voting against the measure are to be called aside and shown how much it can mean to us by understandings which others are able to make, provided we come over and assure the passage of the joint resolution.

Is that the way to enact legislation in the Senate? I want Senators to remember this: No man is allowed here in any manner to question the motives of a Senator, and I decline to do it. I decline, Mr. President, to be one who smeared the escutcheon of a Senator; but I also decline to be one of those who say that I have eyes and see not, or ears and hear not, when we are being flaunted with rumors and publications every day that "the drive is on to get Senator So-and-so", and that he has been called in and told what he can get for his State if he does it. That is the problem the Senate has brought before it. That is not the way to help the workingman.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. GLASS. If the Senator from Louisiana will permit us to pass the War Department appropriation bill, and then let me call up House Joint Resolution 117 and make a brief explanation of it, I can assure the Senator that the controverted provisions of the joint resolution-and I think they are only two-will not be reached until Monday.

Mr. LONG. I thank the Senator.

Mr. GLASS. I make that suggestion so that the Senator can save his voice for the radio, and speak in a more appro-priate and impressive way on Monday about this measure than he is doing now.

Mr. LONG. In other words, the Senator means that we will pass the War Department appropriation bill, and then the Senator will explain the work-relief joint resolution, and that will be all we will do until Monday?

Mr. GLASS. I shall attempt to have acted on the provisions of the joint resolution which are not in controversy. and on which the Senate has already voted, and leave the controversial provisions until Monday.

Mr. LONG. All right. I agree. O. K. [Laughter.]

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from Virginia concerning what he has just stated. Am I to understand from the Senator from Virginia that if House Joint Resolution 117 shall come before the Senate this afternoon or tomorrow none of the controversial amendments or provisions will be brought to the attention of the Senate until Monday?

Mr. GLASS. Yes, Mr. President. I suggest that the controversial provisions of the bill be permitted to go over until Monday.

Mr. McNARY. What is a controversial question sometimes is a matter of difference of opinion. Is it proposed that amendments or provisions to which objection shall be made shall not come before the Senate until Monday?

Mr. GLASS. No; not until Monday.

Mr. McNARY. And also those to which objection has been made?

Mr. GLASS. They will not be taken up until Monday.

Mr. McNARY. Very well.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I have sent to the desk today two amendments which will not be printed until Monday. I trust that within the agreement of the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee will be included an opportunity to present such amendments as the Senate may not have an oportunity to consider this afternoon.

Mr. GLASS. To what measure is the Senator referring? Mr. COSTIGAN. To House Joint Resolution 117.

Mr. GLASS. Of course I shall not undertake to preclude any Senator from offering amendments to the bill on Monday. I could not do that.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5913) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin] yesterday questioned some figures which I put in the RECORD, and I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point a statement with regard to the universities which I mentioned yesterday, and a statement which is made by Edwin C. Johnson, secretary of the Committee on Militarism in Education, address 2929 Broadway, New York City.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so

The matter referred to is as follows:

A STUDY OF THE COMPARATIVE COST AND EFFICIENCY OF COMPULSORY AS AGAINST ELECTIVE R. O. T. C. UNITS

The greater efficiency of elective R. O. T. C. units, as against compulsory units, both with respect to number of potential Reserve officers produced and cost of their production, is shown by the following tables:

I. COMPULSORY RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS UNITS

	Enrollments 1		Costs 3			Average cost per
Name	Basic	Ad- vanced	Personnel pay	Mainte- nance	Total	potential Reserve officer
University of Maine	517	39	$21, 958, 80	$15, 691, 24	$37, 650, 04	$965
Rutgers University	604		24, 233, 16			636
University of Maryland	678		18, 909, 00
Penn State College	1,694		49, 305, 17
University of Illinois	2, 287		168, 916. 57
Iowa State College	731		78, 007. 84
University of Missouri Oklahoma Agricultural	709	145	83, 973. 66	35, 419. 57	119, 393. 23	840 and Mechanical College. Oregon Agriculture Col-	1, 146	74	26, 932. 00	48, 790. 99	75, 722. 99	1, 023
lege	597	162	71, 867, 45	49, 063, 09	120, 930, 54	746
Utah State Agriculture	100000			100000	12250000
College	445	37	16, 862. 00	14, 577. 00	31, 439. 00	849
University of Washing-	Valva		20020150	3.51.00	20.020.00
ton	942	97	59, 046. 19	19, 986, 49	79, 032. 68	814
Total	10, 350	1, 457			1, 077, 825. 76	739

II. ELECTIVE	PECEDUE	OFFICEDS'	T'D ATNITAGE	COPPE	DILLIALL

University of Pennsyl-	100		ESS I	110000
vania	284	152	$32, 828, 46	$18, 665, 12	$51, 493, 58	$338
University of Pittsburgh_	527	140	31, 388, 20	18, 166, 89	49, 555. 09	353
Carnegie Institute of		20110	8886600000		SALTAGERA
Technology	274	100	16, 199, 20	16, 822, 76	33, 021. 96	330
Wofford College	207	76	11, 419, 10	11, 589, 10	23, 008, 20	302
University of Cincinnati_	341	282	33, 785, 37	24, 075. 03	57, 860, 40	205
Western Reserve Univer-	400	1111		A Street Land
sity	63	42	5, 472. 00	4, 272. 21	9, 744, 21	232
Knox College	91	44	9, 819. 03	3, 755. 62	13, 574, 65	308
University of Michigan.	378	141			41, 284. 68	292
University of Wisconsin	342	117	31, 563, 22	17, 189, 69	48, 752. 91	408
University of Wichita	160	44			17, 769. 21	403
Washington University.	216	105	21, 977. 80	11, 604. 57	33, 582. 37	319
Total:	2, 883	1, 243			379, 647. 26	305

¹ Official War Department figures as of Nov. 1, 1932. (See U. S. House hearings War Department appropriation bill for 1934, pp. 512-525.) Later figures are given in published hearings on more recent War Department appropriation bills but, unfortunately they are given for the Nation as a whole only and are not given for each school or college having military units.
¹ Official War Department figures for fiscal year ending June 30, 1931. (See U. S. House hearings, War Department appropriation bill for 1933, pp. 809-815.) As with enrollment figures, more recent cost figures on the Reserve Officers Training Corps for the Nation as a whole have been published, but they are not divided according to the various institutions concerned.

The foregoing tables show several things which support the contention that, from the standpoint of military utility and Federal policy, elective R. O. T. C. units are preferable to compulsory

COMPULSORY UNITS MORE EXPENSIVE THAN ELECTIVE AND YET HAVE A LOWER AVERAGE IN PRODUCTION OF POTENTIAL RESERVE OFFICERS

Lower average in Production of Potential reserve officers

The group of 11 institutions having compulsory R. O. T. C. units, listed in the first table, have a total basic enrollment of 10,350. The number of advanced-course students, potential Reserve officers, produced by these institutions is 1,457, which represents 14 percent of the basic enrollment for the given units. The cost for maintaining these military units upon a compulsory basis amounts to $1,077,825.76, an average of $97,984.16 for each institution. The average cost of producing the given number of potential Reserve officers by these eleven institutions maintaining compulsory R. O. T. C. units is $739 per head.

The second table lists 11 institutions maintaining R. O. T. C. units upon an elective basis. The total basic enrollment is comparatively small, only 2,883, whereas the number of students in the advanced courses, potential Reserve officers, reaches 1,243, a figure which is 43.1 percent of the basic course enrollment of the the advanced courses, potential Reserve officers, reaches 1,243, a figure which is 43.1 percent of the basic course enrollment of the given units and which is almost equal to the total number of potential Reserve officers produced by the compulsory unit group. The cost of maintaining elective units in these 11 institutions is $379,647.26, or an average cost of $34,513.38 per institution. These two figures are 65 to 70 percent smaller than the corresponding figures for the compulsory unit group. Accordingly, the average cost of producing the given number of potential Reserve officers by the institutions maintaining elective R. O. T. C. units is $305 per head, or 59 percent less than the average cost of their production in the institutions in the compulsory unit group.

The great waste in the compulsory units is caused by the necessity of providing uniforms, equipment, and instruction for the large numbers of unwilling students who are drafted as cadets in the basic courses. These students never continue with the advanced R. O. T. C. courses (which are optional everywhere except at a few openly advertised military schools) without which they cannot be eligible for appointment as Reserve officers. Moreover, the hostility of these students to the military courses imposed upon them against their choice impairs the morale of the units in which they are enrolled, retards the progress and reduces the quality of the work of those students who are honestly and sincerely interested in becoming Reserve officers.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, an editorial appearing on page 290 of the Nation for March 13, 1935, having to do directly with the appropriation bill which is before us, and also an article appearing on page 292 of the same issue of the Nation, entitled "We Must Not Arm Against Japan!"

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The articles referred to are as follows:

[From the Nation of Mar. 13, 1935]

The articles referred to are as follows:

[From the Nation of Mar. 13, 1935]

"It must be with a rifle and a bayonet, cold steel," Brig. Gen. Seth E. Howard, the man responsible for the National Guard in California, assured the House subcommittee in the hearing on the War Department bill. He was compilating about the meager protection of California against labor troubles. "We have in California 6,000,000 people and short of 6,500 troops. Troops to be effective must be armed with rifles, because a pistol is no arm to place in the hands of troops with these groups of disturbers that we are confronted with in the country today. Neither are clubs." Cold steel, he went on to say, was essential. He admitted he was giving rifles to the Coast Artillery and training the men to use them. "If we get medical units we will give them rifles and make riflemen out of them." The general then went on in a mood of candor: "I want to advise you that today I have my troops under arms, in violation, possibly, of the regulations of the National Guard Bureau. But it is necessary for us to have our picked men with their uniforms and rifles, at their homes in Sacramento. I have two companies on guard, I have the arsenal under guard, and the city and county authorities have increased their force by 300 or 400 percent." Asked how many men had been responsible for the "revolutionary" condition in California last summer, the general replied: "In the neighborhood of 1,300. There was a very small number of actual agitators, originally less than 300."

Further militarization of American youth was advocated before the same committee by General MacArthur, Chief of Staff. He has his eye on the strapping young men in the C. C. C. camps. "These men are all processed," he said, using the professional term. "They are ready and fit for military training." The particular place in national life he would have them fill is the enlisted Reserve, an element in national defense now neglected. "I think nothing would be finer than to take these C. C. C. men wh his medals and drove the bonus army out of Washington.

[From the Nation of Mar. 13, 1935] WE MUST NOT ARM AGAINST JAPAN!

WE MUST NOT ARM AGAINST JAPAN!

One need not be particularly discerning to realize that the administration's $800,000,000 war budget for 1935-36 is directed specifically against Japan. A glance at the nature of the proposed expenditures is sufficient to confirm this assertion. The bulk of the $200,000,000 which is being asked in excess of the normal budget is to be utilized for the naval-construction program authorized by the Vinson bill. An enlarged Navy would only be needed in a conflict with one of two great powers—Great Britain or Japan—and since there has been no period in recent history when cooperation between the two Anglo-Saxon countries has been stronger than at present, it may be assumed that we are concerned solely with our Asiatic rival. Similarly, it is significant that the new Army appropriations are to be expended chiefly for airplanes and the strengthening of the defenses of the Pacific coast. The Army also expects to obtain an additional appropriation out of P. W. A. funds for an air base in Hawaii.

Nor is it difficult to understand why certain groups should

Nor is it difficult to understand why certain groups should desire to increase America's fighting strength as a means of restraining Japan. During the past 4 years the Japanese nation has literally run amuck. It has conquered Manchuria and Jehol by armed force; it has engaged in an undeclared and unprovoked war in Shanghai, and has twice invaded North China; it has increased its own armament expenditures by 130 percent, and served notice of its refusal to be bound by the Washington naval agreement. If we accept the traditional militarist view that preparedness is the best guaranty of peace, there is reason to assume that an increase of armaments would add to our security against this mad-dog nation. This assumption overlooks the fact, however, that the proposed armament expenditures are not really defensive in character, and are not so regarded abroad. A very small proin character, and are not so regarded abroad. A very small proportion of our naval appropriation is to be spent on ships which are strictly defensive in nature, while the enlargement of our already powerful air fleet clearly suggests a war in which we are the attackers. If self-defense alone were desired, the United States could revise its military and naval policies with a saving of at least half our present war budget. But all our present policies indicate that "defense" is merely a euphemism for the protection of our financial stake in the Far East against Japanese imperial aspirations. imperial aspirations.

imperial aspirations.

It is evident, therefore, that a suitable defense program must be conditioned by the larger aspects of foreign policy. The chief difficulty in this connection is that the United States has falled to formulate a clear-cut far-eastern policy to meet the present crisis. We have resented Japanese aggression and sought to preserve the open door through nonrecognition of the changed status in Manchuria. But rather than face the implications of our position vis-à-vis Japan, we have been content to drift to the very brink of catastrophe. This lack of policy is due largely to our inability to choose among three possible alternatives. In the first place there are doubtless many groups who would like to see the United States pursue an expansionist course in line with that followed in the past. Since such a program—with its emphasis on the open door pursue an expansionist course in line with that followed in the past. Since such a program—with its emphasis on the open door and the territorial integrity of China—is in direct conflict with Japan's avowed pan-Asiatic policy, it is only logical that we should implement it by strengthening our defenses in the East, fortifying our Pacific possessions, and creating a Navy of sufficient size to defeat Japan in its home waters. Obviously this would imply a force far greater than is even now proposed, and, what is more serious, it would inevitably lead to war.

The degrees involved in this course have led a number of

The dangers involved in this course have led a number of observers, liberals and conservatives alike, to favor the second alternative—complete withdrawal from the Far East. If the United States were to abandon the Philippines and the various other Pacific islands, withdraw its military and naval forces from China, and be prepared to take such financial losses as might result from this action, there would appear to be little cause for friction between this country and Japan. In support of this step it may be urged that the whole American investment in the Far East is be urged that the whole American investment in the Far East is less than the amount asked for the Army and Navy in the 1935 Budget, while our investments in China and the Philippines combined are less than the sum which General MacArthur is attempting to obtain from the work-relief funds.

Although it is impossible to doubt the sincerity and idealism Although it is impossible to doubt the sincerty and idealism which motivate many Americans to advocate complete abdication of our position in the East, one must question the practicability of such action. Neither nations nor classes have been known to surrender their vested interests voluntarily. Under the prevailing economic system, surpluses tend inevitably to accumulate, and it is fatal to deny them an outlet. Moreover, there is reason to doubt whether abandonment of the East would actually eliminate the basic causes of international friction. The whole movement toward national isolation merely tends to accentuate the struggle for raw materials and markets which is the basic cause of modern war. To leave China at the mercy of Japan would only strengthen the Japanese Empire in its conflict with the empires of the West.

the Japanese Empire in its conflict with the empires of the West. For those who recoil from the prospect of unbridled Japanese aggression, as well as from the specter of war, there remains yet another alternative. By associating itself more fully with the collective systems of security which are developing throughout the world, it is possible for the United States to aid in restraining Japan without setting itself up as the chief opponent of that country's imperialistic aspirations. To make such a policy realistic and effective it is necessary to re-create a basis of international economic cooperation, which implies an abandonment of our own expansionist policies. This would preclude the possibility of relying on military prowess as a means of gratifying our national ambition, and, like the previous alternative, permit a genuinely defensive military policy.

If the far-eastern crisis had arisen a few years ago, there can defensive military policy.

If the far-eastern crisis had arisen a few years ago, there can be no question which of these alternatives we should have chosen. We should have "followed the flag" without regard for the consequences. But it is difficult to believe that the American people today would countenance a war for the protection of American investments if its implications were clearly understood. The danger, however, is not so much that the United States will deliberately choose the first course, but that for lack of constructive statesmanship it will drift into a position where war is inevitable. In the light of prevailing nationalistic passions, passage of the present appropriation bill would be an all but irrevocable step in that direction.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

Mr. NYE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. McNARY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Cutting	Lewis	Pope
Ashurst	Dickinson	Logan	Radcliffe
Austin	Dieterich	Lonergan	Reynolds
Bailey	Donahev	Long	Robinson
Bankhead	Duffy	McAdoo	Russell
Barbour	Fletcher	McCarran	Schall
Bilbo	Frazier	McGill	Schwellenbach
Borah	George	McKellar	Sheppard
Brown	Gerry	McNary	Shipstead
Bulkley	Gibson	Maloney	Smith
Bulow	Glass	Metcalf	Steiwer
Burke	Gore	Minton	Thomas, Okla.
Byrnes	Guffey	Moore	Thomas, Utah
Capper	Hale	Murphy	Trammell
Carey	Harrison	Murray	Truman
Clark	Hatch	Neelv	Tydings
Connally	Hayden	Norbeck	Van Nuys
Coolidge	Johnson	Norris	Wagner
Copeland	Keyes	Nye	Walsh
Costigan	King	O'Mahoney	White
Couzens	La Follette	Pittman

Mr. LEWIS. I wish to announce that the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are detained by illness.

I also desire to announce that the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] is necessarily detained.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-three Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. NYE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the demand seconded? Apparently not a sufficient number have seconded the demand.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. FRAZIER. I understand that only one-fifth of the Members on the floor are required to second a demand for a yea-and-nay vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct; but the Chair was of the opinion that one-fifth of the Senators present had not seconded the demand.

Mr. FRAZIER. I demand a recount. Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I hope our friends will give a record vote to those who ask for it. I am for the bill and am going to vote for it.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I hope there will be a record vote. This is one of the bills to be passed by the Congress for which I am anxious to vote. I want to be recorded 'yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the demand for the yeas and nays seconded?

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. LEWIS. I announce the absence of the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], caused by illness.

I announce the absence of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], who is necessarily detained. I am informed that were he present and voting he would vote "yea."

I also wish to announce that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Bachman], the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Black], the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone], and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] are necessarily detained.

I desire to announce a general pair between the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrd] and the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG].

Mr. McKELLAR. I have a general pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsend]. I transfer that pair to my colleague [Mr. Bachman] and vote "yea."

Mr. LOGAN. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Davis], who is absent. I transfer that pair to my colleague [Mr. BARKLEY] and vote "yea."

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Davis] is absent on account of illness. His general pair has been announced

I also wish to announce that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Hastings] is necessarily absent. He has a general pair with the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER].

The result was announced—yeas 68, nays 15, as follows:

		YEAS-68
Adams Ashurst Austin Bailey Bankhead Barbour Bilbo Borah Brown Bulkley Burke Byrnes Carey Connally Conlidge Copeland	Dieterich Donahey Duffy Fletcher George Gerry Gibson Glass Gore Guffey Hale Harrison Hatch Hayden Johnson Keyes	Logan Lonergan McAdoo McCarran McGill McKellar McNary Maloney Metcaif Minton Moore Murphy Neely Norbeck O'Mahoney Pittman	Reynolds Robinson Russell Schall Schwellenbach Sheppard Smith Steiwer Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Trammell Truman Tydings Van Nuys Wagner Walsh
Dickinson	Lewis	Radcliffe	White and the second	1	NAYS-15	PAR THE PROPERTY AND PARTY
Bulow Capper Clark Costigan	Couzens Cutting Frazier King	La Follette Long Murray Norris VOTING—12	Nye Pope Shipstead
Bachman Barkley Black	Bone Byrd Caraway	Davis Hastings	Townsend Vandenberg Wheeler

So the bill was passed.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, at the end of the consideration of the bill, some comments I have prepared concerning it.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MODERNIZE ESSENTIAL RESERVE MATERIAL

The steps toward modernization of guns of the Army, which has been started by the modernization of all of the National Guard 75-mm guns and about 200 of the Regular Army active guns, should not be confined to those in actual use.

The program of modernization should extend to all reserve carriages that we are depending upon in case of war or an emergency, especially since these carriages have been in storage for the confined to the confined t emergency, especially since these carriages have been in storage for more than 16 years. Army Ordnance, May-June issue, states, "Many of these carriages in storage are deteriorated beyond the point of immediate use. Wooden wheels will not stand the effects of time indefinitely and it might be that this equipment, if needed in a hurry, would not be useful at all. Whether the wood has stood the ravages of time or not, certainly the old field carriages could not be used at the speeds and with the modern truck equipment of today. If they are well preserved they cannot be used ment of today. If they are well preserved they cannot be used with trucks. If the wood is rotten, even a horse cannot pull them."

Since artillery is so important as a reserve, it would seem that modernization of the guns now on hand would be the only way to give that reserve its full value.

This country is incapable of defending itself in modern war because it has failed to keep its equipment modern. If war should come we would find ourselves with practically all of our field pieces on wooden wheels that would rattle or fall to pieces with a few hours' service. These guns should be modernized by a change from wooden wheels to a carriage on pneumatic tires. This has been done for the National Guard, and the equipment of the regular Army should at least equal that of the Guard. Guard.

Guard.

The modernization of these guns can be made for less than 3 percent of their cost, and it would not be wise or practical to spend any greater amount per gun, especially when the original life of these guns is about 10,000 rounds. The majority of these guns were purchased from the French Government and were used during the war. The French, no doubt, picked their oldest guns for sale and delivery to the United States. This fact is evidenced by a display in the Munitions Building, where the War Department shows one of these 75's bearing the manufacturer's serial "no 1" by a display in the Munitions Building, where the War Department shows one of these 75's bearing the manufacturer's serial "no. 1."

This field gun is now common in most of the armies of all the nations. It is at least the model for every field piece now in use. Previous to the advent of this piece, mounts had changed but little for nearly a century except that steel had replaced wood in the trails and cheeks. These French 75-mm guns were perfected in 1897. Notwithstanding their age they are the best field pieces we have and should be adapted to changed conditions in travel, especially when this can be done at relatively insignificant costs. After those in storage are made usable for travel at high rates of speed we can look forward to the building of a new gun with a longer range, more traverse, and more elevation. Any large or costly change in these guns would not only be tion. Any large or costly change in these guns would not only be unwise, but might render them unusable and, perhaps, unsafe.

Our reserves should at all times be usable and these guns are

Our reserves should at all times be usable and these guns are now unserviceable and unsafe.

The Chief of Staff of the United States Army in his annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1934, to the honorable Secretary of War says that "the most effective field gun of the World War was known as the French 75 mm." The Army had about 4,200 of these guns in its possession upon the signing of the armistice and today it is the weapon with which our field artillery units are equipped. It is incapable of rapid transportation on its present wheels, since these are of the traditional wood and steel construction and fast movement invariably results in damage to the mechanism of the gun and pounds the wheels in damage to the mechanism of the gun and pounds the wheels to pieces. However, wheels and special hub adapters have been developed permitting towing of the guns at high speeds with no resulting damage; also it is possible to fire the guns directly from pneumatic tires pneumatic tires.

The National Guard and one-half of the Regular Army have been equipped with this special high-speed adapter, and the remainder of these guns in the warehouses can be given the same characteristics of the modernized guns now in use in the field. These guns in storage should be brought up to date without delay, since increased mobility in the Army will be largely wasted unless guns in reserve can be used with the motorized units.

It is not considered practical or worth the expense involved to attempt to include any additional features on second-hand equipment. These guns will be brought up to date in the most practical way known today at a very low cost, which we are advised is less than 3 percent of their cost, or approximately $300 to $400 per gun, less the cost of pneumatic tires and puncture-proof tube equipment, as it would not be necessary to have tires and tubes in the warehouses, thereby bringing the modernization cost down in the warehouses, thereby bringing the modernization cost down to about $250 per gun.

It is just as unsound to try to build an entirely new gun around the used French 75-mm tube as it would have been to spend money to gear the truck equipment down to horse speed, as was considered before the present adapters were developed for the French 75-mm gun by A. P. Buquor. This equipment converted the old French field gun into a modern high-speed gun with the following characteristics added:

(a) All parts necessary for travel, implacement, and firing are parts of the adapters;

(b) Wheels and tires are used commercially and are quickly received and replaced;

Towing speed of 50 miles per hour or faster, depending upon

(c) Towing speed of the line particle of the prime mover;
(d) Capable of being manhandled by a small crew up a slope on account of having brakes operating on each wheel separately. One side can be locked while the other wheel is moved over an obstacle or rough place, and then locked and the other wheel

75 mm with the high-speed adapter is always ready for

(f) Rapid crank traverse is made possible for the simple reason that there is no binding or strain or weight on the gun axle keyway, thereby allowing the gun to be traversed very easily and way, thereby allowing the gun to be traversed for freely;

(g) Having better stability for fire at fast-moving targets for reason that one wheel can be locked by individual operating brakes, allowing the gun to pivot on one wheel and the other to move around on circle;

(h) Having better stability for firing on account of brake equipment, locking both wheels and not allowing gun to roll forward on the counterrecoil;

(i) Quick replacement of entire assembly or part thereof;

the counterrecoil;

(i) Quick replacement of entire assembly or part thereof;

(j) No part is keyed or attached to the sliding gun axle, axle housing, or parts that will permit or cause any strain or twist to the gun-axle keyway;

(k) The lateral sliding movement of the gun barrel and the protecting shield are not interfered with in any way;

(l) Brakes are provided, using the late-model standard Ford brakes. These brakes can be applied together or separately, if desired, in handling the gun;

(m) Easily and quickly installed on guns in the field, and not necessary to drill any holes or change any parts of the standard French 75-mm gun;

(n) Very light and flexible;

(o) Low in cost.

The French Army is equipped with about 13,000 of these field

(6) Low in cost.

The French Army is equipped with about 13,000 of these field pieces and each of them has been modernized and made up to date, if reliance can be placed upon the cinema, for it was only recently that in a local theater a news reel showed recent French Army maneuvers, and literally hundreds of these modernized guns rolled by. It was evident that the French had copied the adapter which we have used in a few of our guns and have installed it on all of theirs. Certainly this country should be as up to date as any other first-class nation, including the French.

"The next war will come like lightning and we are not prepared for it," warns Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, president of the National Security League. Thomas A. Edison once outlined his ideas of preparedness. "We should," he said, "make our war machines, store them, and when war comes take them out and use them."

The United States Army has about two hundred and ten 75-mm guns modernized for modern warfare.

The only guns we have in reserve are useless for modern warfare because of the fact that they can travel only 4 or 5 miles per hour, and because of their deteriorated wheels many of them will not be serviceable.

The present condition of reserve guns is just the same as having guns in reserve with no wheels at all.

"The great lesson of the war", General O'Ryan declared in his testimony February 1933 in Washington, "was the complete fallure of America to produce the material things of war in time to employ them." In the Saturday Evening Post of October 22, 1932, Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood states that "for years General Wood had been trying to get a reserve of Field Artillery guns. General Wood told the Appropriations Committee that we did not have as much modern artillery as the Chinese." Our reserve artillery should be modernized equal to the guns now in use with mobile units.

With regard to the Army 75-mm guns in reserve, there are in storage approximately 3,000 guns of this type, the cost of which was about $8,750 per gun, making a total cost of these guns held in the warehouse $26,250,000. They are obsolete for modern warfare in their present condition. They are provided with the old type wood artillery wheels, and consequently have no practical utility to the Government, for the reason that none of them are capable of attaining a speed in excess of 4 to 5 miles per hour.

The War Department recognized the deficiencies of these guns when they contracted at a low cost for an adapter to some of them. This quick-change-over adapter was developed to take the place of the obsolete artillery wheels, and not only modernize them for high speed but also permitted firing directly from rubber tires, which had been wholly unsuccessful in the past.

A small outlay of money spent in this direction would go a long way in preparing the country against war. All of our reserves should be made up to date.

This plan is a four-point one covering—

1. Economy.

This plan is a four-point one covering—

1. Economy.

2. Preparedness against war.

2. Preparedness against war.
3. Unemployment relief.
4. Modernization of obsolete materials.
In our everyday civil life the automobile is the accepted mode of transportation. The armies of the leading world powers have accepted this changed condition. Our Army should keep abreast with the progress of the times. Good sense prompts me to suggest that this should be our immediate objective.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER, as in executive session, laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

WORK-RELIEF PROGRAM

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In pursuance of the unanimous-consent agreement of yesterday, the Chair lays before the Senate House Joint Resolution 117.

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 117) making appropriations for relief purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I present a telegram from the Governor of the State of Nevada transmitting a joint resolution of the legislature of the State touching the pending joint resolution (H. J. Res. 117). I ask that it be published in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the telegram will lie on the table and be printed in the RECORD.

The telegram embodying the joint resolution is as follows:

CARSON CITY, Nev., March 8, 1935.

Washington, D. C.:

I am directed to transmit the following resolution of the Nevada Legislature to you: "Assembly joint resolution endorsing the policy of President Roosevelt in regard to his stand on the $4,880,-

"Resolved by the Assembly and the Senate of the State of Nevada, That the Legislature of the State of Nevada desires to assure the President that the State of Nevada, which has always Nation, being still mindful of its obligations arising out of its statehood, desires to take this opportunity to endorse President Roosevelt in his effort to relieve the depression that is now and has been casting a gloom over all the people of this Nation; and has been casting a gloom over an the people of this Nation, and be it further

"Resolved, That the State of Nevada with every confidence in the President of the United States feels that this depression can best be combatted through the administration of his plan of public works and at the same time feels that any obstacle now placed in the way of those plans will result in interminable delay to the return of normal times and conditions for which all the people of this Nation are so earnestly praying and hoping; and be it further

"Resolved, That the State of Nevada feels that you should be highly commended for assuming the responsibility for those great plans and giving to the various States the opportunity of cooperation with you in restoring prosperity to the Nation which you love and whose principles we cherish; and be it further

"Resolved, That this resolution is an unqualified expression of the hopes of the people of the State of Nevada that every person charged with the obligation of responsibility to the Nation in respect to this matter be urged to give to the President of the United States a full measure of their best efforts as an obligation of their loyalty to the principles of American citizenship; and be it

"Resolved, That the Governor of the State of Nevada cause these resolutions to be transmitted by wire to the President of the United States and to our Senators and Representatives in

RICHARD KIRMAN, Governor.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, inasmuch as the joint resolution of the Legislature of Nevada has gone into the RECORD, I ask leave to have inserted in the RECORD my reply transmitted to the secretary of the Senate of the State of Nevada.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

To the Secretary of the Senate of the State of Nevada,

Resolution 19, recently passed by the legislature, is based on a grave misunderstanding of the real point at issue.

Were it prompted by a desire to observe the real point.

Resolution 19, recently passed by the legislature, is based on a grave misunderstanding of the real point at issue.

Were it prompted by a desire to obscure the real issue, or were it a political maneuver, I would not bother to reply.

Contrary to the contention of your resolution, the McCarran prevailing-wage amendment in no wise entails any increase in the cost of carrying through the work-relief program. It does, on the contrary, enable the President to achieve his aim of providing work for employables now without jobs at a billion dollars less than the present appropriation calls for.

As the President said in his message on the bill, the chief aim is furnishing of employment to labor. Under the prevailing-wage amendment 70 percent of the appropriation would be spent for labor, as against only 52 percent under the security-wage plan originally proposed. Thus the President may either employ a million more workers, or he may ask that the appropriation be cut $1,000,000,000 and still care for the 3,500,000 employables on relief rolls mentioned in his message to Congress.

The fallacy in your assumption that the prevailing-wage amendment would entail an increased cost is your failure to note that under the provisions of my amendment the President may fix the total monthly earnings for any worker or for any project as a whole by limiting the number of hours any one person may work. My amendment does not propose, and it is an erroneous assumption to hold otherwise, that labor on work relief should work full time. It is obvious to anyone that such a procedure would defeat the entire purpose of the work-relief program by destroying the worker's incentive to return to private industry.

The whole, and only purpose of my amendment is to maintain the wage structure of the country, and at the same time to specifically carry out the program of the President by limiting the aggregate monthly earnings of any worker.

This is in keeping with the accomplishments of wage earners in this country realized through years of stru the weight of low wages in such a gigantic public-works program as this one now pending.

Does the Legislature of Nevada desire to repudiate its own exist-

Does the Legislature of Nevada desire to repair ing law?

My amendment, now pending, will uphold the specific statute of Nevada and 22 other States, besides insuring the expenditure of public moneys in those States having the minimum wage law. The Department of Labor put this data forward, and it is available in Senate Document 27, of this Congress.

In a memorandum prepared by Assistant Relief Administrator Corrington Gill, on behalf of the relief administration, and presented to the Senate Appropriations Committee, substantial sup-

Corrington Gill, on behalf of the relief administration, and presented to the Senate Appropriations Committee, substantial support of my position was given when Mr. Gill said that the staggering of labor under prevailing wages would represent a total exactly equaling the $50 security-wage plan. He furthermore stated that under the prevailing wage plan, less money would be spent for materials and more for labor, thereby upholding my contention that the prevailing-wage amendment would accomplish the President's aim in a more expeditious manner than that origithe President's aim in a more expeditious manner than that originally proposed.

In conclusion, may I say, the prevailing-wage plan will improve the working of the program, both for the Government and for the toiling masses to whom the measure is vital.

This is my sincere and steadfast conviction. Any other or ulterior interpretations are wholly false.

Nevada has always led in the defense and uplift of the laboring man. I have sought to carry the name of my State forward in this great movement at a time when the wage structure of the can make either loans or grants to States, counties, and country was in the balance.

From this endeavor I will not be dissuaded.

I hope that the legislative representatives of my State, in keeping with our splendid record of the past, will not permit unfounded statements appearing by editorial or otherwise, to lead them away from the real truth and facts worked for and voted for by those who have made this subject their life study. Respectfully.

United States Senator.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, it will be recalled that House Joint Resolution 117, after being considered by the Senate for several days, was recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations. The committee has authorized me to report back the joint resolution with two or three substantive alterations to which I shall direct attention.

The first is on page 1, striking out all after the words "That in order to" in line 3, down to and embracing the word "conditions" in line 8, and substituting certain other words, so that the first part of the joint resolution will read:

appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated— That in order to provide relief and work relief, there is hereby

On page 2, the committee amendment proposes to strike out all after the word "President" in line 2, and all of lines 3, 4, and 5; and beginning in line 5, on page 3, the committee has inserted an entirely new provision, which is an attempt to respond in some measure to the complaint and criticism that the large sum proposed to be appropriated in the joint resolution should be broken down and apportioned.

The new provision reads:

Provided, That except as to such part of the appropriation made herein as the President may deem necessary for continuing relief as authorized under the Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933, as amended, this appropriation shall be available for the following classes of projects, and the amounts to be expended for each class except as hereinafter provided, exceed the respective amounts stated, namely, highways, roads, streets, and grade-crossing elimination, $800,000,000; rural rehabilitation and relief in stricken agricultural areas, $500,000,000; rural electrification, $100,-000,000; housing, $450,000,000; projects for professional and clerical persons, $300,000,000; Civilian Conservation Corps, $600,000,000; public projects of States or political subdivisions thereof, $00,000,-000; sanitation, prevention of soil erosion, reforestation, forestation, flood control, and miscellaneous projects, $350,000,000: Provided further, That not to exceed 20 percent of the amount herein appropriated may be used by the President to increase any one or more of the foregoing limitations if he finds it necessary to do so in order to effectuate the purpose of this joint resolution.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, would an interruption affect the continuity of the Senator's statement?

Mr. GLASS. Not at all. I shall be very glad to answer the Senator's question.

Mr. COUZENS. There is one provision in the allocation provision about which I am anxious to inquire, as I wish to know how the distribution is to be made. For example, on line 17 of page 3 of the joint resolution, beginning with the words "public projects", the amendment reads:

Public projects of States or political subdivisions thereof, $900,000,000.

May I ask if the members of the committee know, or if any Senator knows, in what manner that sum is to be allocated to the States?

Mr. GLASS. The chairman of the committee does not know, and I doubt if any member of the committee knows.

Mr. COUZENS. Is it contemplated that this will be a direct donation to the States for State purposes, or is it to be distributed in the fashion adopted under the P. W. A. Act, where 70 percent was required to be put up by the municipalities or the States, and 30 percent by the Government, without repayment?

Mr. GLASS. That, the chairman of the committee does not know.

Mr. COUZENS. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] indicates that he might know.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I did not intend so to indicate; but I understand that under the language the President subdivisions of the States for public projects.

Mr. COUZENS. In other words, these are to be loans, and not in any way contributions to the States?

Mr. BYRNES. The provision will authorize loans as they have been made. I do not know whether the 30-percent grants heretofore made will be made, but grants could be

Mr. GLASS. I should interpret the provision to mean that the appropriation is altogether within the discretion of the President.

Mr. COUZENS. That is the very point I desire to make. In other words, it is within the discretion of the President as to whether he will require repayment of this $900,000,000, or whether he will make a direct contribution to the municipalities and the States?

Mr. GLASS. I so judge.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, with the consent of the Senator from Virginia I may say that it is the hope that most of the money advanced under this item will be loaned to States, counties, and other subdivisions of the State, and that we can secure repayment of it all.

Mr. COUZENS. Then, this appropriation does not in any sense attempt to relieve the States so far as the care of those not employed on work-relief is concerned?

Mr. GLASS. It does not textually relieve the States, nor does it textually make any exaction of the States.

Mr. COUZENS. May I ask the distinguished chairman of the committee for his views as to whether this is a contribution of $900,000,000 to relieve the States from caring for people who are taken off relief, and whether the States will still have to bear the burden of repaying the money which is advanced for that purpose?

Mr. GLASS. The Senator knows my views quite well. I think the States will have to repay all this money, and therefore that there is a double burden on the States. We call these funds Federal funds, but the money is brought up from the taxpayers of the States here to Washington and distributed from here; and I think the States will have to pay it back.

Mr. COUZENS. I understand, then, that the $900,000,000 which is allocated to the States or political subdivisions thereof may have added to it $800,000,000 more, being the 20-percent transfer?

Mr. GLASS. That is true.

Mr. COUZENS. So it is possible to transfer to the States a total of $1,700,000,000 for the care of those who are now on relief, with the understanding that the States will be required to repay it?

Mr. GLASS. Yes.

Mr. COUZENS. I see one of the Senators shaking his head in the negative. If any Senator can enlighten me on the subject, I should like to be enlightened.

Mr. GLASS. If there is any understanding of that sort, I know nothing of it. It has not been communicated to me.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, I desire to point out that the President of the United States said this appropriation was for the purpose of taking workers off the dole and putting them on relief work; the idea being, I think, that to that extent the Federal Government was going to contribute. Then he said that all the unemployables would have to be returned to the States for care. So, in effect, if the joint resolution is interpreted as the chairman of the committee says, it will afford no relief to the States, because the money advanced to the States under this provision will have to be repaid by the States, and in addition they will have the care of the unemployables whom the administration desires to return to the States for care.

Mr. GLASS. I will state to the distinguished Senator from Michigan that that is one of the controversial provisions of the joint resolution which we shall take up on Monday. I suggest that he might speak to it on Monday more effectively than this afternoon.

Mr. COUZENS. I thank the Senator. I am glad to hear the chairman say that the provision is controversial.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President-

Mr. GLASS. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. I think the Senator from Michigan made clear what I had intended to ask; but, as I understand, when the joint resolution says:

Provided further, That not to exceed 20 percent of the amount herein appropriated may be used by the President to increase any one or more of the foregoing limitations if he finds it necessary to do so in order to effectuate the purpose of this joint resolution.

That means 20 percent of the $4,000,000,000?

Mr. GLASS. Twenty percent of the total.
Mr. BORAH. Then he could add $800,000,000 to any one of these items?

Mr. GLASS. He could; yes. Mr. BORAH. If I may ask a further question, am I to understand that under the terms of the joint resolution the President could not use any of this money for objects other than those specified in the joint resolution?

Mr. GLASS. The Senator will note that under the designation of "miscellaneous projects" he could use $350,000,- 000, and the $800,000,000 that may be transferred.

Mr. BORAH. That is correct, but he must confine his expenditures of money to the purposes specified in the joint resolution. Of course, included among those is the provision for miscellaneous projects. I do not know what those projects are; but, outside of that provision, he could use the money only in the method pointed out in the joint reso-

Mr. COUZENS. I call the attention of the Senator from Idaho to the language "projects for professional and clerical persons, $300,000,000", which does not indicate at all what the money is to be used for. It may be used on any undertaking which would employ professional or clerical persons.

Mr. BORAH. Really, what I was getting at was this: I have offered an amendment to the bill providing that no part of this fund shall be used in any way for military purposes. I take it that amendment, with these subdivisions in the measure, would not be necessary. The President certainly could not use the money for those purposes; could

Mr. GLASS. He might use the miscellaneous fund, and the $300,000,000 might be transferred to it. I do not think he has any notion of doing it.

Mr. BORAH. Perhaps not; but these miscellaneous projects cover anything.

Mr. GLASS. They do.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I wish to ask whether the special provision in line 20, "miscellaneous projects", would justify the use of the funds by the President for waterways and rivers and harbors?

Mr. GLASS. I should think the President might use that fund, plus the $800,000,000 he is authorized to transfer to it, for rivers and harbors, should he so desire.

Mr. FLETCHER. In that case I shall not offer the amendment I had in mind.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Russell in the chair). Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. May I ask the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations the purpose of the committee in eliminating from the opening clause of the bill all references to "hardships attributable to wide-spread unemployment and conditions resulting therefrom "?

Mr. GLASS. It will be recalled that that clause of the bill, when the bill was before the Senate previously, was amended by the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], these words being added:

And for such purposes and such projects, Federal or non-Federal, as shall be adapted to the accomplishment of any one or more of the objectives specified.

In other words, it was to give the President complete freedom of action in providing relief and work relief.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, referring to the words just used by the Senator from Virginia, and having regard for the elimination from the opening section of such words as "improving living and working conditions", is it fair to conclude that the Comptroller might refuse to authorize public works under this measure insofar as they are not in the nature of relief or work relief? For example, the construction of local power plants for municipalities; could the Comptroller rule, under the substitute language, that Federal work under the pending measure on such plants could no longer be continued?

Mr. GLASS. I cannot tell that. I cannot tell what the Comptroller would rule. In my judgment, his rulings are generally right.

Mr. COSTIGAN. My apprehension is-and I have had the apprehension confirmed by some of the attorneys for the Government today—that this substitute language will operate precisely as I have suggested it might operate; and, among the controversial questions, I should like to suggest a postponement until Monday of possible amendments to section 1.

Mr. GLASS. The Senator evidently did not hear my opening statement, when I said that, that being a controversial section of the bill, we would not take it up until

Mr. COSTIGAN. With reference to the committee amendment on page 3, I ought to say at this moment, with the consent of the chairman of the committee, that I hope to offer an amendment making more particular reference there to some projects which should probably be included definitely.

Mr. GLASS. Of course, it is the privilege of the Senator to do that.

Mr. COSTIGAN. An amendment will also be tendered with reference to section 3. May we have an understanding that other amendments may be tendered on Monday, should they be deemed wise, for the purpose of perfecting the measure?

Mr. GLASS. I have already stated that anybody is at liberty to offer any amendment pertinent to the joint resolution, and I again venture to suggest that these questions which are asked now will very likely be repeated on Monday, and we could proceed with greater facility if Senators would just wait until Monday.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to

Mr. GLASS. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I wish to give my accord to the statement or suggestion of the Senator that we could probably well go over until Monday, because if we continue the consideration of these items, the Senator will have to retrace the same ground on Monday.

Mr. GLASS. Exactly; that is what I have suggested three times. I do not want to seem to be unwilling to answer any questions any Senator may propound, but, of course, the same questions will be propounded on Monday.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, may I suggest to the Senator from Virginia that, as I understood the Senator from Oregon, he was making the further suggestion that the statements the Senator is now making might also have to be repeated on Monday.

Mr. GLASS. Of course, they will have to be. What I wish is that the several amendments made to the joint resolution when it was here before might now be agreed to, so that we might save time on Monday.

At the bottom of page 3 the committee proposes to strike out the words, beginning on line 25, "The specific powers hereinafter vested in the President shall not be construed as limiting the general powers and discretion vested in him by this section." On the previous occasion the Senate struck that language out, and I move that it be stricken out now.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, in view of the more or less definite understanding we had earlier in the afternoon. while no doubt this amendment is not objectionable or controversial, I should be very happy indeed if the Senator would let the whole matter go over until Monday.

Mr. GLASS. I think we might as well do that.

PROPOSED INVESTIGATION OF POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY (S. REPT. NO. 288)

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I desire to submit a report from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, and as it affects a matter of importance, I desire to read the report, which is not very long. The report of the committee is as follows:

To the Senate:

The Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, to which was referred Senate Resolution No. 74, a resolution which would order an "investigation into the public and official conduct of Mr. James A. Farley and all matters conducted by him affecting the business of the United States and the expenditure of funds of the United States", having considered the same, begs leave to report, with the recommendation that the resolution be not adopted.

JURISDICTION OF THIS COMMITTEE

Rule 25 of the Standing Rules of the Senate, in part, provides as follows:

"Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to consist of five Senators, to which shall be referred all resolutions directing the payment of money out of the contingent fund of the Senate or creating a charge upon the same:

Provided, That any such resolution relating to substantive matter within the jurisdiction of any other standing committee of the within the jurisdiction of any other standing committee of the Senate shall be first referred to such committee."

The proposed resolution, in directing that the special committee shall "procure evidence, summon witnesses, hear testimony, and compel the production of books, records, accounts, statistics, employ experts", and the like, "would fix a charge upon the contingent expenses of the Senate, and for that reason the Senate sent the resolution to our committee to determine whether or not

Moreover, the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads considers that the said resolution was referred to it in order that it might determine if an investigation was justified by facts or evidence presented to the Senate on the floor and to the committee

Recognizing that the Senate has the right of investigation of any executive department of the Government in proper cases, the question necessarily arises whether any demand for an investigation is properly founded or not. It is unquestionably clear that the Senate has the right of investigation with a view of legislative action; even so, unless sufficient facts and evidence shall have been presented, it is equally clear that an investigation should not be had. Any other course would give to the Senate of the United States an undue power of interference with the executive departments.

So your committee has considered the resolution not only in the light of possible expense but also upon the question whether there are facts and circumstances justifying an investigation.

Your committee has considered the charges by the author of the resolution in the resolution itself, numerous speeches on the floor, with exhibits filed; it has heard the author of the resolution orally before the committee, in which charges were reiterated and editional charges made before an executive session of the committee. additional charges made before an executive session of the committee; and it has had before it the record from the Public Works mittee; and it has had before it the record from the Public Works Department sent down by the Administrator of Public Works in the James A. Stewart & Co. and other cases. After considering all these, your committee requested of the author of the resolution the names of witnesses he proposed to call if an investigation was ordered and the substance of what those witnesses would testify. No answer was made to this letter, and the next day a second letter was addressed to the author of the resolution again requesting the author of the resolution to send the names of witnesses and the substance of what they would testify. Thereupon the author of the resolution rose on the floor of the Senate and had read from the desk his answer to the second letter. This came before your the desk his answer to the second letter. This came before your committee, and the committee considered the contents of this additional letter. Your committee then sent a copy of this last additional letter. Your committee then sent a copy of this last letter of the author of the resolution to the Secretary of the Treasury, to the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Secretary of the Interior and Public Works Administrator, to James A. Farley, Postmaster General, all of which departments and bureaus were referred to in the letter of the author of the resolution which he had submitted to the Senate. Answer came from each of the departments and also from the Chairman of the Reconstruction. Finance Corporation. These answers all confrom each of the departments and also from the Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. These answers all contained denials, and they refuted all allegations set out in the resolution. Copies of the committee's letters of March 4 and March 5 to the author of the resolution, a copy of his reply read in the Senate, copies of the letters addressed to the departments referred to and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and the replies to same are all filed as exhibits to this report and may be considered a part of same. And having considered all these files and records and letters and the verbal testimony of the author of the resolution, your committee reports as follows:

THE JAMES A. STEWART & CO. CONTRACT

It will be noted that the preambles of the resolution are respectively introduced in the following language:

"It has been reported that"; "It is further alleged that";

"It is further publicly known that"; "It has been further charged that"; "It is further alleged that"; "It has been charged that."

In other words, the resolution and proposed investigation are based on vague and indefinite hearsay and rumor.

Having introduced the resolution, the author made a speech in the Senate quoting from newspapers, that James A. Stewart & Co., contractors, had bought supplies from a firm or corporation in which Mr. Farley was and is interested, and seeking in that way to connect Mr. Farley with such contracts. Newspaper articles concerning the letting of a contract were read by the author of the resolution in the Senate. Then another resolution was offered by the author of Resolution No. 74, directing the Secretary of the Interior, as Administrator of the Public Works Administration, to report on all matters connected with the letting of the James A. Stewart & Co. contract.

From the record presented by Secretary Ickes, it is apparent that Mr. Farley has been guilty of no improper conduct of any kind in connection with the said contract awarded by the Treasury Department to James A. Stewart & Co. with respect to any contract. The records sent down to the Senate, which is hereto attached and made a part of this report, shows that the charges are without foundation.

are without foundation.

Your committee also quotes from the letter of Mr. Farley on this subject as follows:

"I have conducted no private business since I have occupied "I have conducted no private business since I have occupied the position of Postmaster General of the United States. Prior to March 4, 1933, I resigned as president and director of the General Builders' Supply Corporation and since that time I have had no part in the management of that company or participation in its affairs. Nor have I received any sums, salaries, commissions, or anything else from this source since that time with the exception of $525 out of the total earned dividends on my preferred stock which consists of approximately one-fourteenth of the outstanding preferred stock of the company. No dividends have ever been paid or earned on the common stock, of which I own less than one-eighth.

been paid or earned on the common stock, of which I own less than one-eighth.

"Mention has been made of a certain holding company which carries my name. That company was organized in 1929 to collect the slow assets of James A. Farley & Co., Inc., a corporation which went out of existence at that time. This holding company does not own stock in any corporation whatsoever, has never engaged directly or indirectly, in the sale of builders' supplies, in contracting or in any business whatsoever except in what has been to date a rather fruitless effort to collect old debts.

"The stock which I own in these two companies represents all the stock which I own in any corporation whatsoever. I have not solicited business for any corporation or any contractor. I have never interested myself in helping any contractor to secure any contracts from the United States Government or from any other person or corporation.

"There is not a word of truth in the insinuation that I participated in any way in having bids of any contractor rejected by the

"There is not a word of truth in the insinuation that I participated in any way in having bids of any contractor rejected by the Treasury Department or by any other department or agency of the Government."

And, further, about the post-office building in New York, Mr.

And, further, about the post-omice building in the Farley writes:

"This, I understand, refers to certain contracts for the building of the annex to the New York City Post Office Building. The only part the Post Office Department played in this matter consisted in advising the Treasury Department, which let the contracts, of the need of postal requirements so far as the building in New York City was concerned. I am sending you herewith the full file of correspondence between the two Departments, including letters that were canceled because of the request of the proper Treasury official that the Post Office Department be more specific in its official that the Post Office Department be more specific in its statements of its requirements.

"There was a question concerning the erection of a completed "There was a question concerning the erection of a completed building, the cost of which was in excess of amount of funds allocated for the project, or an incompleted building in which two floors were not to be finished, alternative bids having been called for by the Treasury Department. The details of this are shown in the accompanying correspondence.

"I did not at any time attempt to exercise any influence on the Treasury Department with respect to the letting of this or any other contracts.

other contracts.

other contracts.

"I had no knowledge that there had been any changes in specifications or materials until I read them in reports of the charges made by the Senator from Louisiana. In any event, I have no connection whatsoever with respect to such changes in relation to any building or any contract."

There would seem, therefore, upon the record as it stands before the committee, to be no reason why anyone would desire a further investigation into these charges.

SOLICITATION OF CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS

The author of the resolution charges Mr. Farley with the solicitation of contributions from employees of the United States, such charges to be found on page 1838 of the Record and a letter afterward filed.

afterward filed.

In the first place, the author of the resolution is entirely in error about the law. There is no law which prohibits Joseph J. Cotter from soliciting campaign funds from anyone whom he pleases. The mere fact that Mr. Farley's name appeared on the letterhead does not indicate that Mr. Farley solicited funds, and as a matter of fact, Mr. Farley denies having known of the issuance of the letter. There is nothing in the charges that indicates that Mr. Farley himself solicited funds from the employees of the Government. Today, March 8, the author of the resolution filed amended charges that Farley solicited contributions from Federal employees but submitted no evidence of such charges. He asserted he had evidence as to such charge, but submitted none to the committee as previously requested.

THE E. P. KNOTTS CASE

On February 20, 1935, as shown on page 2277 of the Record, the author of the resolution charges on hearsay that in April and May 1933 a candidate for appointment as United States district attorney, unnamed, was in Washington, and after having been appointed United States district attorney, wired to an individual "under indictment" that his case had been continued and asked for $1,000. Then the author of the resolution read a letter, signed by Mr. Farley, which was said by the author of the resolution to have been directed to the contributor acknowledging receipt of a check for $1,000. In his letter Mr. Farley shows that on March 3, 1933, Clyde W. Eastus, afterward appointed United States district attorney for the Northern District of Texas, handed Mr. Farley, at the Mayflower Hotel, in Washington, a check for $1,000 for the Democratic National Committee, which, he said, was the contribution of one E. P. Knotts, of Fort Worth, Tex., to the committee. On the same day Mr. Farley addressed a letter to Mr. Knotts acknowledging receipt. This was the letter quoted by the author of the resolution. It was written before Mr. Farley became Postmaster General.

In Mr. Farley's statement to the Committee on Post Offices and

In Mr. Farley's statement to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads he recites that at the time the contribution was made he did not know and had never heard of Mr. Knotts; that in May he did not know and had never heard of Mr. Knotts; that in May 1933 he was advised by the Chief Inspector of the Postal Service, who was appointed in April, that a charge of using the mails to defraud had been pending against said Mr. E. P. Knotts since some time in 1930; that frequent continuances had been granted; whereupon Mr. Farley directed the Solicitor of the Post Office Department to proceed expeditiously with the case. As a result, a fraud order was issued against Mr. Knotts under the authority of Mr. Farley on May 25, 1933. As a result, he was indicted and convicted, and the said Mr. Knotts is now serving a term in the penitentiary.

The very fact that Mr. Farley wrote the letter quoted by the author of the resolution thanking Mr. Knotts for the contribution tends to show the innocence of Mr. Farley. Mr. Farley did not know the man and had never heard of him, and under the circumstances he cannot be blamed for his action in the matter.

stances he cannot be blamed for his action in the matter.

Mr. Farley certainly cannot be blamed at that time, not knowing the situation, for having acknowledged the check on behalf of the Democratic National Committee, and he certainly did his duty for the situation, for having acknowledged the check on behalf of the Democratic National Committee, and he certainly did his duty for afterward having ordered the further investigation of Mr. Knotts upon the facts being disclosed to him.

Mr. Farley in his statement gave the following:

"On March 3, 1933, before the beginning of this administration, Clyde O. Eastus, then a practicing lawyer in Texas, handed me at the Mayflower Hotel, Washington, D. C., for the Democratic National Committee a cashier's check for $1,000, which he told me was the contribution of E. P. Knotts, of Fort Worth, Tex., whom I did not know and of whom I had no knowledge. I accepted the check for the committee and immediately wrote to Mr. Knotts acknowledging its receipt. Some time in May 1933 Mr. K. P. Aldrich, the newly appointed Chief Inspector of the Post Office Department, reported to me that charges of the improper use of the mails had been pending for several years in the Department against Mr. Knotts and that the hearing had been repeatedly continued. I immediately instructed the Solicitor of the Department, who has immediate jurisdiction over matters of this kind, to proceed without delay to dispose of the case. A photostatic copy of this order is transmitted herewith. This order was complied with; the hearing was held before the end of the month, and a fraud order was issued against Mr. Knotts. As a result of it, criminal charges were preferred in the Federal courts and Mr. Knotts pleaded guilty and was sentenced to imprisonment for 5 years in the penitentiary. He is now serving his term."

The Attorney General also made a separate report on the Knotts case, as follows:

In re United States v. Edwin P. Knotts.

case, as follows:

case, as follows:
In re United States v. Edwin P. Knotts.
Clyde O. Eastus became United States attorney for the northern district of Texas on the 1st day of July 1933. On July 3, 1933, in the case of United States of America v. Edwin P. Knotts et al, the following certificate was formally filed with this Department:

"I, Clyde O. Eastus, United States attorney for the northern district of Texas, by reason of former association and connection prior to induction in office, do hereby certify my disqualification to appear as United States attorney in the prosecution of the above-styled case.

"Clyde O. Eastus, United States Attorney"

"CLYDE O. EASTUS, United States Attorney."

On the 11th day of July 1933 the following communication was addressed to A. T. Cole, Esq., special assistant to the Attorney General, Room 303, Federal Building, Dallas, Tex:

"Sir: In a separate letter, among others, the Department has assigned you to prosecute the case of C. R. Morrison, Edwin P. Knotts, and others, in connection with an alleged fraudulent use of the mails in the sale of stock, under the name of C. R. Morrison Co. and the General Minerals Co. of Fort Worth.

"Clyde O. Eastus, Esq., United States attorney, Fort Worth, under date of July 3, 1933, transmitted to the Department a certificate of disqualification by virtue of his prior connection with the same before his induction into office as United States attorney.

"You will proceed, therefore, to handle this case on your own responsibility without any suggestions or directions of any sort from Mr. Eastus. A perusal of the inspector's report indicates that the case is a flagrant one and should be prosecuted promptly and vigorously. You should retain exclusive possession of the files,

"The chief post-office inspector has informed that another post-office inspector will be assigned to this case upon request to Mr. Clampitt, inspector in charge at Austin, Tex. The inspector's reports and accompanying exhibits are being forwarded to you today." For the Attorney General.

"Respectfully,

"WILLIAM STANLEY,
"Assistant to the Attorney General."

On October 14, 1933, Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, special assistant to the Attorney General, was appointed to assist in the prosecution of the mail-fraud charges against Edwin P. Knotts and others in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas.

On November 14, 1933, an indictment was returned by the grand jury for the northern district of Texas against Edwin P. Knotts and others, charging use of the mails "in a scheme to obtain Jury for the northern district of Texas against Edwin P. Knotts and others, charging use of the mails "in a scheme to obtain money by false representations."

On December 4, 1933, the defendant Edwin P. Knotts, entered a plea of guilty thereto. On December 7, 1933, he was sentenced by Judge James C. Wilson to 5 years at the United States Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kans. On December 23, 1933, he filed a petition in the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas, seeking leave to withdraw his plea of guilty. On December 30, 1933, there was a hearing on this motion, at the conclusion of which the motion was overruled.

On January 15, 1934, appellant petitioned for appeal from "the verdict and judgment returned herein." On February 17, 1934, a bill of exceptions was filed which contains the testimony taken before Judge Wilson on December 30, 1933, when the appellant moved to withdraw his plea of guilty. On May 10, 1934, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit entered judgment to dismiss the appeal in the above-entitled cause.

In Mr. Farley's letter to the Chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads he also said:

"According to the Congressional Recorp, the Senator from Louisiana read from what purported to be a letter issued by the National Democratic Council of the District of Columbia in its effort to raise funds for the Democratic National Committee, which letter is alleged to have before my name as Democratic chairman on the letterhead and which is also alleged to have been sent to letter is alleged to have borne my name as Democratic chairman on the letterhead, and which is also alleged to have been sent to Federal employees. I did not sign this letter; I did not authorize its issuance; and to this date I know nothing whatsoever about it or to whom it was sent."

ISSUE OF POSTAGE STAMPS

The author of the resolution makes a charge, upon public information, that Mr. Farley did wrong concerning a recent new issue of postage stamps. We quote from Mr. Farley's letter, as follows:

"With respect to this matter, I followed, as Postmaster General, a custom that has existed in this Department for many, many years; that is, the presentation as souvenirs of new issues of stamps. I attach herewith a memorandum showing how long and how extensively this practice has been pursued. On January 23, 1905, the then Third Assistant Postmaster General, Edwin C. Madden, wrote an official letter to the Postmaster General, from which I quote the following:

"'In this connection, I deem it proper to say that the giving away of specimen stamps, proofs, etc., is a practice of upward of 40 years' standing. * * No record was kept of the persons to whom these stamps were distributed prior to my coming into office, but since November 1899 I have caused to be kept a record of every stamp given away, and can furnish, should it be so desired, a complete list of those who have received them during my incumbency, except for the 4 months between July 1, 1899 (the date of my appointment) and November 1, 1899, when the record of distribution was begun.'"

So that it is evident there is nothing to be investigated.

WIRE SERVICE AND GAMBLING HOUSES

The next charge, based on hearsay, is that there is a wire service in the Post Office Department leading to gambling houses, and that this in some way either violates the law or the proprieties. Regarding this your committee quotes from the letter of Mr.

Farley:

"The above charge is utterly untrue and is as ridiculous and baseless as are the others. The only wire service in the Post Office Department, except the ordinary commercial telephone and telegraph lines is a teletype press service such as you will find in many other Government departments, in most newspaper offices, and in many business offices. It is a bulletin of the day's happenings as they occur, embracing the proceedings of Congress, and other news of the day. This teletype machine is connected only with a news-service office. It leads to no gambling house and nothing is transmitted by it except that which is written for the news service which operates it, namely, the Washington City News Service. Personally, I have no connection, direct or indirect, with this or any other wire service."

Your committee believes this explanation is full and complete.

Your committee believes this explanation is full and complete.

COMMANDEERING FACILITIES—PUBLIC-SERVICE CORPORATIONS

It is next charged, on hearsay, that Mr. Farley commandeered for his personal use the facilities of a public-service corporation.
Mr. Farley makes the following statement about it:

"I have never commandeered the facilities of any public-service corporation. I assume that the Senator from Louisiana refers to the fact that I have at various times accepted the invitations of railroad officials to ride in their business cars with them when I was traveling by train. It is well known that as Postmaster General I have a Post Office commission which entitles me to ride in any conveyance operated by any mail contractor. The Government is put to no expense, nor is it saved any expense, by my occasional acceptance of these invitations, and I am not put under the slightest obligations thereby. In no case, however, did I at any time commandeer any such service."

The law provides for the Postmaster General riding on conveyances operated by mail contractors, and in the opinion of your committee there is no violation of the proprieties in connection therewith.

I call the especial attention of the Senate to the next charge:

LOAN TO RAILROAD IN WEST VIRGINIA

It is again charged on hearsay that Mr. Farley secured a loan for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in West Virginia for political purposes. In reference to this we quote the following letter from Jesse H. Jones, Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corpora-

RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION, Washington, March 7, 1935.

Hon. KENNETH MCKELLAR,

Hon. Kenneth McKellar,

Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Reads,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator McKellar: In reply to your letter of March 6, enclosing copy of Senator Long's letter to the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads of the same date, in which you ask for information this morning concerning the reference by Senator Long to a loan of $52,000,000 to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, beg to advise that we made no loan of $52,000,000 to this road.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad owed our Corporation a note of $25,500,000, due August 10, 1934, this loan having been made 2 years prior. To meet this note and to provide the road with other funds that it needed, the Baltimore & Ohio offered, through its bankers, a $50,000,000 5-year secured-note issue. The loan was certified by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and our Corporation estimated the value of the security behind the $50,000,000 loan to be supproximately $90,000,000. 000 loan to be approximately $90,000,000.

We agreed to lend the road any part of the unsold portion. The net result of the transaction was that the bankers sold all but $13,490,000 of the $50,000,000 issue, and the Corporation received a cash payment on its $25,500,000 loan of $12,144,900 and notes of the new $50,000,000 issue in the amount of $13,355,100.

In the opinion of every member of our Board, the loan was well secured; and neither Mr. Farley nor anyone else ever spoke to me or to any other member of our Board about this loan, except officials of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the bankers who handled the issue.

Very sincerely yours,

JESSE JONES, Chairman.

We also quote from the statement of Mr. Farley, as follows:

"I never telephoned anybody in West Virginia that it would be to the interest of any railroad to take a certain or any political position affecting the election of a United States Senator or anyone else. I did converse with various political leaders, including former Governor Cornwall, of West Virginia, with the idea in mind of promoting party harmony. I did not know that the Baltimore & Ohio railroad was endeavoring to secure an R. F. C. loan, and I do not know now if it ever received a loan, but I do know that whether it did or did not receive a loan had nothing to do with any conversation in which I took part. I know the gentleman only as a former Governor of West Virginia and a Democratic leader in the State."

Here is another charge on hearsay; it is answered by Mr. Farley, and the facts are fully shown by Mr. Jones' letter. These explanations are full and complete.

In the supplemental charge the author of the resolution brought in the Lazia income-tax case. As to this case, the Attorney General reported as follows:

IN RE LAZIA INCOME-TAX CASE

"This case was called to the attention of the Department of Justice in March 1933. At the very outset a proceeding was instituted by the Department to prevent the running of the statute of limitations while the case was being investigated.

"The defendant, through his attorney, made formal request of the Department for an opportunity to be heard in order that he might submit evidence which it was claimed would indicate his innocence. It is the policy of the Department to afford such opportunity in income-tax cases. Accordingly a hearing took place in the office of the United States attorney at Kansas City, Mo., on May 10, 1933, and on succeeding days.

"The results apparently were inconclusive and did not change the situation.

"On the 1st of July the Department had before it sufficient evidence to reach the conclusion that the case was an appropriate one for prosecution. Later, however, before actual proceedings one for prosecution. Later, however, before actual proceedings were instituted, the defendant submitted in written form what he claimed to be further important evidence and statements. These matters, while in nowise altering the view of the Department, required further examination and a supplementary audit of the Lazia account. This work was under way and had not quite been completed when the matter was brought up by the grand jury. The United States attorney, therefore, asked for instructions, and was immediately notified to cooperate with the grand jury, submit all available evidence, and secure an indictment if the facts so warranted. These instructions were given on Septem-the facts so warranted. These instructions were given on September 6, 1933.

"Nearly a week was consumed in presenting the facts. An indictment was returned on September 16, and later the case was tried. On February 14, 1934, a verdict of guilty was returned on two counts and the accused was sentenced."

The Attorney General in his letter stated:

"No action taken by the Department of Justice in any of these

The Attorney General in his letter stated:

"No action taken by the Department of Justice in any of these matters was at the instance or suggestion of Mr. Farley. No appointment or designation of any attorney or agent to handle any phase thereof was suggested by him, nor was any official removed, or caused to resign at his request."

In reference to this matter Mr. Farley states:

"I have never, directly or indirectly, intervened in any matter whatsoever having to do with any case or investigation by the Department of Justice in Kansas City or elsewhere."

I now come to the part of the report dealing with the American National Bank case, and I want the RECORD to show that that bank is located in Nashville, Tenn.

THE AMERICAN NATIONAL BANK CASE

The Attorney General was asked to report on the American National Bank case, and he did so. He reports the facts as follows:

National Bank case, and he did so. He reports the lacts as follows:

"This matter was referred to the Department of Justice by the Treasury Department, and in accordance with the usual practice was turned over to the Division of Investigation to make a full investigation and report thereon. Mr. E. J. Ambruster, an accountant of the Division of Investigation, had charge of the investigation. Hon. Wayne C. Williams, formerly attorney general of the State of Colorado, being then a special assistant to the Attorney General, was, on November 7, 1933, authorized to assist in the investigation and trial of any case or cases arising out of alleged criminal offenses at the American National Bank at Nashville, Tenn., in violation of the national banking law, the conspiracy statute, and the other Federal criminal law. During that month he proceeded to Nashville, Tenn., and conferred with United States District Attorney A. V. McLane. On December 30, 1933, Mr. A. V. McLane resigned. Maj. Horace Frierson, Jr., was appointed United States district attorney to succeed Mr. McLane, and, upon completion of the investigation, Mr. Williams, together with Mr. Frierson, presented the matter to the grand jury on May 17, 1934. Mr. Ambruster was called by the grand jury and gave a full report of his investigation. The grand jury failed to indict anyone in connection with the matter."

In reference to this matter Mr. Farley says:

In reference to this matter Mr. Farley says:

"I have never intervened, directly or indirectly, in the conduct of any investigation by the Department of Justice or anybody else into the affairs of the American National Bank, of Nashville, Tenn"

In his letter hereto attached the Attorney General used this language:

"No action taken by the Department of Justice in any of these matters was at the instance or suggestion of Mr. Farley. No appointment or designation of any attorney or agent to handle any phase thereof was suggested by him, nor was any official removed, or caused to resign at his request."

Four days after the senior Senator from Louisiana was requested by the committee to present the names of witnesses and the substance of the facts to which they would testify, and just prior to the final action of the committee, the senior Senator from Louisiana submitted to the committee an affidavit, signed by Albert Caye. This is the only evidence submitted to the committee by the senior Senator from Louisiana. That affidavit stated that the affiant was formerly business agent of the Carpenters' District Council of Washington, D. C., and while performing his duties it came to his attention that when some window glass was taken out of the crates in which it was delivered from the manufacturer to the Stewart Construction Co., on the I. C. C. and Labor Building, at Fourteenth Street and Constitution Avenue, that the boxes were burned and that he was informed that the labels on each and every glass were removed immediately, obviously and in his opinion for the purpose of concealing the inferior quality of the glass and to conceal the name of the manufacturer.

This affidavit is filed as a part of this report. Four days after the senior Senator from Louisiana was requested

This affidavit is filed as a part of this report.

Your committee further reports that at the end of the hearing the following resolution was offered and passed by vote of all those present.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the committee that the senior Senator from Louisiana has not produced facts or evidence constituting a proper case for investigation by the Senate under his resolution no. 74.

The following resolution was passed by a majority of the committee:

committee:

Resolved, That the Senate Resolution No. 74 be reported back to the Senate with the recommendation it do not pass, and the chairman be authorized to make the report.

Your committee believes that resolution no. 74 should not be adopted by the Senate and that no committee of investigation have been appointed: And your committee so recommends.

should be appointed: And your committee so recommends.

KENNETH McKellar, Chairman.

MARCH 4. 1935.

Hon. HUEY P. LONG,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR LONG: When before the committee today you stated you could not recall the names of the witnesses you desired to produce in support of the statements made by you, but you could furnish such names to the committee in connection with its consideration of Senate Resolution No. 74.

I am directed by the committee to ask you to present to the chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, not later than noon, of Tuesday, March 5, 1935, the names of the witnesses whom you propose to call and the substance of the evidence which you propose to elicit from each.

Very sincerely yours,

MARCH 5, 1935.

Hon. Huer P. Long,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator Long: I wrote you yesterday by direction of the committee but I have received no response to my letter.

The committee has adjourned until Wednesday, March 6, at 2 o'clock p. m. I write to express the hope that you will be kindenough to furnish by that hour the information requested in my communication of yesterday and which you stated that you could furnish furnish.

Very sincerely yours,

-. Chairman.

FEDERAL EMERGENCY ADMINISTRATOR OF PUBLIC WORKS

The President of the Senate,

Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: In response to the resolution of the United States Senate, passed on the 15th day of February, a careful search has been made of the records in the central office of the Public Works Administration by the chiefs of the various divisions for all data in their files coming within the purview of the

The resolution specifically requests me to transmit any and all data affecting contracts let to or done by the firm of James Stewart & Co., Inc., and the General Builders' Supply Corporation. It further requests me to transmit all information and data which affect, mention, or report on James A. Farley or any concern with which Mr. Farley has been or is now identified.

which Mr. Farley has been or is now identified.

At the outset I wish to state that I have never made or caused to be made any investigation of Postmaster General Farley.

As to James Stewart & Co., Inc., our records show that the only project financed with P. W. A. funds upon which this company has done any work or been awarded any contracts is the Post Office Annex in New York City. Upon this project this company appears as a general contractor. In addition, we have a preliminary report from our Division of Investigations dealing with James Stewart & Co., Inc., on the new Federal courthouse in New York City. However, the project is not financed with P. W. A. funds. Here also this company appears as a general contractor.

As to General Builders' Supply Corporation, the only project upon which our records show this corporation to have done any work or to have been awarded any contracts is the Hillside housing project in New York City. Upon this project this corporation appears as a subcontractor.

As a matter of information I want to point out that on non-

As a matter of information I want to point out that on non-Federal projects and on all projects which are constructed directly by the Public Works Administration (such as housing projects) our Inspection Division supervises the work and obtains a list of the general and subcontractors. No list of either general or sub-contractors is obtained on Federal projects (those constructed directly by Federal departments or agencies other than P. W. A.), since these projects are not supervised by P. W. A. Nor do we have any information in our files with reference to materials or supplies purchased by subcontractors.

purchased by subcontractors.

For the convenience of the Senate, the information collected as the result of the search has been photostated, bound, and certified by me to be true copies of documents contained in our files. The data is being transmitted to the Senate under separate cover. It has been placed in three separate folders as follows:

(1) Copies of reports and memoranda obtained from the files of the Investigation Division of the Public Works Administration.

(2) Copies of reports, correspondence, and memoranda obtained from the files of the Inspection Division of the Public Works Administration.

(3) Copies of miscellaneous correspondence and memoranda obtained from the files of the various divisions of the Public Works Administration other than that included under 1 and 2

The reports compiled by the Division of Investigations refer to three Federal projects: Marine hospital, Stapleton, Staten Island, New York Federal Court House, and the New York City Post Office

The report on the marine hospital project at Stapleton, Staten Island, is numbered 0196, and is submitted only because the name "Builders Supply Co., New York City" is included in a list of subcontractors which will be found on page 3 of schedule C of the report. I am informed that the name is incorrect in this schedule and that the reference should have been to the General Builders Supply Corporation. Nothing else is contained in this report which relates, either directly or indirectly, to the subject matter of the Senate resolution of February 15.

matter of the Senate resolution of February 15.

The investigation report on the Federal courthouse project in New York City is no. 0115 and contains informations of a preliminary nature. In February 1934 an anonymous complaint was received by me in regard to certain alleged savings in connection with the construction of the new Federal courthouse in New York City which were not credited by the general contractor (James Stewart & Co., Inc.) to the Government. Since our Division of Investigations was looking into the regularity of the award of the general contract to the same contractor in the post-

Division of Investigations was looking into the regularity of the award of the general contract to the same contractor in the post-office annex project in New York City, the complaint was referred to that division. Subsequently, all data and suggestions as to possible lines of inquiry were made available at Admiral Peoples' request to the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department. Because this project is not being financed with P. W. A. funds, nothing further was done by P. W. A.

The balance of the data compiled by the Division of Investigation refers to the New York City Post Office Annex, and all of these reports except reports numbered 0172 and 0172 F have reference to alleged violations of P. W. A. labor requirements. Report numbered 0172 F is the result of an investigation as to the granite used on the post-office annex project, and the report indicates that no irregularity was found. Report numbered 0172 has to do with alleged irregularities in connection with the award of the construction contract for this project. The trend of the investigations, the acts investigated, and the possibilities inquired into are set forth in summary form in a series of memoranda which accompany the reports, which memoranda are bound together and marked "Memorandum file."

randum file."

The data compiled by the Division of Inspection refers only to the Hillside housing project, Bronx, New York City. This is the project on which General Builders Supply Corporation is a subcontractor. It is a privately owned, limited-dividend housing project which will cost, when completed, in the neighborhood of $5,000,000. From this file (which has been subdivided in a convenient manner and which relates from the standpoint of the Senate resolution only to General Builders Corporation) it appears that the general contractors, Starrett Bros. & Eken, have purchased or contracted to purchase on competitive bidding material from General Builders Supply Corporation which will cost approximately $116,000. Several of the bidders quoted the same prices on this material and the orders were divided on a substantially equal basis among three of the lowest responsible bidders. One of these was General Builders Supply Corporation.

The third group of material transmitted herewith is, as indicated

The third group of material transmitted herewith is, as indicated above, composed of miscellaneous letters, memoranda, and reports collected from the various divisions which could not be consolidated to advantage with the other material. It has been arranged chronto advantage with the other material. It has been arranged chron-ologically and should be read, for the most part, in connection with the report of the Division of Investigations in regard to the New York City Post Office Annex project (no. 0172). On the left of the folder will be found the record of a hearing before the Board of Labor Review, its decision in the case, and certain corre-spondence in connection therewith. This was considered relevant, inasmuch as it concerns James Stewart & Co., Inc., on the New York City Post Office Annex project.

The data outlined above constitutes all of the material found in our records coming within the scope of the Senate resolution of February 15. Sincerely yours,

HAROLD L. ICKES,
Secretary of the Interior and
Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works.

RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION,

Washington, March 7, 1935.

Dear Senator McKellar: In reply to your letter of March 6 enclosing copy of Senator Long's letter to the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, of the same date, in which you ask for information this morning concerning the reference by Senator Long to a loan of $52,000,000 to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, beg to advise that we made no loan of $52,000,000 to this road.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad owed our Corporation a note of $25,500,000, due August 10, 1934, this loan having been made 2 years prior. To meet this note and to provide the road with other funds that it needed, the Baltimore & Ohio offered, through its bankers, a $50,000,000, 5-year, secured note issue. The loan was certified by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and our Corporation estimated the value of the security behind the $50,000,000 loan certified by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and our Corporation estimated the value of the security behind the $50,000,000 loan to be approximately $90,000,000.

We agreed to lend the road any part of the unsold portion. The net result of the transaction was that the bankers sold all but $13,490,000 of the $50,000,000 issue, and this Corporation received a cash payment on its $25,500,000 loan of $12,144,900 and notes of the new $50,000,000 issue in the amount of $13,355,100.

In the opinion of every member of our Board, the loan was well secured, and neither Mr. Farley nor anyone else ever spoke to me or to any other member of our Board about this loan, except officials of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the bankers who handled the issue.

Very sincerely yours,

Very sincerely yours,

JESSE H. JONES, Chairman.

Hon. KENNETH MCKELLAR,

Chairman Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Office of the Attorney General, Washington, D. C., March 7, 1935.

Hon. Kenneth McKellar,
Chairman Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.
My Dear Senator McKellar: I am in receipt of your letter of the 6th of March.

Complying with your suggestion, I enclose herewith memoranda covering the matters referred to so far as they concern the Department of Justice.

No action taken by the Department of Justice in any of these matters was at the instance or suggestion of Mr. Farley. No appointment or designation of any attorney or agent to handle any phase thereof was suggested by him, nor was any official removed, or caused to resign at his request.

Very sincerely yours,

HOMER CUMMINGS. Attorney General.

IN RE: AMERICAN NATIONAL BANK, NASHVILLE, TENN.

This matter was referred to the Department of Justice by the Treasury Department and in accordance with the usual practice was turned over to the Division of Investigation to make a full investigation and report thereon. Mr. E. J. Ambruster, an accountant of the Division of Investigation, had charge of the investigation. tigation.

Hon. Wayne C. Williams, formerly attorney general of the State of Colorado, being then a special assistant to the Attorney General, was, on November 7, 1933, authorized to assist in the investigation and trial of any case or cases arising out of alleged criminal of-fenses at the American National Bank at Nashville, Tenn., in violation of the national banking law, the conspiracy statute, and other Federal criminal law. During that month he proceeded to Nashville, Tenn., and conferred with United States District Attorney A. V. McLane.

On December 30, 1933, Mr. A. V. McLane resigned. Maj. Horace Frierson, Jr., was appointed United States district attorney to suc-ceed Mr. McLane and upon completion of the investigation Mr. Williams, together with Mr. Frierson, presented the matter to the grand jury on May 17, 1934.

Mr. Ambruster was called by the grand jury and gave a full report of his investigation. The grand jury failed to indict anyone in connection with the matter.

IN RE: UNITED STATES V. EDWIN P. KNOTTS

Clyde O. Eastus became United States attorney for the northern district of Texas on the 1st day of July 1933. On July 3, 1933, in the case of United States of America v. Edwin P. Knotts et al, the following certificate was formally filed with this Department: "I, Clyde O. Eastus, United States attorney for the northern district of Texas, by reason of former association and connection prior to induction in office, do hereby certify my disqualification to appear as United States attorney in the prosecution of the above-styled case.

"CLYDE O. EASTUS,
"United States Attorney."

On the 11th day of July 1933 the following communication was addressed to A. T. Cole, Esq., special assistant to the Attorney General, room 303, Federal Building, Dallas, Tex.:

"Sir: In a separate letter, among others, the Department has assigned you to prosecute the case of C. R. Morrison, Edwin P. Knotts, and others, in connection with an alleged fraudulent use of the mails in the sale of stock under the name of C. R. Morrison Co. and the General Minerals Co., of Fort Worth.

"Clyde O. Eastus, Esq., United States attorney, Fort Worth, under date of July 3, 1933, transmitted to the Department a certificate of disqualification by virtue of his prior connection with the same before his induction into office as United States attorney.

"You will proceed therefore to handle this case on your own."

"You will proceed, therefore, to handle this case on your own responsibility without any suggestions or directions of any sort from Mr. Eastus. A perusal of the inspector's report indicates that the case is a flagrant one and should be prosecuted promptly and vigorously. You should retain exclusive possession of the files.

"The chief post office inspector has informed me that another post-office inspector will be assigned to this case upon request to Mr. Clampitt, inspector in charge at Austin, Tex. The inspector's reports and accompanying exhibits are being forwarded to tor's reports and accompanying exhibits are being forwarded to you today.

"Respectfully,
"For the Attorney General:

"(Sgd.) WILLIAM STANLEY,
"Assistant to the Attorney General."

On the 14th of October 1933 Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, special assistant to the Attorney General, was appointed to assist in the prosecution of the mail-fraud charges against Edwin P. Knotts and others in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas.

On the 14th

District of Texas.

On the 14th day of November 1933 an indictment was returned by the grand jury for the northern district of Texas against Edwin P. Knotts and others, charging use of the mails "in a scheme to obtain money by false representations."

On December 4, 1933, the defendant, Edwin P. Knotts, entered a plea of guilty thereto. On December 7, 1933, he was sentenced by Judge James C. Wilson to 5 years at the United States Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kans. On December 23, 1933, he filed a petition in the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas, seeking leave to withdraw his plea of guilty. On December 30, 1933, there was a hearing on this motion, at the conclusion of which the motion was overruled.

On January 15, 1934, appellant petitioned for appeal from "the verdict and judgment returned herein." On February 17, 1934, a verdict and judgment returned herein." On February 17, 1934, a bill of exceptions was filed, which contains the testimony taken before Judge Wilson on December 30, 1933, when the appellant moved to withdraw his plea of guilty. On May 10, 1934, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit entered judgment to dismiss the appeal in the above-entitled cause.

> OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL, Washington, D. C., March 7, 1935.

Hon, KENNETH MCKELLAR

Hon. Kenneth McKellar,

Chairman Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator McKellar: I am in receipt of your letter of March 6, in which you transmit a copy of a letter which was read into the Congressional Record yesterday by Senator Long, of Louislana, and in which you have requested me, if convenient, to furnish your committee such statement with respect thereto as I may care to make.

The letter of Senator Long is merely a restatement of the reck-less insinuations previously made by the Senator, with the excep-tion that it contains the following new charges:

(1) That I tentains the following new charges:

(1) That I intervened in the prosecution of a criminal case in the State of Tennessee involving the affairs of the American National Bank, of Nashville, by maneuvering "the personnel and conduct of the personnel of those connected with the Department of Justice having the matter in hand, both in person and through agents", by in any way bringing about the removal of a United States attorney and the appointment of a special man to appear the grand jury.

(2) That I exercised control of the Department of Justice in the proceedings before a United States grand jury in Kansas City.

(3) That "through the firm of Stone & Webster" I exercised influence in the selection of "all engineers of influence in charge of and supervising public works or in which the United States Government is in any manner concerned."

(4) That at my direction post-office inspectors "set upon" certain witnesses whom the Senator from Louisiana asserts conferred with him in order to "scare" them and "suppress development of the truth."

In response, I make the following statement:

(1) I have never intervened, directly or indirectly, in the conduct of any investigation by the Department of Justice or anybody else into the affairs of the American National Bank, of Nashville,

(2) I have never, directly or indirectly, intervened in any matter whatsoever having to do with any case or investigation by the Department of Justice in Kansas City or elsewhere.

(3) I have never exercised the slightest influence upon the selection of any engineers or other agents of the Public Works Administration or the Government through Stone & Webster or any other

(4) There is not a word of truth in the statement that at any time I directed post-office inspectors to set upon or intimidate any

Very respectfully yours,

JAMES A. FARLEY, Postmaster General.

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY

Washington.

My Dear Mr. Charman: Pursuant to your verbal request, I hasten to reply further to your letter of March 6, which I received at 9:30 this morning, to comply with your request that my statement be submitted to you by I o'clock today.

I note on examining Senator Long's letter of March 6, a copy of which you enclose, that no specific reference is made to the Treasury Department or to the Procurement Division. However, it is not my decided to wignest. Treasury Department or to the Procurement Division. However, it is not my desire to suggest any technical or formal difficulties, and I assume from your letter that you feel if there is the slightest implication of any irregularity reflecting, even by indirection, upon this Department, the matter should be gone into fully and the complete facts be put at the disposal of your committee. With this position I am thoroughly in accord and shall reply to your letter at this time as fully as the urgency of your request permits, upon the understanding, of course, that any further information desired by your committee is entirely at your disposal and that, if there are any questions which remain unanswered as a result of this letter, or any records or files of the Treasury Department or the Procurement Division which your committee desires, your further request will be complied with to the fullest extent that is within my power. within my power.

I am informed that, included in the material already forwarded to your committee, is a letter from Mr. Louis Glavis, Director of Investigations of the Public Works Administration, dated August 22, 1934, addressed to the Director of Procurement, in which Mr. Glavis lists ten items which he feels should be brought to the Director's attention as a result of the investigation made by Mr.

Glavis' organization. Glavis' organization.

In order to acquaint you with the factual background on these ten points, I feel that, in view of the shortness of time, I cannot do better than to enclose for your information a photostatic copy of a letter written to Mr. Glavis by the Director of Procurement on February 27, 1935. It is my hope that this letter will give you with sufficient particularity all information bearing upon these questions. While no specific statement to that effect is made in Senator Long's letter, I am prepared to assume from his reference to Stewart & Co. and Driscoll & Co. that he makes reference to the matter of the bidding on the superstructure of the New York Post Office Annex. The history of this incident is somewhat complicated, but the following are the principal actions leading to the final result:

the final result:

On February 28, 1933, bids for this project were opened. The matter was held in abeyance without the acceptance of any bid pending the inauguration of the new administration on March 4, and thereafter during the consideration of the comprehensive public-works program being developed by the present administration. After the passage of the National Industrial Recovery Act it was determined that further Federal buildings would be erected out of funds allotted by the Public Works Administration. Such funds were allotted for this project, but by reason of the additional requirements of the National Industrial Recovery Act it was necessary to change somewhat the terms of contracts for public works. For this reason supplemental bids were requested from the bidders on the original project.

On October 2, 1933, these supplemental bids were opened. Geo.

from the bidders on the original project.

On October 2, 1933, these supplemental bids were opened. Geo. F. Driscoll & Co. was found to be the low bidder and James A. Stewart & Co. the second low bidder. Stewart & Co. protested that the low bidder was disqualified by reason of failure to comply with the requirements surrounding the President's reemployment agreement. Conflicting decisions of the Attorney General and the Comptroller General resulted in my decision that the only practical course to follow was to reject both bids and to readvertise.

tical course to follow was to reject both bids and to readvertise.

I should state at this point that the basis for bidding on both the original and supplemental bids had been for alternative requirements, including on the one hand a completed building and on the other a building with the fourth and fifth floors incomplete, due to the fact that it had not yet been determined whether the additional space would be necessary to meet immediate requirements. For this reason the readvertising was also made on the basis of these same alternatives.

On December 27, 1933, the bids on the basis of this readvertisement were opened and it was found that Geo. F. Driscoll & Co. was the low bidder for the completed building and Stewart & Co. for the building with the fourth and fifth floors uncompleted.

On account of this development, it became necessary to determine finally which type of building should be selected. While the matter was being considered, open charges of inequity and favoritism were made in connection with both low bidders. It was now evident that a determination of which type of building should be ism were made in connection with both low bidders. It was now evident that a determination of which type of building should be built would automatically result in the conclusion as to which contractor would become the successful bidder. In order to avoid any charges that the administration officials of the Government were in that way guilty of favoritism or bad faith, it was again decided to reject both bids and to readvertise. However, to avoid a repetition of the incident just described, these bids were called for not on the basis of alternatives, but only for the construction of a completed building. of a completed building.

When, after public advertisement, these bids were opened on February 21, 1934, Stewart & Co. was found to be low bidder, and for that reason the contract was awarded to it.

Following is a list of these bidders, with the amounts of their bids:

James Stewart & Co	$4, 287, 700
Geo. F. Driscoll Co	4, 378, 580
Kenney Bros., Inc.	4, 393, 000
Joseph Meltzer, Inc.	4, 678, 000
Charles T. Wills	4, 836, 500

I might, in passing, make two further observations: First, that on both the original bid and the supplemental bid the same bidder was low on both alternatives, and it was only when the bids of December 27, 1933, were opened that it was found that different bidders were low on the two alternatives; and, second, that the final contracts awarded resulted in a saving to the Government, over the previous lowest bid for comparable work, of over $100,000.

over the previous lowest bid for comparable work, of over $100,000. Finally, I note that Senator Long refers on page 4 of his letter to a charge that engineers supervising public works have formed a network of supervision "to enure to the advantage and control of said Farley." If this charge is intended to refer to the engineers of the Procurement Divison of the Treasury Department, I have every confidence that it is without foundation; but I shall be most pleased to have Senator Long submit to me any evidential foundation for such a charge which, so far as I know, is now being made for the first time, and I shall immediately institute a thorough and comprehensive investigation of this allegation, the results of which will be entirely at the disposal of your committee. results of which will be entirely at the disposal of your committee. Respectfully yours,

H. MORGENTHAU, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. KENNETH MCKELLAR. United States Senate.

> TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Office of Comptroller of the Currency, Nashville, Tenn., August 12, 1933.

A. V. MCLANE,

United States District Attorney,

Middle District of Tennessee, Nashville, Tenn.

Six: You will be advised that during the course of the regular periodical examination of the American National Bank of Nashville, Tenn., which examination was begun on July 6, 1933, the following unusual, "if not irregular," transactions are brought to our attention, which are in violation of section 5209 of the National Bank Act.

Bank Act.

Comptroller's call for report of condition December 31, 1931: A note for $600,000, signed by Nashville & American Trust Co., carried in the assets of the American National Bank, was eliminated over the period through the following procedure: A note of the Fourth and First Banks, Inc., carried by the Nashville American Trust Co. for $884,238.47, was discounted at par with the First National Bank of St. Louis, Mo., with a repurchase agreement signed by both the American National Bank and the Nashville American Trust Co. However, the books of neither show this repurchase liability. (On Dec. 31, 1931, the national bank gave the State bank credit for $500,000 on its books, showing this amount due to and from the State institution, and the State bank set up corresponding entries increasing its cash and due from banks corresponding entries increasing its cash and due from banks $500,000.) No cash was involved in the transactions, the entries were purely fictitious on the part of both banks, and said entries reversed on January 5, 1932, hence it can readily be seen that such untrue statements are deceiving.

The records reveal that the cashier of the American National Bank, M. E. Barr, was granted a loan by said bank under date of June 26, 1933, for the sum of $2,500, which is a strict violation of the Banking Act of 1933.

Comptroller's call for report of condition June 30, 1933: Transactions between the American National Bank and the Union & Planters National Bank, of Memphis, Tenn., which are no more or less than fictitious entries for the purpose of padding or window dressing, and which transactions lend aid to deceiving the supervising officials of the banking business, namely, Comptroller of the Currency, chief national-bank examiner and field examiners, and the depositing public, and such as is shown by the following tabulation of dates and amounts:

Date	Due from Union & Planters National Bank	& Planters
June 26, 1933.  June 27, 1933.  June 28, 1933.  June 29, 1933.  June 30, 1933.  July 1, 1933.  July 2, 1933.  July 3, 1933.  July 4, 1933.  July 4, 1933.  July 5, 1933.  July 6, 1933.  July 6, 1933.	$21, 520, 56 22, 477, 44 15, 122, 50 15, 961, 70 217, 423, 79 218, 823, 64 218, 823, 64 223, 582, 52 223, 582, 52 221, 675, 22 24, 608, 29	$303, 276. 39 279, 091. 31 295, 127. 14 999, 020. 48 1, 400, 797. 22 1, 006, 955. 66 1, 018, 352. 79 1, 018, 352. 79 636, 214. 31 294, 750. 89

Hence it can readily be seen such entries compiled for purpose of window dressing over the period which it was known there would be a call for published statement.

Respectfully submitted for your consideration.

(Signed) F. A. GUILES, National Bank Examiner, 717 First National Bank Building, Atlanta, Ga.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, District of Columbia, City of Washington:

Before me, the undersigned authority, personally came and appeared Albert Caya, who being duly sworn, deposes and says:

appeared Albert Caya, who being duly sworn, deposes and says:

That he was formerly business agent of the Carpenters' District Council of Washington, D. C., and vicinity; that while he was performing his duties as business agent it came to his attention that, immediately after the window glass was taken out of the crates in which it was delivered from the manufacturer to the James Stewart Construction Co. job on the I. C. C. and Labor Building at Fourteenth and Constitution Avenue, these boxes were burned; that he was further informed by the glaziers who worked on this job that the labels on each and every glass were removed immediately, obviously, and in his opinion, for the purpose of concealing the inferior quality of the glass, which did not comply with the specifications and to conceal the name of the manufacturer and the materialmen; that all of the facts and allegations made herein are true and correct.

ALBERT CAYA.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 8th day of March 1935. CHARLES E. ALDEN. [SEAL]

My commission expires September 1, 1937.

MINORITY VIEWS

We concur in the findings of the majority of the committee that upon the record there has not been presented a prima facie case for an investigation of the charges contained in Senate Resolution 74.

It is our view, however, that the widespread circulation of these charges has created suspicion in the public mind. We believe that the interests of the parties concerned and the public welfare can best be served by a prompt and thorough investigation of the charges made in Senate Resolution 74.

ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE, Jr., W. WARREN BARBOUR, E. W. GIBSON.

ADDITIONAL MINORITY REPORT

The undersigned respectfully disagree with the report of the majority of the committee:

The charges made in Senate Resolution 74 are of a serious na The charges made in Senate Resolution 74 are of a serious nature, and in view of the fact that the author of the resolution has repeatedly stated on the floor of the Senate and before the committee that he can and will furnish witnesses and evidence to sustain the charges made, and that in all fairness to the Postmaster General he should be accorded an opportunity to vindicate himself and to allay the suspicion that has been created in the public mind by the constant reiteration of these charges:

We, therefore, recommend that a prompt and thereugh investigations.

We, therefore, recommend that a prompt and thorough investi-gation be made of the charges set forth in Senate Resolution 74.

LYNN J. FRAZIER, THOS. D. SCHALL.

During the reading of the report,

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. Would the Senator be willing to have the remainder of the report published in the Congressional RECORD without reading?

Mr. McKELLAR. There is not much more of it, and I hope the Senator will let me read it. These charges have been filed in the Senate. It will take only a few minutes more to read the findings of the committee. They ought to

Mr. McNARY. I thought, inasmuch as the Senator is not going to ask for any action tonight, he might be willing to have the remainder of the report printed without reading.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, no. I want the Senate to hear the full report.

After the reading of the report,

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask that the letters I send to the desk may be made a part of the report, and printed with it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Caya affidavit was the only answer to the request of the committee that the Senator from Louisiana furnish names of witnesses and a statement of what they would testify. In my opinion, this affidavit has no evidentiary force whatsoever.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. McKELLAR. Although I desire to address the Senate on one of the features of the report, I think I ought to yield and let the Senator present the views of the minority at this point; and I do yield. Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask that brief views of the minority may be read by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read. The legislative clerk read as follows:

MINORITY VIEWS

We concur in the findings of the majority of the committee that upon the record there has not been presented a prima facie case for an investigation of the charges contained in Senate Resolu-

It is our view, however, that the wide-spread circulation of these charges has created suspicion in the public mind. We believe that the interests of the parties concerned and the public welfare can best be served by a prompt and thorough investigation of the charges made in Senate Resolution 74.

ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE, Jr. W. WARREN BARBBOUR. E. W. GIBSON.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee yield to me?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. FRAZIER. I desire to present additional minority views, which I ask to have read at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read. The legislative clerk read as follows:

ADDITIONAL MINORITY VIEWS

The undersigned respectfully disagree with the report of the majority of the committee.

The charges made in Senate Resolution 74 are of a serious nature, and in view of the fact that the author of the resolution has repeatedly stated on the floor of the Senate and before the committee that he can and will furnish witnesses and evidence to sustain the charges made, and that in all fairness to the Postmaster General he should be accorded an opportunity to vindicate himself and to allay the suspicion that has been created in the public mind by the constant reiteration of these charges.

We therefore recommend that a prompt and thorough investigation be made of the charges set forth in Senate Resolution 74.

LYNN J. FRAZIER. THOS. D. SCHALL.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask the indulgence of the Senate while I refer to one matter which is not a part of my report but is a statement I desire to make personally about the Tennessee matter. I refer to the charge that was filed in reference to the American National Bank, of Nashville, Tenn., and two of its officers.

This institution is one of the largest and strongest in our State. Former Senator Lea, one Joe Reece, and one Richard M. Atkinson, the attorney general—not the State attorney general but the prosecuting attorney-for the county of Davidson, in which Nashville is situated, got together and formed a conspiracy, for reasons of their own, to destroy the American National Bank and its officials a year or two ago, and that conspiracy was the origin of these charges.

As we know, one of those gentlemen is now in prison, and another one of them, Mr. Joe Reece, has been convicted of misappropriating something like $100,000 of Tennessee bonds.

Those men resolved to destroy this bank if possible, and since that time they have waged a relentless campaign against the bank to accomplish their purpose.

At the time they started their attack the deposits of the bank were $25,000,000, or thereabouts. The bank had correspondents all over Tennessee, and the consequences of the success of these three men and their associates in their plot to destroy the bank would have had very serious financial consequences in Tennessee.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President-

Mr. McKELLAR. I decline to yield at this time.

Later on Mr. Atkinson, one of those engaged in the conspiracy, and who was prosecuting attorney for that county, went before the grand jury and undertook to have the officers of the bank, Mr. Paul Davis and Mr. Vance Alexander. indicted for some alleged violation of the law. He brought the matter before one grand jury, and that grand jury refused to indict. He brought it before another grand jury, and the second grand jury refused to indict. He brought it before a third grand jury, and the third grand jury refused to indict.

About that time one of these men, who has since been convicted, was brought before Mr. Atkinson's court, and Atkinson declined to prosecute him, so the presiding judge had to appoint a district attorney, or an attorney general, as we call him, in his place, to prosecute.

Later on, when Mr. Reece became active in his peculations, and when he took the money of the State, that did not belong to him, this same district attorney, R. M. Atkinson, who was here in Washington and personally gave to the Senator from Louisiana the alleged facts concerning this bank matter, declined to prosecute Reece, and the Governor of the State had to intervene and appoint a district attorney to prosecute in the place of Mr. Atkinson. Mr. Atkinson remained in the trial of the case, ostensibly as the State's representative, but really he did everything he could to defend this man Reece who had stolen $100,000 of bonds of the State. Notwithstanding that, the defendant Reece was convicted, and the case is now pending in the Supreme Court of Tennessee on the appeal of the defendant, Reece.

I wish to say that I know all these people. In my judgment, there is not a scintilla of reason why that case should be brought here and tried again on the floor of the Senate. The two men whom the Senator from Louisiana denounced. as he has been denouncing so many on the floor here lately, Mr. Paul Davis, the president of the bank, and the other, Mr. Vance Alexander, the vice president of the bank, are two of the best men in our State, and there are no better men in any State than those gentlemen. They have not committed any wrong. They are honest, high-minded, upright, and splendid gentlemen. They are the victims of a foul conspiracy, as above stated, and the people of Tennessee have upheld them, four grand juries have upheld them, the courts have upheld them in every way possible.

Mr. LONG rose.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I am not going to yield at the present time. I will yield to the Senator in a moment.

I forgot to state that having failed in the State court, his associate, whose name I have forgotten, ran up here. The district attorney general ran up here to the Department of Justice and tried his best to get these two bank officials indicted by the Federal court. The Department of Justice here did everything in the world it could to help them. It sent a lawyer down there to investigate, it sent an accountant or auditor down there to investigate, and instructed the district attorney down there to examine the case carefully. All three of them, the district attorney, the assistant, and the special attorney went before the grand jury, and again the grand jury, the Federal grand jury, refused to indict those two honest and honorable men, Mr. Davis and Mr. Alexander, just as honest gentlemen as there are anywhere in this or any other country.

Atkinson and his associate, from whom the Senator from Louisiana received this information, have been repudiated in every way by the local authorities down there, and I am astounded to think that even the Senator from Louisiana would listen to charges made by the men who have been up here in the last few days talking to him in his office, Mr. Atkinson and the young man with him, whose name I have now forgotten. But I desire to say to the Senate that the charges against these two splendid men—one Paul Davis and the other Vance Alexander—are absolutely without foundation, and I hope that the Senator from Louisiana, before he listens to the traducers of these men, will look into the case a little more carefully.

Now, I want to say one more thing.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?
The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Tennessee yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. McKELLAR. Not at present, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator from Louisiana, for some purpose, possibly because Mr. Norman Davis is an official of the Federal Government, included as one of the manipulators—I believe he called it—in this bank transaction Norman Davis. Norman Davis happens to be a brother of Paul Davis, the president of the bank. Norman Davis has not lived in Tennessee in a quarter of a century. I think he owns some stock in the American National Bank. He is not a director; he is not an officer of the bank. He knows nothing in the world about the affairs of the bank, except what his brother tells him. He is not a citizen of Tennessee at all. He has nothing to do with the running of the affairs of that bank. He is a citizen of New York and has lived there many years.

I want to tell the Senate what has happened. Ordinarily when you talk about a bank it is like talking about the virtue of a woman—it ruins the woman. But what has happened to this bank? This bank had $25,000,000 in deposits when this conspiracy was formed to destroy it; this bank's deposits have increased to $42,000,000, or 70 percent since the wild charges were made by these men, two of whom have already been convicted and sentenced to prison; and I want to say that I make this speech about that bank for the purpose of denouncing these aspersions as absolutely untrue, and found to be untrue by at least four grand juries in Tennessee.

By the way, I overlooked another grand jury. This man Joe Reece lives in Johnson County in east Tennessee, right next to the North Carolina line; a mountain county, as we call it, and Reece seems to have some influence up there. He went up there and had Mr. Davis and Mr. Alexander indicted in that county, where neither one of them had ever been in their lives, showing the length to which the conspirators were willing to go. As soon as the court brought the case before it, the indictments were dismissed. Thus all the courts, practically, those that had jurisdiction and those which did not have jurisdiction, have decided in favor of Davis and Alexander.

But at last these conspirators found a method of getting before the public. They saw that the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Long] was in eruption up here, and they came up and gave their case against Davis and Alexander to that Senator, and he has brought charges against these two splendid men.

I want to say to the Senator from Louisiana in all kindness, that I take it that he has been absolutely mislead about these two men.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. They are as honorable men as are to be found anywhere and they ought not to be further persecuted in my judgment.

I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LONG. Who is F. A. Guiles?

Mr. McKELLAR. I never heard of him.

Mr. LONG. Well, he is a national-bank examiner.

Mr. McKELLAR. I never heard of him.

Mr. LONG. I do not know Mr. Reece, except I heard that a man named Reece was convicted.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator heard that he had stolen $100,000 of bonds while he was commissioner of insurance in Tennessee.

Mr. LONG. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. And that he had been convicted of it? Mr. LONG. I heard that.

Mr. McKELLAR. Why, these men, Atkinson, and his associate, whose name I have forgotten, who have been associating with the Senator for the last 2 or 3 days, have told him all about Reece. Oh, yes; they have told him all about Reece.

Mr. LONG. The names that I have submitted were a former United States attorney, a former State's attorney, and an assistant State's attorney. Has any one of them been convicted of anything?

Mr. McKellar. I just spoke about one of them, Atkinson. Mr. Atkinson was State's attorney for Davidson County down there, and his term expired, and he did not run any more, and Mr. Atkinson was the same man who refused to prosecute former Senator Luke Lea, and the judge had to appoint another district attorney, Mr. Seth Walker, to do the work which Mr. Atkinson had been elected to do. Then I will say another thing about Mr. Atkinson. He was appointed to represent the State. It was his duty to prosecute Reece, and he would not do it, and the Governor of the State stepped in and appointed the Honorable Seth Walker to take charge of the case, regardless of the district attorney, and thereupon Mr. Reece was tried and convicted of stealing the $100,000, in spite of the active assistance of Atkinson, whose sworn duty it was to prosecute Reece.

Mr. LONG. I am trying to get some information from the Senator. As I understand, neither the former Attorney General, or assistant State's attorney, or United States attorney have ever been indicted or prosecuted or convicted for any crime?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know that they have yet.

Mr. LONG. Those are the three names given. Now the Senator says he does not know Mr. F. A. Guiles, of the Treasury Department.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know Mr. Guiles.

Mr. LONG. I have in my hand a letter showing that it was the Treasury Department of the United States which directed these charges to the United States attorney for the middle district of Tennessee.

Mr. McKellar. Suppose they did. Those charges were found to be untrue and no true bill has been found. The courts have decided already in favor of these men, Messrs. Davis and Alexander. The Senator from Louisiana, without any knowledge of the facts, hooked up with two men, Atkinson and his associate, who have been repudiated in our State, and undertakes to make their false charges openly here; and unless the Senator takes a different course, he is undertaking with them to destroy a great bank in my State and two of the best men I know.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the Senator, I think, will believe that no one would like to do Mr. Paul Davis justice more than myself, but I have in my hand the report and instructions of the Treasury Department, through Mr. F. A. Guiles, the national-bank examiner for the district in which Nashville is located, telling Mr. A. V. McLean, United States attorney for the middle district of Nashville, Tenn., that these gentlemen have violated a number of statutes and committed a number of downright frauds therein enumerated, and commanding that proper steps be taken against them. Now, I do not know Mr. McLean: I do not know Mr. Guiles, but when these three gentlemen indicate to me that they are willing to testify, and exhibit voluminous Government reports, I do not see how the Senator could hold it against me if I asked a committee to be appointed to review these Government reports which the Treasury Department says show downright fraud, criminality, corruption, and stealing. They may be wrong about it. I wish the Treasury Department might be made to correct this matter. Let me say to my friend from Tennessee that if the Treasury Department has slandered these men, I would be willing to investigate the Treasury Department just as I would Farley. I would be honest

Mr. McKELLAR. The courts of Tennessee have decided in favor of these two gentlemen, Mr. Paul Davis and Mr. Alexander. I do not think the Senator ought to listen to vague statements and innuendos made by the two men whom he perhaps never heard of before who have come here and have been closeted with him time and time again in the last 2 days, so I am informed, and have called on the Senator as a last resort and after all other courses have failed.

Mr. LONG. The Senator has been wrongly informed.

Mr. McKELLAR. They are here. Mr. LONG. Yes; they are here.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator has been talking to them?

Mr. LONG. They have been to my office.

Mr. McKELLAR. Of course they have.

Mr. LONG. I will state to the Senator what was the occasion. They came to my office, not on their suggestion, but at my request.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know at whose request, but if the Senator requested those two men to come here he was performing a very good job of muckraking. The courts of Tennessee have decided this bank case. They have decided that the report of the Treasury official, which the Senator has read, was wrong. There has been every opportunity to show that it was right. But what has that to do with the charges against Farley?

Mr. LONG. Just one more question, if my friend will yield, and he has been very nice in that regard. He has said, "The courts." Is it not a fact it was the grand jury alone, as to which I will state that I have four affidavits ready to produce from four members of that grand jury, as well as from the United States attorney, that they removed the United States attorney and sent a Farley man down there under Farley's instructions, who made a speech before the grand jury telling them they should not indict. I do not know whether these four grand jurors are swearing truly or not.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator does not know what they will swear.

Mr. LONG. I do not know if the Treasury report is true or not. I do not know if the statement of the United States attorney is true or not. However, with these voluminous documents attested I think the Senator is probably doing me a wrong and doing Norman Davis a wrong in not opening up this Pandora's box.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator is muckraking a little bit too much. What has Farley to do with this? What has Norman Davis to do with it? There is no evidence connecting them with it. Mr. Farley and the Attorney General of the United States both state Farley had nothing to do with The Senator is mistaken in this matter like he is about all his other charges against Farley.

RECESS TO MONDAY

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I had hoped and it had been hoped by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], March 1, 1935.

Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, that a conclusion might be reached before the end of this week concerning the pending joint resolution, but upon investigation and inquiry it is found that it would be impossible to conclude the main controversy affecting the matter tomorrow for the reason that some Senators who desire to be present will be absent from the city.

For that reason, and with the approval of the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, I move that the Senate stand in recess until 12 o'clock noon on Monday.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until Monday, March 11, 1935, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate March 8 (legislative day of Mar. 4), 1935

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE

Walter J. Rothensies, of Red Lion, Pa., to be collector of internal revenue for the first district of Pennsylvania, to fill an existing vacancy.

APPOINTMENT IN THE REGULAR ARMY MEDICAL CORPS

To be first lieutenant with rank from February 28, 1935 First Lt. Aloysius Thomas Waskowicz, Medical Corps Reserve.

APPOINTMENTS, BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ARMY TO SIGNAL CORPS

First Lt. Haskell Hadley Cleaves, Infantry (detailed in Signal Corps), with rank from May 1, 1931.

TO AIR CORPS

Second Lt. Harry Stephen Bishop, Coast Artillery Corps (detailed in Air Corps), with rank from June 13, 1933.

Second Lt. Charles Albert Clark, Jr., Field Artillery (detailed in Air Corps), with rank from June 10, 1932.

Second Lt. David Nicholas Crickette, Field Artillery (detailed in Air Corps), with rank from June 13, 1933.

Second Lt. Paul R. Gowen, Corps of Engineers (detailed in Air Corps), with rank from June 13, 1933.

Second Lt. Robert Broussard Landry, Infantry (detailed in Air Corps), with rank from June 10, 1932.

Second Lt. Samuel Abner Mundell, Infantry (detailed in Air Corps), with rank from June 13, 1933.

Second Lt. John Morgan Price, Infantry (detailed in Air Corps), with rank from June 10, 1932.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

TO BE COLONELS

Lt. Col. Mark Lorin Ireland, Quartermaster Corps, from March 1, 1935.

Lt. Col. Charles Avery Dravo, Infantry, from March 1, 1935. Lt. Col. Charles Roberts Pettis, Corps of Engineers, from March 1, 1935.

TO BE LIEUTENANT COLONELS

Maj. Oscar Wolverton Griswold, Infantry, from March 1,

Maj. Harding Polk, Cavalry, from March 1, 1935.

Maj. Robert Horace Dunlop, Adjutant General's Department, from March 1, 1935.

Maj. Emil Fred Reinhardt, Infantry, from March 1, 1935.

TO BE MAJORS

Capt. Calvin Earl Giffin, Air Corps, from March 1, 1935. Capt. Gustaf Hugh Ericson, Coast Artillery Corps, from March 1, 1935.

Capt. Frederick Lofquist, Coast Artillery Corps, from March 1, 1935.

Capt. John Harold Wilson, Coast Artillery Corps, from

March 1, 1935. Capt. Napoleon Boudreau, Coast Artillery Corps, from

March 1, 1935.

Capt. George Peterson Winton, Field Artillery, from

TO BE CAPTAINS

First Lt. John Harrison Stokes, Jr., Infantry, from March 1, 1935.

First Lt. Jesse Ellis Graham, Infantry, from March 1, 1935. First Lt. Jerome David Cambre, Infantry, from March 1,

First Lt. Burrowes Goldthwaite Stevens, Infantry, from March 1, 1935.

First Lt. Alexander Thomas McCone, Field Artillery, from March 1, 1935.

First Lt. Thomas Markham Brinkley, Infantry, from March 1, 1935.

First Lt. Reginald Worth Hubbell, Infantry, from March 1,

First Lt. Donald William Sawtelle, Cavalry, from March 1, 1935.

First Lt. Paul Wilkins Kendall, Infantry, from March 1,

First Lt. Charles Henry Moore, Jr., Infantry, from March 1, 1935.

First Lt. James Wentworth Freeman, Ordnance Department, from March 1, 1935.

First Lt. Alexander John Mackenzie, Infantry, from March 1, 1935.

First Lt. Wiley Vinton Carter, Signal Corps, from March 1,

First Lt. Ira Platt Swift, Cavalry, from March 1, 1935.

First Lt. Wilbur Eugene Dunkelberg, Infantry, from March 1, 1935.

First Lt. Arthur Pulsifer, Signal Corps, from March 2, 1935.

TO BE FIRST LIEUTENANTS

Second Lt. Charles Freeman Kearney, Infantry, from March 1, 1935.

Second Lt. Julian Broster Lindsey, Infantry, from March

Second Lt. Robert Lawrence Love, Infantry, from March

1, 1935. Second Lt. Thomas Norfleet Griffin, Infantry, from March

Second Lt. George Frederick Conner, Infantry, from March

1, 1935. Second Lt. Clebert Leon Hail, Infantry, from March 1, 1935.

Second Lt. Arthur Knight Noble, Infantry, from March 1,

Second Lt. Samuel Edwin Mays, Jr., Infantry, from March

1, 1935. Second Lt. Robert Campbell Johnson, Infantry, from March 1, 1935.

Second Lt. Robert Van Meter Smith, Infantry, from March

Second Lt. George Van Millett, Jr., Infantry, from March 1, 1935.

Second Lt. Lionel Theodore Roosevelt Trotter, Infantry, from March 1, 1935.

Second Lt. Edwin Michael Van Bibber, Infantry, from March 1, 1935

Second Lt. Whitside Miller, Infantry, from March 1, 1935. Second Lt. George Elston Price, Air Corps, from March 1. 1935.

Second Lt. Richard Clark Lindsay, Air Corps, from March

Second Lt. John Gordon Fowler, Air Corps, from March 2, 1935.

Second Lt. John Lyle Nedwed, Air Corps, from March 2, 1935.

PROMOTIONS IN THE PHILIPPINE SCOUTS

TO BE CAPTAIN

First Lt. Eustaquio Sabio Baclig, Philippine Scouts, from March 1, 1935.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

MARINE CORPS

the Marine Corps from the 1st day of February 1935.

LXXIX-204

POSTMASTERS

AT.ARAMA

Velma P. Mickam to be postmaster at Bridgeport, Ala., in place of E. F. Whitcher. Incumbent's commission expired March 8, 1934.

Alida J. Cox to be postmaster at Spring Hill, Ala., in place of A. J. Cox. Incumbent's commission expired May 16, 1934. Agnes O. Harrison to be postmaster at Frisco City, Ala., in place of W. A. Giddens, removed.

ALASKA

James H. Gilpatrick to be postmaster at Sitka, Alaska, in place of E. D. De Armond. Incumbent's commission expired January 13, 1935.

ARIZONA

John B. Boone to be postmaster at Coolidge, Ariz., in place of D. H. Nutt. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1934.

Albert H. Adams to be postmaster at Scottsdale, Ariz., in place of J. L. Conrad, deceased.

Horace L. Lay to be postmaster at Amity, Ark., in place of W. C. Allen. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1933.

Thomas S. Reynolds to be postmaster at Bradley, Ark., in place of T. S. Reynolds. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1935.

Lewis E. Smith to be postmaster at Cabot, Ark., in place of R. L. Goad. Incumbent's commission expired June 9, 1934.

Hazel N. Poe to be postmaster at England, Ark., in place of J. A. Skipper. Incumbent's commission expired June 17, 1934.

Elmer Austin to be postmaster at Gravette, Ark., in place of J. S. Thompson. Incumbent's commission expired June 24, 1934.

Leo D. Perdue to be postmaster at Louann, Ark., in place of G. O. Starnes. Incumbent's commission expired May 25, 1932.

Cordelia R. Jackson to be postmaster at Marianna, Ark., in place of H. M. Jackson, deceased.

CALIFORNIA

Ford E. Samuel to be postmaster at Alameda, Calif., in place of H. M. Hammond, retired.

William J. Beadle to be postmaster at Alhambra, Calif., in place of B. N. Marriott. Incumbent's commission expired February 6, 1934.

Raymond P. Hawkins to be postmaster at Alleghany, Calif. in place of R. P. Hawkins. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1934.

Carl T. Mills to be postmaster at Angels Camp, Calif., in place of H. R. Barden. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1934.

Will A. Shepard to be postmaster at Auburn, Calif., in place of C. F. Richter. Incumbent's commission expired April 22, 1934.

Kathleen M. Rousseau to be postmaster at Belmont, Calif., in place of E. J. McGowan, removed.

Joe H. Moore to be postmaster at Calipatria, Calif., in place of I. M. Benson. Incumbent's commission expired May 7. 1934.

Irene C. Cator to be postmaster at Carmel, Calif., in place of W. L. Overstreet. Incumbent's commission expired September 19, 1933.

Bertha A. Williams to be postmaster at Cloverdale, Calif... in place of J. A. Thompson. Incumbent's commission expired February 28, 1933.

Josephine M. Costa to be postmaster at Downieville, Calif. in place of J. M. Costa. Incumbent's commission expired February 21, 1935.

Thomas J. Caffery to be postmaster at El Monte, Calif., Brig. Gen. James C. Breckinridge to be a major general in | in place of C. T. Myers. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1933.

Hazel M. McFarland to be postmaster at Folsom City, Calif., in place of H. M. McFarland. Incumbent's commission expired February 21, 1935.

Clara M. Scott to be postmaster at Kerman, Calif., in place of O. B. Randall. Incumbent's commission expired April 8, 1934.

Nathan L. Rannells to be postmaster at La Jolla, Calif., in place of E. J. Thompson, removed.

Albert H. Abbott to be postmaster at La Verne, Calif., in place of J. C. Titterington, resigned.

Alice E. Tate to be postmaster at Lone Pine, Calif., in place of A. E. Tate. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1935.

Vernie E. Sherraden to be postmaster at Ludlow, Calif., in place of V. E. Sherraden. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1934.

William T. Martin to be postmaster at Montague, Calif., in place of R. G. Isaacs. Incumbent's commission expired June 4, 1934.

Louis A. Thomas to be postmaster at National City, Calif., in place of C. D. Eddy. Incumbent's commission expired June 24, 1934.

Julia A. Monahan to be postmaster at Newcastle, Calif., in place of C. H. Silva. Incumbent's commission expired April 22, 1934.

Suda B. Gallaher to be postmaster at Orange Cove, Calif., in place of W. L. Robbins. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1933.

Arvin P. Ralston to be postmaster at Patterson, Calif., in place of W. F. Hanell. Incumbent's commission expired May 7, 1934.

James R. Simmons to be postmaster at Pismo Beach, Calif., in place of C. M. McCoy. Incumbent's commission expired June 4, 1934.

John Ransom Casey to be postmaster at Pomona, Calif., in place of H. B. Westgate. Incumbent's commission expired June 24, 1934.

Joseph L. Hamilton to be postmaster at Puente, Calif., in place of G. E. Cross. Incumbent's commission expired April

William A. Needham to be postmaster at Rialto, Calif., in place of R. E. Watts. Incumbent's commission expired June Manuel Dos Reis, Jr., to be postmaster at San Anselmo, Calif., in place of C. L. Covalt. Incumbent's commission expired June 4, 1934.

Donald M. Stewart to be postmaster at San Diego, Calif., in place of E. W. Dort. Incumbent's commission expired

Floyd Godfrey to be postmaster at San Dimas, Calif., in place of O. D. Way. Incumbent's commission expired February 6, 1934.

Amelia S. Rose to be postmaster at San Lorenzo, Calif., in place of Emma Kessler, resigned.

John R. Hutchison to be postmaster at Santa Maria, Calif., in place of E. T. Ketcham. Incumbent's commission expired March 11, 1930.

Lowell C. Pratt to be postmaster at Selma, Calif., in place of J. J. Heckman, transferred.

John W. Russel to be postmaster at Tujunga, Calif., in place of P. P. Correll, deceased.

Clarence H. Godshall to be postmaster at Victorville, Calif., in place of C. M. Moon. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1934.

Edward I. Leake to be postmaster at Woodland, Calif., in place of A. R. Armstrong, removed.

Fred C. Alexander to be postmaster at Yosemite National Park, Calif., in place of F. C. Alexander. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1935.

Robert H. DeWitt, Jr., to be postmaster at Yreka, Calif., in place of F. C. Pollard. Incumbent's commission expired June 4, 1934.

COLORADO

Arthur D. Robb to be postmaster at Flagler, Colo., in place of Z. C. McBride. Incumbent's commission expired December 11, 1933.

CONNECTICUT

Moses W. Rathbun to be postmaster at Noank, Conn., in place of C. M. Chester. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1933.

William M. Logan to be postmaster at West Cheshire, Conn., in place of W. M. Logan. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

DELAWARE

Bradford P. Jones to be postmaster at Bridgeville, Del., in place of J. W. Dimes. Incumbent's commission expired December 10, 1932.

Roland F. Quillin to be postmaster at Laurel, Del., in place of A. S. Hearn, removed.

Philip E. Touhey to be postmaster at Yorklyn, Del., in place of S. S. Dennison. Incumbent's commission expired June 20, 1934.

FT.ORTDA

Minnie H. Vick to be postmaster at Apopka, Fla., in place of C. L. Sickles. Incumbent's commission expired July 3, 1934.

George H. Stokes to be postmaster at Callahan, Fla., in place of W. B. Wingate, resigned.

Matye E. Mills to be postmaster at Cross City, Fla., in place of M. E. Mills. Incumbent's commission expired March 2, 1935.

Alexander G. Shand to be postmaster at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in place of W. C. Bretz. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1935.

Hugh M. Edwards to be postmaster at Mayo, Fla., in place of L. H. Davis, resigned.

Hansel D. Leavengood to be postmaster at Ocala, Fla., in place of F. H. Logan, removed.

John P. Puckett to be postmaster at Perry, Fla., in place of T. W. Lundy, removed.

James D. Pearce to be postmaster at St. Petersburg, Fla., in place of R. M. Hall. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1935.

Owen L. Godwin to be postmaster at Sebring, Fla., in place of W. D. Holloway. Incumbent's commission expired March

GEORGIA

Moses J. Guyton to be postmaster at Dublin, Ga., in place of E. R. Orr. Incumbent's commission expired May 9, 1934.

Nell Raley to be postmaster at Mitchell, Ga., in place of W. T. Kitchens. Incumbent's commission expired February 6, 1934.

Sam Tate to be postmaster at Tate, Ga., in place of S. Tate. Incumbent's commission expired February 25, 1935.

Willie B. Persons to be postmaster at Warm Springs, Ga., in place of L. L. Mathis. Incumbent's commission expired May 29, 1934.

HAWAII

Takeo Takashita to be postmaster at Hanapepe, Hawaii, in place of Shinichi Okamura. Incumbent's commission expired December 11, 1933.

Daniel A. Devine to be postmaster at Hilo, Hawaii, in place of B. D. Chilson, removed.

Kenichi Masunaga to be postmaster at Kealia, Hawaii, in place of K. Masunaga. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1935.

Hung Luke to be postmaster at Kohala, Hawaii, in place of H. Luke. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

Martin D. Dreier to be postmaster at Lihue, Hawaii, in place of T. E. Longstreth. Incumbent's commission expired January 18, 1933.

Margaret C. White to be postmaster at Wahiawa, Hawaii, in place of W. K. Kelii, removed.

Kenichi Oumi to be postmaster at Waialua, Hawaii, in place of F. W. Carter. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1933.

Masaru Yokotake to be postmaster at Waimea, Hawaii, in place of Frank Cox. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

ILLINOIS

Amy S. Beirne to be postmaster at Alpha, Ill., in place of E. H. Paine. Incumbent's commission expired April 16, 1934.

Benjamin H. Gardner to be postmaster at Ava, Ill., in place of Roger Walwark. Incumbent's commission expired May 7, 1934.

Roger M. Tippy to be postmaster at Carterville, Ill., in place of C. W. Bishop, removed.

Roy Ansel Brooks to be postmaster at Carthage, Ill., in place of J. P. Beckman, deceased.

Ace C. Parris to be postmaster at Champaign, Ill., in place of O. L. Davis. Incumbent's commission expired February 25, 1935.

Allene R. Adkins to be postmaster at Elkville, Ill., in place of E. D. Graeff, removed.

Roy M. Cocking to be postmaster at Erie, Ill., in place of J. L. Pfundstein, removed.

Fred J. Bohnenkemper to be postmaster at Germantown, Ill., in place of F. J. Bohnenkemper. Incumbent's commission expired February 4, 1935.

Grace Reichert to be postmaster at Grand Chain, Ill., in place of J. R. McIntire. Incumbent's commission expired March 18, 1934.

George G. Vaughan to be postmaster at Hurst, Ill., in place of C. S. Coyle, removed.

Richard C. Patterson to be postmaster at Johnston City, Ill., in place of O. C. Baiar, removed.

Floyd E. Keller to be postmaster at Jonesboro, Ill., in place of T. H. Plemon, removed.

Augustian P. Pope to be postmaster at Kane, Ill., in place of L. D. Irwin. Incumbent's commission expired April 16, 1934.

William H. McAlpin to be postmaster at Marion, Ill., in place of Oldham Paisley, removed.

John J. Matejka to be postmaster at Oaklawn, Ill., in place of G. F. Harnew. Incumbent's commission expired February 28, 1933.

John S. Browning to be postmaster at Royalton, Ill., in place of J. T. Livingston, resigned.

Reuben C. Thomason to be postmaster at Tamms, Ill., in place of J. E. Miller. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1933.

Scott W. Hershey to be postmaster at Taylorville, Ill., in place of Frank Reed, removed.

Maude B. Youart to be postmaster at Thebes, Ill., in place of LeRoy Gammon, deceased.

Aaron McLain Akin to be postmaster at Thompsonville, Ill., in place of E. S. Bundy, removed.

Charles F. Loeb to be postmaster at Urbana, Ill., in place of John Gray. Incumbent's commission expired December 9 1934

Frank Breycha to be postmaster at Villa Park, Ill., in place of August Treu. Incumbent's commission expired May Harry C. Stradler to be postmaster at Westfield, Ill., in place of Lela Seneff, removed.

William E. Berry to be postmaster at Zeigler, Ill., in place of LeRoy Howell. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1934.

INDIANA

Clarence A. Thompson to be postmaster at Columbus, Ind., in place of J. E. Reed, removed.

Albert Seufert to be postmaster at Ferdinand, Ind., in place of W. J. Daunhauer, removed.

Jesse M. Kemp to be postmaster at Kempton, Ind., in place of G. W. Gossard, resigned.

Henry E. Delp to be postmaster at Marshall, Ind., in place of J. A. McCluer. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1933.

Rolla E. Pinaire to be postmaster at Ramsey, Ind., in place of A. I. Martin, resigned.

IOWA

Floyd Finney to be postmaster at Arlington, Iowa, in place of W. E. Anderson. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

Henry S. King to be postmaster at Ashton, Iowa, in place of W. M. Bausch, retired.

George P. Rounds to be postmaster at Clermont, Iowa, in place of G. H. Hackmann. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1933.

J. Joseph Bonnstetter to be postmaster at Corwith, Iowa, in place of J. W. Duckett, retired.

Ida Belle Stokes to be postmaster at Emerson, Iowa, in place of M. B. Gibson. Incumbent's commission expired January 16, 1934.

Martha E. O'Connor to be postmaster at Gilman, Iowa, in place of R. A. Dunkle. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

Clarence H. Kemler to be postmaster at Marshalltown, Iowa, in place of M. S. McFarland, deceased.

John E. Amdor to be postmaster at Massena, Iowa, in place of W. C. McCurdy. Incumbent's commission expired March 18, 1934.

Denton N. Layman to be postmaster at Newell, Iowa, in place of L. E. Couch, removed.

Jennie E. Cagley to be postmaster at Plainfield, Iowa, in place of Oscar Smith. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1934.

Lynn O. Smith to be postmaster at Rockford, Iowa, in place of Luvern Leigh. Incumbent's commission expired June 24, 1934.

Irene C. Schmidt to be postmaster at West Point, Iowa, in place of H. F. Brinck. Incumbent's commission expired June 4, 1934.

KANSAS

Bertha B. Maichel to be postmaster at Overbrook, Kans., in place of J. H. Andrews, resigned.

John L. Larson to be postmaster at Randolph, Kans., in place of E. C. Newby, removed.

Mary A. Neff to be postmaster at Winona, Kans., in place of L. I. Burdick, removed.

KENTUCKY

Laura V. Coleman to be postmaster at Anchorage, Ky., in place of H. O. Hausgen. Incumbent's commission expired May 29, 1932.

Hattie R. Tanner to be postmaster at Barlow, Ky., in place of J. I. Harlan, resigned.

Jesse B. Pope to be postmaster at Brooksville, Ky., in place of W. H. Metcalfe, resigned.

Milton T. Fullenwider to be postmaster at Shelbyville, Ky., in place of Lisle B. Hanna. Incumbent's commission expired December 8, 1934.

Mary K. Diersing to be postmaster at Shively, Ky., in place of M. K. Diersing. Incumbent's commission expired March 18, 1934.

MAINE

Helen L. Swan to be postmaster at Hampden Highlands, Maine, in place of J. B. Lewis. Incumbent's commission expired January 16, 1934.

Winnifred J. Libby to be postmaster at Ocean Park, Maine, in place of W. J. Libby. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1934.

MARYLAND

George M. Mowell to be postmaster at Glencoe, Md., in place of G. M. Mowell. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1935.

MASSACHUSETTS

Mary E. O'Toole, to be postmaster at Leominster, Mass., in place of J. C. Smith, retired.

MICHIGAN

Henning R. Sjolander, to be postmaster at Ishpeming, Mich., in place of William Trebilcock. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

MINNESOTA

Charles B. Smith to be postmaster at Alexandria, Minn., in place of C. L. Coy, removed.

Marie H. Sands to be postmaster at Alvarado, Minn., in place of G. T. Sands, resigned.

Thomas H. Brandon, to be postmaster at Annandale, Minn., in place of W. W. Towler. Incumbent's commission expired May 28, 1933.

John E. Pasch, to be postmaster at Barnesville, Minn., in place of Bernard McGrath. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1934.

Walter L. Dickson to be postmaster at Big Falls, Minn., in place of A. B. Paul. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1933.

Peter Evensen to be postmaster at Bigfork, Minn., in place of W. F. Bischoff. Incumbent's commission expired April 8, 1934.

Egbert J. Sutherland to be postmaster at Chatfield, Minn., in place of E. O. Thorson, removed.

James B. Hubbell to be postmaster at Forest Lake, Minn., in place of J. B. Hubbell. Incumbent's commission expired June 20, 1934.

Gabriel T. Torgrimson to be postmaster at Grand Meadow, Minn., in place of Albert Myhre. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1934.

Irene G. Almquist to be postmaster at Harris, Minn., in place of D. C. Jarchow. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1933.

Edward J. King to be postmaster at Hastings, Minn., in place of Anna Johnson. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1934.

Paul M. Saemrow to be postmaster at Morristown, Minn., in place of P. W. Gorrie. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1932.

Robert E. O'Donnell to be postmaster at Mound, Minn., in place of E. F. Koehler, removed.

Otto A. Kubat to be postmaster at Owatonna, Minn., in place of M. J. Brown. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1934.

George H. Tome to be postmaster at Pine Island, Minn., in place of G. H. Tome. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1934.

Robert S. Cowie to be postmaster at Rothsay, Minn., in place of O. H. Jacobson. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1933.

MISSISSIPPI

Nicie R. Evans to be postmaster at Bassfield, Miss., in place of N. R. Evans. Incumbent's commission expired February 21, 1935.

Fred Eugene Brister to be postmaster at Bogue Chitto, Miss., in place of H. A. Sasser, removed.

Minnie B. Dubuisson to be postmaster at Long Beach, Miss., in place of M. B. Dubuisson. Incumbent's commission expired March 2, 1935.

Erma L. Morris to be postmaster at Seminary, Miss., in place of C. F. Taylor, resigned.

MISSOURI

Emmett O. Griffin to be postmaster at Carterville, Mo., in place of C. E. Ault. Incumbent's commission expired March 8, 1934.

Elta E. Eubank to be postmaster at Clifton Hill, Mo., in place of P. M. Essig. Incumbent's commission expired December 11, 1933.

George L. Chancellor to be postmaster at Goodman, Mo., in place of H. M. Phillips, resigned.

Albert J. Robinson to be postmaster at Gorin, Mo., in place of Irene Parrish. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1933.

Joseph W. Evans to be postmaster at Hale, Mo., in place of C. E. Bedell, resigned.

James T. Glass, Jr., to be postmaster at Holden, Mo., in place of J. M. Boisseau, removed.

Jessalee Nash to be postmaster at Hollister, Mo., in place of C. E. Jennings. Incumbent's commission expired March 18, 1934.

Laurence D. Estill to be postmaster at Lawson, Mo., in place of W. A. Black, removed.

Edna S. Spencer to be postmaster at Malta Bend, Mo., in place of M. E. Blackburn. Incumbent's commission expired May 13, 1934.

Ivan Weber to be postmaster at Richmond, Mo., in place of C. E. Traylor. Incumbent's commission expired June 19, 1933

John F. Vermillion to be postmaster at Salisbury, Mo., in place of R. A. Gehrig, removed.

Charles E. Logan to be postmaster at Spickard, Mo., in place of P. G. Wild. Incumbent's commission expired May 9, 1934.

MONTANA

Clarence W. Hektner to be postmaster at Dutton, Mont., in place of E. M. Goodell. Incumbent's commission expired June 24, 1934.

D. Francis Crowley to be postmaster at Lewistown, Mont., in place of C. R. Fowler. Incumbent's commission expired May 13, 1934.

James J. Price to be postmaster at Three Forks, Mont., in place of William Fraser. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1933.

NEBRASKA

John F. McGill to be postmaster at Center, Nebr., in place of Lulu Woodbury, resigned.

George J. Scott to be postmaster at Crawford, Nebr., in place of C. W. Fritts, removed.

Albert J. Nacke to be postmaster at Hebron, Nebr., in place of E. E. Correll, removed.

George D. Parker to be postmaster at Johnson, Nebr., in place of E. E. Rodysill. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1933.

Herman Stahly to be postmaster at Milford, Nebr., in place of E. E. Ely, resigned.

Mable A. Foreman to be postmaster at Palmyra, Nebr., in place of I. B. Lamborn. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1933.

Charles J. Mullaney to be postmaster at Walthill, Nebr., in place of G. F. McMullen, resigned.

NEW JERSEY

Everett H. Antonides to be postmaster at Belmar, N. J., in place of Charles Keiderling, Jr. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1934.

Michael H. Connelly to be postmaster at Bloomfield, N. J., in place of H. E. Harris. Incumbent's commission expired February 25, 1933.

Martin L. Mulvey to be postmaster at Landing, N. J., in place of G. E. Obdyke. Incumbent's commission expired April 22, 1934.

Edward J. Turpin to be postmaster at Mays Landing, N. J., in place of C. H. Mingin, resigned.

Stephen W. Margerum to be postmaster at Princeton, N. J., in place of W. H. Cottrell, deceased.

Leon P. Kays to be postmaster at Stanhope, N. J., in place of W. B. Lance. Incumbent's commission expired February 2, 1932.

NEW MEXICO

Roy L. Cook to be postmaster at Albuquerque, N. Mex., in place of Berthold Spitz, deceased.

Paul Nesbitt to be postmaster at Chama, N. Mex., in place of E. C. Thatcher. Incumbent's commission expired June 4, 1934.

Henry Gallegos to be postmaster at Grant, N. Mex., in place of Charles Neustadt. Incumbent's commission expired April 22, 1934.

Anna R. Scott to be postmaster at Logan, N. Mex., in place of Gertrude Warrender. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1934.

Frank O. Papen to be postmaster at Tererro, N. Mex., in place of C. S. Earickson. Incumbent's commission expired October 10, 1933.

NEW YORK

John L. Purcell to be postmaster at Aurora, N. Y., in place of James Avery. Incumbent's commission expired April 8, 1934.

Hattie B. Dye to be postmaster at Cassadaga, N. Y., in place of H. M. Hall. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1934.

Arthur Goggin to be postmaster at Clymer, N. Y., in place of W. L. Schruers. Incumbent's commission expired April 8, 1934.

William J. Gleason to be postmaster at Cortland, N. Y., in place of H. L. Smith. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1933.

Charles C. Curry to be postmaster at Dansville, N. Y., in place of H. W. DeLong, Jr. Incumbent's commission expired June 20, 1934.

Georgia B. Ostrander to be postmaster at Ghent, N. Y., in place of M. E. Teator. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1933.

William C. Sharp to be postmaster at Greenwich, N. Y., in place of Howard McClellan. Incumbent's commission expired March 18, 1934.

Fred Wheeler to be postmaster at Hudson, N. Y., in place of C. E. Hardy. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1932.

George H. Raum to be postmaster at Kenoza Lake, N. Y., in place of W. N. Moulthrop. Incumbent's commission expired March 8, 1934.

Frederick M. Dennin to be postmaster at Lake Placid, N. Y., in place of Solomon Feinberg, resigned.

Dudley C. Merritt to be postmaster at Locust Valley, N. Y., in place of T. W. Crane. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

William H. Ordway to be postmaster at Mount McGregor, N. Y., in place of W. H. Ordway. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1934.

Frank D. Hurd to be postmaster at Napanoch, N. Y., in place of F. D. Hurd. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1935.

Edward V. Canavan to be postmaster at Niagara Falls, N. Y., in place of F. G. Newell. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1933.

Percy C. Tatem to be postmaster at Old Westbury, N. Y. Office became Presidential July 1, 1933.

Oren G. Hunter to be postmaster at Parish, N. Y., in place of O. W. House. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1933.

Robert A. Lundy to be postmaster at Ray Brook, N. Y., in place of R. A. Lundy. Incumbent's commission expired February 25, 1935.

Virginia L. Dennison to be postmaster at Sackets Harbor, N. Y., in place of S. G. Stratton, removed.

Victor J. Banfield to be postmaster at Van Etten, N. Y., in place of V. J. Banfield. Incumbent's commission expired January 13, 1935.

Fred Burns to be postmaster at Walden, N. Y., in place of W. B. Stewart. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1934.

Gertrude M. Ackert to be postmaster at West Park, N. Y., in place of G. M. Ackert. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1935.

NORTH CAROLINA

Wiley H. Taylor to be postmaster at Beaufort, N. C., in place of R. B. Wheatly, resigned.

Robert D. McLeod to be postmaster at Biscoe, N. C., in place of Bettie Martin, removed.

Willard T. Martin to be postmaster at Bryson City, N. C. in place of A. J. DeHart, resigned.

Richard Homer Andrews to be postmaster at Burlington, N. C., in place of W. R. Freshwater, removed.

George E. Walker to be postmaster at Hemp, N. C., in place of C. S. Lewis, resigned.

Ernest W. Ewbank to be postmaster at Hendersonville, N. C., in place of R. H. Staton. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1934.

Anna D. Rathbone to be postmaster at Lake Junaluska, N. C., in place of A. E. Ward. Incumbent's commission expired April 16, 1934.

Raymond R. Eagle to be postmaster at New Bern, N. C., in place of R. F. Shupp, resigned.

George W. Stuart to be postmaster at Troy, N. C., in place of T. N. Harris, removed.

Sterling B. Pierce to be postmaster at Weldon, N. C., in place of F. M. Carter, deceased.

Savannah B. Smoak to be postmaster at Wilkesboro, N. C., in place of W. E. Linney. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

Montgomery T. Speir to be postmaster at Winterville, N. C., in place of M. T. Speir. Incumbent's commission expired February 25, 1935.

NORTH DAKOTA

Mildred B. Johnson to be postmaster at Ashley, N. Dak., in place of J. N. McGogy. Incumbent's commission expired May 19, 1932.

George Christensen to be postmaster at Beach, N. Dak., in place of J. L. Kinsey, resigned.

George J. Boley to be postmaster at Carrington, N. Dak., in place of J. E. Galehouse. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1931.

John B. DuRand to be postmaster at Ellendale, N. Dak., in place of W. L. Saunders, removed.

Levurn R. Church to be postmaster at Haynes, N. Dak., in place of H. E. M. Dyson, resigned.

Ronald Keeley to be postmaster at Hazen, N. Dak., in place of R. E. Itskin. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1934.

Jay J. Eaton to be postmaster at Medora, N. Dak., in place of L. S. McDonald, resigned.

Clifton G. Foye to be postmaster at Steele, N. Dak., in place of J. E. Smith. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1934.

OHIO

Gerald L. Whaley to be postmaster at Fayette, Ohio, in place of G. P. Phillips. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

Lee B. Milligan to be postmaster at Lowellville, Ohio, in place of L. B. Milligan. Incumbent's commission expired February 4, 1935.

Albert P. McQuade to be postmaster at New Straitsville, Ohio, in place of W. T. Sprankel, deceased.

OKLAHOMA

Clarence D. Hull to be postmaster at Carnegie, Okla., in place of W. C. Campbell. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1932.

Leonard C. Peterman to be postmaster at Davis, Okla., in place of D. M. Rose. Incumbent's commission expired March 18, 1934.

Luther C. Dobbs to be postmaster at Davidson, Okla., in place of L. C. Dobbs. Incumbent's commission expired July 3, 1934.

Joe B. Steele to be postmaster at Ringling, Okla., in place of L. E. Shull. Incumbent's commission expired September 18, 1933.

Bradford M. Risinger to be postmaster at Sand Springs, Okla., in place of H. H. Snow. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

Ulysses S. Shockley to be postmaster at Yale, Okla., in place of H. G. Brandenburg. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

OREGON

Vincent Byram to be postmaster at Gold Beach, Oreg., in place of Vincent Byram. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1935.

Volney E. Lee to be postmaster at North Powder, Oreg., in place of V. E. Lee. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1933.

William Reid to be postmaster at Rainier, Oreg., in place of C. M. Victors, removed.

Emil F. Messing to be postmaster at Vernonia, Oreg., in place of E. F. Messing. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1935.

PENNSYLVANIA

Theodore C. Lamborn to be postmaster at Berwyn, Pa., in place of O. H. Tavenner, transferred.

Dorothy C. Westrick to be postmaster at Colver, Pa., in place of C. D. Doerr. Incumbent's commission expired May 2 1934

Albert Van Horn to be postmaster at Dawson, Pa., in place of K. M. Dom, resigned.

James J. McNany to be postmaster at Du Bois, Pa., in place of L. J. Lukehart, transferred.

John R. Duffy to be postmaster at Harrisville, Pa., in place of K. B. Barnes, removed.

James M. Eagan to be postmaster at Jermyn, Pa., in place of A. B. Winter. Incumbent's commission expired June 20, 1934.

Michael J. Pitoniak to be postmaster at Jessup, Pa., in place of G. M. Bisignani, removed.

Stephen M. Telep to be postmaster at Mayfield, Pa., in place of William Rosemergy. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1934.

Edward F. Janussewski to be postmaster at Monessen, Pa., in place of H. J. Bearer, removed.

Blanche C. Anderson to be postmaster at Monongahela, Pa., in place of B. L. Rose. Incumbent's commission expired March 8, 1934.

Stanley B. Janowski to be postmaster at Nanticoke, Pa., in place of T. J. Morgan, removed.

Charles W. Aldrich to be postmaster at New Milford, Pa., in place of D. C. Vail. Incumbent's commission expired May 29, 1934.

Olin V. Deterick to be postmaster at Orangeville, Pa., in place of A. E. Patterson. Incumbent's commission expired April 22, 1934.

J. Ross Owens to be postmaster at Parkesburg, Pa., in place of S. G. Garnett. Incumbent's commission expired June 20, 1934.

Cora B. Rufe to be postmaster at Riegelsville, Pa., in place of L. K. Johnson. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1934

Ann Conner to be postmaster at Rossiter, Pa., in place of M. B. Daugherty. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1934.

William J. Forsythe to be postmaster at Sligo, Pa., in place of J. J. Neil, resigned.

Samuel C. Zellers to be postmaster at Stewartstown, Pa., in place of J. E. Anstine. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1934.

Wooda N. Carr to be postmaster at Uniontown, Pa., in place of W. G. Ghrist, removed.

Ruth B. Walker to be postmaster at Unity, Pa., in place of W. E. Vance. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

PUERTO RICO

Jenaro Vazques to be postmaster at Central Aguirre, P. R., in place of Jenaro Vazques. Incumbent's commission expired February 25, 1935.

RHODE ISLAND

Edward F. McCarthy to be postmaster at Wakefield, R. I., in place of W. R. Easterbrooks. Incumbent's commission expired May 20, 1934.

Thomas J. Durand to be postmaster at West Warwick, R. I., in place of A. J. Reno. Incumbent's commission expired February 6, 1934.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Benjamin Rutledge Fuller to be postmaster at Clinton, S. C., in place of R. P. Blakely. Incumbent's commission expired July 3, 1934.

Thomas E. Stokes to be postmaster at Darlington, S. C., in place of T. E. Stokes. Incumbent's commission expired February 25, 1935.

Walter T. Barron to be postmaster at Fort Mill, S. C., in place of W. T. Barron. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1935.

Hobson B. Taylor to be postmaster at Kershaw, S. C., in place of H. B. Taylor. Incumbent's commission expired May 2, 1934.

George S. McCravey to be postmaster at Liberty, S. C., in place of G. S. McCravey. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1934.

Raymond Phillips to be postmaster at Seneca, S. C., in place of Ben Harper, removed.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Florence Ferguson to be postmaster at Canton, S. Dak., in place of M. P. Juel. Incumbent's commission expired June 26, 1934.

Harry H. Jarl to be postmaster at New Effington, S. Dak., in place of F. W. Farrington. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1934.

TENNESSEE

Robert K. Branscom to be postmaster at Coal Creek, Tenn., in place of R. D. Lindsay, removed.

William R. Massey to be postmaster at Harriman, Tenn., in place of E. C. Roberts, removed.

George R. McDade to be postmaster at Norris, Tenn. Office became Presidential July 1, 1934.

Jean N. McGuire to be postmaster at Sweetwater, Tenn., in place of C. E. Pennington, retired.

TEXAS

Howard L. Smith to be postmaster at Alamo, Tex., in place of L. E. Wigton. Incumbent's commission expired May 2, 1934.

Hugh B. Edens to be postmaster at Big Lake, Tex., in place of H. B. Edens. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1934.

Jasper N. Fallis to be postmaster at Clifton, Tex., in place of F. W. Nelson, resigned.

Robert H. Foster to be postmaster at Cooper, Tex., in place of C. V. Rattan. Incumbent's commission expired March 18, 1934.

Clark A. Fortner to be postmaster at Crosby, Tex., in place of C. A. Fortner. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1935.

Raymond Ross to be postmaster at Del Rio, Tex., in place of B. J. McDowell. Incumbent's commission expired July 1, 1934.

Gladys J. Leary to be postmaster at Estelline, Tex., in place of E. O. Wright. Incumbent's commission expired April 15, 1934.

Daniel B. Shrader to be postmaster at Frisco, Tex., in place of Jennie Baccus. Incumbent's commission expired June 19, 1933.

Curtis R. Blake to be postmaster at Frost, Tex., in place of S. O. Hyer, retired.

R. Lawrence Brucks to be postmaster at Hondo, Tex., in place of A. M. Finger. Incumbent's commission expired March 18, 1934.

Aureil J. Wigley to be postmaster at Ingleside, Tex., in place of Prescilla Nelson. Incumbent's commission expired July 3, 1934.

SeLeta L. Dennis to be postmaster at Jacksboro, Tex., in place of J. H. Wilson, removed.

Richard Hubbard Lemmon to be postmaster at Jefferson, Tex., in place of W. E. Singleton. Incumbent's commission expired February 14, 1935.

Charley J. McCollum to be postmaster at Lockney, Tex., in place of Homer Howard. Incumbent's commission expired May 29, 1934.

Roger H. Henderson to be postmaster at Longview, Tex., in place of J. T. Hopkins, removed.

Amos H. Howard to be postmaster at Lubbock, Tex., in place of J. L. Vaughan. Incumbent's commission expired December 8, 1932.

A. J. Gardner to be postmaster at Muleshoe, Tex., in place of B. W. Carles, removed.

William O. Haislip to be postmaster at Nederland, Tex., in place of J. R. Ware, deceased.

Maude A. Price to be postmaster at Petrolia, Tex., in place of M. A. Price. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1934.

Jack B. York to be postmaster at Pharr, Tex., in place of R. E. Slocum. Incumbent's commission expired May 2, 1934

Hobart Lytal to be postmaster at Quinlan, Tex., in place of J. W. Blount, removed.

Adlai C. Breustedt to be postmaster at Seguin, Tex., in place of A. P. Stautzenberger. Incumbent's commission expired May 16, 1934.

Jewell F. Cobb to be postmaster at Seminole, Tex., in place of T. F. Lindley. Incumbent's commission expired May 16, 1934.

Robert A. Meuth to be postmaster at Skidmore, Tex., in place of E. J. Spiekerman. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1933.

Tennie B. Colbert to be postmaster at Stamford, Tex., in place of W. T. Phillips. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1934.

Nena M. Iiams to be postmaster at Sugar Land, Tex., in place of N. M. Iiams. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1935.

Edgar H. McElroy to be postmaster at Waxahachie, Tex., in place of J. B. Graham. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1935.

UTAH

A. Clair Ford to be postmaster at Kanab, Utah, in place of J. S. Dalley. Incumbent's commission expired May 20, 1934.

Anna M. Long to be postmaster at Marysvale, Utah, in place of A. M. Long. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1934.

William Brooks to be postmaster at St. George, Utah, in place of Walter Cannon. Incumbent's commission expired April 3, 1934.

William Hason Hillyard to be postmaster at Smithfield, Utah, in place of J. E. Sheffer. Incumbent's commission expired May 20, 1934.

VERMONT

Charles R. Hazen to be postmaster at Chester Depot, Vt., in place of L. S. Richardson, deceased.

J. Clarence Nolin to be postmaster at Jericho, Vt., in place of G. H. Hutchinson. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1933.

Daniel F. Aher to be postmaster at Springfield, Vt., in place of E. F. Illingworth, transferred.

Daniel P. Healy to be postmaster at White River Junction, Vt., in place of C. W. Cameron. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1933.

VIRGINIA

Mary Drewry to be postmaster at Capron, Va., in place of E. E. Rawlings, deceased.

James D. Crawford to be postmaster at Keysville, Va., in place of G. H. Osborne. Incumbent's commission expired January 7, 1935.

Homo D. Gleason to be postmaster at Lovingston, Va., in place of H. D. Gleason. Incumbent's commission expired May 20, 1934.

Jessie S. Overby to be postmaster at Stanleytown, Va., in place of R. J. Stanley, resigned.

William T. Fosque to be postmaster at Wachapreague, Va., in place of G. F. Stiles, removed.

WASHINGTON

Fred E. Booth to be postmaster at Castle Rock, Wash, in place of J. A. Dean. Incumbent's commission expired May 7, 1934.

Edith M. Lindgren to be postmaster at Cosmopolis, Wash., in place of E. M. Lindgren. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1933.

Lennie L. Grant to be postmaster at Langley, Wash., in place of W. J. Hunziker. Incumbent's commission expired May 29, 1934.

Leonard McCleary to be postmaster at McCleary, Wash., in place of Leonard McCleary. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1933.

Leon L. Stock to be postmaster at Marysville, Wash., in place of G. L. Deu Pree. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1934.

Peyton B. Hoover to be postmaster at Rochester, Wash., in place of H. R. James. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1934.

Raymond M. Badger to be postmaster at Winthrop, Wash., in place of R. M. Badger. Incumbent's commission expired February 4, 1935.

WEST VIRGINIA

James T. Murphy to be postmaster at Grafton, W. Va., in place of Alphonse Leuthardt, removed.

Thomas J. Hamilton to be postmaster at Moundsville, W. Va., in place of T. S. Riggs. Incumbent's commission expired May 16, 1934.

WISCONSIN

George H. Kilb to be postmaster at Adell, Wis., in place of E. W. Guth. Incumbent's commission expired March 18, 1934.

Grant E. Denison to be postmaster at Carrollville, Wis., in place of G. E. Denison. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1935.

Joseph K. Hesselink to be postmaster at Cedar Grove, Wis., in place of H. W. Lemmenes. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1934.

Basil J. Faherty to be postmaster at Cuba City, Wis., in place of W. H. Goldthorpe. Incumbent's commission expired May 2, 1934.

Clarence L. Jordalen to be postmaster at Deerfield, Wis., in place of C. L. Jordalen. Incumbent's commission expired March 18, 1934.

Leonard J. Mulrooney to be postmaster at Fennimore, Wis., in place of B. B. Powers. Incumbent's commission expired June 4, 1934.

James D. Cook to be postmaster at Marinette, Wis., in place of E. W. LeRoy. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1933.

John Bichler to be postmaster at Port Washington, Wis., in place of H. F. Delles, removed.

Mae McCoy to be postmaster at Sparta, Wis., in place of J. H. Zehrte. Incumbent's commission expired April 22, 1934

Carl C. Schlecht to be postmaster at Woodruff, Wis., in place of G. L. Johnson. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1934.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, MARCH 8, 1935

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our blessed Father in Heaven, as we wait in the noontide light of Thy holiness, we pray that sin in all its hideous forms may become revolting to us. Thou who bringest back the landscape from captivity, who causeth the dead things of earth to find themselves and who drivest the night away from the eyes of weary watchers, receive us as Thy children for the sake of Thine only begotten Son. Amid the discipline of life, fulfill in us all righteousness in what we do and say. Through striving and experience may the royal graces be positive and definite in our daily conduct. We pray, blessed Lord, to send upon us Thy richest gifts, giving culture to intellect, wisdom to imagination, and unselfishness to ambition. Grant that the particles of truth, the causes that break them up and make them fragmentary, may be brought together in substantial unity. Fortify us this day with those virtues that spring up under the arch of honor, faith, and submission. In our Redeemer's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that on the following dates the President approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

On March 2, 1935:

H. R. 3982. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Ohio River between Rockport, Ind., and Owensboro, Ky.;

H. R. 4983. An act to authorize a transfer of forest reservation lands in Forrest and Perry Counties, Miss., to the State of Mississippi or to the War Department, and for other purposes: and

H. R. 5701. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of Indiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Wabash River at or near La Fayette, Ind.

On March 4, 1935:

H. R. 3373. An act for the relief of Anna S. Carrigan; and H. J. Res. 140. Joint resolution to provide for the completion of the publication of the writings of George Washington.

On March 5, 1935:

H. R. 529. An act granting compensation to George S. Conway, Jr.

On March 6, 1935:

H. R. 3464. An act to amend certain sections of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia, approved March 3, 1901, as amended, relating to descent and distribution.

On March 7, 1935:

H. J. Res. 94. Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the California-Pacific International Exposition to be held at San Diego, Calif., in 1935 and 1936; authorizing an appropriation therefor; and for other purposes.

CAROLYN S. BRENEMAN

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged resolution from the Committee on Accounts and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 104 (Rept. No. 331)

Resolved, That there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House to Carolyn S. Breneman, daughter of Henry R. Breneman, late an employee of the House, an amount equal to 6 months' compensation, and an additional amount, not to exceed $250, to defray funeral expenses of the said Henry R. Breneman.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PHYLLIS HEIM

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I offer another privileged resolution from the Committee on Accounts and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 146 (Rept. No. 332)

Resolved, That there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House to Phyllis Heim, daughter of Eugene Heim, late an employee of the House, an amount equal to 6 months' compensation, and an additional amount, not to exceed $250, to defray funeral expenses of the said Eugene Heim.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CASIMIR PULASKI

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker, there is a resolution pending in the House requesting the President to set aside October 11 as a memorial day for Count Pulaski, the Revolutionary War hero. I am filing today a resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of Arkansas calling upon Congress to pass the pending resolution.

I am particularly interested in this resolution because my home county, Pulaski, is named in honor of Count Pulaski, of Revolutionary fame.

THE UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein copy of an address delivered by Robert Fechner, Director of Emergency Conservation Work.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address of Robert Fechner, Director Emergency Conservation Work, as delivered at the Forum, Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., February 3, 1935:

So much has been said and written about the problem of unemployment during the past 5 years that all phases of this serious feature of the depression must be quite well understood by our entire population. However, although the seriousness of the problem was fully understood, there was very little practical effort made to solve the problem during the first few years of the depression.

depression.

The interest of President Franklin D. Roosevelt in this problem was not a sudden one. During the 4 years that he had served as Governor of our most populous State he had daily seen the disastrous effects of a large number of the population being unemployed and had given long and serious thought as to what might be done to be helpful. He had also discussed the matter with a great many people and organizations who were likewise interested

When the National Democratic Convention meeting in Chicago in the summer of 1932 tendered him the nomination for President, and he made his historic flight to Chicago to personally appear before the convention to accept the nomination and at the same and he made his historic hight to Chicago to personally appear before the convention to accept the nomination and at the same time outline his program for meeting existing conditions, one of the most important features of his acceptance speech was that portion devoted to the need for finding work for idle hands. It was, therefore, not surprising when immediately after his inauguration in March of 1933, and the calling of the new Congress in a special session during that month the first message of the President, designed to inaugurate his recovery program, should have been directed toward relieving unemployment and accomplishing useful work. These two purposes have been firmly held by the President to be of equal importance. Emphasis has continually been placed on the fact that neither the dole nor charity was a desirable method of relieving unemployment, and so the President asked the new Congress to authorize the setting up of an agency to relieve unemployment and to accomplish useful work in fields that would not be competitive with private industry. Congress promptly granted the requested authorization and early in April 1933 the Emergency Conservation Work program was officially launched by the appointment of a Director and an Advisory Council representing the Department of Labor, the War Department, the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of the Interior.

A careful study had convinced those in authority that the group A careful study had convinced those in authority that the group most urgently in need of help was that large army of young men who had arrived at working age, or who for various reasons had left our schools and colleges during the previous 5 years, and because of prevailing industrial and business conditions had found it impossible to secure any kind of employment. It was decided to enroll 250,000 young men between the ages of 18 and 25 coming from families who had been on public-welfare relief. The Labor Department was charged with the responsibility of selecting these enrollees. They promptly met the task, and it is a matter of record that never in the history of this Nation has such a large number of men been selected, enrolled, conditioned, equipped, and transported to their destination in such a brief period. By the end of June 1933 this vast army had been located in 1,468 camps scattered throughout all the States of the Nation.

end of June 1933 this vast army had been located in 1,468 camps scattered throughout all the States of the Nation.

After this quarter of a million juniors had been selected it was realized that something more was needed. These men were expected to accomplish useful work, but practically every one of them were totally inexperienced in the work that they would be called on to perform. It was therefore decided that an increment of 25,000 local experienced men would be added to the camps to serve as leaders to the inexperienced boys in their daily tasks. The wisdom of this arrangement was quickly demonstrated.

After the juniors had been placed in camps an insistent demand that our war veterans be given a part in the general program was

After the juniors had been placed in camps an insistent demand that our war veterans be given a part in the general program was agreed to by the President and 25,000 war veterans were enrolled. As an actual fact 28,000 war veterans were enrolled because 3,000 war veterans who had composed the so-called "bonus army" coming to Washington in the spring of 1933 were enrolled as a group. The war veterans were selected by the Veterans' Administration and this agency has continued to have complete supervision over the participation of war veterans in emergency conservation work. This made a total of 303,000 enrollees.

Attention was called to the desperate condition of many Indians on their western reservations and the President authorized the setting apart of sufficient funds to employ 14,000 Indians under practically the same conditions as other enrollees, although their supervision and direction was handled entirely by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The benefits of this work were also extended to Alaska, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and the Virgin Islands, and about 5,000 individuals Rico, Hawali, and the Virgin Islands, and about 5,000 individuals are engaged on conservation work under our general program in these island possessions.

The supervisions of this great organization was a tremendous responsibility. Those in authority were convinced that there was only one agency available that could be called on to accept a responsibility for the health, safety, and welfare of the men in the camps. That agency was the Regular Army. The Army was therefore called upon to select and prepare the camp site to insure their proper location from a sanitary standpoint as well as availability of adequate water supply, to provide the shelter, subsistence, clothing, medical attention, and everything else that was so necessary for the well-ordered life of the men in the camps. The Army performed a signal service in completely meeting these onerous duties. As was to be expected, just as soon as it became known that the Army was to have a vital part in emergency conservation work there were numerous protests from individuals and organizations who were earnestly and patriotically striving to promote world peace and a reduction in the crushing burden of military armament. Many sincere people feared that under the control of the Army military discipline and training would inevitably develop in the camps. President Roosevelt made his position very clear on this important point and the War Department likewise emphasized their participation as not having any militaristic meaning. After 2 years it can again be asserted that there has been nothing that would justify any suspicion that militarism has had the slightest part in the emergency conservation-work program.

justify any suspicion that militarism has had the slightest part in the emergency conservation-work program.

It is proper to point out, however, that life in the camps has brought practically all of the benefits of ordinary military training to the enrollees; that is, they have been taught the vital importance of how to live together, of mutual cooperation, of personal cleanliness, of regular habits, and the physical work has built up their bodies so that the beneficial effects will be evident in succeeding generations. The Army deserves great credit for the splendid task that it has so efficiently performed. Equally important and equally effective has been the service rendered by the National Forest Service and the National Park Service and other cooperating Federal bureaus, together with the State organizations. Conservation work, as applied to our natural resources, had

Cooperating Federal bureaus, together with the State organizations. Conservation work, as applied to our natural resources, had been fully appreciated for many years past. The first Roosevelt directed public attention to the importance of conserving what was left of our national forests, to the prevention of soil erosion, and the curbing of our constantly recurring floods that caused so many disasters in various sections of the country. These Federal agencies had carried on their important work for years in the face of discouraging limitations, but always hoping that the time would come when a real adequate conservation program could be would come when a real adequate conservation program could be inaugurated. Plans had been prepared for this eventuality, and therefore when they were offered an opportunity for which they had dreamed they were, to some extent at least, prepared to take immediate advantage of it.

The saving of our growing trees was considered to be of the first importance; therefore, during the early period of emergency conservation work major attention was given to the building of truck trails, fire breaks, the extension of telephone lines, and other measures that experience had taught were necessary for preventing and controlling forest fires. The prevention and eradication of tree disease and pest infestation were likewise vitally important. The forest fires are so spectacular and do their damage so quickly that everyone can easily visualize how important it is that this greatest menace to our standing forests should be curbed. The destructive-ness of tree disease and pest infestation is not so apparent nor so spectacular, but it is almost equally destructive. Just a few years ago a blight originating in other countries attacked and killed prac-tically all of the chestnut trees in the entire eastern area of the tically all of the chestnut trees in the entire eastern area of the United States. At the present time our beautiful elm trees are threatened with complete destruction because of the importation of a disease that gained a foothold a few years ago in the vicinity of New York and quickly spread to other areas. The pine beetle and gypsy moth are examples of pest infestation that have caused enormous damage.

Flood control and soil erosion are of almost equal importance in Flood control and soil erosion are of almost equal importance in our conservation work. The removing of timber from our mountains and other areas has exposed the soil to washing from heavy rains that has caused billions of tons of fertile soil to be washed down into our stream beds and valleys.

Wildlife conservation is an important part of our general conservation program.

Last but not least are the recreational needs of the Nation. Last but not least are the recreational needs of the Nation. With increasing leisure time at the disposal of larger numbers of our citizens, it is a proper responsibility of the Federal Government, as well as the various States, that attractive and accessible recreational areas should be provided. The development of a great State system of parks to supplement our National Park System is not solve desirable but unsurely needed.

of what the figures really mean. The expenditure of more than $500,000,000 is an important item, and our citizens have a right to know what return our Nation can expect from this expenditure. During the past 18 months of emergency conservation work we spent approximately $550,000,000. In reports submitted by cooperating agencies we are informed that during the same period useful work, whose value could be measured in a fairly accurate way, had been accomplished to the amount of approximately $291,-000,000. In addition, approximately $146,000,000 had been paid in cash allowances to the enrollees. Of this amount about $130,-000,000 had gone directly to the dependent families of the enrollees. In a great many cases this had meant the removal of the family from public-welfare relief, and in every case it meant that family from public-welfare relief, and in every case it meant that the locality or the State had been assisted in its tremendous burden of welfare relief by this expenditure of the Federal Gomes. Government.

The effect on industry of these vast expenditures has also been significant. The average of $150,000 is spent daily for food. Great quantities of clothing and shoes were necessary, trucks and passenger cars, ambulances and other automotive vehicles were bought in such quantities as to have a material effect on that industry and related lines.

In the construction of the camp buildings that were necessary.

In the construction of the camp buildings that were necessary on house the men, several hundred million feet of lumber were required. Great quantities of cots, mattresses, sheets, blankets, and all of the other things that are inevitably necessary in an organization of this character were hought. Even the item of transpor-Pation of this character were bought. Even the item of transportation has been tremendous, and millions of dollars has been paid to railroads and bus companies for transporting enrollees from their homes to the camps and return.

While all this material result was important it is generally conceded that by far the most important result of emergency conservation work has been the effect on the enrollees themselves. Because of the very condition under which these men had lived prior to their enrollment in C. O. Camps, it was not to be wondered at that they came to the camps in a discouraged resentful. prior to their enrollment in C. C. Camps, it was not to be won-dered at that they came to the camps in a discouraged, resentful, and many times a hopeless frame of mind. Under the sympathetic care of those in authority, they quickly responded to their new surroundings. Plain but wholesome food, comfortable sleeping quarters, regular hours, and the work which they were required to perform, quickly resulted in restoring these men to normal con-

During the first 18 months of this work approximately 850,000 enrollees were in the camps; some of them for a few months, but most of them staying the limit, which is permitted under the regulations.

regulations.

The men are provided with an adequate program of recreation, including baseball, volley ball, football, boxing, wrestling, track athletics, and such like activities which they are encouraged to engage in under competent leadership during their leisure time. They are required to work 8 hours per day 5 days per week, which time includes transportation from the camp to the work project and return and the lumb hour.

They are required to work 8 hours per day 5 days per week, which time includes transportation from the camp to the work project and return and the lunch hour.

The educational needs are not overlooked, although the very nature of the camps and their work make it difficult to carry on educational work in the usual sense of the term, nevertheless a serious effort has been made and reasonably satisfactory results have been accomplished to give those enrollees who are interested an opportunity to better fit themselves for a place in our business and industrial life when the opportunity comes to them.

The religious life of the men has not been neglected. An adequate number of full-time Army reserve chaplains serve the camps in providing religious work and services, and many thousands of local clergymen have also rendered invaluable service in supplementing the work of the regular chaplains.

When the camps were first being established there was great fear expressed by many localities that the presence of 200 men in a camp would prove a serious menace to the peace and safety of the community. The record clearly shows that these fears were entirely groundless. One of the things in which those who are responsible for emergency conservation work are most proud has been the personal conduct of the enrollees. Of course, there have been individual instances of wrongdoing. There have even been a few regrettable cases where a large group of enrollees have created a distribution. been individual instances of wrongolong. There have even been a few regrettable cases where a large group of enrollees have created a disturbance, but considering the whole record there can be no doubt that the men have conducted themselves in a most exemplary manner. They are welcomed in the homes and in the local activities in the vicinity of the camp, and they have appreciated the manner in which they have been received by the community.

In summing up the accomplishments of emergency conservation work it is felt that any unbiased investigation will sustain the claim that this has been one of the most useful activities in which our Federal Government is engaged, and it is confidently believed that its good work will continue for many years.

RIGHTS-OF-WAY TO THE GOLDEN GATE BRIDGE

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include at this point a joint resolution by the senate of the State of California relative to accepting amendments to permit from the Government of the United States for the construction of approach roads and toll areas over certain rights-of-way leading to the Golden Gate Bridge in the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation, and relating to the retrocession by the Congress of the United States of jurisdiction over said rights-of-way and toll areas as relocated.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The joint resolution is as follows:

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT, STATE OF CALIFORNIA, Sacramento, Calif., January 26, 1935.

To the President of the United States, the Vice President, the Secretary of War, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the Senators and Representatives of the State of California in Congress:

I am directed to inform you that the California Legislature on January 22, 1935, adopted the following:

California State Senate Joint Resolution 6 (By Senator McGovern)

Relative to accepting amendments to permit from the Government of the United States for the construction of approach roads and toll areas over certain rights-of-way leading to the Golden Gate Bridge in the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation, and relating to the retrocession by the Congress of the United States of jurisdiction over said rights-of-way and toll areas as relocated Whereas on February 13, 1931, the Secretary of War pursuant to authority in him vested by section 6 of the act of Congress approved July 5, 1884 (23 Stat. 104), granted to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District a right-of-way for the extension, maintenance, and operation of a State road across the Presidio of maintenance, and operation of a State road across the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation, Calif., and across the Fort Baker Military Reservation, including space for toll booths and facilities for regulating traffic, and also the right to erect, operate, and maintain the ends of the Golden Gate Bridge with cable anchorages, upon the said military reservations; and Whereas said grant has been accepted by the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District and also by the Legislature of the State of California under the terms of Senate Joint Resolution No. 11 of the forty-ninth session of the Legislature of the State of California.

forty-ninth session of the Legislature of the State of California;

whereas the said permit and grant were amended by amendments dated April 1, 1931, May 1, 1933, and July 21, 1933, which said three amendments have been accepted by the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District and approved and accepted by joint resolutions of the Legislature of the State of California; and

Whereas on the 19th day of March 1934 the Secretary of War did grant to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District a further modification of said permit as amended, and being a modification providing for the enlargement of the toll area theretofore granted under the original permit in the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation, which said amendment and modification of the date last mentioned is hereby expressly referred to; and

Whereas it was in said last-named modification and amendment expressly provided that the amendments and modifications therein expressly provided that the amendments and modifications therein contained should not become effective and the original permit of February 13, 1931, should remain unchanged thereby unless and until the said Golden Gate Pridge and Highway District should have accepted said amendment and unless and until the State of have accepted said amendment and unless and until the State of California should have, with respect to said amendment, taken the same formal action which it was required to take with respect to the original permit, and which is set forth in paragraph 11 and subparagraphs 11a, 11b, and 11c of that instrument, as a condition precedent to the taking effect thereof: Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the Senate and Assembly of the State of California, jointly, That said modification and amendment dated the 19th day of March 1934 to said permit dated February 13, 1931, as amended by amendments dated April 1, 1931, May 1, 1933, and July 21, 1933, granted by the Secretary of War to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, be, and the same hereby is, together with each, all, every, and singular the terms, conditions, limitations, reservations, and requirements therein contained, accepted by and on behalf of the State of California; and be it further tions, and requirements therein contained, accepted by and on behalf of the State of California; and be it further Resolved, That the State of California does hereby make application to the Congress of the United States for a retrocession of jurisdiction over the rights-of-way and toll area as relocated and amended by said modification dated the 19th day of March 1934 in lieu of and superseding the application for retrocession of jurisdiction over the right-of-way heretofore granted across the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation in the original permit of February 13, 1931 in case said relocation of the right-of-way and toll

San Francisco Military Reservation in the original permit of February 13, 1931, in case said relocation of the right-of-way and toll area is finally granted to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District; and be it further *Resolved*, That the State of California will, in case such retrocession of jurisdiction is granted by Congress, accept such retrocession of jurisdiction and will assume the responsibility of managing, controlling, policing, and regulating traffic thereon, all subject to the following limitations and to such other limitations as Congress may prescribe:

may prescribe:

(a) That nothing in said permit contained shall be construed to (a) That nothing in said permit contained shall be construed to give to the State of California or any of its agents authority at any time to regulate traffic of military personnel or vehicles upon the said bridge or roads. All traffic upon said roads and upon said bridge shall be free from any tolls, charges, or any form of obstruction by State or other agencies against military and naval personnel and their dependents, civilians of the Army and Navy traveling on Government business under military authority, and Government traffic.

(b) That whenever in the judgment of the Secretary of War or

(b) That whenever in the judgment of the Secretary of War or his authorized representative any emergency exists which justifies it, he may assume exclusive control and management of said bridge and roads and may then in his discretion prohibit, limit, or regulate traffic thereon.

(c) That nothing in said permit contained shall be construed to confer upon the State courts the right to try persons subject to military law for crimes or offenses committeed on said roads or upon said bridge within the boundaries of the respective military reservations involved, but the courts of the United States or military tribunals as now or hereafter provided by law shall retain exclutary tribunals as now or hereafter provided by law shall retain exclusive jurisdiction to try such persons for such offenses; be it further Resolved. That the State of California does hereby agree to make such relocated right-of-way and toll area in the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation in said amended permit described a part of the system of public highways of the State; and be it further Resolved. That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States, to the Secretary of War, to each House of Congress, and to the Senators and Representatives in Congress of the State of California.

GEORGE J. HATFIELD, President of the Senate. Speaker of the Assembly.

J. A. Beek. Secretary of the Senate. ARTHUR A. OHNIMUS, Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS-THE DUTIES OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein two paragraphs from an address delivered 75 years ago by Stephen A. Douglas.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Mr. Speaker, while I do not approve of factious and purely partisan criticism of the Chief Executive and do not believe that a Member of Congress should oppose an administration measure for no better reason than that it is an administration measure, I deem even more mischievous the disposition that has so often been exhibited, to make the Congress a mere rubber stamp for the President, an echo of the voice from the White House. Especially reprehensible is the use of patronage and of threats of political reprisal to bend the Legislative to the Executive will.

As a member of the minority, I am not subject to the party whip, for I have no patronage to lose; but I am concerned, nevertheless, and the whole Nation is concerned, for when the party whip is used to force the adoption of legislation which the Congress, left to its own judgment, would not enact, or the rejection of measures of which it would otherwise approve, all the people suffer the consequences and parliamentary government suffers deterioration. So much did the founding fathers fear Executive interference, that they sharply delimited Executive power; their experience had taught them the danger of leaving too much authority in the hands of one man, and they sought to avoid the evils which in other lands had flowed from usurpation. Had they foreseen the subtle ways in which sovereignty may be wrenched from a people, they undoubtedly would have provided even more effective safeguards.

I would call the attention of the Members of the House, and especially those of the majority, to an interesting page in our history. Stephen A. Douglas, a great Democrat, refused to accept the Lecompton constitution on the ground that forcing Kansas to enter the Union as a slave State violated the principle of popular sovereignty which he had enunciated. President Buchanan called upon the recalcitrant Senator to recant, threatening him with political extinction if he did not. No Member of Congress, declared Buchanan, had ever been successful in opposing a President of his own party. The Little Giant replied, "Mr. President, General Jackson is dead! "

The threat from the White House was carried into execution. Douglas was deprived of his patronage and removed from the chairmanship of the Committee on Territories-His appointees were dismissed from office; administration papers fiercely attacked him. Although he was about to make his celebrated campaign against Abraham Lincoln, the Senator from Illinois refused to weaken. Instead, he rose from his seat in the Senate and hurled this thunderbolt in the direction of the White House:

the direction of the White House:

I do not recognize the right of the President or his Cabinet, no matter what my respect may be for them, to tell me my duty in the Senate Chamber. The President has his duty to perform under the Constitution, and he is responsible to his constituency. A Senator has his duty to perform under the Constitution, and, according to his oath, he is responsible to the sovereign State he represents as his constituency. A Member of the House of Representatives has his duties under the Constitution and his oath, he is responsible to the people who elected him. The President has no more right to prescribe tests to Senators than Senators have to the President. Suppose we here should attempt to prescribe a test of faith to the President of the United States; would he not rebuke our impertinence and impudence as subversive of the fundamental principle of the Constitution? Would he not is us that the Constitution and his oath and his conscience were his guides; that we must perform our duties and he would perform his and let each be responsible to his own constituency?

Sir, when the time comes that the President of the States to himself, what becomes of the sovereignty of the States? When the time comes that a Senator is to account to the Executive and not to his State, whom does he represent? If the will of my State is one way and the will of the President the other, am I to be told that I must obey the Executive and betray my State, or else told that I must obey the Executive and betray my State, or else told that I must obey the Executive and betray my State, or else told that I must obey the Executive and betray my State, or else told that I must obey the Executive and betray my State, or else told that I must obey the Executive and betray my State, or else told that I must obey the Executive and betray my State, or else told the states and the part of the Constitution?

Attest:

And is every man who holds a petty office in my State to have the question put to him, "Are you Douglas' enemy? If not, your head comes off." Why? "Because he is a recreant Senator; because he chooses to follow his judgment and his conscience, and to represent his State, instead of obeying my Executive behest." I should like to know what is the use of Congresses, what is the use of Senates and Houses of Representatives, when their highest duty is to obey the Executive in disregard of the wishes, rights, and honor of their constituents.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DEAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include therein a short editorial appearing in one of the daily papers in my district on March 5 of this year paying tribute to the President and his recovery program.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is that an editorial?

Mr. DEAN. A short editorial; yes. Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I object.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we are very anxious to dispose of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill at the earliest possible moment, and I regret to say that we have grown into a practice of granting unanimous consent to various Members to address the House after the business on the Speaker's desk is disposed of. I have no objection ordinarily to those requests, but we find ourselves in the very unhappy position of trying to pass legislation. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill is a very important bill and the country is awaiting our action. I was in the hope that the House could dispose of it today in a couple of hours if we devoted our full time and energy to the consideration of the bill; then following that if we have any time left we could bring up the "pink slip" bill. I do not think the Members ought to be making these requests, because in the final analysis it is interfering with the business of the House, and we have now arrived at a period when we are going to be pretty busy considering important legislation.

Mr. NICHOLS. The gentleman has taken more time than I would have taken.

Mr. CULLEN. I have no objection, if the gentleman will bear with me.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I exceedingly regret that the situation is such that I must insist on going forward with the business at hand. This is something that I have never done as a Member of the House, but as chairman of the committee, I am forced to object to any further interference with pending business.

Mr. NICHOLS. I asked the gentleman for 5 minutes vesterday.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

Under the previous order of the House, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Kenney] for 20 minutes.

A NATIONAL LOTTERY

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to urge upon this House the passage of a great emergency measure. There is important legislation to come up today, and I have been a proponent of home-owners loan legislation; but, in my opinion, the subject of my remarks is also extremely important to the people of our country.

I am not only advocating but I am urging the Membership of this House to take up and pass my bill providing for a national lottery. A national lottery was an issue in my last campaign—made so by the press at least—and returned here, I not only propose a national lottery but I press it. It is a great emergency measure and we have not yet lifted the emergency existing in this country.

I proposed a lottery bill at the last term of the Congress. An emergency existed then. Oh, I can remember the inaugural address of our great President and the call of the Congress to meet in a special session. The banks of the country were closed. Many Members of this House did not have their transportation fare to the Capital to represent their congressional districts. They were obliged, in the emergency, to go through their districts, some of them, and take up a good, old-fashioned collection. It was partly by such means that our Congress assembled here early in March 1933. The efficacy of small contributions by our citizens was demonstrated.

When the Congress, went into session we passed the Economy Act. That was the measure that instilled confidence in the minds of the people of this country. It showed that we were bound to maintain the credit of the United States and were determined to do so. We decided to and did curtail the ordinary expenses of government. It is true that many were hurt and injured by the Economy Act, and most of all the veterans. They were again called upon by the country to make the greatest sacrifices. That act called for sacrifices, but it had the effect of establishing renewed faith in our Government. Soon the President and Congress realized that too much had been required from the veterans, and it was considered equitable that veterans' allowances reduced by the Economy Act should, so far as possible, be restored.

Relief measures were necessary of enactment in the general distress. The Congress necessarily had to appropriate large sums of money for extraordinary expenditures to carry out the program designed for the relief and economic recovery of our people.

While our expenses were mounting, revenue available from ordinary sources was limited. I was concerned about the situation. It occurred to me that while we were piling up a heavy national debt on one side of the ledger, some means should be found to raise up the Government income on the other side without resorting to further taxation, which the membership of this House will properly agree has become as great a burden as our taxpayers can stand. So I began to look into history a little bit. I had heard so many Members refer on the floor to our forefathers, to the wisdom of the founders of this Republic, and I went to the history books. As a result I came to the conclusion that the lottery was the most ready and effective means of raising revenue in an emergency. Small contributions from our citizens had, in the past, done wonders and were available to the Government in the great national crisis.

First of all it appeared that up to the year 1833, in Pennsylvania alone, 98 lotteries were conducted for the benefit of churches. Twenty-three were Presbyterian, 22 Lutheran, 20 Episcopal, 11 Reform, 5 Calvinist, 3 Roman Catholic, 2 Hebrew, 1 Baptist, and 1 Universalist. Ten of the lotteries were erected for the combined benefit of different denominations.

Many schools and colleges were also beneficiaries of the lottery. It pulled many of them through trying times. And then I came to the way the great Washington met a crisis—and it cannot be gainsaid that he had to deal with emergencies.

When money was scarce and hard to get, the Father of our Country, than whom no greater American has arisen, George Washington, in his wisdom and prudence, resorted to the lottery as a means of raising revenue for the public good.

Washington, on one occasion, was interested in the building of a great military road and to raise the needed money sponsored the Mountain Road Lottery. Here in this House of Representatives at this moment is a reproduction of a ticket used in the lottery signed "G. Washington", the original of which is on file in the Congressional Library, and at this point, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print the ticket in the Record, insofar as it may conform to the rules of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to is as follows:

Number 191; 1768. This ticket [no. 191] shall entitle the possessor to whatever prize may happen to be drawn against its number in the Mountain Road Lottery.

G. WASHINGTON.

Congress to meet in a special session. The banks of the country were closed. Many Members of this House did not during the Revolutionary War, when funds were low and insufficient from ordinary sources to carry on the war, and I found from the Journal of the Continental Congress this provision:

Congress took into consideration the report of the Committee on Ways and Means of supplying the Treasury.

This is from the journal of Friday, November 1, 1776:

Resolved. That a sum of money be raised by way of a lottery for defraying the expenses of the next campaign, the lottery to be drawn in the city of Philadelphia.

I have read this, Mr. Speaker, because if I told this to the House, perhaps it would not be believed, for I have heard some Members here say they did not know anything about a

Again I wondered how Washington convened the Congress of the United States at the first session under the Constitution. By a little research work I discovered that the First Congress had no appropriate place to meet after our independence had been won, and the City of New York invited the Congress to assemble in its City Hall to enact laws for the Nation. Congress accepted the hospitality of New York and met there for the first time.

It involved the outlay of a large amount of money for it was necessary to alter and repair the building and a large deficit existed.

The city of New York could not raise the necessary money from ordinary sources so its officials went to the legislature of the State, for permission to raise the funds to make up the deficit by means of a lottery. Permission was granted, the lottery was had and the city paid its bill.

Again, lest the membership have any doubt I shall read the preamble to chapter 8 of the Laws of the State of New York, in the year 1790. This is the preamble:

Whereas the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of the city of New York by their petition have represented to the legislature that from a desire to accommodate the Congress of the United States in the most convenient and satisfactory manner they have not only expended in repairing and improving the City Hail such money as has been heretofore raised for this purpose, but are also indebted in the farther sum of 13,000 pounds on this account, a sum far beyond their power to discharge without legislative aid and have prayed that a law might be passed to authorize the raising the said money by one or more lotteries.

Congress later authorized a lottery and there is precedent for such a measure.

When the city of Washington, now the District of Columbia, was being built Congress authorized a lottery for the purpose of supplying the funds for the erection of public

I happened to come into possession of what I believe is the only lottery ticket issued under the act of Congress now extant, and I should like to invite your attention particularly to this ticket.

The lottery ticket bears on its face the eagle, the same insignia found on money of the United States, and in a scroll from the eagle's mouth are engraved the words "National Lottery."

And down here [indicating on ticket] in the left-hand corner you observe the words "By authority of Congress."

That means this Congress, the Congress of the United

This particular lottery was conducted for the purpose of erecting two public-school houses, a penitentiary, and a town hall in the District.

Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to extend my remarks by inserting the ticket in the RECORD so far as it may comply with the rules of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to follows: Sixth Class

$40,000

NATIONAL LOTTERY NO. 1093 Prize of $40,000 15,000 10,000 5,000 100 10 100

Highest prize

This ticket will entitle the possessor to such prize as may be drawn to its number, if demanded within 12 months after the completion of the drawing: Subject to a deduction of 15 percent. Payable 60 days after the drawing is finished. Washington City, September 1822.

By authority of Congress.

T. H. GILLISS, Manager.

For erecting two public-school houses, a penitentiary, and town

Mr. KENNEY. Today an emergency still exists, and I should like to read you an excerpt from an editorial appearing in the February issue of National Republic, a magazine of fundamental Americanism:

That a real emergency now exists in the United States, no one in deny. What was painted as one in March 1933 is only a mirage can deny. What was painted as one in M compared to what actually exists today.

In any case, we are confronted with the task of providing more and more funds for the National Treasury, and the point has been reached where we must have additional revenue to meet the ever-growing expenditures. We cannot continue to impose tax upon tax upon the already overburdened taxpayer, and all borrowing must be repaid; if not by us, then by our children, or our children's children.

There is more need now for a lottery than there was a year ago. We have coming here a program of legislation providing for old-age pensions, job insurance, and social security. Then there is the work-relief bill, and coming in very soon the bonus bill. All of these measures combined call for an immense outlay. Our intake should be increased. and can be, and in no way as satisfactorily as by means of a national lottery.

Now, every Member of this House, in my opinion, would like to have the soldiers paid their adjusted-service certificates. If there is any opposition, it is from an angle other than the merit of the case. The bill will come in here next week, but, mind you, we are warned that the President of the United States is going to veto it, and we are also put on notice that the Senate is going to chew it up after we get through with it.

The bill may meet with difficulties which can be avoided. Funds are available for payment of the bonus and for reducing the national debt. If tapped by taking up and passing my lottery bill, there will be no justification for the Senate interfering or for the President of the United States vetoing the bonus bill. I know that the President of the United States is too great an American not to let a bill go through this Congress for a national lottery, and with it we would have a bonus bill that would please everyone, not only the soldiers but the business men of the country, the chambers of commerce, even the National Economy League, which concerns itself not with how you raise the money but the way in which you spend it. Everyone would be pleased, the Nation would be enthused and thrilled.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. KENNEY. Yes. Mr. BOYLAN. May I ask the gentleman to give the House an idea in his opinion of how much money a year we could raise by his proposed lottery?

Mr. KENNEY. I am glad the gentleman inquired as to that. Mr. Donnelly, Assistant Solicitor of the Post Office Department, on August 23, 1932, said:

During the past 2 years not less than a billion dollars have been kept from going out of this country in support of foreign lotteries.

That comes from the Post Office Department, and you will recognize that the years referred to were probably the leanest in the history of the country. Pasted on this sheet which I have here [indicating on sheet foreign lottery tickets] you will see lottery tickets from 30 different countries. It is said that we will not loan any more money to Europe, but we give the countries over there our money by patronizing their lotteries. We are sending money there in large amounts, estimated to be anywhere from two hundred million to five hundred million dollars each year, and, again, according to Mr. Donnelly, half a billion dollars a year is kept from going out of the country. Here is a ready fund to come to the assistance of the Government, a fund which would very likely grow to $1,000,000,000 a year.

Let me read now an excerpt from a letter I received from Mabel Smith, of Phoenix, Ariz. She approves of a lottery and

First, this kind of tax is voluntary. None needs to buy a coupon who does not desire to. Therefore the curse of direct compulsory taxes is missing. This will appeal to the wealthy income taxpayer. Secondly, this will bring in a large flood of money from those who never paid any income or real-estate taxes and this will mightily please the wealthy class and the Economy League. This money from nontaxpayers will be spent in gambling in some form regardless and nearly all of which is dishonest and the player getting an impossibly small chance, if any.

I find in this section many neonle who are steadily and quietly

I find in this section many people who are steadily and quietly taking foreign coupons, etc. I also find that those who do not gamble, and this includes the writer, would satisfy a normal appearance. tite to take a chance if we could salve our conscience in so doing and doing so in front of our children. To know absolutely that the thing was 100-percent honest would be the next thing I would have to be sure of, and again this would be an absolute fact.

We have done much to protect our people in their investments. We undertook to do this by passing the stock-exchange bill. Other legislation has come before Congress with the same purpose in mind; but we have done nothing to help our people invest in honest lottery tickets. Oh, yes; we have prohibited, but we have not prevented. Lottery tickets, foreign and domestic, are sold in every section of the country. Foreign tickets, yes, and fraudulent lottery tickets operated by dishonest individuals throughout this country. It was shocking the other day to learn that in the city of New York, in the Bronx alone, millions of dollars a year are paid into the lotteries of a private individual.

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENNEY. Yes. Mr. YOUNG. Henry Fielding, a great English author of the eighteenth century, wrote:

A lottery is a taxation on all the fools in creation.

Does not the gentleman believe that a lottery is simply another scheme to soak the poor, that the rich people would not buy lottery tickets, but that the poor people would buy them and pay the taxes?

Mr. KENNEY. The poor people pay for everything, whether lottery tickets or anything else. The gentleman will find today that the poor people on relief are the ones who in normal times sustain this country. If the poor were employed and were able to expend their money for lottery tickets or anything else, the gentleman would find the wheels of industry in this country spinning around. It is only when the poor, who build up our institutions by their nickels and dimes, quarters and dollars, are contributing their money and putting it in circulation that things are going on normally. The lottery of the Government would not be compelled to seek new buyers of tickets to yield vast revenues. Our people everywhere are spending money on lotteries, most of which goes to undesirables or out of the country.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New Jersey has expired.

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENNEY. Yes.

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Will the gentleman tell me what percentage of the population of the United States have been buying these lottery tickets in the past 2 years?

Mr. KENNEY. Judging from my contacts and information fully 95 percent of the people buy lottery tickets of one kind or another, many of which are fraudulent. Our people are being mulcted by racketeers in fraudulent domestic and foreign lotteries and the foreign lotteries conducted by or under the auspices of other governments are being supported in large part by our citizens who are prevented from participating in an honest and lawful lottery in this country.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. KENNEY. I yield.

Mr. BOYLAN. Before the gentleman concludes, would he be good enough to submit copies of these lottery tickets? One I notice is for $40,000, capital prize, and if you add the numerals of the number on that ticket, it amounts to 13-1 plus 9 plus 3. I should like the gentleman to tell the House whether or not that ticket won the prize.

Mr. KENNEY. That ticket won the prize. [Laughter and applause.] We are here to do rescue work. Let us pass the lottery bill.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New Jersey has again expired.

SOPHIE DE SOTA

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President, which was read by the Clerk:

To the House of Representatives:

In compliance with the request contained in the resolution of the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring) of March 6, 1935, I return herewith H. R. 330, entitled "An act for the relief of Sophie de Sota."

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, March 6, 1935.

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of a concurrent resolution, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Concurrent Resolution 16

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate con-curring), That the action of the Speaker of the House of Repre-sentatives and of the President of the Senate in signing the en-rolled bill (H. R. 330), entitled "An act for the relief of Sophie de Sota", be rescinded, and that in the reenrollment of the said Sota", be rescinded, and that in the recomment of the sale bill the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to make the following correction, namely: Strike out the words "de Sota" wherever they appear in said bill and tible and insert in lieu thereof the words "de Soto."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Rupp]?

There was no objection.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ADDITIONAL HOME-MORTGAGE RELIEF

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 6021) to provide additional home-mortgage relief, to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, and the National Housing Act, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 6021, with Mr. Celler in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the bill for amend-

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as amended, is amended by striking out the word "three" from the fifth line of paragraph (6) of section 2 thereof, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "four."

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Martin of Colorado: Page 1, after line 6, insert a new section to read as follows:

"Sec. 2. That section 2 (c) of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) The term "home mortgage" means a first mortgage on real estate, consisting, in the case of rural or suburban property, of not more than 20 acres, in fee simple or on a leasehold (1) under a lease for not less than 99 years which is renewable, or (2) under a lease having a period of not less than 50 years to run from the date mortgage was executed, upon which there is located a dwelling for not more than four families, used by the owner as a home or held by him as his homestead, and having a value not exceeding $20,000; and the term "first mortgage" includes such classes of first liens as are commonly given to secure advances on real estate under the laws of the State in which the real estate is located, together with the credit instruments, if any, secured thereby."

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I can explain this proposed amendment very briefly. It is simply an amendment to qualify what are called suburban tracts for home loans. It is taken from a bill introduced by me and presented to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

It may not be generally known, but there is a twilight zone in the administration of the home-loan and farm-loan laws. between 2 acres and 20 acres, which are not qualified for either loan. If a tract of land consists of less than 20 acres, it is not considered a farm unit and it is not eligible for a farm loan. If it contains more than 2 acres, the excess above the 2 acres is not considered in the appraisal of the property, no matter what it may be worth. Now, it operates in this way: Suppose a man owns a suburban tract of land consisting of 10 acres. If he wants to refinance it with a home loan, the Home Loan Corporation, as I understand, and I have had some practical experience in this matter, would appraise the home, that is, the house or the residence; it would appraise the garage, it would appraise those improvements which are commonly appurtenant to the home, and 2 acres of ground, and that is all. The other 8 acres would be disregarded no matter how it was improved or what it was worth. If it were improved with an orchard or anything else it would be disregarded. The result would be that the appraisal would not be sufficient to refinance the encumbrance against the property.

I made inquiry, for instance, in my home county, and I was told that there were about 500 suburban tracts which fall within this category or twilight zone. If that were carried out over the State of Colorado, it would amount to perhaps 5,000 such tracts. Nationally it would amount to three or four or five hundred thousand such tracts. I have been told there are hundreds and hundreds of those tracts all around the District of Columbia. They are around every city or town in the country. So I am not presenting anything to you at all that is peculiar to my home town or my home county. There are suburban tracts in every county and around every town in the United States that cannot qualify for either a farm loan or a home loan.

I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. I was wondering if the gentleman was not in error in stating that the Home Loan Board had put out a regulation under which land in excess of 2 acres could not be appraised as part of the security for a home loan. Is not the gentleman in error about that?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. This amendment was drafted by the legislative counsel, but it was sent to me by the most able home-loan attorney in the State of Colorado. It was based on facts within our common knowledge. This regional home-loan attorney drafted the amendment and sent it down to me. He had turned down these suburban-tract applications because they were not authorized to consider, for purposes of appraisal and valuation, any land surrounding a home, or on which it was located, in excess of 2 acres.

Mr. Chairman, I want it understood that in seeking this amendment I am not criticizing the administration of the home-loan law. I know personally of cases in which I think there have been inequities and injustices, but on the whole I believe it has been of great benefit to the home owners of the country. Speaking for my own State, it has loaned something like $20,000,000 since the passage of the act in June 1933-$20,000,000 advanced to home owners who could not have gotten a dollar from any other source. It has been well managed. I have heard no hint of graft or scandal. I am quite sure that such a management would not favor such an amendment as I offer if there were not a real need for it. I am strongly in favor of increasing the capitalization of the Corporation to $4,750,000,000, as will be proposed by the committee, but the law ought to be clarified or made definite so that these suburban-home tracts are made eligible for loan relief.

Mr. COX. I think the gentleman is in error, because, as I understand the regulations, there is no such regulation imposed by the Board. In other words, if a home should be upon a tract of 100 acres it would still be a home.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I will say to the gentleman that there is nothing definite about this in the law at all. The law is silent. Home acreage is not mentioned in the law. The amendment which would clear up this question at least could not harm anything. They are not doing it now. They are not appraising anything above 2 acres. I do not see any harm in the amendment if the law now permits the loan as the gentleman contends. It would be of great benefit to the owners of thousands and thousands of these suburban tracts all over the country by qualifying these tracts for home loans.

I want to say right now that I hope the House will strike out any limitations of time from the operation of the provision granting the new appropriation. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation did not need any authority from Congress to shut off new applications the 15th of last November. They did not need any authority of Congress to shut off four or five hundred thousand applications, some of which had been pending for a year or more, simply because they had not gotten into the hands of the legal department. They were cut off by an order from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. If this $1,500,000,000 becomes exhausted, they can again cut off applications in the same way. I hope the Members will support my amendment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 additional minute to call attention to the specific language of my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. My amendment, as read, seems to be quite a lengthy one, but all it does is to reenact paragraph (c) of section 2 of the Home Loan Act just as it exists right now, except that it inserts these words:

Consisting, in the case of rural or suburban property, of not more than 20 acres.

This is all the change it makes. I think the chairman of the committee knows that all the change my amendment makes in existing law is in the definition of the term "home mortgage"; where it says "the term 'home mortgage' means a first mortgage on real estate in fee simple", then I add these words:

Consisting, in the case of rural or suburban property, of not more than 20 acres.

Otherwise it is the law as it exists right now. As I say, the only change my amendment makes in this law is to qualify hundreds of thousands of these suburban tracts for home loans.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, the last statement of the gentleman would seem sufficient to cause very serious consideration of this amendment before its adoption. The total number of applications for loans that have been granted by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation down to this time, or the beginning of this year, amounted to only 800,000. We are told that if this amendment is adopted there will be hundreds of thousands of applicants under the new provision.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I said there were hundreds of thousands of such tracts. Of course, I cannot tell what percentage of the owners of such tracts would want to take advantage of the Home Loan Act.

Mr. STEAGALL. If we are to assume that the cases are as numerous and as meritorious as the gentleman has indicated, it would necessitate reconsideration and complete revamping of this legislation. This bill has been worked out upon a basis of the rules, regulations, and provisions of the law as they have obtained down to this time, and if we open up the Corporation to applications of the type provided for in this amendment, it would be necessary to establish large additional funds to take care of the new applications.

I am not aware that any arbitrary rule has been fixed setting a limit to the acreage surrounding a suburban home that might be considered in the valuation basis for loans by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation; but, in any event, this provision, if adopted, would make it possible for applicants to utilize farm lands and their values as distinguished from a home and its appurtenances used for the purpose of a domicile and the shelter of a family. It would invite loans upon a new basis foreign to the purpose of the law and foreign to the uses contemplated of funds appropriated. It seems to me that it would be susceptible of grave abuse. Farm lands are provided for already by legislation now in existence.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. If the H. O. L. C. had not adopted and carried out a policy of lending so much money to the large insurance companies and to the great building-and-loan associations rather than to the distressed home owners, does not the gentleman feel it would now have sufficient money to take care of just such cases as the gentleman from Colorado has in mind in offering the pending amendment?

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman, of course, invites me into a discussion that is not quite pertinent to the amendment under consideration.

He directs my attention to the general policy of the Board in administering funds provided by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. This matter has been discussed at length in general debate, and I thought it had been made clear that the granting of applications by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation Board has been done with consideration directed to the distressed home owner, and only in very limited and rare cases were loans granted in the case of institutions for the relief of general conditions.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.
Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I should like to call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that a joint committee has been set up by the Farm Credit Administration and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, which deals with just such cases as are aimed at in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado to the bill. It has been stated to me by Mr.
Fahey, Chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, that there are no cases which cannot be handled under these regulations.

Mr. STEAGALL. There is no question that they will be taken care of in one of the two systems, either by farmloan agencies or by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. They are not taken care of.

Mr. COX. There is admitted to be a weakness in the farmcredit law, and it is understood to ask Congress at the present session for an amendment whereby no such complaint as is made by the gentleman from Colorado will arise.

Mr. STEAGALL. May I say that I do not mean to deny any statement of fact which the gentleman from Colorado makes. I undertake to say that the law at present provides for taking care of such applications in one system or the other

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. But neither system takes care of them and will not take care of them unless the law is amended.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Martin of Colorado) there were—ayes 45, noes 58.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. Thomason: On page 1, line 6, strike out the word "four" and insert in lieu thereof the word "eight."

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Chairman, Congress has taken care of nearly every class of distressed debtors except the owners of small apartment houses. I should like to say a word for the owners of small apartment houses all over the country.

The Farm Credit Administration has loaned millions on the farms and ranches in every State of the Union. The H. O. L. C. has done a fine work, in my opinion, in connection with the loans on residences, and the R. F. C. has been looking after the industrial loans. But I undertake to say there is not a Member of this House who does not have some people in his district, especially if he comes from a small town or city, who does not have some fine people who own apartment houses and cannot get their mortgages refinanced anywhere. I know in my own city of El Paso many worthy people, including railroad men, widows, veterans, people who perhaps went to the Southwest for their health, who had a few thousand dollars they did not know what to do with. and they bought a piece of land in a desirable section of the city or near some good school or railroad shops or something of that sort, and built a small apartment house costing some $30,000 or $40,000. I want it understood I am not speaking for the big hotels or the big apartment houses in the large cities or on behalf of promoters or sellers of wildcat stocks. I am speaking in behalf of the little man who put his life savings in one of these small apartment houses and he, his wife, and his children, if he has any, are living in one of the apartments. The property is their homestead, and the only one they have. It is the only home they have. They had hoped the rents from the apartment would not only pay off the debt they owed but would also provide them with something to live on in their old age.

Mr. Chairman, I have personal knowledge of the situation in my own city. They have tried in vain to get their debts refinanced anywhere. Private mortgage, as well as building-and-loan companies, have turned them down. Government agencies say they are ineligible. Now, what damage or harm can come, if it is in truth a homestead and the security is ample? A little man has put his savings into that kind of property—perhaps twenty, thirty, or forty thousand dollars, and now is being foreclosed upon. I say he is entitled to relief. I have tried every one of these agencies, and you cannot get a loan of this kind. Such an individual is not eligible in any other class of legislation that we have passed.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I am in agreement with the gentleman, and for this further reason: When we do not give that class of people relief we place a penalty upon them.

Mr. THOMASON. You not only do that, but there is no agency to which they can apply. If it is good for the property owner who has three or four familes in his apartments, why is it not good for an apartment house with eight families? I should like to make it 12 or 20, if it is some good citizen who has put his life savings into that kind of property.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from New York

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If the amendment offered by the gentleman is adopted, will it do what he is advocating?

Mr. THOMASON. Yes; it will give the owner of an 8-apartment property the same opportunity for a loan as the 4-apartment man. I should like to make it at least 12, but I know it would not be adopted.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I am in accord with the gentleman, but I should like to call the attention of the Members to the fact that the gentleman's amendment is not an amendment of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation Act, but an amendment to the Home Loan Bank Act.

Mr. THOMASON. I do not care which act makes that class eligible. Right now they cannot get a loan anywhere from any agency that the Government has set up. I am going to try out everything until these deserving people get relief. I want to see more loans on small homes and apartments that are actually used, occupied, and enjoyed by good, honest, home-loving people who have their all tied up in such property. They are the backbone of the country and will do anything in reason to save their homes. It is our duty to look after them first.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I am in accord with the gentleman, but I want to say to my colleague that this would not mean the expenditure of any Federal money, but would only affect the matter of eligibility.

Mr. THOMASON. It just means that such a man would be eligible to go somewhere and borrow some money. Make these people eligible and I will take my chances on getting some loans.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMASON. I yield.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. I agree entirely with what the gentleman has said, and I maintain that everything he has said about the small apartment owner is true.

Mr. THOMASON. As I have said, I am not speaking for the big apartment owner, but this is a meritorious amendment and I hope the committee will adopt it. Hundreds of loans have been made to the big fellows with fine, palatial homes costing forty or fifty thousand dollars. I do not approve of many of those loans. Much of the criticism of this class of loans has been deserved. It is neither fair nor just to make this kind of loan when right across the street is some small apartment owner about to be kicked out into that same street.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, let me show how illogical the amendment of the gentleman from Texas is. The gentleman offers this amendment to the provision of the bill on page 1, which seeks to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act. The Federal home-loan system bears the same relation to the thrift and building-and-loan associations in this country as does the Federal Reserve System to the national banks in the set-up of the Federal home-loan bank system, which was created in 1932.

This bill defines what paper or what mortgages shall be eligible and it has limited the size to those buildings that do not exceed apartments for four families. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas seeks to raise the number from 4 to 8.

The gentleman does not accomplish any good whatsoever, neither does he accomplish the purpose that I believe he has in mind with his amendment, for all that the amendment seeks to do is to raise the amount and increase the unit number of the property behind the mortgages that shall be eligible for discount by the Federal home-loan bank system. Consequently, he is not going to get any Federal funds for this purpose. All that he does is to change the Federal home-loan bank discount system on mortgages so as to inflict a penalty upon the building-andloan associations of the country, and compel them, if he could, to make loans on larger properties on which they probably do not now loan.

The primary function of the building-and-loan association is to inspire and induce people to become home owners; not investors and not people who build 8, 10, and 12 apartment buildings as an investment; and what this amendment seeks to do is nothing more than to alter the Federal home-

Mr. THOMASON. I yield to the gentleman from Penn- | loan bank system set-up so as to inflict a penalty upon and enlarge the scope of the building-and-loan associations that are scattered from one end of the country to the other, and the gentleman would not get a dollar for the purpose he has in mind.

> I do not believe it is necessary to say anything further about the illogical tenor of the amendment insofar as it applies to section 1 of the bill.

> Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. The gentleman is correct in saying that this would not change the Home Owners' Loan Act, but it would do some good. It would permit such financial institutions as building-and-loan associations and similar institutions-

Mr. DIRKSEN. It would not do any good there.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Yes; it would, if they had mortgages on apartment buildings up to eight apartments they could then deposit such mortgages with the Home Loan banks and obtain a loan on the security of such collateral and for this reason I believe the gentleman is mistaken in saying it will do no good.

Mr. DIRKSEN. It only confers a discount privilege on these mortgages, but the building-and-loan associations are not compelled to take them, nor to make such loans in the first instance. A mortgage on such a property cannot be rediscounted by the Federal home-loan bank system unless first made by a lending institution.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. But it does give them the right to exercise their choice or their discretion in the matter.

Mr. THOMASON. Let me say to the gentleman that this is not to promote new buildings, this is to try to save the fellow who has a little apartment house and is about to lose it, and the amendment just makes such paper eligible for discount.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I may say to the gentleman from Texas that he fails in his purpose there, because there is nothing mandatory in the law to compel building-and-loan associations to make such mortgages. So the amendment falls on barren ground and should be voted down by the committee.

Mr. KELLER. If the proposed amendment does not achieve the purpose which the gentleman has in mind, how can such purpose be achieved?

Mr. DIRKSEN. You can add it as an amendment to one of the sections with respect to the Home Owners' Loan amendment; but why seek to penalize and overthrow the set-up of building-and-loan associations in this country that are devoted almost entirely and exclusively to the propagation of thrift, as well as the purpose of home ownership?

Mr. KELLER. We are trying to save homes.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes; but you are amending the wrong section of the bill, because this refers to the Federal homeloan bank system.

Mr. KELLER. Why does not the gentleman challenge the amendment under the rules?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am only telling the gentleman his amendment is entirely illogical to this section of the bill.

Mr. THOMASON. I will take my chances on that. [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Chairman, the argument presented by the gentleman from Illinois, who is a member of the committee, is right to the point. You cannot affect the building-and-loan organizations by asking them to lend their money on eight apartment buildings. The building-and-loan associations are designed to help those who build homes and not apartment houses. Under existing law, if a man has two homes mortgaged and is in danger of losing them, he can only get relief with respect to one home, the one in care of men who have money enough to build apartment

All of this legislation is designed to protect the home owner, and as the law now stands three apartment buildings are acceptable for discount. The pending bill raises this limit to four apartment buildings to make it conform to the Home Owners' Loan Act, as well as the Housing Act; and to adopt the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. THOMASON] would disorganize and throw the whole scheme

It may be all right to get up here and make a plea for the poor fellows who have put their money in an eight-room apartment house, but they are not the people contemplated to be relieved and assisted by this kind of legislation.

Perhaps we may later on pass laws to take care of all the people who may own all kinds of buildings, but at the present time Congress has passed legislation to take care of home owners for three apartments, where the man lives in it; but it does not contemplate taking care of more than that. I hope the amendment will be defeated.

Mr. CROSS of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REILLY. I yield.

Mr. CROSS of Texas. If it is logical to adopt this amendment, then it would be logical to adopt an amendment where he has several houses. My colleague is correct.

Mr. THOMASON. But he could not live in but one house. Mr. CROSS of Texas. He could live in any one of the separate houses.

Mr. THOMASON. He has to live in the homestead, and these people live in the apartment house, which represents all they have in the world.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Thomason].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Thomason) there were 45 ayes and 109 noes.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman, I hope I do not have to vote for this bill in the form it comes from the committee. If I understand this bill, no additional applications are going to be accepted by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. Only applications now on file can be considered. It provides that $1,500,000,000 additional bonds can be issued. When they stopped accepting applications, they had $800,000,000 remaining and $1,800,000,000 in applications pending. They will need approximately $1,000,000,000 to take care of the applications now in the various offices.

Now, if you are going to stop accepting applications, why did you give them $500,000,000 more than is necessary?

The original law provides that until the distress period is reached the home owner cannot apply for a loan. In other words, he cannot apply until he is in distress. There are hundreds of thousands of people in this country who could not apply for a loan because they were not in distress but who are in distress today.

Are they not entitled to have their day as well as those whose loans expired a year ago? It is not fair to cut them out

This is the best legislation that has been passed by the Democratic Party since it has been in control, and by this bill you are going to undo all that you have done.

When the time comes, I am going to move to amend section 9 if no member of the committee does. That is the section that has the provision "only applications heretofore filed can be considered." It also carries the provision for the issuance of $1,500,000,000 additional in bonds.

Not only shall I move to provide for acceptance of new applications but I am also going to move to increase the amount for new bonds to $2,500,000,000. There is no reason in the world why we should not continue to help the people who cannot borrow money from any other source and save their homes for them.

I come from a big city-St. Louis. The banks of my city will not loan money to home owners. To get into a building-and-loan association one must have money, and the which he lives. We cannot set up an institution here to take | people I refer to have not the money necessary to get into a building-and-loan association, nor have they money to pay their taxes.

> If you want to make a Bolshevik out of a citizen of this country, just take away from him his life savings which are invested in the home. He has denied himself and family many pleasures in order to put money in a home. He is honest and will pay the loan.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. I have heard it stated that the committee had voted favorably on offering an amendment to receive applications for 60 days after the passage of this law.

Mr. COCHRAN. That will not satisfy me. Make it the rest of the year, not 60 days, and I shall vote for the amendment. If it is for less, I shall move to amend it to make it at least 6 months.

Mr. COX. Also that the committee agreed to increase the amount by a quarter of a billion dollars.

Mr. COCHRAN. That, likewise, is not sufficient. If you do not do it now, you will before we adjourn. I want to see the people who have not had an opportunity up to now get a chance to save their homes, people whose distress period has arrived since they stopped accepting applications and others who will soon be in distress. They are entitled to

This is a good law, and I beg of you not to stop it at this time.

I introduced an amendment the opening day of the session providing for authority to issue $3,000,000,000 additional bonds.

This is a bill that should have been passed the first week of this Congress. It should not have been delayed until now, 2 months after we have been in session. The committee should have brought in this bill in order to save the homes of many people of this country, and we would have done that very thing if we had brought it in the first week of Congress.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield to the gentleman from New York, whose voice has been raised almost daily appealing for early consideration of this legislation.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Does the gentleman believe that this amount should be raised to two and a half billion dollars?

Mr. COCHRAN. Absolutely; and we could do that without doing any harm to anyone. We do not take money out of the Treasury. We simply issue bonds and get the best security in the world as collateral.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. And they should continue to receive applications during the rest of this year?

Mr. COCHRAN. Absolutely, to continue not only the rest of the year but until the banks and private interests are ready again to finance homes, by loaning money to renew outstanding indebtedness.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There are thousands of people today who cannot pay their taxes or assessments who were all right a year ago.

Mr. COCHRAN. Not thousands, but hundreds of thousands are in that position and need help.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. COCHRAN. Yes.

Mr. HEALEY. Is it not a fact that the banks have since started foreclosure proceedings on many of the homes of persons whose applications are now in the Home Loan office.

Mr. COCHRAN. I cannot answer whether the banks have started proceedings or not, but I know that individuals have. You can stop them by amending this bill when section 9 is reached. [Applause.]

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I am in full accord with the gentleman, and I hope the House will agree with him.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment. We have come to the crux of this whole situation, and we may as well settle it right now. In the words of the Scriptures, "Come, let us | home financing directly by the Government. Do not forget reason together." The committee plans to offer an amendment which will greatly liberalize section 9 of the bill as it is now written. The present section provides for applications heretofore filed, and so forth. After the word "filed" the committee would offer an amendment something like

And for applicants who in good faith have heretofore sought relief of the Corporation.

Any person who had sought relief of the Corporation would be able within 60 days after the effective date of this law to have his application acted upon by the Corporation. In addition to that, this amendment will increase the authorized bond issue $250,000,000, making a total of $4,750,000,000.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. How about the man who has not made application at the present time. Under the proposed amendment would he get relief?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. He would not get relief unless he had in good faith sought relief of the Corporation. Mr. FITZPATRICK. Previous to the enactment of this

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Under the terms of that language it would not be necessary that he actually filed an application.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. But he must have sought relief previous to the enactment of the law.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. He must have made some effort in good faith to secure relief of the Corporation.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. COX. Seriously, does the gentleman and his committee believe such an amendment means anything?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. We believe it does. I am satisfied it leaves it largely discretionary with the Board.

Mr. COX. Does it not mean that no distressed home owner in this country will have the slightest chance of obtaining a loan unless he filed his application prior to November 13. 1934?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I do not think that is a true statement or a proper interpretation of this amendment; and if it would not take care of those who had in good faith sought relief of the Corporation, I would not vote for it. I do not believe in gestures or efforts to mislead. Nothing could be more cruel than to arouse a false hope in the breast of a distressed home owner.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman tell the committee what one would have to do to show that he had heretofore in good faith sought to obtain relief from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. All he would have to do would be to present a letter or other evidence showing that he had written to any State agency asking information about taking care of his loan or made inquiry of some person connected with the Corporation looking to securing relief.

Mr. COX. Would he not have to show that he had actually filed an application?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Certainly not.

Now, let me tell you I am as much interested in the distressed home owner as any man in this House. My record will prove it. I have been actively engaged in trying to fabricate every piece of legislation that has been brought in during this emergency period to assist home owners. There is no citizen in America, in my opinion, who is entitled to more consideration than a distressed home owner; but remember, they have had 18 months within which to file applications. Do you know that a week before the stop order was issued there were only approximately 6,000 applications filed? It is the judgment of the Board, with whom we have discussed this matter, that under this amendment every eligible worthy person who sought relief would be protected in his home ownership. We know that the time must come, and it must come quickly, when we must call a halt on this question of that the big lending institutions are feasting on this

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HANCOCK] has expired.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I know the committee has given very sober and serious thought to the situation which confronts the administration and the country with reference to further relief for home owners who are in distress, but I cannot agree with my own committee in the action which it has taken in confining this relief to persons who, in good faith, prior to the date this amendment takes effect, sought relief under this act. I know there are thousands who were shut off on November 14 from filing applications for relief. They took the Home Owners' Loan Corporation at its word when it published the fact that it was going to receive no more applications. In consequence of this, these people did not apply for relief. How in the world the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or the Home Loan Board or any other agency can be left to interpret what was in the mind of each individual who might have otherwise applied for relief I do not know, and I do not believe any other Member of this House knows

As a substitute for the committee amendment which has been read, I propose, by amendment or substitution, to open the door for the receipt of applications for at least 60 days so that no one will be shut off-and I am not so sure but that we should go even beyond that, but I am willing to go along with the administration and keep it down to 60 daysand that the sum should be raised by at least $500,000,000. So my substitute to the committee amendment will be that we open the door in order that we may receive new applications for at least 60 days, and that the amount be raised to $5,000,000,000, which will raise the amount immediately available for loaning purposes $2,000,000,000.

Mr. REILLY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield.

Mr. REILLY. Does the gentleman believe there was any distressed mortgagor in this country who had not made preparation to ask for a loan from the Government?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Oh, yes; I believe there were thousands of them who had been hanging on by the skin of their teeth. They were hanging on because they had a sense of pride and they hoped they would be able to take care of their own obligations without help by the Government. Now they have used up all of their reserves and they find themselves in distress, and they have to go to their Government because they can go nowhere else for this relief.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Does not the gentleman believe there are a million mortgagors in America today who would like to put their mortgage in Uncle Sam's lap?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I do not doubt that in the least, but there are certain restrictions placed upon the eligibility of this paper. In the first place, he must have been in involuntary default under the act previous to June 13, 1933; but if he were not in default on that date, he must prove to the satisfaction of the Home Owners' Loan Board one of three things—that he is in default since then by reason of an economic condition, by reason of misfortune, or by reason of unemployment beyond the control of the applicant. There are these three limitations. Therefore, there is a limitation placed upon the number of applications which the Corporation can consider.

Based upon the number of applications which were coming in when they arbitrarily and summarily shut the door on November 14, assuming that they continued at that rate, and in 60 days' time all of those who would have applied in the interim would make application, there would be 72,000 applications, based upon the fact that they were coming in at that time at the rate of 6,000 a week. There would be 72,000 applications. The average loan is for $3,000. So we have to increase the amount in order that this relief may be granted.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott] has expired.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the proforma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I come from a State where there were located the greatest number of distressed mortgages in America, and perhaps in the world. I am therefore constrained to agree with my colleague from Michigan IMr. Wolcottl, who has just addressed you, and to oppose the amendment which will be proposed by the committee.

The gross home-loan applications in our State, either closed or undergoing examination, total 134,628.

As of February 23, in New York State, the loans approved number 74,466 in the amount of $385,733,880. The closings completed amounted to 63,146 in the amount of $326,720,242. Of the gross applications of 134,628, about 35,000 have been rejected.

They are now proceeding to close the balance and estimate the total closings, when the work is completed and provided no further applications should be accepted, as approximately 100,000 loans.

In view of the excellent work that is being accomplished in our State by this splendid agency of the Federal Government, I believe that specific and determined authority ought to be implied in the amendment so that there will be no questions as to the rights of the applicant. In other words, if we increase the loaning facilities of this agency, we ought to accept applications, new and old, for a specific stated time. Then there would be no question of the interpretation of the amendment by the agency; the meaning of the Congress would be clear and final.

While I am talking about this agency in New York State I want to say that although it was cautious and perhaps a little hesitant in getting under way, it is an example, and a splendid example of the efficient operation of a governmental activity. There is in charge of the agency in the State of New York a man by the name of Vincent Dailey who has given an excellent account of himself. He has prevented partisan politics from being a consideration in any case in connection with applications for home loans.

He has gone so far as to dismiss employees who in any way, directly or indirectly, developed the partisan aspect of any case.

On yesterday the distinguished minority leader took the floor to say that there were no closings in his community until 3 weeks before election. The minority leader and myself were in agreement in speeding up the work of this agency in our State. We all felt that it was a little cautious in getting started. A review of the record, however, indicates that while they were a little slower in the north counties than they were in the larger cities it was due in large part to the inadequate facilities and services that could be secured to bring about the consents and the closings in that section of the country.

I recall as early as last June an organization was sent into Oswego County to expedite closings in this particular work; and the excellent quality of the work and the great number of closings accomplished by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in Oswego and adjacent communities brought about the editorial praise of the newspapers in that district. The record as it applies to the Thirty-first Congressional District, represented so ably in the House by our genial colleague the gentleman from Potsdam [Mr. SNELL], is also worthy of mention. The Corporation began closings there in July of 1934 when 44 closings were effected; 64 closings were effected in August, 86 in September, 116 in October, and 161 in November before election. Today there are 311 closings in all in the Thirty-first Congressional District. While I will agree that they were slow in starting, that was due to the inadequate facilities and personnel necessary in order to bring about consents and approvals in that particular territory. We can well be proud of this agency in our State. It has In the service of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in our State politics never have interfered with the orderly management of this Federal agency. Home owners have always been extended the right to select their own insurance broker or insurance company. The selection of companies to prepare the abstracts of titles has likewise been absolutely free from partisan consideration. The only real, substantial criticism which may have been directed against the agency in our State is the fact that they could not, because of the shortage of funds, accept all of the applications submitted to them.

I am happy to be able to testify to the splendid record established by the H. O. L. C. in the Empire State. We have in Messrs. Laporte and Dailey two capable public servants, and they have in turn surrounded themselves with a capable and efficient staff. Altogether they have accomplished a great deal for our people and our State, and with the passage of this bill the people of the Empire State can look for a continuation of this excellent service.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment. Mr. Chairman, the preservation of life and the protection of the home should be the fundamental concepts of all civilized society. The home is the foundation upon which the superstructure of all government is reared. The home is the institution where the father is the leader, the mother the coleader, and the children the subjects. What is more sacred, more sublime, more noble, more lovable in all our memories than the home? The home should be the symbol of unity, harmony, love, cooperation, and mutual respect. The progeny of every family is imitative in character, disposition, and temperament. As go the parents, so go the children. As go the children, so goes the home. As goes the home, so goes the nation, civilization, and the world. Destroy the home and you destroy society, civilization, and everything that goes with it.

What are the factors that should preserve every American home? First, child-welfare legislation that protects the health, vigor, and vitality of the youth of our country. Second, we must give economic security to all men and women who are willing to work in order to earn a livelihood and support those who are dependent upon them. Third, we must provide, through unemployment insurance, for those who are derelicts and driftwood of economic injustice and who find themselves the tragic victims of hunger, penury, and want. Fourth, we must protect our old mothers and fathers, who have given their all upon the altar of service to our country in times of peace. We must look after their health, happiness, and contentment through old-age pensions when they are no longer able to work in the quarries of life. Fifth, high and above everything else, to secure these blessings that I have enumerated we must pass legislation that will preserve and conserve the home, which is the foundation upon which all society must rest.

In every home, be it in a large city or town, on the plains, in the valleys or on the mountain sides, there is a little inscription upon the humble walls which inspires us to nobler and higher aspirations. This sentiment reads "God bless our home" or "Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

This Republic should never destroy the faith or hope in our institutions through the destruction of the home. The bill that is now being considered before the House of Representatives is one that provides for additional home-mortgage relief.

This bill is designed to liberalize and humanize the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, by bringing assistance in their great hour of need to the tragic victims of our economic depression, by enabling individual home mortgage borrowers to be assisted in the preservation and protection of all they have left in life—their home, hearth, and fireside.

about consents and approvals in that particular territory.

We can well be proud of this agency in our State. It has established a fine record. It should be continued. IApplause.]

hour of need and stand behind him until the clouds of the heard him on the floor make speeches on that question. economic depression pass away and the sunshine of prosperity

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation, which is doing such wonderful work for the benefit of the people of the United States, has received applications from over 1,700,000 home owners. It will necessitate, besides the $2,000,000,000 that have already been appropriated, an additional two or three billion dollars to adequately serve all eligible applicants who are crying pitifully to protect their investments and their homes. I shall gladly, loyally, and happily support such constructive legislation that will protect the homes of our American citizens.

Mr. Chairman, the report of operations for the week ending February 28, 1935, of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation of New York State is one of the most brilliant records of accomplishment and achievement in the preservation and protection of the home. Up to the present moment we have had 134,629 applications. Preliminary appraisals completed to date are 126,701. Mortgagees consents obtained to date, 107,446. Final appraisals completed, 88,074. The total loans approved up to the 1st of March are $386,540,400. This means a record unsurpassed and never equaled in any nation of the world or in any State of our Union.

The gentleman who is responsible for this magnificent contribution to the service of the people of our State, and who enjoys the respect and esteem of the men and women whom he has helped in their desperate and tragic hour of need, is none other than the State manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation of New York State, Hon. Vincent

This eminent and scholarly gentleman was graduated from Georgetown University with distinction and honor. He is a brilliant journalist, a successful business man and merchant, and an intellectual student of social and economic problems. Next to our gifted and versatile State and National chairman, James A. Farley, he is the outstanding Democratic leader of our party in the State of New York. Genial, generous, gracious, he is honored, loved, and respected by everyone irrespective of political partisanship. It is a great privilege and pleasure for me to pay the tribute of my homage and respect to this modest, unassuming, thoughtful public servant for his devotion to his ideals and for the patriotic service he has rendered in making the Home Owners' Loan Corporation the outstanding agency of relief and the model for every other State to emulate.

Mr. Chairman, I would be remiss in my duties as a Member of this House if I failed to pay tribute to the loyal, outstanding, and efficient services rendered by the Hon. Dan Skilling, former deputy in the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Mr. Ward, the present supervisor under Mr. Dailey, as well as the entire staff and personnel, for their indefatigable and persevering work, for their sympathetic and humane cooperation rendered to the citizens of New York who sought their advice, aid, and cooperation in preserving intact their life savings, symbolized in the preservation of their homes. Mr. Chairman, come what may, legislate as we will, let us remember that which we should never forget, the American home must be preserved. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 1 additional minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. CULKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIROVICH. I yield to the gentleman from New York. Mr. CULKIN. The gentleman from New York has eulogized Mr. Dailey, chairman of the New York State Democratic Committee, who, I am informed, has been appointing Democrats from top to bottom in this service. I assume there is no question about that proposition.

Mr. SIROVICH. I question and challenge the accuracy of that statement.

Mr. CULKIN. The gentleman is advocating civil service, I assume. I have seen statements in the press and have

Does not the gentleman think that better service would be rendered and men better equipped to serve the public in this organization if this whole proposition was under civil service and let the chips politically fall where they may?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes to answer the gentleman's question.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Chairman, the Home Owners' Loan bill that was originally drafted and which is in the documentary archives of our building was a bill I drafted and which Mr. Luce, who was ranking member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, took and used in preparing the present Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill. When that bill came before the House I voted that all men and women working under the Home Owners' Loan Corporation should take a competitive civil-service examination. I was then an advocate of the merit system. I am today an exponent of that same principle. But it was a Republican organization that had elected Herbert Hoover as President of the United States. He appointed Franklin Fort and other members who organized the personnel of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, who failed to provide a civil-service status for these men and women now working in the various offices of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. Personally, I am in favor of every man and woman in the departments taking a competitive civil-service examination and taking politics out of every appointment, thereby enabling Members of Congress to do their work as Members should instead of looking for jobs for their constituents. [Applause.]

Mr. MEAD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIROVICH. I yield to the gentleman from New York. Mr. MEAD. I would like to know from my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from New York, if the civil-service proposal of his would also extend to the agents of the Farm Loan Board, all of whom are Republicans in the State of New York?

Mr. SIROVICH. For the benefit of my dear friend and colleague, the Chairman of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, James Mead, I would like to say that I am in favor of extending the civil service to Republicans and Democrats alike in every job of the Government of the United States. For the benefit of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Culkin], for whom I have great admiration, I desire to state that when the hearings of the Civil Service Subcommittee, of which I have the honor to be chairman, will be completed. I shall recommend a noncompetitive civilservice examination for everyone who now holds office to give them all a civil-service status and to protect them in the security of their positions. This has been the principle that has operated for the past 52 years, in every Republican and Democratic administration.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 2 additional minutes. The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection. Mr. SISSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIROVICH. I yield to the gentleman from New York. Mr. SISSON. I want to ask the distinguished gentleman from New York, whose sentiments regarding the civil service I admire as much as does the other gentleman from New York [Mr. Culkin], if in his answer to the question propounded by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULKIN] he would qualify it by saying that he would not allow the civil service to apply in the same way that the Republican Party did, which blanketed tens of thousands of employees in the service of the Government without a civil-service examination and then built a civil-service wall around them?

Mr. SIROVICH. To answer the distinguished gentleman, may I say that so long as the Republicans have been filling their respective positions as Republicans without civil service I think the Democrats should be entitled to do the same, although I believe in the merit system.

I sincerely hope and trust that the day is not far distant when men and women willing to render public service as a career will find their hopes and aspirations realized by taking a competitive civil-service examination where merit shall prevail and equal opportunities be granted to all without the guarantee of equal accomplishment or success. So long, however, as the Republicans in the past have taken advantage of the spoils system, the only solution left for my Democratic colleagues today is to give good government to the Republicans and good jobs to efficient Democrats until the civil-service bill that my colleagues and I are working on shall once and for all eliminate the spoils system in the conduct of our Government. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the paragraph.

Mr. Chairman, pertinent to the last statement made by the gentleman from New York, I wonder if in addition to what he has stated he likewise favors the observance of the quota provision of the original act?

The gentleman from New York, the leader of the minority, yesterday criticized the Home Owners' Loan Corporation for the way it has administered the law in the State of New York. May I call the committee's attention to the fact that the State of New York fared better than any State in the Union in the sense that a larger proportion of applications that were filed in that State were actually put through and loans made. In New York up to February 14 there were 134,629 applications filed. The total amount involved was $690,369,000 plus. There was actually loaned in New York in the retail operations of the Corporation the enormous sum of $325,655,265. The State of Ohio fared better than any of the States, not that the total amount loaned in the State was greater or quite as great as in the State of New York, but upon a per capita basis the State did fare better than the others.

Mr. Chairman, the purpose of my taking the floor at this time and speaking to the pro forma amendment anticipating that when the section of the bill is reached where an amendment of this character or substance will be in order, such an amendment will be offered, to call attention of the Members to the fact that unless the act is amended providing for receiving new applications the result will be that the larger States will get practically all the money that is provided for in the bill. Let us take the State of Ohio. On a per capita basis the State of Ohio has received in most instances 3 to 1, and in some cases as high as 10 to 1 as much money per capita as other States.

Members who come from the outlying States, the smaller States of the Union, if they are to have any reasonable expectation of their constituents or the people of their States getting any of this one and three-quarters billion dollars then it is to their interest to support the amendment which will provide for the opening of the doors and the admittance of new applicants. You will find in some communities where the distress was no greater than in others the applicants came in by the hundreds, whereas in other communities there were comparatively few applications filed.

Now, I take the position that it would be unfair for this House to so frame this legislation as to give preference to those who have heretofore filed their applications. If the money voted is insufficient to take care of all applicants, then loans should be made upon the basis of comparative present needs and distress.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, over a thousand years ago the Chinese Nation had a civil-service law and a civil-service scheme of things. We decry and belittle them, and yet, after a thousand years, the administration, forgetting the assassination of Garfield by Guiteau, who was an officeseeker, utterly destroys and strikes down civil service.

What the gentleman from New York has said in regard to Oswego County, which is my home county, is true. Vincent Dailey took excellent care of that county, as the gentleman stated; but our quarrel here is with the proposition of putting men into these positions solely on the ground that they have a political endorsement and irrespective of technical fitness.

I am going to give you a leaf out of the Republican book. We are temporarily in the minority, but we are fast coming back, and next year, with the assistance of sundry gentlemen who are now going very far to the left, we are going to elect a Republican President and a Republican House. So be kind to us for the time being, and we will be kind to you then. [Laughter.]

When Andrew Mellon went into the Treasury he found there a host of Democratic officeholders, hundreds of them, and many of them excellent technicians. They had been placed there in the Wilson administration by the endorsement of Joe Tumulty, who was then the private secretary of the President. Andrew Mellon never removed one of those men, and unless you people have removed them, they are there today. They were doing their work well, and Secretary Mellon acted in a public capacity as he would have done in his own personal business. It was the rational thing to do.

That is one instance of the devotion of the Republican Party to the cause of civil service. I wish to reemphasize the statement of the eloquent, scholarly gentleman from New York [Mr. Sirovich], who says that civil service is an essential proposition where orderly progress and good government are involved.

The handling of public money should not be turned over to the gross, sordid hands of politics, either Democratic or Republican. Public moneys should be handled through the medium of officials qualified by technical experience for such positions.

Vincent Dailey is a Democrat, a fine gentleman personally, but he is a Democrat, unashamed and unafraid; and from the top to the bottom the men who are engaged in the field work of this great enterprise of the Government in my State no one went on the job, irrespective of technical fitness, but the men who had the endorsement of the chairman of the local county committee. Many of those men were excellent poll workers, good at getting out the vote. When they applied to their chairman he did not discriminate very much but endorsed them as fast as they applied.

I could tell this House of certain departures from the strict path of duty where I believe political influences played a part. Why, Mr. Chairman, it is inevitable, under such a dispensation, that politics should play a part. The administration has added 80,000 Democrats to that number of exempt positions in the public service. That does not make for efficiency. We are taking a step back when we put this great institution of the Home Loan into the realm of political patronage. I think we might well take a leaf out of the book of the greatly abused Mr. Mellon, who, as I say, left in the Treasury every Democrat who was then in office, and most of them are there today. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. When this bill H. R. 6021, popularly known as the "home owners' loan bill", was originally brought to the Banking and Currency Committee, it called for additional bonds in the amount of $4,500,000,000. I made an honest effort to amend the bill so that the amount of additional bonds we were providing for would be raised from $1,500,000,000 to $2,000,000,000. After a long and serious discussion on the merits of my amendment, it was put to a vote and, in the judgment of the committee, it was decided that $250,000,000 was the largest sum that we could get at this time. That would make the total amount $4,750,000,000 instead of $5,000,000,000 that my original amendment called for, or an additional sum of $1,750,000,000, which is $500,-000,000 more than the Home Owners' Loan Corporation asked for in the first place. My purpose in getting an additional $500,000,000 was this: I wanted the additional money so that the Home Owners' Loan Corporation could, in the ! period between the time the Congress would set up new and more liberal private money-loaning facilities to take care of these home owners who are now in distress. You will note in the bill there is $250,000,000 provided to set up Federal home-loan banks. These banks are designed primarily to take care of the kind of loans the Home Owners' Loan Corporation handles. In addition to that, we have before our Banking and Currency Committee at this time a measure which is designed, if it passes, to enable all member banks of the Federal Reserve to take first mortgages of 20 years' maturity to the Federal Reserve bank and have them rediscounted the same as ordinary commercial paper was discounted under the old Federal Reserve law. That ought to open up a tremendous reservoir of mortgage money, and we are told by Mr. Eccles. Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, that there is about $10,000,000,000 of that kind of money available at this time in the savings banks and the commercial banks of the country. Because of this large sum of available bank funds real-estate loans should be readily available, as it should take 2 or 3 years before those banks could exhaust their present heavy cash resources. While this new law will provide rediscount privileges to real-estate mortgages, the banks probably would not have to go to the Federal Reserve Board to have these mortgages rediscounted at this time, but if a cloud appeared on the financial horizon they could go, and their assets would still be as liquid as they are today. The Federal Reserve officials are convinced that this money will seek the mortgage-loan field. It is because I am hoping this private money will come into the field within 60 or 90 days after the passing of the new Federal Reserve banking bill, and take up these loans, that I asked for an additional sum to tide over the present distressed home owner and get the money from the Government until such time as private money would get into the field. If, after these changes have been made; if, after this rediscount privilege has been afforded the banks, they do not get busy and loan money to distressed property owners, the United States Government will have to take them over and proceed to do the job itself.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD of California. Yes.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Is the gentleman in favor of opening loans for new applications after this bill is passed?

Mr. FORD of California. On the basis of the amendment the committee is to offer; yes.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. But the amendment means nothing, insofar as new loans are concerned.

Mr. FORD of California. I would not say that.

Mr. DONDERO. Does not the gentleman think that the real test for the eligibility of the application ought to be the involuntary distress of the home owner, regardless of Mr. FORD of California. That is the test provided in the bill.

Mr. DONDERO. Yes; but should not that be the test as we follow it out in this bill?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, before the gentleman begins, I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon this section and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, I perhaps hinted yesterday what my own individual position is regarding the closing of applications at the present time for home owners' loans. That is, whether or not the receiving of new applications should be chopped off at this time. I recognize the force of all the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Goldsborough] has said, and the force of all the gentleman from California [Mr. FORD] has said, although frankly—and I hope the gentleman from California is still in the Chamber—there has been a most remarkable change in his attitude in the last 24 hours. because he thought the other day that I was backing down. I am not in favor of suspending the receiving of new applications now, although I recognize that there are a lot of banking institutions, banks, and building-and-loan associations, and so forth, that have a lot of rotten mortgages on their hands that they would like to unload onto Uncle Sam.

Probably they have already loaded a few on, but I think we may trust the administration of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to sift them out and get the worthy cases, the really distressed cases, the cases where the equity of the home owner has not been entirely lost, where there is still something left to salvage, and to reduce the loading down of the taxpayers of the United States to the minimum. I would rather take the chance of even loading us up with a few more rotten mortgages than to perpetrate the gross injustice that would be perpetrated if we refused to receive any new applications.

Let us look at the record. I know personally of hundreds of cases where the distressed home owners went to the regional offices seeking advice about filing applications, as long ago as last June, and where they were urged to go back and try to make peace with their mortgagee. They were led along and influenced by one means or another. Unfortunately, those who failed to file an application were. in my opinion, many of them, not only eligible, but among our most honest and conscientious citizens, because they were not trying to load their burdens onto the taxpayers. They were trying to save their own homes just as long as they could, and I will never vote to let them down. [Applause.]

Now, what is this committee doing? Frankly, I cannot defend the position of the committee in this particular respect. I say it with all due deference to every man on the committee. Every man on that committee is absolutely honest and is trying to do the best he can. It was a difficult task. But I say we have let the House believe we were going to keep that open for some length of time. Any amendment which has for its purpose, its text, that we are going to say, "Well, Mr. Applicant, Mr. Home Owner, you did not file an application, but if you can show that you, in good faith, intended to, we will pass upon your application now", should be rejected. As a lawyer who has tried lawsuits for 25 years, I have seen too much of the poppycock of trying to prove good faith, or the lack of it, and I am not satisfied to leave the decision on that question to any administration, although I have the greatest confidence in Mr. Fahev.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Sisson] has expired.

All time has expired.

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. Subsection (k) of section 6 of the Federal Home Loan

Bank Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(k) All stock of any Federal home-loan bank shall share in dividend distributions without preference."

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, in September 1934, following our experience with the Federal Housing Administration, in the field of loans for home construction and repairs, I sent out a questionnaire to 20,000 industrialists having a capitalization of $50,000 or over to determine the needs of industry insofar as it applied to building. The survey covered every State in the Union. We have on file over 5,000 questionaires returned to us, which definitely show that there is over $970,000,000 worth of construction ready and waiting. Sixty-two percent of this amount of industrial construction can be financed from the reserves of the manufacturers by themselves, but 38 percent of this great amount cannot be financed without assistance such as provided by the Federal Housing Act.

The limited time at my disposal will not give me an opportunity to disclose all that we learned through this thorough survey. I spent a great deal of my time and money in order to determine what the needs of industry really are. We must remember that over 40 percent of all of our unemployed are in the building industry. I took up this matter of industrial financing for construction with Mr. Moffett, of the Federal Housing Administration, and with Jesse Jones, of the R. F. C. Later the question was discussed at the White House.

The $50,000 loan proposal which I made and which ultimately came to the committee was originally incorporated in my bill H. R. 4687. The exact terms I specified in my bill were lifted and incorporated in the Steagall bill and were emasculated to a lesser figure of $25,000. As the original proponent of the idea I am not looking for the peacock feathers, nor do I care to bask in the spotlight by myself, but I say that since Mr. Moffett, as Administrator of the Federal Housing Administration, had given my bill and its provisions his unqualified approval. The original provision of $50,000 should be reinstated in the bill. The Federal Housing Administration finds that it can only use $100,-000,000 of the $200,000,000 which was granted by the Seventy-third Congress, and Mr. Moffett is very anxious to come to the aid of the unemployed and to the aid of industry which needs modernization, repairs, and new machinery. The borrower will pay the insurance premium on the entire loan which the Government insures up to 20 percent.

I learned that the committee in its wisdom saw fit to cut in half the original amount, so I consulted again with the Federal Housing Administrator, and he expressed keen disappointment, because he points out that he has a usable surplus of $100,000,000 which was allowed by Congress, and now we are trying to prevent him from applying it to its proper use. Mr. Moffett knows his position. He knows that industry needs some assistance, and he has the money which Congress allowed for this purpose. Why hamstring an agency of the Government by limiting the amount of a loan to $25,000 when the Administrator states his fund is ample enough to cover applications of $50,000?

I have spent many long months studying this one important phase and I am prepared to debate it with any man on

Mr. SISSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield.

Mr. SISSON. I take it that the gentleman from Michigan approves of the position which I attempted to set before the House in the remarks I made yesterday on this particu-

Mr. DINGELL. Without any qualification whatsoever. Mr. SISSON. Namely, under title I, increasing that authorization up to $50,000 for the purposes stated by the gentleman?

Mr. DINGELL. That is right.
Mr. SISSON. Is the gentleman aware of the fact that this bill, as originally introduced in the House by the Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, contained the precise provision for which the gentleman is now contending?

Mr. DINGELL. I pointed that out early in my discourse. Mr. SISSON. The committee, without giving any reason, and by a vote of 12 to 11, reduced that $50,000 to $25,000, and I challenge anyone to deny that statement.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield. Mr. O'CONNOR. The gentleman is aware that I am going to propose an amendment, through some member of the committee, to carry out the administration's wishes, to carry that amount at $50,000?

Mr. DINGELL. I thank the gentleman from New York. Mr. Chairman, I have presented this amendment and felt, in all modesty, that inasmuch as I had devoted so much time to this subject that it was fitting that I offer such an amendment, but I gladly yield the privilege to the distinguished gentleman from New York. In fact, I would rather that he propose it.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I have no pride of authorship, but the gentleman spoke to me and I told him that I was already prepared to do it.

Mr. DINGELL. I present herewith a comprehensive report of the survey prepared by my consultant, Moritz Kahn, one of the world's foremost architects and engineers. I do so for the benefit of the Members.

> ALBERT KAHN, INC., ARCHITECTS AND ENGINEERS, Detroit, November 24, 1934.

Hon. JOHN D. DINGELL.

Congressman, Fifteenth District of Michigan,

Detroit, Mich. Dear Sin: As per your request of October 4, I submit herewith my preliminary report on the replies to the questionnaires recently distributed amongst industrialists. At that time you suggested that, in addition to my compilations, I should give you my personal views on the present condition of the heavy industries in this country and also any suggestions which might assist you in formulating the bill you propose to introduce to revive the heavy industries. industries.

The compilations so far made are included in the accompanying report. My personal views are expressed in this letter.

It is well recognized that there can be no return of normal conditions in the United States until there is a revival of our heavy industries, the stagnation of which is the main cause of continued unemployment.

The marked improvement made during the past 18 months in our consumer goods industries can be considered only a palliative. The permanent cure must be sought in the rehabilitation of the heavy industries

Amongst the latter the construction industry, which is the most important in this country, is the one which today suffers the greatest hardship in that lack of activity therein accounts for approximately 40 percent of our unemployed, leaving out of consideration those who can be classed as unemployed even under normal conditions.

With their reduced purchasing power the unemployed in the construction industry account for the great bulk of the remaining unemployed. Hence by solving the problem in the construction industry we will be most likely to solve the entire problem tion industry we will be most likely to solve the entire problem of our unemployed. While the National Housing Act will prove a great stride toward the desired goal, we stand to gain even more from a national program of construction of commercial and industrial buildings, and for several reasons:

This field has lain dormant for 5 years.
 Industrial projects are larger than home-building projects, and with the same amount of effort will absorb more men.

(3) The unemployed can be more expeditiously absorbed in industrial projects than in home building.

(4) An industrial plant, after being put into operation, will in turn give employment to men outside of the construction industry.

It is immediately granted that in many branches of manufacture production capacity is already greater than consumption demand and that one of the causes of the present depression is the insufficiency of consumption. It is therefore essential that no new plants ciency of consumption. It is therefore essential that no new plants be built for such industries where this condition applies. There are many industries, however, where this state of affairs does not apply, and herein we will find great scope for development. As a single instance let us consider the brewing industry.

Prior to prohibition more than 1,400 brewerles were operating in this country. Most of these plants were dismantled during the days of prohibition. Up to January 1 of this year less than 600 plants had been reinstated. During the year 1916 the production of beer in the United States amounted to 66,000,000 barrels. The population of the 28 States then "wet" was 71,677,000. At the present time 3.2 beer has been legalized in 42 States and the District present time 3.2 beer has been legalized in 42 States and the District of Columbia, having a total population of 117,183,000. Based on the per capita consumption of 1916, the consumption power of the the per capita consumption of 1916, the consumption power of the country is at present about 100,000,000 barrels per annum, although the demand is not nearly at this rate today, owing to the lack of purchasing power caused by unemployment. In any event, these figures show that under normal conditions we can easily support expansions of existing plants and/or the construction of 1,500 new plants, the construction cost of which will exceed $134,000,000 in buildings and $196,000,000 in new equipment. Lack of finances appears to be the principal cause for the delay in the development of this particular industry.

Other industries can be cited wherein modifications or new plants are urgently needed today, such as the manufacture of air-conditioning equipment, radio equipment, new mechanical equipment, household appliances, drugs and chemicals, food products, paperbox containers, and the like.

In many industries plant modifications or expansions are also required on account of the obsolescence, new methods of production, or the natural growth which has taken place in the past 5 years.

During the past 15 years there has been a radical development in the design of industrial buildings to increase their efficiency and to provide better conditions for the workers. In many industries old buildings can be replaced by new buildings, the savings in the operating cost of which would be sufficient to amortize the construction cost in a relatively short time.

It is erroneous to draw the general conclusion that during a period of depression manufacturers should refrain from investing capital in "bricks and mortar." In spite of the depression, we must keep abreast of the times. We cannot sleep ourselves into pros-

As stated in my report, a survey of the situation shows that we need in this country today industrial construction, the total cost of which is conservatively estimated at $970,000,000, exclusive of the cost of new equipment. If this work were put in hand it would, together with the activities of the National Housing Act, result in the employment of more than 3,000,000 men.

Of this total amount of work, 62 percent can be carried out by industrialists who are themselves able to finance the cost thereof; the remaining 38 percent can be put in hand only if financial aid is available.

the remaining 38 percent can be put in hand only if financial aid is available.

Of the total amount of work, 36 percent can be started immediately; the remaining 64 percent is stated in the replies to be dependent upon a return of normal conditions.

Reverting to the brewing industry, it is well known that lack of finance is the greatest obstacle to be overcome, and the reason for this is quite apparent. The repeal of the eighteenth amendment is but a recent event, therefore the new brewing industry is in its infancy. Practically all brewing companies recently incorporated were dependent upon outside financing. Those first started experienced little difficulty, but soon the sources of funds seemed to dry up and for the past year it has been almost impossible for new brewing corporations to find the necessary capital for construction work or for the purchase of equipment. Several other industries, according to the replies received to the questionnaires, are in a similar plight, though probably not to the same extent.

the same extent.

In my survey of the replies received I noted that in a great majority of cases where lack of finances was stated to be the cause majority of cases where lack of finances was stated to be the cause of delay in construction, the repliers expressed their opinions that the Government should not be called upon to provide the necessary loans, and expressed the hope that funds would be made available through banking institutions, with long-term periods of repayment. In truth, many repliers stated that their confidence in the Government would be increased if the Government would refrain from incurring further obligations.

During the last session of Congress the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was authorized to lend to industry the sum of $300,000,000. The Federal Reserve System was also empowered to lend $249,000,000. Of the total sum of $549,000,000 thus made available, less than $30,000,000 was loaned to industry up to a recent date, and Jesse F. Jones, Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, confessed his inability to answer the question, "Why doesn't industry borrow more?" The answer will probably be found in the vast amount of "red tape" and the onerous conditions which were placed in the way of the prospective borrower. Much can be done by the Government to alleviate these conditions.

But there is no reason why the Government should bear the entire burden. Sufficient funds are in the hands of our banking institutions; all that is required is a general loosening up of long-term credit. According to the replies to the questionnaire, prospective borrowers are asked to mortgage practically everything they have, and even then they are offered only short-term loans. This is a rather interesting condition in view of the statement made by J. Pierpont Morgan, during an investigation, to the effect that loans made by his corporation backed by securities and collateral involved them in relatively greater losses than loans based on the character and history of the borrower. Mr. Morgan stated that in his experience losses from loans based on character and history were practically negligible.

It is to be hoped that our Government may succeed in creating a situation under which banking institutions will resume the long-But there is no reason why the Government should bear the attre burden. Sufficient funds are in the hands of our banking

It is to be hoped that our Government may succeed in creating a situation under which banking institutions will resume the long-term lending of the vast accumulation of funds now on hand, thereby obviating the need of Government appropriations for the revival of the construction industry.

Referring to the potential construction projects, the execution of which is dependent upon a return of normal conditions, we should bear in mind that the purpose of a national construction program is to affect a return of normal conditions, and thus we have a circle of expected events. We are faced with the question, "Must a return of normal conditions precede a revival of the construction industry, or must new construction precede a return of normal conditions?"

I am of the opinion that these events must be coincident and can be brought about only by the cooperation of four groups, each of which must do its share—the Government, the banking institutions, the industrialists, and labor. The Government is anxious, and in fact has already started to make the necessary read-institutions, the industrialists, and labor. The Government is anxious, and in fact has already started to make the necessary readjustments. Banking institutions should be encouraged and enabled to loosen up on long-term credit. Industrialists in turn must be courageous enough to assume a slight amount of risk. And labor must let down on its demands. The proper coordination of the efforts of these four groups will bring about the desired results, and then it will not matter whether "the egg came first, or the chicken."

To assist you in the preparation of your bill, I submit the following suggestions which might be worthy of further study:

(1) Modify the Securities Act of 1933 to facilitate the obtaining

(2) Eliminate for a period taxes on capital expenditures for industrial construction and equipment.
(3) Revise undistributed earnings tax to permit accumulation of profits to be expended for buildings and equipment.
(4) Enable bankers to discount long-term loans to industry.
(5) Arrange for greater cooperation between the department which is urging bankers to make loans and the department in charge of bank examiners. charge of bank examiners.

(6) Create a department which will foster better cooperation between bankers and industrialists.

between bankers and industrialists.

Dealing with the last-mentioned suggestion, there are some departments in Washington at the present time which go far out of their way to help those seeking information and their assistance. I know of instances where information was asked of some departments, and not only was all available information immediately forwarded but it was, in fact, accompanied by personal letters inviting the inquirer to ask for more information if necessary. This spirit of cooperation is exceedingly valuable. A similar desire to prove of assistance to industrialists would, in my opinion, make the department I suggest a very valuable one.

Very truly yours.

Very truly yours,

MORITZ KAHN.

REPORT ON REPLIES TO QUESTIONNAIRES DISTRIBUTED ON OR ABOUT OCTOBER 25, 1934

NOVEMBER 24, 1934.

Hon. JOHN D. DINGELI

Congressman Fifteenth District of Michigan

Detroit, Mich.

Preamble

DEAR SIR: In accordance with your instructions of October 4 last, I submit a report dealing with the answers to the question-naires you recently mailed to industrialists. The purpose of this questionnaire was to obtain information which would assist you in formulating an act to foster the construction of commercial and industrial buildings.

On or about October 25, 19,000 questionnaires were sent out. Most of the 4,280 replies came back within 10 days thereafter. Some, however, are still trickling in.

A thorough analysis of the information contained in these replies presents a statistical problem which I have been unable to deal with finally in the time allotted to me.

Realizing your desire to obtain as quickly as possible some information for your act, I thought it advisable to submit this many of the replies gave information which was not sufficiently explicit. Probably further information should be obtained from these sources. In some cases I came to the conclusion that estimates given for the value of prospective construction work were excessive, and in such cases I thought it advisable to reduce the estimates governed by our experience in the industrial subsection.

estimates, governed by our experience in the industrial sphere.

I would point out that my estimate of the total value of the heavy construction work waiting to be executed in this country is, if anything, on the low side. It was thought that your purpose would be better served by keeping the figures conservative.

CONCLUSIONS FORMULATED

Based on a study of the replies received, and adopting the data

Based on a study of the replies received, and adopting the data given as a cross-section of general conditions throughout the country, I feel warranted in formulating the following conclusions:

(1) There are now waiting to be carried out in this country, and within the near future, new industrial plant modifications and/or expansions, the total cost of which approximates $970,000,000.

$970,000,000.

(2) Of this total amount of work, 36 percent can be started immediately; the remaining 64 percent is stated in the replies to be dependent upon a return of normal conditions.

(3) Of this total amount of work, 62 percent can be carried out by industrialists who state they are themselves able to finance the constructions; the remaining 38 percent can be put in hand only if financial aid is available. (See note below.)

(4) The number of potential projects wherein the above amount can be expended totals 11,587. This number is subdivided as follows: 7,645 projects each costing from $1,000 to $50,000; 1,962 projects each costing from $50,000 to $100,000; 1,683 projects each costing from $500,000 to $100,000; 195 projects each costing from $500,000 to $1,000,000; 102 projects each costing over $1,000,000.

Further time would enable me to tabulate the different States wherein the construction work is contemplated; the amounts applicable to various trades; the amounts necessitated by various causes, such as obsolescence, new-process developments, or normal causes, such as obsolescence, new-process developments, or normal growth; and the amounts involved in various types of structures, such as administration buildings, factories, warehouses, or power

NOTE.—In the great majority of cases where lack of finance was stated to be the cause of delay in construction, the repliers stated that in their opinion the Government should not be called upon to provide the necessary loans and expressed the hope that funds would be made available through banking institutions, with longterm periods for repayment.

METHOD OF PROCEDURE

A specimen of the questionnaire sent out is shown below. questionnaires were sent to 19,014 manufacturers capitalized at $50,000 or more, and only to those who would be likely to give the most representative information. These questionnaires were dis134, 000, 000

As will be noted, the questionnaire required no signature of the replier. This was for the purpose of placing as little restraint as possible on him in an attempt to gain his unbiased replies and suggestions. In many cases, however, the replies were signed. To determine the percentage of construction work available in each State the stamp cancelations on the return envelopes were carefully noted.

Basis of conclusions arrived at Approximate total number of manufacturers in 147,000 United States Approximate number of manufacturers capitalized at 32, 400 19,014 215 18, 799 4, 282 836 3,446 ties _____Consequent weight factor 10.8 9. 29 1, 246 11, 587 Number of projects reported______ Number of potential projects (weighted)_____ Total value of construction work reported_____ $89, 781, 500 Total value of potential projects (weighted). $836,000,000 Estimated value of expansions or new constructions in brewing industry (information obtained from a recent survey and not included in the above

> Total value of potential construction work___ 970,000,000 SPECIMEN OF QUESTIONNAIRE

1. Do you contemplate any immediate modification or expansion of your plant?

2. Is any modification or expansion being delayed for some reason; and if so, why?

figure)

3. Would your construction program be expedited by the availability of funds resulting either from a general loosening up of credit by banking institutions or a reasonable method of governmental financing?

4. Would a return of normal conditions (1926 standard) justify any modification or expansion of your plant within the next 3 years?

5. Would such modification or expansion be necessitated by-

(a) Obsolescence of existing plant;
(b) New developments in production; or
(c) The growth of your industry in general?
6. Would such modification or expansion involve your—
(a) Office or administration building;
(b) Mere

(b) Manufacturing building; (c) Warehouse; or (d) Power plant?

7. At present-day prices, what would be the approximate expenditure on such modification or expansion excluding the cost of manufacturing equipment?

8. Kindly give me any other information which you think may ssist me in formulating the terms of a bill to provide stimulation to construction through loans to industry.

John D. Dingell

Member of Congress, Fifteenth District of Michigan. 7310 Grand River Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

SUGGESTIONS CONTAINED IN REPLIES

In answer to question 8 few repliers gave suggestions to assist you in formulating your bill. Most of the repliers took advantage of this question to express their suggestions as to what the Government should do to alleviate present conditions. The following are typical examples of suggestions most frequently made:

(1) Inspire confidence in the Government.

(2) Stop Government interference with industry.

(3) Eliminate Government competition with industry.

(4) Balance the Budget.

(5) Stabilize the dollar.
(6) Modify section 7A of the N. R. A.
(7) Prevent the adoption of a 30-hour week.
(8) Government efforts in this emergency should be kept up only until private enterprise has been enabled to carry on.

In the following pages I include abstracts of letters and suggestions made in reply to question 8. These quotations are typical of the views most frequently expressed. The files of letters received are available for more careful study at your convenience. Very truly yours,

MORITZ KAHN.

ADDENDUM

ABSTRACTS OF LETTERS AND SUGGESTIONS MADE IN REPLIES TO QUESTION 8

Although we appreciate the worthiness of your motives in attempting to secure the resuscitation of the heavy industries, nevertheless we do not believe that the solution to this lies so much in providing facilities for getting the money for construction of commercial and industrial buildings, but rather lies in giving assurance tributed in States where manufacturing is the principal, or one of to the business man that his business over the next 2 or 3 years will not be subject to unexpected hazards other than those which can be normally foreseen.

It is our experience that the ordinary good business man is not spending money for expansion of his facilities at this time because of the uncertainty which lies ahead.

Due to the attitude of the administration, increased labor costs and difficulties with strikes can easily be foreseen. The inability and unwillingness of the administration to commit itself on the question of the Budget and its unwillingness to curb and check the vast outpouring of emergency spending leaves little reason for the business man to proceed to make capital investment with any assurance.

assurance.

If a reasonable certainty of the future were to be given, we feel that this of itself would provide the necessary stimulation to expansion of facilities without setting up any additional machinery. We feel that it is not inadequacy of facilities and of money which is now lacking so much as it is the uncertainty of what the admin-

We believe there is a large volume of orders that is waiting to be placed, depending upon the buyers being able to secure capital with which to make purchases on terms that would permit them to pay it back over a period of 10 years' time. Many industrial corporations have lost money heavily during the past 3 or 4 years; their surplus has been reduced to a low level, if not entirely wiped out. New funds from the sale of capital stock are, practically speaking, not available. A great many of these industrial corporations are fundamentally sound, are a good financial risk, and have the courage to go ahead on improvements, replacing of old machinery, fixing up buildings that need repair, possibly to add to their line of product, if funds for that could be offered at, say, 4 percent over a period of 10 years' time, amortization to start in 1 year after the loan is secured, beginning the return slowly and working up to the larger amounts to be paid at the end of the loan period.

Would not favor loans to industry by any governmental agency. Favor modification of Security Act so as to enable legitimate companies to borrow through regular channels from the public for worth-while capital improvements.

While we do not profess to know the administration's problems, while we do not process of a continuation of an unbal-anced Budget, uncertainty as to the value of a dollar, and the further threat of business arrestment are the biggest obstacles in the path of a real upward surge. With assurance to business on these points, it is my belief that the improvement in business these points, it is my belief that the improvement in business would do far more toward relieving the unemployment situation than has been done to date. This job would then be done on a sound basis and, I think, would be accomplished in a surprisingly short time. The prospects of sales, particularly in the capital goods industries, considering stagnation over the past 5 years or more and the matter of obsolescence, are, to my mind, phenomenal, and all that is needed is confidence to go ahead.

In our opinion, it will be necessary for Congress to enact laws which will make it illegal to strike or picket plants until the Gov-ernment authorities have had the time to hold hearings and render a decision as to the merits of the controversy. Section 7A of the N. R. A., in our opinion, is one of the principal causes of the present unsettled condition. We make this statement with no bias on our part, because we have never had the slightest trouble and are now paying rates considerably higher than the highest

Believe loans to industries should come through regular banking channels and that the important thing to assure the proper flow of such loans is to clarify the Government attitude, which will remove fear and uncertainty from business minds. In our own case, we are developing our facilities without fear and with great confidence in the future of our own industry.

Modify labor clauses in N. R. A. Particularly legislate by order collective bargaining with a joint committee of majority and minority groups and/or individual. Thus settle forever interpretation of section 7A.

Free business from politics. Restore confidence by sound legislation. Stop considering the manufacturer and merchant as public enemy no. 1. Investigate labor organizations running amuck under the leadership of racketeers. We are all tired, disgusted, and desperate.

Our construction and reconstruction program is about completed; but if we could gain confidence that private industry is going to be allowed to enjoy a fair return on its investment, we would proceed with other projects we have in mind.

There never has been a time when our Government has injected into our labor-industry relationship the uncertainty that can be credited to section 7A. It is just as unfair to labor as it is to industry, and after 1 year of uncertainty as to the meaning, and with direct reversals within the administration itself, it now seems probable that the lack of clarity was intentional so that the administration can have labor think that it was being helped and at the same time have industry see that the meaning was sufficiently obscure to leave question.

We believe loans to industry should be made through regular banking channels and should be subject to discounting by Federal revenue banks and R. F. C. Terms should be at low rate of interest and over a 10-year period, with retirement features for sinking fund created by a percent of annual earnings.

Many technical improvements and inventions in the chemical Many technical improvements and inventions in the chemical industry are awaiting release. Research has progressed beyond the ability of industry to finance its developments. The establishment of available long-term credits, say, over a period of 10 to 15 years, would provide means for many undertakings now lying dormant. They are the type of development which requires new construction, new equipment, new sales and advertising projects. They create new markets and provide opportunity not only for common and skilled labor but for professional and executive personnel as well.

Herein lies, in my estimation, a great and new field for employ-

Stop Federal Government competition with private industry, both directly and indirectly, and end uncertainty caused by constantly changing experiments.

A sound dollar, faith in Government, and promise of no Government interference is essential.

The only suggestion we have is that when formulating your bill do nothing that will cost the Government money, as every Government cost means higher taxes and the prospect of higher taxes, in our opinion, would probably result in the situation of having any stimulation in building, as a result of Government lending, more than offset by curtailment of building on the part of those records who have money. people who have money.

Extension is a difficult question as long as the Government dictates policies.

We believe that if bank credit was made more easily obtainable by reliable firms through regular bank channels, business would quickly improve, and it will be unnecessary for the Government to make any further expenditures in business.

Frankly, we do not believe that any artificial stimulation will be required to encourage business men to go ahead in the normal process of expansion if they could be assured, as I said above, of the road that lies ahead and be left free to exercise their own judgment, initiative, and ability along these lines.

Please do not understand from the above that I am in any way Please do not understand from the above that I am in any way an old rugged individualist. I am thoroughly in accord with a reasonable amount of Government supervision along the general lines of the N. R. A. We were one of the first concerns to sign the President's original agreement and are working with whole-hearted cooperation in the codes governing our industry, but I cannot help but feel that there is still too much theory and not enough balanced judgment in most of the plans which have so far come to us from Washington.

COPY OF TYPICAL COMPLETE REPLY RECEIVED

In reply to your letter of October 25 and the questionnaire enclosed with it, I am listing the answers to your questions in the order in which they appear on the questionnaire, and following these answers you will find some remarks on this whole subject.

these answers you will find some remarks on this whole subject.

1. Do you contemplate any immediate modification or expansion of your plant? Answer. No.

2. Is any modification or expansion being delayed for some reason; and if so, why? Answer. Yes; because we are concerned about the administration's policy on tariffs, on the Budget, on the gold content of the dollar, on interpretation of 7a of the N. I. R. A., on a minimum working-hour act, on future taxes, and further experimentation and class legislation.

2. Would your construction program be expedited by the avail-

3. Would your construction program be expedited by the availability of funds resulting either from a general loosening up of credit by banking institutions or a reasonable method of governmental financing? Answer. No; because we have sufficient funds of our own and we have banking credit if we wish it.

4. Would a return of normal conditions (1926 standard) justify any modification or expansion of your plant within the next 3 years? Answer. Yes.

5. Would such modification or expansion be necessitated by-

(a) Obsolescence of existing plant? Answer. No.
(b) New developments in production? Answer. Yes.
(c) The growth of your industry in general? Answer. Yes.
6. Would such modification or expansion involve your—

(a) Office or administration building? Answer. No.
(b) Manufacturing building? Answer. Yes.
(c) Warehouse? Answer. Yes.
(d) Power plant? Answer. No.

7. At present-day prices, what would be the approximate expenditure on such modification or expansion, excluding the cost of manufacturing equipment? Answer. $75,000.

8. Kindly give me any other information which you think may assist me in formulating the terms of a bill to provide stimulation to construction through loans to industry.

I see no need for the bill you suggest. Beyond any doubt a pick-up in the heavy industries is not being held up for lack of funds. The banks are available for such funds in cases where companies themselves do not have the funds to expand without companies themselves do not have the funds to expand without borrowing.

I believe that your proposed bill will have but little effect on the heavy industries, because it is not the depression or lack of credit facilities, but lack of confidence that is keeping industry from expanding. In 1931–32 there was a depression and we spent $3,000,000 to construct a new plant. Today we would not dare to do that.

The President has been asked time and time again to tell us

The President has been asked time and time again to tell us what he intends to do. His refusal to say anything but empty words creates not only lack of confidence but very strong suspicions that he hesitates disclosing his plans because he has bad news in mind. The psychological effect of his refusal to commit himself is continuing the depression.

It is reported that the Michigan Alkali Co. in your own State has a program of construction in mind which would eliminate all unemployment in the city of Wyandotte. I am told that that company does not go ahead for the reasons given above, and because as soon as work started there would be a horde of labor agitators and Communists who would involve labor in more strikes agitators and Communists who would involve labor in more strikes and riots.

Thus far these Communists have been aided by the administration and strikers placed on relief rolls.

Do you suppose people are going to risk their money for expansion under such conditions?

Do you know that the many alien Communists whom the courts have ordered deported are not being deported, and that in the Department of Labor, the Bureau which dealt with these deportations, has been eliminated?

Business needs assurance on which it can depend that common sense, square dealing, and honesty from the administration may be expected, and that the administration will stamp out communism and disorder instead of fostering it; that it will cease competing with business.

Unless these steps are taken all the fine credit schemes in the world will do little, if any, good.

Yours very truly,

JANUARY 22, 1935.

Hon. JAMES A. MOFFETT,

Chairman Federal Housing Administration,

New Post Office, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: On Thursday last you asked me to estimate the value of industrial plant modification and/or expansion which would result from loans to industrialists under either of two conditions:

First, if the loans were limited to $25,000. Second, if the loans were limited to $50,000.

The report I sent to Congressman DINGELL under date of Novem-The report I sent to Congressman DINGELL under date of November 24, 1934, dealt only with new building construction. The figures therein mentioned do not include the value of repairs to existing buildings and equipment, nor the cost of new equipment required. For your purpose, these items should be included.

I estimate that the granting of loans limited to $25,000 will influence during the coming year expenditures on industrial plants totaling $910,000,000. The granting of loans limited to $50,000 will influence expenditures totaling $1,350,000,000.

I am of the opinion that in either case the total amount of loans required by industrialists will not exceed 38 percent of the total expenditures.

total expenditures.

Further, to my report of November 24, 1934, we should bear in mind that during the past 5 years industrialists have reduced to a minimum their expenditures on plant and equipment maintenance. Assuming they spent in that period only half the amount they would have spent under normal conditions, I estimate there is to be made up a backlash in the amount of $4,864,-000,000 to cover the cost of merely repairs to existing plants and equipment.

equipment.

To this figure should be added the cost of new buildings now required to a total value of $970,000,000 (see report Nov. 24, 1934), as well as an expenditure on new equipment in the amount of $1,525,000,000, making a total prospective expenditure of $7,359,000,000 by industrialists on plants and equipment.

This additional expenditure of $7,359,000,000 in the heavy goods industries would go far to eliminate our unemployment problem. Such a national program could well be fostered in conjunction with the operations of the F. H. A.

Of this total work to the value of $2,650,000,000 could be started

Of this total, work to the value of $2,650,000,000 could be started immediately, providing financial aid were afforded through banking institutions. The necessary financial assistance would not exceed 38 percent of the expenditure, or about $1,000,000,000. If the $1,000,000,000 loans were insured by the Government to the extent of 20 percent, the $200,000,000 obligation on the part of the Government would be of little consequence compared with the beneficial results attainable.

Very truly yours,

MORITZ KAHN.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 5. Clauses numbered (1) and (2) of subsection (b) of section 10 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as amended, are amended to read as follows: "(1) the home mortgage loan secured by it has more than 20 years to run to maturity, or (2) the home mortgage exceeds $20,000 or."

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, reference has been made to the outstanding record that has been made in the State of Ohio as to the number and the amount of the loans made, and I am very proud that the State I represent as Congressman at large has been a leader in the saving of homes. I am glad to pay tribute to Henry G. Brunner, the State manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in Ohio, who at the time he was appointed was chairman of the Democratic State executive committee of the State of Ohio. The facts are, however, that since the adoption of this institutional amendment of April 28, 1934, too many loans have been made in the State of Ohio, as well as in other States, to mortgagors who really were not in distress at all. In fact, it is safe to assert that in the last 6 months of 1934 the majority of loans made in the State of Ohio were made to help liquidate banking institutions. The banks of this country took advantage of the Home Owners' Loan Act. We in Congress intended that this great corporation would save the homes of the people of our country. We wanted to make the Home Owners' Loan Corporation the greatest humanitarian corporation in all the world. I hope the Congress will repeal the institutional amendment of April 28, 1934. I understand, in fact, that the committee has agreed to this. I hope that hereafter distress of the individual will be the sole test of eligibility under this act. I hope also that this will be made wide open, as the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] suggested. I hope that the home owners of the country will be given not 60 days, but until December 31, to make applications, and that all home owners of this country who are in distress—that to be the sole test—will be given an opportunity to apply for the relief that we in Congress intended, irrespective of whether they have made application before or within 60 days.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG. I yield.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. They may be given an opportunity to make application until December 31, but what guarantee is there that they will get the loan? This is quite another matter.

Mr. YOUNG. I agree with the gentleman that there has been maladministration on the part of officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board here in Washington. There has been too much red tape emanating from Washington. There have been too many restrictive regulations directed from Washington. I desire an authorization of an increased bond issue in the sum of at least $2,500,000,000 and that this be made wide open for all applicants who are genuinely in distress, and that it be held open until December 31.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman think that $2,500,000,000 would be sufficient?

Mr. YOUNG. Answering the gentleman from Pennsylvania, I call his attention to the fact that this Congress convenes again in January 1936, and if the sum authorized has not proven sufficient we may then legislate further to try to make this Corporation continue to be what we in Congress intended it should be. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

It has often been said that the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was, in a sense, a charitable organization. In my opinion, I do not think that a very fair statement. There is no doubt in my mind that many unscrupulous people have taken advantage of this agency of our Government. However, the greatest number of applications are just ones and there is no doubt that the applications pending in the various offices are also just ones.

All mortgage companies in and around New York are either in the hands of receivers or are operating on a restricted basis under the supervision of the New York State banking department, and, as a matter of fact, the only companies not restricted are very small ones; therefore it is most imperative that these home owners have a place whereby they can have their mortgages extended, and that place is the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

I am one of the Representatives at large in my State, but in the particular congressional district in which I live, and which is represented by my colleague, Mr. Bacon, there is a situation existing, brought about not by the home owners, but by the lending institutions, so that it is impossible to renew most of the mortgages that have become due in the last year or two. I refer particularly to the houses that were built in large quantities, block after block, and sold to wage earners, including school teachers, firemen, and policemen, and, may I say in passing, that these school teachers, firemen, and policemen received the first solicitation as buyers of these houses because of the good risk they represented.

As for the remaining owners of these houses, it is safe to assume that the wage earner was in a position to amortize the liens against his house on a safe and sound basis.

I might also suggest that, according to the articles I have read, it seems as though the $1,500,000,000 that this bill calls for, will only take care of those applications already submitted to the agency, therefore, I am in favor of having an additional amount set aside to take care of those applicants who have not had the privilege of submitting their application for a loan.

I do not believe there is a Member of Congress who will deny the fact that the people who make the very best citizens of our land are the ones owning homes and paying taxes that help to run our Government; therefore, I ask the cooperation of all the Members of the House in the passage of this bill so that the vast number of home owners who are unable to meet the requirements of mortgage loans on their homes by reason of their inability to obtain extensions or replacements thereof, or the requisite additional financing, in order to prevent foreclosure, may be protected.

Mr. BRUNNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MERRITT of New York. I yield.

Mr. BRUNNER. Is it not a fact that in the county in which the gentleman resides over 23,000 applications were filed?

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Yes.

Mr. BRUNNER. Is it not also a fact that some 10,000 applicants have received their loans?

Mr. MERRITT of New York. I think the gentleman is correct.

Mr. BRUNNER. By the simply process of deduction we have at least 13,000 who are in distress. Does the gentleman not think we should extend the time within which to file applications?

Mr. MERRITT of New York. Yes; we shall have to extend the time.

Mr. BRUNNER. And we shall have to increase the amount also?

Mr. MERRITT of New York. It is imperative to extend the time, also additional funds, so those in distress may have an opportunity to submit their applications.

Mr. SABATH. Is it not a further fact that the gentleman's district is recognized as one of the richest down State districts in the State of New York?

Mr. MERRITT of New York. The gentleman should know that I do not happen to represent any particular district, as I am elected at large.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last three words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today to ask the simple question, Why is it that the Congress should depart from that which gave the Seventy-third Congress the gold star of its existence? The Seventy-third Congress seemed particularly interested in the distressed home owners of this Nation. The Seventy-third Congress came to the rescue of the distressed home owners of the Nation, and I see no reason for changing now. If we had distress then, and we recognized it, we should see the distress that still exists and recognize it now.

When we talk about changing the date and putting it back to the 13th of last November, and admit that we cut off the applicant automatically by an arbitrary ruling of the Board, I tell you that was not the purpose or intention of this body, and we should not abide by it. That final date for the applicant should be set in the future. We should be mindful of, we should be interested in, and we should be solicitous for those back home who sent us here to be their Representatives in this national body.

Mr. Chairman, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was the greatest humanitarian stroke of the Congress. It should be continued, not for a term of 60 days, not for a term of another year, but we should go to the defense and the protection of the homes of the Nation. Why, I ask, should we appropriate money for the Army and the Navy? To defend what? Are we defending an oil well or an industry, or are we marching to the defense of our homes and the people that constitute in them the rock upon which the Government is Mr. Chairman, consider this seriously. The homes of this Nation should enjoy the greatest protection from this body. We have no reason to desert them. We should not crawl behind the abuse that has been heaped upon the Home Owners' Loan Corporation by the bankers and the loan companies of this Nation, but rather we should eliminate them and go to the kernel of the nutshell of this proposition and be the defenders, the protectors, and the champion of the homes, and the people in them, of this land. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I am a home lover. I am an old-fashioned home lover, and I stand before you the father of nine children. [Applause.] The loss of a home is a great loss. It disturbs the basic unit of society, it tears the eyes of mothers and it sterns the face of dads, and I intend henceforth to battle for the poorest shack in this country.

Mr. STACK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RABAUT. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. STACK. Who has the power to extend this time?

Mr. RABAUT. This body.

Mr. STACK. Why can we not get together and extend the time, then?

Mr. RABAUT. I think we will extend it. I would hate to see a Representative return to his people and confess to them that he had a part in an activity that discontinued this act which formed a protection around the homes of this Nation.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. RABAUT. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman please tell me how in the world an unfortunate man today who is out of a job is ever going to have his home saved?

Mr. RABAUT. I do not know.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. I know the Home Owners' Loan Corporation does not make provision for a man who owns a home if he cannot guarantee to pay up the principal and interest.

Mr. RABAUT. I am not attempting to make this a charitable activity. I know some people will fail in this regard, but I do not favor transferring the home owner to the mercy of those institutions that passed out on us at a crucial moment, at that moment when the collapse came and the life savings of many were wiped away.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section close in 10 minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, I see no reason why the time should not be extended in order to permit all meritorious cases to apply for loans. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

CATTLE-TICK AND SCREW-WORM CONTROL

Mr. GREEN. Early in this session I introduced H. R. 3020 which provides for funds to continue the cattle-tick eradication program and to initiate a program for the control of the screw worm. These two pests are a great menace to stock, particularly in the States of the South. The screw worm is a comparatively new pest in the States of the Southeast and during the warm months of 1934 did thousands of dollars worth of damage to the stock in my State. There are also serious infestations in Georgia, Louisiana, and other Southern States. It is worse, of course, in the warm months, therefore, the necessity for prompt action to begin a control program before the warm weather sets in. We have been able to obtain approval for the proposed appropriation of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Bureau of the Budget, and, I understand, the House Appropriations Committee will soon favorably present this matter to the House. Funds for tick-eradication work are almost exhausted and we find it necessary for prompt action to appropriate further funds because if the program has to be halted, the tick-free areas in Florida and other infested States, will rapidly become reinfested.

I urge my colleagues to join in the support of these two worthy appropriation items.

FROST WARNINGS

Florida is asking for a small sum to increase the Weather Bureau facilities for the State. It is very important that the Weather Bureau have sufficient funds to carry to the various parts of Florida frost-warning services. This is particularly needed in the Citrus Belt and in the wintervegetable belt of our State. If properly warned as to approaching cold or frost, the growers, many of them, cover the tender vegetables, thus protecting them from the cold. The fruit growers, many of them, have provided their groves with smudges and other warming devices and with this service will be able to protect their groves against any reasonably cold weather. This frost-warning service is now accorded to the growers of California and Texas and it is only just and proper that Florida have the same facilities. This is a most worthy request of our Florida fruit and vegetable growers. The cost is negligible.

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Chairman, my object in rising at this time is not with the thought that I am going to change anyone's vote or influence anyone at this stage, but to correct the Record and keep things straight so far as the good State of Oregon is concerned.

Yesterday, when the gentleman from New York, Mr. HAMILTON FISH, mentioned a letter written in Oregon in the fall of 1934, I thought he had reference to another incident that happened many weeks earlier. I now find that he had reference to a letter written in Portland on October 29, 1934, which letter may be found in the Congressional Record of Thursday, March 7, 1935, at page 3151. This letter is signed by four citizens of Portland, Oreg., who had obtained loans from H. O. L. C .- persons who were in no way connected with any particular organization-and the letter was entirely voluntary. This letter gives great credit to former Congressman General Martin for the part he played in securing the passage of the original H. O. L. C. Act, and these four beneficiaries simply asked the citizens of Oregon to vote for General Martin for Governor. The H. O. L. C. organization was not responsible for the letter and was in no way connected with it. When I think of the fierce, blood-curdling speeches that the gallant Congressman from New York has so often made in this House in regard to Communists, I just wonder if he is not accustomed to "seeing things." This letter was not political nor in any way partisan. It had nothing to do with the Democratic organization or the organization of the H. O. L. C., and nothing that carries the least shadow of a questionable act at all on the part of any person in that organization. If his campaign against the Communists is similar to this, he is certainly concerned about trifles which should have no attention in these strenuous days. It was Shakespeare who coined the phrase " Much Ado About Nothing", and I am grateful to him for it as I apply it to the present activities of our friend from New York.

a matter of much concern to those interested. My former colleague. General Martin, and myself accepted the first general manager for Oregon, and the entire set-up in the main office was named by that manager, who, we afterward learned, was the choice of mortgage companies interested in this legislation. Many now believe that he was entirely too close a friend of the building and loan associations to be intrusted with so important a position. It is true that perfectly good applications for loans, filed early, were sidetracked for applications that were being pushed by the banks and building-and-loan associations. I do not know the percentage, but I presume that 90 percent of the loans made in Oregon helped some mortgage company or building-andloan association. They unloaded bad loans which they carried on their books. I am firmly convinced that this entire scheme was born in the brain of the big boys, and the poor, distressed home owner was the screen behind which the holders of millions of dollars of bad loans made by banks, building-and-loan associations, and insurance companies could hide.

The favored ones saw to it that proper appraisers were appointed, and other men occupying key positions were also satisfactory to these interests. When the applications came in they were able to see that the bad loans of the buildingand-loan associations and other financial concerns had rightof-way. Their uncollectible loans, amounting to millions, were assumed by the Government and the mortgagees received, in exchange for their rotten paper, tax-exempt Government bonds, fully guaranteed both as to principal and interest. I wish I could believe, as many of you do, that the Department in Washington was entirely blameless. If they did not know, they could have known and they should have known, as it was their business to know. And, if they did not know, they simply lay down on their job, and Mr. Fahey, who has been praised to the clouds in this House, is at least guilty of negligence. He sent his men constantly from Washington, and he and they must have known what was going on, not only in Portland, Oreg., but all over the Nation. His admission before the Rules Committee that 97 percent of all the money loaned by the H. O. L. C. found its way into the coffers of banks, insurance companies, and buildingand-loan associations condemns him and proves, to my mind, conclusively, that instead of being an efficient official, laboring in the interests of the distressed home owner, he has simply officiated as the head of the group that plundered the Treasury for millions of Government bonds. I believe future years will find millions in uncollectible loans on the books of the H. O. L. C.

They claim to have discharged 2,116 appraisers. I wonder if it was for incompetence or because those appraisers did not play the game, and were often interested in giving honest valuations instead of looking after the bad loans of the big boys. This talk about politics is camouflage-just simply a screen to hide behind.

Washington ignored our pleas for better organization, for more efficient management, that delays of a year or more be stopped, and that rank favoritism be abolished.

Then in early September 1934, when General Martin was in the heat of his campaign for Governor, suddenly a man from Washington arrived in Portland, Oreg., and removed the State manager and many others, some of whom were highly efficient and were dismissed without a day's notice, much to the consternation of myself and General Martin. Talk about being Democratic politics-my dear colleagues, politics had nothing to do with it, it was simply big business, with its hand in the National Treasury. Those men were kept who could be depended upon to play the game. After this wholesale slaughter in early September, we enjoyed the society of a manager from Tennessee. Yes, a carpetbagger. but a very pleasant gentleman. Then, without consulting with anyone holding a political position, a manager was appointed, who was recommended, I have been told, by the Realty Board of Portland, Oreg.

It is certainly pleasing to know that in some States these H. O. L. C. set-ups have been models of perfection, but how

The management of the H. O. L. C. in Oregon has been | my colleagues can come into the Well of this House and highly praise this arm of the Government is beyond my comprehension

> Of course, this bill will pass without a record vote. We must accept it because there really are distressed home owners who may get a crumb. It will make a total of four and a half billions of H. O. L. C. tax-exempt bonds, and in lieu of this great obligation the Government will become the owner of four and a half billions of mortgages scattered from ocean to ocean. Now, honestly, what will be the loss? The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Greenwood] estimated a loss of 5 percent. He is certainly an optimist, and would have no difficulty in seeing the doughnut, whether the hole is there

> When we used to borrow money from the banks in the good old days of the past, and submitted to the bank a property statement, and admitted in that statement that we had guaranteed somebody's loan, the banker always insisted that we should count that guaranty as a debt, and the banker was usually right. If one guarantees a note for another he usually has that note to pay.

> The Government is certainly going to have thousands of homes on its hands. As a Government, we are in the realestate business right. Add to this four and a half billions, two billions for farm mortgages. Six and a half billions of tax-exempt securities will bring, I estimate, about three billions in losses to the Government. When we in the future talk about the debts of this Nation, we shall, I fear, be obliged to add at least three billions on account of bonds issued for H. O. L. C. and the Farm Credit Administration.

> I have heard it stated here in the Well that the R. F. C. was established to unload private debts of the railroads and the banks on the public through the Government. Since I have been here I have often wondered if this might not prove true.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Chairman, the question has been asked, How can the home of the unemployed workman be saved? I am attempting to answer that question. Such a man in distress can be saved the same as this Congress saved the farmers of this Nation by the enactment into law of the Frazier-Lemke farm bankruptcy bill, passed on June 15, on the last day of the Seventy-third Congress, by this House and the Senate of the United States.

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRUAX. Yes; I yield. Mr. KVALE. Has the gentleman made any effort to prepare such an amendment?

Mr. TRUAX. I have; but I am not sure that it is germane, I will say to the gentleman.

What is wrong with the home owners of this country today? It is the same old trouble of the money-lending Shylocks that not only take away a man's home, but obtain a deficiency judgment against him, and mortgage his future earnings and his future life by such deficiency judgments.

In the farm bankruptcy bill we eliminated deficiency judgments once and for all time. We provided for a scaledown on such a debt to its value today.

I want to point out to you that 10 out of 11 Federal courts of this country have held this bill to be constitutional, and a hearing before the United States Supreme Court will be had the fore part of next month, and my prediction is that this bill will be held constitutional by the United States Supreme Court. Then why should we wait: why should we hesitate and allow these tens of thousands and these hundreds of thousands to have their homes taken away from them? If this economic distress has slain its tens of thousands, the money-lending pirates and buccaneers of this country have slain their hundreds of thousands by their foreclosures and their deficiency judgments. Why should this Congress hesitate? You can protect the unemployed and helpless and small-home owner by the same mechanics and by the same methods.

The hope is expressed by some on this floor that the private banking institutions and the private money-lending institutions will resume their money-lending operations and that they will again take over the refinancing of homes. I have no doubt in my mind whatsoever that they will never resume these operations. They will never take them over, and the only way that these home owners can save their homes is by Government refinancing and by a 5-year moratorium, the same as we have given the farmers of this country.

I care not whether you increase your funds one and onehalf billion dollars or three billion dollars, you have got to stop, once and for all, the damnable money lenders and Shylocks of this country. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The Clerk read as follows:

6. The Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as amended, amended by inserting a new section following section 10, to read as follows:

"SEC. 10A. Each Federal home-loan bank is authorized to make advances to nonmember mortgagees approved under title II of the National Housing Act. Such mortgagees must be chartered institutions having succession and subject to the inspection and supervision of some governmental agency, and whose principal activity in the mortgage field must consist of lending their own funds. Such advances shall not be subject to the other provisions and restrictions of this act, but shall be made upon the convisions. funds. Such advances shall not be subject to the other provisions and restrictions of this act, but shall be made upon the security of insured mortgages, insured under title II of the National Housing Act. Advances made under the terms of this section shall be at such rates of interest and upon such terms and conditions as shall be determined by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, but no advance may be for an amount in excess of 90 percent of the unpaid principal of the mortgage loan given as security."

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Hollister: On page 5, line 12, strike out "A" and insert "b."

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, it is a typographical error that a capital A is in the bill at this point. There is already a section 10a, and therefore this should be section 10b.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 7. Section 13 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, as amended, is amended by inserting after the word "bank" in the second line thereof the words "and consolidated Federal home-loan bank bonds or debentures."

Mr. BINDERUP. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BINDERUP: On page 6, after line 3, insert a new section to read as follows:

"Sec. 7. Section 13 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, amended, is further amended as follows: 'Provided, however, That no corporation, organization, or institution which charges a rate of interest of more than 5 percent on its loans, or which pays any of its officers or employees a salary of more than $3,000 per annum, shall be entitled to participate in any of the privileges or benefits of this art."

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is not germane to the section.

Mr. BINDERUP. May I ask the gentleman, as a matter of information, why this is not germane to the section.

The CHAIRMAN. The burden is upon the gentleman to show that the amendment is germane. The Chair will hear the gentleman if he cares to offer any argument upon its germaneness.

Mr. BINDERUP. Mr. Chairman, the amendment is germane because it pertains to the entire substance of the bill. It is very difficult to separate the three sections of the Home Loan Act pertaining, first, to the home-loan bank and the Home Loan Corporation and then to the housing provision. This is purely a limitation, that is all.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Alabama wish to be heard on his point of order?

Mr. STEAGALL. No, Mr. Chairman. As we view the matter, the amendment has no relation to the section.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

The Chair believes the amendment of the gentleman is not germane to section 7, but quite foreign to it, and, therefore, sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 8. Section 19 of the Federal Home Loan Bank amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: I ter security than if it is merely used as a home. I say to

"The receipts of the Board, except the receipts arising from assessments upon the Federal home-loan banks, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States, and may be from time to time withdrawn therefrom for the performance of the duties of the Board, and such funds other than the receipts from assessments upon the Federal home-loan banks may be expended without regard to the provisions of any other law and shall not be construed to be Government funds or appropriated moneys." to be Government funds or appropriated moneys.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ELLENBOGEN: Page 6, line 19, at the

"SEC. 8A. That section to read as follows:

"Sec. 8A. That section 2 (c) of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 be amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 2 (c). The term "home mortgage" means a first mortgage on real estate in fee simple or on a leasehold under a renewable lease for not less than 99 years, upon which there is located a dwelling for not more than 4 families and containing not more than one shop or storeroom, used by the owner as a home or held by him as his homestead, and having a value not exceeding $20,000; and the term "first mortgage" includes such classes of first liens as are commonly given to secure advances on real estate under the laws of the State in which the real estate is located, together with the cradit instruments if any secured thereby." the credit instruments, if any, secured thereby.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is an amendment to the Home Loan Act passed in 1933. It is an amendment to section 2 (c), which contains the definition of an eligible home. The proposed amendment only adds these few words, "and containing not more than one shop or store."

At the present time a home is eligible that contains not more than four apartments. At the time the act was passed we omitted to expressly provide for a home with a small shop or a small storeroom in the property. At the present time, in most cases, their applications have been held ineligible under the provisions of the act.

I want to repeat that the only change the amendment proposes to make is to make eligible under the terms of the act these homes containing not more than one shop or a storeroom.

I know thousands of home owners who have had their loans declined, because their property contained a small shop or a small storeroom. In many of these cases the applicant, the home owner, was carrying on in that shop a small business-like a cobbler's shop or a small grocery store, or some other commercial activity—and had been living in it as long as 20 years. In spite of that his loan was declined. I hope this Committee will accept this amendment and that my colleagues will support it.

I want to call attention to the fact that a similar amendment was passed by the House last year but it was thrown cut in conference.

Mr. CARPENTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I yield.

Mr. CARPENTER. I have had a number of instances in my district where the parties appealed to me for relief along the line suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and I know of no reason why these persons should not have relief that is provided in the gentleman's amendment. I hope the amendment prevails.

Mr. REILLY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I yield.

Mr. REILLY. Is it not a fact that where the shop is merely incidental to the home that relief is given?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. The Board in theory has made such a ruling, but the offices throughout the country have thrown such loans out, and the Board in Washington has sustained their rulings. I want an explicit declaration in the law so that there shall not be any question about it.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Yes.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I am in agreement with the amendment for the reason that I believe we should encourage that person who is trying to bring some income into his home whereby he may pay the loan back to the Government.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I thank the gentleman for his suggestion, because a home containing a shop or a store is betthe distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin that if the Board wants this done why not put it in the law; why object to the amendment? I hope the Committee will agree to the

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Yes.

Mr. MAVERICK. I want to give an example. In my home town, San Antonio, there is a man who sold his home because he was out of a job, and he opened up a small business on Broadway and lived on the place. It is his home. They found out that the combined value of his ice-cream machines, his little restaurant, was slightly more than the portion slept in, or his home, and it was decided he could not make a loan because it was "predominantly commercial." Under the laws of Texas, this is his only homestead. It is the only thing that he has in the world. Some worthless people who have a home and a separate business or job have made loans and do not pay up, but this fellow cannot do it. This is a penalty on thrift. I think if we are going to give relief to the people, especially the small merchant, we have to have that included. We talk about "big business", but we keep a small merchant from existing because of a technicality. Let us give these people relief.

Mr. DORSEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I shall gladly yield to my distinguished colleague from Pennsylvania.

Mr. DORSEY. Is it not true that there has not been any uniform regulation of these combined-use buildings, and the purpose of the gentleman's amendment is to clear up that situation?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. That is the situation. I might say to my colleague from Wisconsin [Mr. REILLY] that in the beginning those homes were held to be eligible by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation but that later they were excluded. The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ELLENBOGEN] is in error when he states that the presence of a shop or a store necessarily invalidates a loan. The test which is made by the Corporation is whether or not the property concerned is primarily a residence or primarily a business. The Corporation has felt, and it would seem to me properly so, that inasmuch as this is a home owners' loan corporation, a corporation set up for the purpose of assisting home owners, they must in the nature of things limit the relief given to what is essentially a home rather than what is essentially a business. Regulations have been laid down along these lines. Of course, there are many borderline cases, cases where it is difficult to say immediately whether the property in question is more of a business than it is a home or more of a home than it is a business. The Board has informed the committee that there is a special committee of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation sitting in Washington to which these border-line cases are referred. This committee takes these border-line cases and finally decides them, leaning where it possibly can toward giving the relief. If there is any doubt in the mind of the committee, it holds that the building concerned is not essentially a business.

Mr. MAVERICK. - Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes. Mr. MAVERICK. I want to give this example, which is the case before the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Will the gentleman please ask me a question? I have only a few minutes.

Mr. MAVERICK. We will get his time extended. The point is this: Probably, as a matter of fact, the business property is proportionately worth slightly more than the part in which the man sleeps.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I do not think the test is made in

Mr. MAVERICK. Oh, yes; it was in this case, and I can give the gentleman the name of the case. It is the Blue Bonnet Confectionery, or something like that. It is the only home this man has. Under the constitution of the State of Texas it is his homestead, and yet he cannot make a loan on it and he is paying 8-percent interest.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Henry L. Doherty, of whom the gentleman has probably heard, lives in a penthouse on top of the Cities Service Building in New York City. That is his only home. Would the gentleman think it was eligible under the Home Owners' Loan Corporation?

Mr. MAVERICK. No: but this is the only home the man has, and it is a small business; and that is construed under the law of Texas as a homestead. It is not a penthouse. Besides, no loan can be made on a value over $20,000.

Mr. HOLLISTER. After all, we must draw the line somewhere. To try to delineate in any particular legislation the exact place where the line must be drawn as between a residence and a business seems to me beyond the possibility of what this House can do. It seems to me this must be left to the general rules of the Corporation, believing that the Corporation, which is trying to do the best job it can, will so lay down its regulations as to take under its wing all proper

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsyl-

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I had a case where a home owner had a small shop in his storeroom, and he was actually served with foreclosure papers and they wired to Washington and Washington examined the case and rejected it.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I cannot yield further. The only answer I can make to the gentleman is that when you are dealing with 1,000,000 or 2,000,000 applications, there will always be a few cases of unfairness, a few hard cases which you and I or anyone would say should have been covered. The old adage that hard cases make bad law is evident in some of the things we are trying to do here. We must try to lay down certain general limitations and leave it to the regulations of the Corporation to fill up the blanks.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I believe the real reason why we should place this provision definitely in the law is because of the interpretations which have been placed on rulings up to date. I believe, further than that, that we place a penalty upon the

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, last year by nearly a unanimous vote a similar amendment was adopted. Unfortunately the conferees failed to agree upon it. I was in hopes that the committee, in view of the vote last year, would embody the provision in this bill. I desire to stand by the committee on this bill, which I am ready to do with a few minor exceptions, and this is one of them.

I consider this an important amendment, an amendment that will eliminate discrimination. I am not ready or willing to rely on the interpretation of some of the appraisers who were in the field or here in the Washington office. We had Mr. Fahey before our committee and examined him on this very proposition. He was under the impression that in a majority of the cases favorable action is had on appeal here to Washington. I think it is manifestly unfair to subject the little fellow, who cannot afford to engage an attorney or assistants, to that additional expense. The purpose of this amendment is to give people who, perchance, may have a small store or a shoe shop or a bakery shop or any other small place of business on a first floor, with 2 flats or 4 flats above, the same privilege that is accorded to the home owner who may not have any such shop or store in his building.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. MAY. Is it not a fact that the possibility of a man's being permitted to have some kind of a commercial enterprise in his home will enable him to earn enough money to discharge the tax liens and make repairs, and things of that a truck, or works on docks, or works on the railroads; a man kind, which he might not otherwise have?

Mr. SABATH. That is correct. The gentleman is always right. These loans will be safer than many of those that have been made on mortgages owned by insurance companies or by banks.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. What we are trying to do is to protect the man who lives in the back of his shop and runs the front of it for an-income, or who lives over the store? He has an income that almost insures the loan. Is that not correct?

Mr. SABATH. That is correct. I recollect the gentleman cooperated with me last year in having that amendment adopted, and I was thankful to him then and I am thankful to him now that he joins with me for such a noble and just cause for relief.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I am in agreement with the line of argument which has been presented by the distinguished gentleman from Illinois. I believe the reason we should pass this bill at this time is because as it now stands we place a penalty upon thrift.

Mr. SABATH. Yes. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan. Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Is this substantially the same as the amendment which the gentleman offered last year?

Mr. SABATH. Yes; substantially the same amendment.
Mr. BROWN of Michigan. I note that it does not include the word "store." I think it should be amended to include the word "store."

Mr. SABATH. I think it does include the word "store." At least I suggested to the gentleman to put the word "store" in there.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Sabath] has expired.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be amended in line 10, after the word "shop", to include the word "store" and a comma, so that it will read "shop, store, or storeroom."

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, I accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Brown]?

There was no objection.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last three words.

Mr. Chairman, the distinguished member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, Mr. Hollister, who addressed the House a few moments ago, stated he thought this matter should be one of regulation vested in the Board. I should like to take sharp issue with that statement. Here is a golden opportunity for the Members of this House to right a wrong. When we started to investigate the activities of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or tried to do so, at least, my mail was deluged with complaints from those who claimed they were discriminated against because they had a small store, a butcher shop, or a barber shop, or something like that. In the district of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Crossy] there is a typical case which I should like to cite. Down the road on the Lincoln Highway a young man has a stand where he caters to tourists; he sells soft drinks and sandwiches.

He operates that stand 7 months of the year, but lives there all the year around. He made an application for a home owner's loan. It is his only home. The application was denied. One mile down the road another man operates a beer parlor all the year around, lives there, and he secured a loan.

I have had evidence presented to me of cases where loans were made on greenhouses and hotels. Why the discrimination against the man who is barely making a living by conducting a small business? You allow a man to get a loan on his home if he is in distress—a man who operates a truck, or works on docks, or works on the railroads; a man who makes more money sometimes than the man struggling along trying to run a butcher shop or a barber shop. I do not believe the decision should be left with the Board, because the Board will not carry out equitable means of giving relief to distressed owners in this class of cases.

I have a letter in my files from a member of the legal staff of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in Washington in which he wrote to a constituent in Ohio that the interpretation of homestead—that is, whether a business and dwelling combined would fall within that classification—is left in the final analysis to each State manager. This means you have 48 different kinds of interpretations as to what constitutes a homestead; and unless you adopt the Ellenbogen amendment or some amendment like it you are going to have a continuation of 48 State managers deciding from political viewpoints primarily what constitutes a homestead.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SWEENEY. I yield.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. At the present time the employees in the district offices are afraid to accept stores and homes combined because they are afraid of being separated from their jobs if they displease the home office.

Mr. SWEENEY. There is no question at all about that. Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SWEENEY. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. The gentleman understands that this amendment is still subject to the $20,000 limitation?

Mr. SWEENEY. I understand that.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. No loan may be made in excess of that amount?

Mr. SWEENEY. That will not affect the class of people I am speaking about, for most of these applications will be well below $20,000 appraisal; most of them will come from small merchants, whose places of business are attached to the dwellings.

- Mr. GRAY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SWEENEY. I vield.

Mr. GRAY of Pennsylvania. If the gentleman will permit, I call his attention to another instance in my district, the case of a man and his wife who owned a home which had a little store in it but which was not being used by them. They made application for a loan. In the meantime, in order to try to preserve their home, they had to earn their living and moved to New Jersey from Pennsylvania. They got word from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in the district that inasmuch as they had moved to New Jersey no action could be taken on the loan, but that if they would return to their home town in the district the loan would be granted. These people moved back to their home and then were refused a loan because their building had a little storeroom in it.

Mr. SWEENEY. There are hundreds of cases similar to the one pointed out to the House by the gentleman from Pennsylvania. Unless this Congress has the intestinal fortitude I think it has to write into the law positive direction about some of these things, the same difficulties will be experienced all over again.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ROGERS of New Hampshire. Mr. Chairman, I rise in favor of the amendment, and for this reason: It seems to me that while we discuss the great problems of capital, of labor, of producer, and consumer we are too likely to forget that the fundamental principle on which we must ultimately expect to bring back national recovery in this country rests in the hope, the spirit, and the patriotism which are instilled into the hearts, the minds, and the soul of the American citizens in the American homes. [Applause.]

When we talk about homes we must, in many cases, include therein shops, stores, and offices, which are just as much a part, or may be just as much a part, of the American home as the bedroom, the kitchen, or the dining room itself. For myself, I had the honor of being born on a farm in New Hampshire, a farm upon which horses, cows, and pigs were raised. Dwelling house, shed, and barn on that farm were connected, were part of the same structure; yet my mother and father and my grandparents lived in the home on that farm, on which horses and oxen were used to carry on the work. The same principle applies to a home which has in it a shop, a store, or an office. In order that there may be no discrimination, I think we should unanimously adopt the amendment which has now been offered to correct the abuses which have resulted under the previous construction of this act. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New Hampshire be granted 1 additional minute in order that I may ask him a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. SISSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of New Hampshire. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SISSON. May I ask the gentleman if he has considered the fact that the amendment which he is supporting will have no efficacy unless the bill as now reported is so amended as to provide additional time for the filing of application?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Will the gentleman yield to me to answer the question?

Mr. ROGERS of New Hampshire. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. The gentleman from New York is mistaken because there are thousands and thousands of applications in the files which have been rejected, and if this amendment is agreed to they could be brought up and reconsidered.

Mr. ROGERS of New Hampshire. I think that statement clearly shows the intent of Congress in the matter.

Mr. SADOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute amendment offered by Mr. Sadowski for the amendment offered by Mr. Ellenbogen: Subsection (c) of section 2 of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 is amended by striking out the period at the end of the pargraph and inserting in lieu thereof a colon and the following: "Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to define a homestead in such a way as to eliminate a home which contains a store or stores or any place of business but which in all other respects is the homestead of the mortgagor."

Mr. SADOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I offer this substitute amendment because it will take care of more cases than is covered by the other amendment. I have in my district a lot of homesteads built on 30-foot lots which contain 2 stores and 5 or 6 living rooms. That is all the man owns. It is in every sense of the word a homestead. It is his home.

Under the amendment as offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, that sort of a homestead would be eliminated. He should be given every consideration because that is his homestead and it should come in under this act.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Under the amendment they could rent the store?

Mr. SADOWSKI. They could rent the store, but it would still be his homestead.

Right now the interpretation is different in every State. The State manager in one State may say that a homestead containing one store is a homestead. In another State he will rule that out. This should be equalized so that it is the same all over the country. In the past certain State managers throughout the country have been able to eliminate homesteads on the ground that the home was incidental to business. That is not the case. The business is incidental to the home. When a man has a little grocery store or barber shop, even if he is renting out a small part of the store for another business, it is still his home, and the business is incidental to the homestead. He should receive aid and assistance under the Home Owners' Loan Act.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment which I offer is very sensible. It still leaves a certain amount of discretionary power in the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. At present section 2 (c) reads as follows:

(c) The term "home mortgage" means a first mortgage on real estate in fee simple or on a leasehold under a renewable lease for not less than 99 years upon which there is located a dwelling for not more than four families, used by the owner as a home or held by him as his homestead and having a value not exceeding $20,000; and the term "first mortgage" includes such classes of first liens as are commonly given to secure advances on real estate under the laws of the State in which the real estate is located, together with the credit instruments, if any, secured thereby.

The amendment reads:

Provided, That nothing therein contained shall be construed to define a homestead in such a way as to eliminate a home which contains a store or stores or any place of business but which in all other respects is the homestead of the mortgagor.

This amendment has a lot of sense and merit to it, and I think should be adopted.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SADOWSKI. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan. Mr. DONDERO. Does not the gentleman mean to include in his amendment the word "vendee" under a land contract as well as the mortgagor of a business property? Unless the gentleman does that he will exclude a large number of people in Michigan and other States.

Mr. SADOWSKI. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation has given that interpretation in Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. That that class would be considered the same as other mortgagors?

Mr. SADOWSKI. Yes.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, this presents a complete departure from the purposes underlying the Home Owners' Loan Corporation legislation. There is a twilight zone between property that is essentially residential and property in which the commercial or business use to which it is devoted predominates. The Board of the Corporation assured the committee considering this legislation that the test applying in cases of applications of this type was to ascertain the predominating purpose and use to which the property was devoted. If it was found that the principal use of the property was as a domicile, the loan would be eligible so far as the character of the property offered in the mortgage is concerned. On the contrary, if the commercial or business use to which it is devoted constituted the chief characteristics of the use made of the property it would be excluded for that reason.

Mr. Chairman, under this amendment any store, shop, or storeroom, or any business piece of property coming within the definition, regardless of its value, would be eligible for a loan and would be automatically thrown into the eligible class. It would be the duty of the Board to consider it the same as they would the application of any individual home owner in the land endeavoring to secure a mortgage upon a piece of property used exclusively as a domicile. In that situation a man owning one of the thousands of commercial houses and business properties that are unfortunately out of use at this time could by installing any pretense of home equipment and furniture and, as the language of the amendment says, "make it his homestead", would be eligible for a loan under this act.

Gentlemen say I am in error when I state that this would apply to property regardless of value; but I am entirely correct in my statement because, while the original Home Owners' Loan Corporation Act excluded applications for loans on homes in excess of a valuation of $20,000, amendments to the act have taken off the limitation as to value.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. The gentleman is mistaken about that.

Mr. STEAGALL. So that any storehouse in which the owner installed equipment or furniture and treated it as a amendment.

Mr. SABATH. No: the limitation would apply.

Mr. STEAGALL. This amendment would invite abuses. The Board advises our committee that in its judgment the Board would be flooded with applications that are not essentially and fundamentally applications for the relief of bona fide home owners and home occupants.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 more minutes, so that I may yield for questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan. Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Do I understand from the gentlemen's argument that if the language were cleared up so that the $20,000 limitation would apply the gentleman would have no objection?

Mr. STEAGALL. Oh, no; the principle would be the same. I called attention to that, however, to point out the defects in this amendment which evidently have been overlooked, and which shows the difficulty of undertaking to legislate on the floor in matters so technical, where we must act in haste and without full opportunity for discussion and consideration.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky. Mr. MAY. Waiving the question of dual use of the property as a home and as a business enterprise combined, the gentleman will agree with me that under the law of every State in the United States taxes are a first lien against the property, and the gentleman will also agree with me that when you apply to this Corporation for a loan you are always required to pay your taxes, procure fire insurance, and cyclone insurance.

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman is entirely in error.

Mr. MAY. Oh, no; I have had the experience.

Mr. STEAGALL. I am speaking of the law. I do not know about the experience of the gentleman. The law provides for taking care of liens and taxes, as well as the debt owed by a distressed mortgagee.

Mr. MAY. And in addition to that, this has to be done every year for 15 years, if your loan runs that long. Why would it not be good business policy to grant a loan on a place that is a combination enterprise, such as a home upstairs and a business place downstairs?

Mr. STEAGALL. Oh, it may be a good business proposition to relieve any distressed mortgagor or to remove all mortgages off of all the real estate in the United States, but what we are attempting to do by this particular legislation is to use funds out of the Federal Treasury for the purpose of preventing the foreclosure of homes, so that our citizens and their families may not be turned into the highways without shelter. We ought not to depart from that principle in this legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute in order to call the attention of the distinguished gentleman from Alabama to a statement which he has made.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, surely the gentleman from Alabama, the distinguished chairman of the committee, does not want to inform the House that there is any law that removed the limitation of $20,000 on a home. As the Home Owners' Loan Act now stands, there are two limitations: First. A loan cannot exceed $14,000, and, second, the appraised value of the home cannot exceed $20,000. These limitations are not affected by my proposed amend-home would be automatically eligible for loans under this | ments, and I believe the gentleman from Alabama should admit this.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, may we have the original amendment and then the proposed substitute amendment again read?

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk again read the Ellenbogen amendment and the Sadowski substitute amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute amendment.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. The gentleman from Alabama moved to close all debate. Was it on the amendment or on the section?

The CHAIRMAN. It was on the amendment and all amendments thereto.

Mr. BUCHANAN. And not on the section.

The CHAIRMAN. Not on the section. The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Dunn of Pennsylvania) there were-ayes 26, noes 78.

So the substitute amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Ellenbogen].

The question was taken; and on a division there wereayes 95, noes 48.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 6, strike out lines 11 to 19, inclusive, and insert the

"On and after July 1, 1935, the receipts of the Board shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States, and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated to defray the expenses of the Board as authorized by law such amount as may be necessary.'

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Committee, all amendments heretofore offered have been enlarging amendments. This is a restrictive amendment on the power of the Board to get money and not account for it.

If you gentlemen of the Congress desire to hold control of this superboard, you must insist on making appropriations for administration of it at every session of Congress. When you realize that the Board, under this language, can assess any amount of money on these subsidiary corporations and organizations they see fit, in their judgment, to levy, it seems to me that the Congress should be informed about it.

Let me explain the reason I am doing this is because in following out my duty as Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations I should bring to the attention of the House any bad monetary administration set up by any legislative bill, and it matters not what it may be.

The Federal Bank Board is a superboard. Its functions are to control and supervise the Federal home-loan banks, and there are 12 of them, in 12 districts; to control and supervise the Home Owners' Loan Corporation; to control and supervise the Federal Savings and Loan System; and to control and supervise the Federal Savings and Loan and Insurance Corporation. The Federal Government has contributed so far in cash approximately $125,000,000 to purchase stock in the home-loan banks and in addition the privilege to issue bonds of that system, which can be purchased both by the H. O. L. C. and by the Treasury. Federal Government has contributed $200,000,000 in cash to subscribe to stock of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. It has contributed $50,000,000 in cash to the Federal Savings and Loan System for investment in stocks of the various Federal savings and loan associations and has permitted $100,000,000 in bonds of the H.O.L.C.-which the Government guarantees both as to principle and interest-to be marketed to provide funds for the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation to operate. None of that money has | been paid back. Do you not think that the Congress owes it to the people to keep supervision of all of the administrative expenses of this superboard? How can it do it? What is the law? The law authorizes this Home Loan Bank Board to levy a proportionate share of its administrative expenses in the form of assessments upon each one of these separate and distinct organizations. The permanent appropriation bill that we passed last year stopped that, so far as the Federal home-loan banks are concerned, and the bill we passed a few days ago carried $264,000 for administrative expenses of the Home Loan Bank Board. That action in placing those assessments under annual control was correct, and the same principle ought to apply to assessments levied on these separate corporations and organizations, so that every year this superboard will have to come before the Committee on Appropriations and give an account of its stewardship of its administrative expenses. That supervision should be continued at least until the Government has been paid back its money and these institutions become private institutions or acquit all their financial obligations to the Government.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I am impressed with the argument the gentleman has made. I want to know whether he would be willing to let this same law apply to the Federal Reserve System?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I most certainly would, but there is a distinction between the Federal Reserve System and this. If we do not stop forming corporations and giving them carte blanche to spend money, we will soon have a Government run, and its powers controlled, by soulless corporations throughout this country. This Congress should maintain supervisory authority to investigate the need for every dollar of public money that goes through the hands of any Government corporation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman has not answered my question.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Here is the distinction between this Board and the Federal Reserve System. The Federal Reserve System or the Federal Reserve banks do not owe the Government anything. In fact, the Government owes them. Every cent of money they have invested is their own and any assessment made on a Federal Reserve bank or a member bank by the Federal Reserve Board comes out of the bank's private money. The Government has no direct interest because they owe the Government nothing. But I would even vote for a similar amendment on that. No organization, unless they have something to hide, should object to coming to Congress and presenting their case.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes.

Mr. SWEENEY. Has not the Government an investment of $114,000,000 in the Federal Reserve?

Mr. BUCHANAN. No; not in the member banks.

Mr. SWEENEY. In stock investment?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Oh, the gentleman means this last thing?

Mr. SWEENEY. No; when we first established the System.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Oh, that has been paid off. They may owe the Government something on capital stock since the depression, and if they do, then let us put a similar amendment on the statute books in respect to them.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes.

Mr. MAY. Do I understand the gentleman from Texas to say that the four loaning or insuring agencies under the supervision of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars and perhaps millions of dollars without any accounting made of it to anybody, even to the General Accounting Office or otherwise?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I say that under this bill, with the exception of assessments levied on the Federal home-loan banks for administrative expenses, they can assess what they please and spend what they please and it is declared by this bill not to be public money or appropriated money. Just listen to this. Let me read to you the section that I have moved to strike out. It is section 8, on page 6:

The receipts of the Board, except the receipts arising from The receipts of the Board, except the receipts arising from assessments upon the Federal home-loan banks shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States, and may be from time to time withdrawn therefrom for the performance of the duties of the Board, and such funds other than the receipts from assessments upon the Federal home-loan banks may be expended without regard to the provisions of any other law and shall not be construed to be Government funds or appropriated moneys.

Pass that and you will have lost control of the administrative expenses of that superboard, except those which come from just one group of the four organizations.

Mr. FIESINGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes.

Mr. FIESINGER. In addition to the $200,000,000 the Government guarantees these bonds up to $4,500,000,000?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Why, certainly, guarantee the bonds

Mr. FIESINGER. And if there are any losses on that, the Government stands that?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Certainly. I hope the chairman of the committee will accept this amendment.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I yield.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Is it not true that under this section which the gentleman is seeking to strike out they handle millions of dollars of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, with a spread of 2 percent on $4,500,000,000 worth of bonds, and do not account to anybody for that?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I would not go that far.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I mean they are not subject to accounting by the General Accounting Office?

Mr. BUCHANAN. The President issued an Executive order last year putting all these institutions under audit by the General Accounting Office. Another provision of this bill will come up later, whereby this bill takes the Federal Saving & Loan Insurance Corporation out from under the auditory authority of the General Accounting Office.

Mr. CONNERY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I yield.

Mr. CONNERY. I want to get clear the purpose of the gentleman's amendment. The gentleman wants to bring this back for accounting through the Appropriations Committee? Is that it?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Through the Appropriations Committee of this House and this Congress.

Mr. CONNERY. Instead of giving them carte blanche? Mr. BUCHANAN. Absolutely.

Mr. CONNERY. I think the gentleman is right.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. BUCHANAN. I yield.
Mr. CRAWFORD. In explanation of the contributions which the Government has made, does that represent cash contributions?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Cash contributions.
Mr. CRAWFORD. For stock in these associations?
Mr. BUCHANAN. For stock in these associations and by direct appropriations, too.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Buchanan] has expired.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Buchanan].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Martin of Colorado: Page 6, line 19, after the word "moneys", insert a new section to be known as section 8 (a), as follows:

"The seventh sentence of section 4 (d) of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, is amended to read as follows: 'As used in this subsection, the term "real estate" includes only real estate consisting, in the case of suburban property, of not more than 10 acres, held in fee simple or on a leasehold (1) under a lease for not less than 99 years which is renewable, or (2) under a lease having a period of not less than 50 years to run from the date the mortgage was executed, upon which there is located a dwelling for not more than four families used by the owner as a home or held by him as a homestead and having a value not exceeding $20,000."

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order. Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I reserve a point of order. I make the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I trust the gentleman will reserve his point of order.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I reserve the point of order.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, the Committee, in my judgment, has just made two very beneficial improvements on this bill, and I was heartly in favor of and voted for both of them. I just want to give the Committee a chance to make a third beneficial amendment.

The amendment I have just offered would really be a companion amendment to the one I offered earlier in the day defining "home mortgages" so as to include rural or suburban tracts not exceeding 20 acres. The argument I made on that amendment applies to this one. That amendment, as I pointed out to the committee, was intended to fill in a twilight zone between the 2-acre tracts as applied to homes and the minimum limitation of 20 acres as applied to farms. I have, however, made this concession to the Committee in the pending amendment, I have struck out the word "rural" and left in only the term "suburban"; and I have reduced the limitation from 20 acres to 10 acres. So that if my amendment is adopted, the only change it will make in existing law will be that real estate will be defined to include a suburban tract of not exceeding 10 acres upon which a home loan may be made.

As I pointed out to the Committee previously, there is nothing in this amendment peculiar to my district or to my county or to my home town; it applies to every district, to every town, and to every city in the United States.

I call attention to the further fact that the vast majority of these suburban tracts which are not now eligible for a home loan are occupied by mechanics, workers, office clerks, small professional men, lawyers, and doctors who perhaps make a living in the city but live in the suburbs, people who have their homes on these small tracts which are barred of the privilege of the home-loan law simply because the excess acreage over 2 acres is not considered in the appraisal and, therefore, the amount of loan which could be made on the 2 acres is insufficient to refinance the indebtedness against the entire tract.

Mr. FIESINGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I yield.

Mr. FIESINGER. I may have misunderstood the gentleman; is the limitation 20 acres or 10 acres?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. The limitation in this amendment is 10 acres. I have also stricken out the word "rural" which was in the other amendment; so that it is limited to 10 acres and to suburban tracts. Of course, if my amendment were adopted, in order to make it effective we should make the same changes in the home-mortgage section of the Home Loan Act of 1933, but that would be a very simple matter.

If you adopt this amendment, you are going to open the loan privilege to many thousands of needy and deserving people who occupy such tracts adjacent to every town and city in the United States.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I yield.

Mr. BOYLAN. Why cannot these individual owners make application now if they are on these tracts? What is to prevent them from making individual applications?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I am talking about individual owners; I am not talking about property held jointly or by a colony; I am talking about the workingman, the clerk, the small doctor, lawyer, or little business man who occupies the 5 or 10 acres but whose property is not eligible for a home loan because the Home Loan Corporation will consider only 2 acres adjacent to the house and disregard the rest of it in the matter of appraisal. The adoption of this amendment will enable such an individual to refinance his indebtedness.

Mr. BOYLAN. The gentleman's amendment covers the case of a man who has one house on a tract of ground of 10 acres or less, and not several houses.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Just one house on a suburban tract.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment without waiving the point of order which has already been reserved.

Mr. Chairman, I understand that the class of property owners referred to by the gentleman from Colorado is now eligible for loans. I would like to repeat a statement made to me this afternoon by Mr. Fahey, the Chairman of the Home Loan Board, which was that there are no property owners occupying a twilight zone, as contended by the gentleman offering this amendment, not eligible to a loan either from the Farm Credit Administration or from the Home Loan Corporation. There has been set up a joint committee representing the Farm Credit Administration and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to which all applications for loans are filed where there is doubt as to which agency of the Government should handle them; and since the setting up of this joint committee these difficulties now referred to are being handled satisfactorily to both the agencies and the borrowers.

The further statement was made to the effect that the Farm Credit Administration admits that, with regard to the law under which it operates, there is a weakness in the sense that to be acceptable as security for a loan the property must be productive to the extent of insuring upkeep and repayment.

In other words, in your experience you have found that the Farm Credit Administration, in the making of a loan, will not act favorably upon an application unless it be made to appear that the property produces sufficiently to enable the borrower to meet the charges made against him under the loan. I am told that the Farm Credit Administration concedes that in that respect the law needs to be amended and has stated that it will come in and ask Congress for an amendment to that effect. With that amendment certainly there will be no necessity whatever for the adoption of the pending amendment, particularly since the class sought to be protected under the amendment is already being taken care of by this joint committee or commission which I have referred to, being the creature of the two agencies of the Government, the Farm Credit Administration and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. May I ask the gentleman what this proposed amendment, that he says is coming in, will do? What will the amendment be?

Mr. COX. This will involve a repetition of what I have already stated.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Will it take in the twilight zone in acreage between 2 acres and 20 acres?

Mr. COX. Yes; if classified as a farm it will, and under the existing conditions where there is difficulty in making classifications, the whole matter is being handled entirely satsfactory to the borrower by this joint committee.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. May I say to the gentleman that there would not be any difficulty identifying or classifying a suburban tract. We know what "suburban" means. That has a fixed definition. Why not specify a suburban tract of not to exceed 10 acres and classify that as a home?

There would not be any difficulty in administering a provision of that sort.

Mr. COX. There is in the present law no limitation as to acreage. The gentleman comes in with an amendment intended to liberalize the law but which does fix a limitation.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. There is a limitation in the regulation and the application of the law, I may say to the gentleman, just as conclusive as a law.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my point of order.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my point of order and offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Ellenbogen to the amendment offered by Mr. Martin of Colorado: After the word "family" insert "and containing not more than one shop, store, or store-room."

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of my amendment is simply to make the amendment of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Martin] consistent with my prior amendment adopted by the House. I believe the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Martin] will accept my amendment.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I accept the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Ellenbogen], because I would not want to disturb his amendment in any way. I am very much in favor of the amendment.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado is a very good one and should be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Ellenbogen].

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN], as amended.

The question was taken; and the Chair being in doubt, the Committee divided, and there were—ayes 68, noes 72.

So the amendment as amended was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 9. The first sentence of subsection (c) of section 4 of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) In order to provide for applications heretofore filed the Corporation is authorized to issue bonds in an aggregate amount not to exceed $4,500,000,000, which may be exchanged as hereinafter provided, or which may be sold by the Corporation to obtain funds for carrying out the purposes of this section or for the redemption of any of its outstanding bonds, and the Corporation is further authorized to increase its total bond issue for the purpose of retiring an amount of its outstanding bonds equal to the amount of the increase; such retirement to be at maturity or by call or purchase or exchange or any method prescribed by the Board with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That no bonds issued under this clause shall have a maturity date later than 1952: Provided further, That the total bond issue shall not be increased by the amount of any bonds retired from the proceeds of the collection of principal on loans."

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. Hancock of North Carolina:

"Section 9 is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 9. The first sentence of subsection (c) of section 4 of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) In order to provide for applications heretofore filed, and for applicants who in good faith prior to the date this amendment takes effect sought relief by formal application, letter, or otherwise, who file their applications within 60 days after this amendment takes effect, the Corporation is authorized to issue bonds in an aggregate amount not to exceed $4,750,000,000, which may be exchanged as hereinafter provided, or which may be sold by the Corporation to obtain funds for carrying out the purposes of this section or for the redemption of any of its outstanding bonds, and the Corporation is further authorized to increase its total bond issue for the purpose of retiring an amount of its outstanding bonds equal to the amount of the increase; such retirement to be at maturity or by call or purchase or exchange or any method prescribed by the Board with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That no bonds issued under this clause shall have a maturity date later than 1952: Provided further, That the total bond issue shall not be increased by the amount of any bonds retired from the proceeds of the collection of principal on loans."

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the Committee, this amendment is presented as a committee amendment. It does not represent, however, the unanimous consent of the Committee on Banking and Currency; but a majority of the committee approved the amendment at an executive meeting held this morning. It represents the majority view of your committee in reference to a proper solution of this perplexing problem. As I stated a while ago, section IX is the heart of this bill. In considering this amendment, which is a redraft of section IX of the printed bill, we are called upon to make an important decision. From the debate, it is quite evident that sentiment in the committee is sharply divided as to how much further the Corporation should go in refinancing mortgages. In view of the testimony of the officials of the Corporation that the amount stated in the bill would very probably take care of all eligible applications now on file, we could not in good faith make other applications, which may be later filed, eligible without increasing the bond authorization. I have no fault to find with those who disagree with my view.

I sincerely believe that all of us are devoted to the crusade in which this Corporation has been engaged. Personally, I would much prefer erring on the side of extreme consideration for the distressed home owner than on the principle of being even sound in my judgment. It is my best judgment, however, that this amendment offers the best solution of our problem, all things considered. In the light of the divergent views expressed here today, no one person can hope to have his view incorporated into the law, and it is imperatively necessary that we reach some compromise. If I did not conscientiously believe that there is merit in the amendment, I would not be standing here sponsoring it. Of course, if the membership desires to open the doors of the Corporation so as to include applicants who have not heretofore sought relief of the Corporation, this amendment should not be adopted.

If a majority of the Members, however, feel that, in keeping with the administration's wishes and its desires to taper off the activities of the Corporation, mortgage relief should be extended only to those who made an effort in one way or another to secure a loan but were blocked by representations of officials of the Corporation that no further loans would be made, this amendment would seem to fully protect every one of those cases.

Personally, I have not been willing to accept the language of the section as written in the bill, because I know that there are thousands of worthy cases which were cut off because of no fault of their own and who have no other means of saving their homes. On the other hand, I recognize that it would be gravely dangerous at this juncture of the governmental situation to take any action which would contemplate continued unlimited activity on the part of the Corporation. I tried yesterday as best I could to explain my philosophy of the mortgage situation and why I felt that it was necessary that we proceed slowly and cautiously in the matter of direct lending at this time. It is pretty alluring and attractive to any man to vote relief of any kind to people who are in distress. There is a limit, however, to which any government can go, and in my opinion we are fast approaching the deadline in this country.

We should not forget that the Corporation now owns approximately 25 percent of all the urban mortgages in this country and that 95 percent of all the bonds that have been issued have found their way into the big financial lending institutions. In other words, regardless of the precautions that have been taken by the officials of the Corporation, many a dollar in bonds has gone to bail out mortgages from institutions which were amply able to carry them along.

With the authorization provided in this amendment, it is believed that all the eligible applications now on file and all additional applications which could qualify under the language of the amendment could be adequately cared for. When we have done this, we believe we should call a halt and give the private institutions an opportunity to resume their normal lending activities. Unless this is done, I fear the future of every thrift and home-financing institution in America.

Please realize that it is not the disposition of the committee or myself to impose any view on the House contrary to their conscientious judgment. It is your problem to determine after you have been given all the information which came to us as members of the committee. We offer this amendment in absolute good faith, and we believe, based on the testimony and information which has been furnished to us, that it will enable the Corporation to go as far as it can safely go at this time. Let me remind you that in the week prior to the stop order, applications had dwindled to around 6,000 a week. At the same time the ratio of ineligible applications increased materially. This is convincing to me that if you open wide the doors and extend indefinitely the life of this Corporation, millions of people not in distress will seek to take advantage of this legislation by dumping their obligations in Uncle Sam's lap. The further we go the harder it will be to stop, and I appeal to you in the name of what I believe to be best for our country to adopt this amendment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from North Carolina may have 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I gladly yield.

Mr. SISSON. I just want to make sure that I understand, and that the House understands, the effect of this amendment. To illustrate it concretely: Am I correct in assuming that one who now files an application at any time within 60 days after the passage of this act, the question of whether that application shall be received or acted upon is within the discretion of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation administration?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. That interpretation is correct to the extent that the Corporation would have the right to determine whether the applicant had, prior to the enactment of this act, sought relief of the Corporation.

Mr. SISSON. Am I also correct in assuming that an applicant who has not heretofore filed his application is not entitled, as a matter of right, to have his application passed upon, but rather it must be determined within the discretion of the Home Owners' Loan Administration whether he has, in good faith, attempted heretofore to file an application.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. It would not be altogether in the discretion of the Corporation; but the Board would, of course, in doubtful cases have to pass on the question of the applicant's having sought relief prior to the effective date of this act.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. If the gentleman will permit; I think the gentleman is a little incorrect in his answer to our colleague on the committee. If an application is filed under the amendment of the gentleman from North Carolina at any time prior to the effective date of this act, it may be acted upon.

Mr. SISSON. No.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. If an application is made by letter, or otherwise, under this amendment, prior to the effective date of this act, then the application may be considered. This is the language of the amendment.

Mr. SISSON. May be, but not must be.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Will the gentleman from North Carolina answer that question?

Mr. SISSON. The applicant is not entitled to it as a matter of right.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I gladly yield.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The gentleman answered a question of mine when he had the floor a short while ago, that the new applications made after the enactment of this act would be refused unless they had previously communicated with the Corporation. That was the gentleman's statement.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Now, let me make it as clear as I can. My understanding is that under this amendment any person who files an application at any time within 60 days from the effective date of this amendment, such application would be eligible for consideration by the Corporation, provided that such person had, prior to the effective date of this act, sought relief of the Corporation either by formal application, letter, or otherwise.

Mr. SISSON. I think that is a fair answer as far as it goes. But will the gentleman answer this question: Is it not a fact that under this amendment it is within the power and discretion of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to determine, as a question of fact, whether the applicant has in good faith hitherto sought relief of the Corporation?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. No; not entirely, I will say to my good friend from New York; because it is my judgment that any applicant who had written a letter to any State agency of the Corporation would be qualified under this amendment; and it even goes further than that—because we use the term "or otherwise." I think that the writing of a letter or any formal action of that kind would be conclusive as to the right of a person to have his application passed upon, provided it was filed within 60 days from the effective date of this act.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Assuming a man has not communicated with the Corporation up to the enactment of this act, but after its enactment makes an application, under the gentleman's amendment he could not receive a loan?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. He could not, under my interpretation.

Mr. FTTZPATRICK. Then that eliminates all new applications after the enactment of this act except those who have communicated with the Corporation previous to the enactment of this act?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. If the House adopts this amendment, as I have said before, no application would be eligible, regardless of when it was filed, unless the applicant had sought relief of the Corporation at some time prior to the effective date of its enactment. I certainly hope that I have made the question of eligibility perfectly clear.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Why not take the restrictions off and give them 60 days from the enactment of the act?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. That is a matter entirely in the discretion of the House.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute amendment, which I have sent to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 6, line 24, after the word "filed" insert "and for applicants who file their applications within 60 days after this amendment takes effect", and on page 6, line 25, strike out the "$4,500,000,000" and insert "$5,000,000,000."

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I have offered this amendment as a compromise of sentiment on further home relief.

If I had my own way about it I would make this law very definite, so that the relief would not be shut off in any particular until private lending agencies were in a position to take over and give relief to home owners. [Applause.]

In this bill we set up a fund of $250,000,000 by which the Home Owners' Loan Corporation may purchase stock in Federal building and loan associations which are expected to eventually take over the financing of the home loans.

There is a period in which there will be no relief whatever for the home owner unless we continue the Home Owners' Loan Act, because it will be some time before these private agencies will adequately be able to take over the financing of home loans.

Let me refer to what our President had to say about the need for this relief when he sent the bill to us on April 13, 1933. He said: Implicit in the legislation which I am suggesting to you is a declaration of national policy. This policy is that the broad interests of the Nation require that special safeguards should be thrown around home ownership as a guaranty of social and economic stability, and that to protect home owners from inequitable enforced liquidation, in a time of general distress, is a proper concern of the Government.

I agree with him, and you agreed with him at that time on this subject. Many of you agreed with him that the need of distress was not completely over when you voted last month for the bill which would authorize $5,000,000,000 to carry on relief.

We must be consistent. If we recognize that there is a need in this country for an appropriation of $5,000,000,000 for relief, there is likewise a need for the preservation of social and economic stability of this Nation.

This is in line with the appropriation of $5,000,000,000 for relief. If we can afford to grant $5,000,000,000 to the needy of this Nation, surely we can afford to loan a billion and a half or two billion dollars more to the home owners, and it is estimated by Mr. Fahey, of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, that there need be the loss of not one cent on these loans. For that reason, at least until we can get this private machinery into motion, whereby these home owners can get relief through building and loan associations, and until the policies of the banks change somewhat so that they can get relief through banks, I think we should continue the relief afforded by the H. O. L. C. I defy any gentleman here now to send any of his constituents to any bank in the United States and get one cent of money for home-mortgage relief. You cannot do it. There is no money in the banks for the relief of home owners. There is no money in the building and loan associations under the laws of many of our States for home owners, and the only place that the home owner has to go to get money for relief is to the Congress of the United States, and we should stand up like men and meet this responsibility just as we did on April 13, 1933, when the President asked us to do this.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes.

Mr. DINGELL. Is not the gentleman's impression that the H. O. L. C., when the bill was first proposed in this House, was insufficiently provided for, when we asked for only $2,000,000,000?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended for 2 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DINGELL. I want the gentleman to answer the question. When the H. O. L. C. bill was proposed here we asked for $2,000,000,000. We found that that was inadequate, that we should have asked for $3,000,000,000 at least in the first instance, and certainly an additional billion or a billion and a half later. We find ourselves now, after being in a jam for 2 or 3 months, in a situation where we need additional funds. Is it not a fact that we have gone along all of these 18 months always running in arrears?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes. We saw the necessity for increasing it this last year. Of course the argument was that they will be here next year asking for an increase. I hope I will not be charged with being a demagogue when I say that so far as this relief is concerned we cannot stop it until we adopt a general policy of cutting relief off, and when you adopt that general policy I may go along with you, but so long as we are appropriating $5,000,000,000 for general relief I think it is a mighty poor policy for us to start denying the home owners relief.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes.

Mr. MAY. Does the gentleman's amendment extend the time 60 days beyond the passage of this act?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes; it opens the door for 60 days beyond the effective date of this amendment, so that anybody can file an application. Realizing that the billion and a half dollars which we have set up will be no more than enough to take care of 500,000 applications now pending, which probably will be granted, I have added another $500,000,000 in the hope that that will be sufficient to take care of all applications filed within this period of time.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has again expired.

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, I speak in opposition to the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott]. I appreciate that the effect of that amendment is to extend the time 60 days beyond the passage of this act for the receiving of new applications, but it also increases the authorization of bonds by $500,000,000. As I have said as many times as I have had opportunity, I am in favor of extending the time a reasonable time, say 60 days, for the receiving of new applications, because I can see no other way in which this act can be administered, and we will finally get out of the real-estate business without at the same time doing a great injustice to many worthy home owners in distress, after keeping it open for that length of time. I think there are many of us here who appreciate that in doing that we will to some extent unsettle the mortgage market. To a certain extent we will prevent lending institutions from resuming their normal functions. The main thing is that this shall be kept open long enough to receive the filing of applications in worthy cases, not leaving it to the arbitrary discretion of any board. I am unwilling to do that.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SISSON. Not now. I am in sympathy with the purpose of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott], but Congress will be in session here for 4 or 5 months longer, and 60 days from now or 90 days from now it can be determined by the Home Owners' Loan Board whether the $1,500,000,000 now proposed, plus the $600,000,000 more not used, will be sufficient to take care of these cases, and the effect upon the country will be far better if we simply authorize and direct that this shall be kept open for 60 days and then we can determine when the time comes if this is enough to take care of the worthy cases.

The best advice which our committee has received is that it will be enough. I therefore ask you to vote down the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott], because the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Brown] will soon offer an amendment which I believe will satisfy the situation.

Just one thing further, Mr. Chairman. The committee amendment, much as I regret to say it, does not meet the situation. It leaves it to the discretion of the Home Owners' Loan Board to determine whether an application has been made in good faith heretofore or whether an attempt has been made to make an application. It is nothing but a naked thing, and that certainly should be voted down.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Sisson] has expired.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Dunn of Pennsylvania: On page 6, line 25, after the word "exceed", strike out "$4,500,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$6,000,000,000."

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman make the point of order? The Chair thinks the point of order is good.

Mr. STEAGALL. I make the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Celler). The Chair suggests to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Dunn] that he await decision on the substitute and then he can offer his amendment relating to the amount.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Very well, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Cochran to the committee amendment offered by Mr. Hancock of North Carolina: After the word "filed", in line 2 of the committee amendment, strike out down to and including the word "effect", in line 5, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "as well as future applications"; and strike out "$4,750,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$5,550,000,000."

Mr. STEAGALL. I reserve a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. COCHRAN. I would like the gentleman to state his point of order.

Mr. STEAGALL. I reserve the point of order.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. There is no time limit at all in the gentleman's amendment?

Mr. COCHRAN. I will explain the amendment I have offered.

I have offered this amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina. My amendment strikes out the following words: "and for applicants who in good faith prior to the date this amendment takes effect, sought relief by a formal application, letter, or otherwise, who filed their application within 60 days after this amendment takes effect"; and I am also increasing the amount of bonds that can be issued $1,000,000,000.

The purpose of my amendment to the amendment is this: We all know that no one can go to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation until he is in distress; until he has applied for a loan and has been turned down by real-estate men, by banks, and others. Then and then only can a man go to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Now, if you have a mortgage of $5,000 upon your house and that mortgage is due July 1, you cannot possibly be in distress until July 1. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcottl, has told you that he challenged anyone to name a bank in this country which would loan a dollar on real estate; and no one was able to name a bank. It is impossible to find real-estate companies which will advance any money in my city to home owners unless the mortgage is about 50 percent of the value of the home. Just as the gentleman said, if we are going to help people in distress, let us help them, and shut off nobody until the bonds have all been issued.

Mr. COX. Would not the gentleman be willing to divide his amendment?

Mr. COCHRAN. I am willing to divide the amendment. I will ask permission to do so when I am recognized by the Chair after completing my remarks.

Mr. COX. If the gentleman would divide his amendment I think he would stand a chance of having it passed.

Mr. COCHRAN. I will divide the amendment. I repeat, if we are going to help the home owners, let us help them, but not only help those who have been in distress in the past, or at present in distress, but let us help those who will be in distress later.

Mr. CONNERY. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. COCHRAN. I yield.

Mr. CONNERY. If the gentleman divides his amendment, what will be the effect?

Mr. COCHRAN. The questions will be voted on separately.

Mr. CONNERY. But what are the two things to be separated?

Mr. COCHRAN. One is to raise the amount $1,000,000,000 and the other is to accept future applications without any limiting date, until the bonds are gone. That is the effect of my amendment to the amendment. It is to continue the Home Owners' Loan Corporation as it was up to the time they discontinued taking applications. It is also the purpose of the amendment to provide additional money. They will need $1,000,000,000 to take care of the applications that were on file prior to November when they stopped receiving them. At least that is what Mr. Fahey told me in letters, not once but two or three times.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield.

Mr. TABER. Would there be any assurance that there would be any new loans made even if the gentleman's amendment were adopted? Would not the funds carried by the gentleman's amendment all be exhausted by pending applications?

Mr. COCHRAN. According to Mr. Fahey there was in the office $1,800,000,000 in applications. At the time he wrote me they had $800,000,000 additional in bonds. Therefore it takes $1,000,000,000 additional to take care of what they have on file. If the amendment offered by the committee survives, they will only have $500,000,000 to take care of new applications. I say that is not sufficient.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield.

Mr. SNELL. What proportion of those applications will be granted? Did Mr. Fahey tell the gentleman that?

Mr. COCHRAN. He did not say.

Mr. SNELL. A great many of them will be turned down? Mr. COCHRAN. He said they were on file. No doubt many will be turned down.

Mr. SNELL. That does not mean they will be granted? Mr. COCHRAN. We do not know what percentage will be granted.

Mr. SNELL. Probably a small percentage so far.

Mr. COCHRAN. Now, I would like to ask the gentleman from New York a question. Can the gentleman conceive of any better security in the world on which to loan money than a man's home?

Mr. SNELL. No; not if it is all right. I am for it.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT 1.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Healey to the substitute offered by Mr. Wolcott: Strike out "60 days" and insert in lieu thereof "6

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Is an amendment to a substitute in order at this time?

The CHAIRMAN. It is in order if properly offered at this

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, in the light of our past experience with this whole situation, we ought to realize that in 60 days conditions will not be so altered as to warrant the discontinuance of home owners' relief, although we all hope they will be improved. I know that every effort is being made by this Corporation to extend facilities to private lending organizations so that they may be able to adequately take over the field of home financing. I wish, however, to recite the fact that it was but a few days after the H. O. L. C. announced that it was not going to receive any more applications that wholesale foreclosure proceedings started everywhere. I know in my own State that a few days after the Home Owners' Loan Corporation office there ceased taking applications, one bank threatened to start foreclosure proceedings in 32 cases, although these particular mortgagors had applications then pending in the reviewing section of the H. O. L. C. office, and presumably satisfied all of the requirements of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. This bank threatened to start proceedings to foreclose immediately when it was known that the H. O. L. C. appropriation had become exhausted and that the applications then on file in the Home Owners' Loan office were not going to receive any more action.

Yesterday I heard my distinguished colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. Gifford] say that we ought to get out of this business and not compete with the private lending agencies. I think the great majority of Members of Congress would like to see that thing accomplished, but where are these people going; to what private lending agencies are these home owners in distress going? Do we want to put them at the mercy of the cold-blooded institutions that started to foreclose their homes a few days after the Home Owners' Loan Corporation announced it could not receive any more applications?

After all, this money we have authorized for this humane purpose is coming back in a fairly regular way. According to the testimony of Mr. Fahey, Chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, there originally was about 33½ percent of these mortgages in default, but after they notified these people who were in default the percentage was cut down to about 16. This is a gigantic enterprise. There never was such a big mortgagee in history as Uncle Sam is today, and a default of only 16 percent is not alarming. We are not only lending this money on the physical property of the home owners of our country, but we are depending upon their industry, their integrity, and their honesty.

Mr. Chairman, we need to keep this organization going at least another 6 months to relieve the distressed home owners. The same reason now exists for extending this relief that existed at the very outset when we enacted this humane legislation. If the banks will not lend to the distressed home owners of our country, then the Government must continue to finance the homes of our people. It is necessary to extend the time for new applications under existing conditions. It is necessary also to increase the amount so that we may take care of future applicants as well as take care of those who already have their applications on file.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HEALEY. I yield.
Mr. RABAUT. Would not the gentleman agree to extend the time a year, to make the date a year hence, for then we will be in session and have a chance to work on it?

Mr. HEALEY. I think 6 months is a fairly reasonable time. If private lending organizations are ever going to take over the mortgage field, they ought to be in a position to do so by that time; and if at the expiration of that time they are not, we may have to enact further relief legislation for home owners.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to repeat a part of the comment I made yesterday, namely, that according to my understanding the administration itself does not wish more than $1,500,000,000 additional. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation, which must also know what the administration wants, asks only for $1,500,000,000. Those of you who were elected to back up the President, who is now certainly worried over the money that you have been freezing, should not want to increase the authorization in this particular matter. I am very watchful of your side of the House, as to how carefully you are following the wishes of your own President; and I should like to call the attention of the committee to my intense surprise that the Chairman of the Committee on Expenditures, who is supposed to be watchful of the expenditures of the Government, today wants to add a billion or more to this appropriation; way beyond what the administration wants, far in excess of what the Home Owners' Loan Corporation itself wants.

I cannot help but express considerable surprise at that, even though I know I have as much sympathy as anyone else.

Mr. Chairman, I want to say a word for Massachusetts. I recently had a communication stating there was a large amount of money in our building-and-loan associations, as we call our cooperative banks, ready to be loaned on real estate, and they wanted real-estate mortgages.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Massa-chusetts.

Mr. HEALEY. I want to read the headlines of a little story in the Springfield Republican. "Upward trend found here in foreclosures; same situation noticed in 27 other States during January."

Mr. GIFFORD. I agree that foreclosures have not stopped, but the gentleman will not refute the statement that our cooperative banks cannot live unless they take on new mortgages. Of course, they are more careful than they were formerly. They do not lend up to 80 percent of the value. I would refer to the many things we have done to relieve this mortgage situation. We have a banking bill wherein the Federal Reserve itself will take mortgages and rediscount them for 20 years. Many other things have been done. We shall have to taper off very soon.

Mr. Chairman, I repeat what I said yesterday. Some people are distinctly frightened about the capital structure of this Nation being frozen. During the war everybody was busy. Most people were earning a real income. But when you fight in a depression the only way suggested is to freeze your very capital structure. This is getting on very dangerous ground. Why do you on the other side go against your own President, whom you so desired and whom you promised to follow, when he has a bear by the tail and trying to let go a little? Why do you not help him?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to a part of the committee amendment offered by the gentlemen from North Carolina [Mr. Hancock]. I was somewhat amused at the language of the amendment as it was read by the Clerk, and I listened attentively while the gentleman was trying to explain its meaning to the Membership of the House. We are all in accord with the idea that the Home Owners' Loan Corporation is a blessing to the country and that it has done more than possibly any other governmental agency in saving homes of our people, and even with all the argument we have heard on this bill, none are opposed to the extension of the Corporation, or a reasonable appropriation so that the Corporation may continue to make loans to the deserving home owners. I am extremely happy to see the committee increase the amount of bonds which the Corporation can issue to $4,750,000,000 instead of limiting the amount to $4.500,000,000. As I understand it. this will give the Corporation $1,750,000,000 with which to make additional loans to home owners who are now unable to borrow funds from any other source and who are now facing foreclosure, under mortgages, or sales of their homes because of their inability to pay taxes. The thing that concerns me most is the language of the amendment regarding the eligibility of applicants. That part of the amendment dealing with the eligibility of applicants is as follows:

in order to provide for applications heretofore filed and for applicants who file their applications within 60 days after this amendment takes effect and who in good faith prior to the date this amendment takes effect sought relief under this act the Corporation is authorized to issue bonds * * *.

The first question we ask ourselves is, who will be eligible to receive the $1,750,000,000 that we are about to make available to this Corporation by our votes? The only ones that have any assurance under the language of this amendment are the ones who have actually filed their applications before this date. What construction will the Corporation place upon the words "good faith"? And may we also ask what construction the Corporation will place upon the words sought relief under this act"? It was rather amusing in listening to the gentleman [Mr. Hancock] when questions were propounded to him as to the meaning of his amendment and so far the gentleman has failed to explain it. There is not a member of the Banking and Currency Committee, or a Member of this House that can explain the meaning of this amendment. If the Members of Congress are unable to interpret, or place a reasonable construction upon the law they are about to vote upon, I am at a loss to understand how the Membership can vote intelligently upon the amendment or how it could be intelligently used for the benefit of the people after it had been enacted into law.

Mr. Chairman, I hope that the membership of the Banking and Currency Committee and the other Members of this House will not think that I am critical or unkind in any way when I say that it appears that there is no intention on the part of the officers of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to extend loans to any home owners except those that have already filed their applications, and that this amendment is more or less a cloak for the position they have taken. Are we to tell our constituents that "we voted to extend the credit of the Government to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in the amount of $1,750,000,000 to help those who had already filed their applications, but to those of you who are in financial distress and who are about to lose your homes, we are unable to help you because you did not get in on the ground floor "?

When our friends write us to know if they can qualify as an applicant for a loan we will have to write them that we are unable to tell them because we do not know the meaning of the law which we have passed. It will be embarrassing for us to have to write such to our constituents but there is nothing else that we can tell them unless we clear up the language of the amendment by voting for the substitute to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] or the substitute to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HEALEY] or the substitute to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott]. There are thousands of people all over this country who are desirous of obtaining loans from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and who went to the office of the local correspondent or local attorney and asked them about filing their applications for loans but were told that orders had been issued in Washington that no further applications would be received because of lack of funds. Surely this Congress will not turn a deaf ear to deserving people like that who are as much entitled to a loan as the more fortunate who managed to get their applications on file first. We should not sit here as Members of Congress and let any such amendment be adopted. If we intend to continue the Home Owners' Loan Corporation we should rise up like men and provide that the people should have a reasonable length of time in which to file applications for the benefits which we are about to provide. If we are not willing to open the doors to all by adopting the amendment of Mr. Cochran, then let us extend the time in which applications may be filed for a period of 6 months and if the House is not willing to extend the time for a 6-month period as proposed by the gentleman from Massachusetts, let us give them 60 days as proposed by the gentleman from Michigan so that the people of our country may file their applications and receive the benefits of an act which we are all agreed is so necessary and so vital to the home owners of this country. If we do not have the courage to do this I hope that the Senate will correct the error. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendments close in 20 minutes

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COCHRAN. Is this the proper time to ask for a division of the question on my amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. That would properly come when the question recurs on the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to divide the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri that his amendment be divided?

There was no objection.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr.

Mr. Chairman, I have listened very attentively to the discussion on these various amendments. It will be remembered that in every congressional district in the United States a short while before the Congress convened these loans were stopped suddenly. I understand one of the reasons for the stopping of the loans was that Mr. Fahey could be held criminally liable if he spent one cent more than provided in the original Home Owners' Loan Corporation bill. If I am wrong in that statement, the chairman will correct me.

The information given to me was that they were not taking any chances, even though they had some money left over, although not enough to take care of all the loans. They were not going to leave themselves open to being placed in such a position.

One amendment has been offered providing for 60 days and another amendment provides for 6 months, but neither of the amendments would take care of the same situation that occurred before Christmas. In other words, next November you will be faced with the same proposition. Again, there will not be sufficient money available, and the loans will be stopped, and then you will be flooded with letters and telegrams from people asking why they cannot get their loans through.

The Cochran amendment provides an indefinite right to apply. Now, what is so terrible about this? My distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Healey], in his fine address brought out plainly the fact that this money is coming back to the Government. They have only 16 percent of defaults even in these terrible times. So the Government is not going to lose this money.

Now, in your veterans' cases, with respect to veterans' compensation, year after year we extended the time. We would say that a man could not apply for compensation after a certain time, and finally we reached the stage where we practically left it open indefinitely for the veterans. This is the same proposition, because this involves people who were not lucky enough to file their applications in time or people who did not even know what the law required-and yet you say they must have known. They do not know about such things. Do you know that at the present time, while I am talking here, there are veterans in the United States who do not know they are entitled to the soldiers' bonus that was passed in 1925, and their dependents do not know about it? There are thousands of people in the United States who do not know the situation with regard to laws or with regard to what they are entitled to under these laws.

These people should be given such opportunity. Distress is the first and fundamental reason for going to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. So you are not doing the Government any harm by allowing these people an indefinite period of time. You want to aid them if they are in distress. This is the purpose of the law.

The amendment of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cochran] adds to the appropriation, so that when you go home, whether it is in May, June, or July, or whenever it is, there will be no chance for this same situation to occur whereby they will suddenly shut off on these loans and the people will lose their homes, as many have done, through the banks foreclosing.

Mr. HEALEY and Mr. SISSON rose.

Mr. CONNERY. I first yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HEALEY. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott] offered a substitute which does increase the appropriation by $500,000,000, making it an even $5,000,000,000. My amendment merely extends the time within which a person may apply for a loan.

Mr. CONNERY. Of course, the Cochran amendment provides an indefinite period of time and offers more than that in the way of financing them.

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONNERY. I yield.

Mr. SISSON. I agree with everything the gentleman has said as to his purposes, and I know how sincerely sympathetic he is, and I can assure the gentleman I feel very much the same way, and I do believe that this should be kept open a sufficient length of time to take care of the worthy, distressed cases and that it should not be left to the arbitrary discretion of the Home Loan Board. However, the gentleman, of course, knows there is now authorized $1,500,000,000 additional.

Mr. CONNERY. Yes.

Mr. SISSON. And we are advised by the Board, and I believe fairly so, that the applications were decreasing and going down at a very rapidly increasing ratio prior to the time they were cut off on November 13 last. This being so, our best information is that within the next 3 months, certainly, they can tell how much more, if any, will be required.

[Here the gavel fell.]

to proceed for 2 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. SISSON. Now, Congress will still be here-I think the gentleman knows that much better than I do, probablyat a later date than the date when it will be necessary to determine what amount will be needed, and I am with the gentleman in believing that a sufficient amount should be authorized to take care of the worthy, distressed cases.

Mr. CONNERY. I understand that, but may I make this statement to the gentleman. The gentleman says that Congress will be here. The gentleman knows and I know that as soon as this bill gets out of the House and is passed by the Senate and signed by the President, that will be the end of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation for this session. That always happens, and you cannot come in here 3 months from now and say that you need more money, because if you do they will not pay any attention to it.

Mr. SISSON. The question of greatest importance is not so much additional authorization as it is to keep this open for at least 60 days to take care of the worthy, distressed

Mr. CONNERY. I am in favor of leaving it open indefinitely.

Mr. SISSON. I am not.

Mr. CONNERY. As long as the Government is not going to lose the money, and the Cochran amendment will provide for leaving it open indefinitely.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman-

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. Is the time that the gentleman from Alabama consumes taken out of the 20 minutes?

The CHAIRMAN. It is.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation Board submitted to the Congress a provision for the appropriation of $1,250,000,000 additional funds, which they estimated would be sufficient to take care of the pending applications.

The amount was raised to $1,500,000,000. The committee desired to make sure that ample funds were provided to care for all applications on hand. The committee later decided to offer an amendment to provide $1,750,000,000 additional funds to carry on this work.

The amendment of the committee before the House carries $500,000,000 in addition to the sum asked for by the Board charged with the administration of this fund.

In addition to that the committee amendment provides that all applications shall be considered, and any applicant who was prevented from filing his application on account of the order of November 13, 1934, except those in the legal department, shall have the opportunity of having his application filed and passed on.

There was nothing harsh or unjust in the order of November 13, 1933, terminating the consideration of applications. The Board found that they had not sufficient funds with which to take care of all applications, and the common-sense way of dealing with that situation was to take the applications that had been filed, and that in the very nature of things came first for consideration, and apply the remaining funds to loans arising out of those applications.

There is nowhere any proof that the committee has been able to find to justify the apprehension that the amount provided in the amendment of the committee-$1,750,000,000will not be amply sufficient to take care of all applications that have been filed, as well as all cases where applications were prevented by the order of the Board promulgated on November 13, 1934.

Now, are we going to take off all limitations; are we going to accept as permanent the distress conditions we have sought to relieve? Are we going to say that the activities of the Government shall continue indefinitely? One of the amendments makes that proposal. And I submit that if we extend the time for all applications indiscriminately for a period of

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent | 60 days or for a period of 6 months, as is suggested in one amendment, it will precipitate a flood of applications in all remaining cases as to which there is any basis or hope of favorable action by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama that he proceed for 2 minutes. The Chair hears none.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, we are advised by those in charge of the administration of this law that we have reasonable grounds to expect an early resumption of loans by lending institutions in the country and a return to more normal conditions. But it is not believed that such a resumption is possible so long as we stand ready to carry on this business out of funds supplied by the Treasury of the United States. I think it unjust and unkind on the part of Members of the House to question the good faith or the sympathetic attitude of this administration in its efforts to afford relief to distressed citizens in the United States from the danger of foreclosure of mortgages on their homes. There is nothing in the record to justify that. The record abundantly refutes such an imputation. If it is found at any time that the anxiety expressed here is justified, the record bears me out in the statement that this administration can be trusted to come again to the rescue of distressed home owners in the United States, as it has done by repeated action in the past.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes.
Mr. O'CONNOR. Is it not a fact that the administration believes that $1,250,000,000 would adequately meet this

Mr. STEAGALL. The administration approved a bill, prepared with utmost care, providing an additional sum of $1,250,000,000. The committee, out of an abundance of anxiety to anticipate any possible distress in the country, and to meet the wishes of the House, raised the amount to a billion and a half. Again the Committee on Banking and Currency agreed to raise the amount to a billion and threequarters, as provided in the committee amendment. Still we are told that we are attempting, harshly and arbitrarily, to deny relief to home owners! The President is entitled to the approval of this Congress on this measure, just as he enjoys the approval of the American people for all his humanitarian efforts to relieve distress in the United States.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, a few minutes ago I sent an amendment to the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. At that time a point of order was made. to the gentleman's amendment, and that point of order was sustained. If the gentleman wishes to address the Committee on the pending amendments, he is recognized for 5

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. I shall not consume 5 minutes, because the Members look as if they are getting hun-The amount I asked for in the amendment is $6,000 .-000,000. In my candid opinion, the said amount is not too large of a sum to obtain from the Federal Government if it will save the homes of our people. About half an hour ago a gentleman made a statement on the floor that we told the voters in our districts we would support the President of the United States. When I was campaigning for the office of Congress I impressed on the minds of the people in my district that I would do my utmost as a Congressman to save the homes of every man and woman in the United States. If $6,000,000,000 is too excessive then we can use the amount of money which is necessary. In other words, it is not mandatory to spend the $6,000,000,000 unless it is needed. I do not doubt that every Congressman wants to do his best to alleviate the suffering of the people in his district. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I maintain that $6,000,000,000 is not too much.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. CONNERY. The distinguished Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency just said that this is what the President wants and this is all he asked for, but from our past experience with legislation in this House this bill will go over to another body and the other body will put on what is demanded by the American people, and the House of Representatives will be regarded as the enemy of the American people in the eyes of the people.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. I agree with what the gentleman said. I hope the time is not far distant when we will have but one House and that will be the House of Representatives. [Applause.]

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. How much time has the gentleman left?

The CHAIRMAN. There are 4 minutes remaining.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Chairman, I demand the regular order.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I want to make this observation—

Mr. BOYLAN. The gentleman has not the right to do that.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has 4 minutes, and he has yielded to me.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield to his colleague?

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. BOYLAN. But the gentleman cannot yield time; the gentleman can yield only for a question.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. I am yielding for a question. Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Is it not a fact that the distinguished chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Steagall], reported out a bill which changed the recommendation of the administration when he cut down the amount allowed for repairs from $50,000 to $25,000, and now he tells us that we should follow the administration? I hope the learned gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Steagall] will go along with the administration in that respect.

Mr. DUNN of Pennsylvania. What we should do is to follow the dictates of our conscience, and let our actions be in the interest of the distressed people of our country. [Applause.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, as one who originally advocated this legislation, as one who is familiar with the unfortunate conditions that exist, and the situation the home owners find themselves in, I feel very keenly on the question before us.

Personally I would be delighted to see every home owner in the United States accommodated, aided and relieved, but there are limitations, and I do not believe it is wise to authorize billions and billions that are not requested, and which I doubt very much will ever be used. Mr. Fahey stated that he believed $1,250,000,000 would suffice to take care of all pending applications. The committee, after due consideration, has increased it to $1,500,000,000, which would leave more than $500,000,000 for the new applicants, which I believe is more than sufficient. In view of that fact, I believe that the amendment extending the time within which to file applications for 60 days should be adopted, and the bill as originally introduced, providing for $1,500,000,000 additional funds, should prevail. That should satisfy each and every one of us who is interested in the home owners and the administration as well.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

thinks?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Does not the gentleman think it is incumbent upon the Congress of the United States to establish the policy under which the Home Owners' Loan Corporation shall continue?

Mr. SABATH. There is no policy provided for in this bill. Mr. WOLCOTT. Does the gentleman think the Congress of the United States should be bound by what Mr. Fahey The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Sabath] has expired.

All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cochran] to the committee amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Hancock]. The amendment to the committee amendment by unanimous consent was divided, and the Clerk will report the first part of the amendment.

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. COCHRAN. A point of order, Mr. Chairman. I received unanimous consent to divide the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the first part of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri to the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Cochran to the committee amendment offered by Mr. Hancock of North Carolina: After the word "filed", in line 2, strike out down to and including the word "effect" in line 5 and insert in lieu thereof the words "as well as future applications."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the committee amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Connery and Mr. Dunn of Pennsylvania) there were ayes 68 and noes 103.

So the first part of the amendment to the committee amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the second part of the amendment to the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Second part of amendment offered by Mr. Cochran to the committee amendment:

Strike out "$4,750,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$5,550,-000,000."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the second part of the amendment to the committee amendment.

The question was taken, and the second part of the amendment to the committee amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now recurs upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Healey], in the nature of an amendment to the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Connery and Mr. Dunn of Pennsylvania) there were ayes 65 and noes 120.

So the amendment to the substitute amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now recurs on the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott] to the committee amendment.

The Clerk again reported the substitute amendment to the committee amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Dunn of Pennsylvania) there were ayes 71 and noes 112.

So the substitute amendment to the committee amendment was rejected.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. Ten Members have risen; not a sufficient number.

Tellers were refused.

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the committee amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Hancock].

The Clerk again reported the committee amendment.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. If this amendment is voted down, then an amendment which I understand is to be offered by a member of the committee, and which is more liberal, would be in order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair cannot anticipate what amendments will be offered from the floor.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Debate has been closed on this section and all amendments, but is not an amendment in order without debate.

The CHAIRMAN. An amendment to the committee amendment is in order.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I wish to offer an amendment to the committee amendment.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SWEENEY. Do I understand that the request of the chairman of the committee to close all debate on the pending amendment in 20 minutes is applicable to this amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. All amendments which were pending at that time and amendments thereto. There is no further debate on the pending amendment or amendments thereto.

Mr. STACK. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. STACK. Will the Chair please answer the question as to the lifetime of the original act that was passed in 1933? The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman does not state a parliamentary inquiry. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I was apprised that an amendment was in order. I cannot write out an amendment in a second.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his amendment so it can be reported.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I move that all the language in the committee amendment following the word "heretofore", in line 24, page 6, with regard to the filing of future applications be stricken out, and that instead there be inserted, after the word "heretofore", in line 24, the words " or hereafter."

Mr. STEAGALL. A point of order, Mr. Chairman. The CHAIRMAN. It is rather difficult for the Chair to follow the amendment.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. After the word "heretofore' in line 24, page 6, insert the words "or hereafter", and strike out all of the committee amendment regarding the time for ffling future applications following the word "heretofore."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is unable to gather the import of the gentleman's amendment from the gentleman's statement. The gentleman should reduce his amendment to writing so we can fully understand what the gentleman intends to present to the House.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I have not had time to reduce my amendment to writing. I have no copy of the committee amendment, which is on the Clerk's desk.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment. The House has just voted on the identical proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order. Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I have heard no such amendment.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SWEENEY. Do I understand that we are foreclosed from offering further amendments to section 9?

The CHAIRMAN. No. Further amendments may be offered.

The question is on the committee amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HANCOCK].

The question was taken; and the Chair being in doubt, the Committee divided, and there were—ayes 119, noes 72.

So the committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MILLER: At the end of section 9, on page 7, line 14, insert the following as a new section:

"That section 4 (d) of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, be amended by adding: 'Provided, That for the purpose of this act, levies of assessments upon real property, made by any special district organized in any State for public improvements, shall be treated as general tax levies are treated and the lien created by such improvement districts upon the real property said district, to secure the payment of such improvement-district levies shall be considered as attaching to such real property at the levies shall be considered as attaching to such real property at the time fixed by such improvement district for the payment of such levies and assessments and not before; and, for the purposes of this act, the lien of any mortgage placed upon any such real property by the owner thereof shall be considered a prior lien with reference to such improvement-district lien securing the payment of all said improvement-district assessments not due at the time the said owner executes such mortgage. The reasonableness of the total annual burden of taxes and assessments of all kinds upon any property offered as security for the payment of a loan made by property offered as security for the payment of a loan made by the Corporation and the effect of such total levies upon the loanable value of such property are matters for the determination of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation Board, but no deduction shall be made from the loanable value of any property for improve-ment-district assessments or levies not due at the time of making such loan in any instance where the total annual taxes and assess ments borne by the said property for all purposes does not exceed a sum which in the discretion of the Board is a reasonable annual tax burden for such property: Provided, That in arriving at the loanable value, in no instance shall any deductions be made on account of such improvement-district liens, taxes, and/or assessments not due at the time of making the loan where the aggregate amount of annual taxes, levies, and assessments of all kinds and for all purposes upon the property offered for security does not exceed a sum equal to 5 percent of the value of such property as fixed by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation appraisement.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman reserve his point of order?

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, the reason I asked the gentleman from Alabama to reserve his point of order was to give me an opportunity to explain the purpose of the amendment. So far as I know, this amendment does not affect any State except Arkansas. It affects us because of a peculiar constitutional provision in our State in reference to the levying of taxes in improvement districts. We in Arkansas proceed to levy taxes under the improvement district law in order to evade a constitutional provision of the constitution adopted in 1874.

The section of the law that this amendment seeks to change provides that the taxes due against property at the time the application is received shall be deducted from the mortgage, and it further provides that no discrimination shall be made under this act against any home mortgage by reason of the fact that the real estate securing such mortgage is located in a municipality, county, or taxing district which is in default upon any of its obligations. Now, this provision of the law protects every municipality, county, city, or taxing district, and all property located in a taxing district except in the State of Arkansas, where our improvement taxes become an existing lien in whole. In other words, to illustrate the point, if the taxes on a piece of property is $500 for the paving of a street, although the $500 is payable over a period of years, the entire $500 becomes at once a lien on that piece of property. Under the operation of the law in Arkansas, the whole of that $500 is deducted from the loanable value, not the amount that is payable yearly or due at the time the mortgage is executed. The $500 is not in default at all, but the entire sum is deducted from the loanable value, whereas in most of the States where this cost of improvement was paid by general tax levies, there would be deducted only such taxes as might be due and not the whole which may become due over a period of years.

That is all I am asking for.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield to the gentleman from New York. Mr. FITZPATRICK. In our State it is a direct assessment, and they have a period of 10 years in which to pay. It is a direct assessment and it is charged up just the same.

Mr. MILLER. Is the entire amount of the charge deducted?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The entire amount. They have a. period of 10 years to pay it on the installment plan.

pay; but what I am objecting to is the deduction of the entire amount when it is not payable and cannot be paid except in yearly installments.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If one wanted to sell the property, it would be charged up to the mortgage?

Mr. MILLER. No; not under our system. If they would take the assessed benefits into consideration, it would be a different proposition.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If the property is sold and the deed delivered, you would have to pay your own assessments.

Mr. MILLER. No: not under our law and not under the decisions of our supreme court. We have had this matter up with the Home Owners' Loan Corporation before and for a while it functioned all right.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. In our State you would have to do it unless you inserted it in the contract; otherwise you would have to give a clear deed.

Mr. MILLER. We are in the situation where the court has held that such a tax is not a breach of warranty in a deed even, but the Home Owners' Loan Corporation takes the whole amount off. I am just asking for the benefit of those property owners that they be given the same consideration that property owners in every other State receive. This amendment protects the rights of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. It does not interfere at all with orderly administration but simply results in equitable treatment; that is all. That is the effect of this amendment.

Mr. KVALE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota. Mr. KVALE. Has the gentleman consulted with the committee? Is it not possible the committee would accept the gentleman's amendment?

Mr. MILLER. I did not have an opportunity to consult with the committee until after they had acted upon the bill. Mr. KVALE. At least the committee might not actively resist the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. MILLER. I do not think they will actively resist it because it can do no harm. It cannot hurt the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. It puts the improvement taxes upon the same basis as general taxes, that is all. If any installments of taxes are due when the mortgage is executed, they are deducted from the mortgage, but the whole amount which will become due and payable over a period of years should not be deducted from the loanable value.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto do now close.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. McLeon) there were—aves 122 and noes 15.

So the motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MILLER) there were—ayes 41 and noes 69.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 10. Subsection (j) of section 4 of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "No person shall be appointed or retained as an officer, employee, agent, or attorney in any regional or State office of the Corpora-tion, who was, at the date of the establishment of such office, not a resident of the region or State served by such office. This amendatory provision shall go into effect within 90 days after the date of enactment thereof."

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Brown of Michigan: Page 7, after line

Amendment offered by Mr. Brown of Michigan: Page 7, after line 24, insert the following new section:
"Sec. 11. Subsection (1) of section 4 of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, is amended by striking out the last comma therein and the following: 'or in any case in which the home mortgage or other obligation or lien is held by an institution which is in liquidation."

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, this is a committee amendment proposed to the committee by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HARTER]. The purpose is to eliminate the so-called "institutional amendment" which we

Mr. MILLER. We have a period of 10, 15, or 20 years to | adopted last year. Under the provisions of the law prior to the adoption of that amendment in 1934, no mortgagor who was not in distress could be relieved. By the amendment of 1934, mortgagors whose mortgages were not in default or men who were not in distress but whose mortgages were held by institutions which were in liquidation were granted the benefits of the act.

It caused a great deal of criticism in the State of Ohio, in the State of Michigan, and in many other parts of the country because relief was given to mortgagors who were not in distress. The gentleman from Ohio gave an instance of a county judge, receiving a salary of $12,000 per year, who had a mortgage that was not in default and who was relieved because his mortgage happened to be in an institution that was in liquidation. The committee believes that that kind of relief should not be given. This is an opportunity to lessen the demand upon the Corporation. The language which will be eliminated from the present section (1) of section 4 of the act is as follows:

Or in any case in which the mortgage or other obligation or lien is held by an institution which is in liquidation.

It will confine the operations of the Corporation and the benefits of the act solely to mortgagors who are in distress, whose mortgages were in default prior to June of 1933, or who since that time have been unable to pay their debts by reasons beyond their control. The committee feels that the elimination of this provision of the law is a real improvement and asks its adoption.

Mr. FIESINGER. It does not limit the institutional feature, but it will limit the mortgagor under distress.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. The gentleman is exactly right. We do not limit or prevent aid to persons who have mortgages in institutions, if those mortgages are in default or were in default prior to June of 1933; but we do prevent aid to persons whose mortgages are in good standing, merely because those mortgages are in institutions which are in liquidation.

Mr. HARLAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. I yield to the gentleman from

Mr. HARLAN. In these liquidating institutions they are called upon to collect on their mortgages. There are lots of mortgagors who are drawing good money and have good salaries, but, if called upon today to pay their mortgage, could not do it any more than any man in distress.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. The institution cannot call for payment of the mortgage if it is not in default.

Mr. HARLAN. Why not, if they are liquidating? That is the difficulty.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. No: they cannot.

Mr. HARLAN. If they are liquidating-

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. They cannot in Michigan.

Mr. HARLAN. That may be true in Michigan.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. If the mortgage is not due, surely they cannot call for payment upon it.

Mr. HARLAN. These mortgages that are given to institutions are made from year to year, and they are callable at any time and, whether the interest is paid or not, they are subject to being foreclosed in a great many States, as, for example, in Ohio. Now, what are we going to do with such cases?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have 2 more minutes to answer

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. SWEENEY. Do I understand that the effect of this amendment is to wipe out the wholesale divisions created in these banks that are in liquidation?

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. That is true, insofar as their operations relate to mortgages that are not in default.

Mr. SWEENEY. And it does not preclude the mortgagor, who has an obligation due the bank from going to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and having it given consideration.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. That is true.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. I think the gentleman from Ohio had the same thing in mind that I did. Is a man denied relief because his mortgage is in an institution which is in course of liquidation, even though the mortgage is in default?

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. No; if the mortgage is in default, he is entitled to relief under the bill.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment because I cannot see any particular need for the amendment. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation did not ask for the amendment. The committee, to be sure, voted upon it and accepted it as a committee amendment, and the reason the committee accepted it as a committee amendment, or at least some of the reasons given, were that the Home Owners' Loan Corporation had made some mistakes in the administration of this law. These mistakes in the administration of the law precipitated a resolution asking for an investigation of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Undoubtedly, there have been mistakes made. I think in one case it developed, as the gentleman from Michigan pointed out, that a judge in Ohio had his mortgage taken over and it developed that this judge was receiving an annual salary of $12,000 a year, but this is an isolated case.

This provision was put in the bill last year at your instance, because we wanted to do just what will be done if this provision stays in the bill. We will give relief to depositors in closed banks. You gentlemen got up here last year and said you were in favor of this Government doing something for the depositors in closed banks. As a consequence, this committee wrote into the act this language, which was adopted by the House, which allowed the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to go into closed institutions and take over the mortgage assets of these closed institutions for the purpose of paying dividends to the depositors.

We have listened all the way through this discussion to a great deal of talk about baling out the banks, as if baling out the banks meant paying the stockholders in those banks some money. There has not been one cent of the money paid by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation that has ever reached the pockets of a stockholder, but every cent, over and above the cost of liquidation, has gone to pay the depositors in these closed banks, and now you men who were so jealous of your rights last year to have some relief given to closed banks, I hope you will not vote today to take from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation the instrument by which they are now giving relief to closed banks and through which those institutions are paying depositors who otherwise might receive nothing.

We have had some inconsistencies here. The gentleman from Maryland said that 90 percent of this fund is used to bale out banks. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation told us in committee they had used an infinitesimal amount of their money for the purpose of baling out banks, but I will say to you, frankly, when you bale out a bank today that is in liquidation, you bale out the depositor and you give him some money with which to buy the necessities of life, and that is just what we are trying to do. Vote against this, if you want to, but do not be proud of your record in this House when it comes to answering letters from your constituents who say their banks are closed and they have not been able to get any part of their deposits. You should remember that you voted for the only thing in this bill which will give any relief to those people.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield.

Mr. SWEENEY. Does not the gentleman know that the effect of the operations of the wholesale division of these banks in liquidation is that it helps to minimize the double liability that attached itself to stockholders and directors, many of whom are responsible for the bank's closing up?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I will say to the gentleman that so far as the information that comes to me is concerned, there has been less than 10 percent of that double liability collected up to the present time, and the benefit to the depositors, so far as double liability is concerned, is infinitesimal. The assets of the bank are what we want liquidated. We want to get some money into the bank in order that the conservator or the receiver may be able to pay some dividends to the depositors.

We have given the R. F. C. that authority. Why restrict it in this act?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have 1 more minute to answer a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Does not the gentleman know that practically all the banks in his State and in my State have received loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes; and I know further that there are 19 closed banks in Macomb County, in my district, that would not be able to pay 1 cent to their depositors if they had not got the money from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. But the job has been done and did not most of this money come from the R. F. C. and other agencies of the Government?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan moves that the Committee do now rise.

The question was taken; and on a division there were 108 ayes and 48 noes.

Mr. CULLEN. I ask for tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. Tellers are demanded. The Chair will count.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the demand for tellers.

So the Committee determined to rise.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Celler, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 6021) to provide additional home-mortgage relief, to amend the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, and the National Housing Act, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. O'Connell, by unanimous consent, was given leave of absence for Friday, Saturday, and Monday, on account of the death of a relative.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 17 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Saturday, March 9, 1935, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARING

COMMITTEE ON THE POST OFFICE AND POST ROADS (Saturday, Mar. 9, 10:30 a. m.)

Continuation of hearings on bills pertaining to offenses against the Postal Service, Room 213, old House Office Building.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND | RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII.

Mr. CONNERY: Committee on Labor. H. R. 6450. A bill to accord labor proper opportunity for protection of rights granted by the Congress, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 333). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DOXEY: Committee on Agriculture. H. R. 6424. bill to continue the Cotton Control Act, to exempt a limited quantity of cotton from the tax thereunder, to provide for the better administration of such act, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 335). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 2049. A bill to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota to submit claims to the Court of Claims", approved May 14, 1926 (44 Stat. L., 555); without amendment (Rept. No. 336). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 4126. A bill to reserve certain public-domain lands in Nevada and Oregon as a grazing reserve for Indians of Fort McDermitt, Nev.; without amendment (Rept. No. 337. Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII.

Mr. TURNER: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 1368. A bill for the relief of Virden Thompson; without amendment (Rept. No. 334). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 4372. A bill for the relief of Charles L. Graves; without amendment (Rept. No. 338). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, the Committee on Invalid Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5633) for the relief of Sarah Abbott, and the same was referred to the Committee on War Claims.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CELLER: A bill (H. R. 6533) to amend an act entitled "An act to extend the functions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for 2 years, and for other purposes", approved January 31, 1935; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6534) to regulate the fees of referees in bankruptcy, and to otherwise amend the Federal Bankruptcy Act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. KELLER: A bill (H. R. 6535) granting the consent of Congress to the State of Illinois and the State of Missouri, to construct a free highway bridge across the old channel of the Mississippi River between Kaskaskia Island, Ill., and St. Marys, Mo.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. QUINN: A bill (H. R. 6536) to repeal the act entitled "An act to prohibit the importation and the interstate transportation of films or other pictorial representations of prize fights, and for other purposes"; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BUCK: A bill (H. R. 6537) to amend certain plantquarantine laws; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. DEMPSEY: A bill (H. R. 6538) for the relief of

By Mr. FISH: A bill (H. R. 6539) to amend section 15 (a) of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HOPE: A bill (H. R. 6540) to amend the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. PETERSON of Georgia: A bill (H. R. 6541) to provide for the establishment of a national monument on the site of Fort Morris in Liberty County, Ga.; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma (by departmental request): A bill (H. R. 6542) to define the exterior boundaries of the Navajo Indian Reservation in New Mexico, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. SMITH of Virginia: A bill (H. R. 6543) to permit construction, maintenance, and use of certain pipe lines for petroleum and petroleum products in the District of Columbia: to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. STUBBS: A bill (H. R. 6544) to conserve the water resources and to encourage reforestation of the watersheds of Santa Barbara County, Calif., by the withdrawal of certain public land, included within the Santa Barbara National Forest, Calif., from location and entry under the mining laws; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. KOPPLEMANN: A bill (H. R. 6545) to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws, and to suppress and punish the crime of lynching; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. McMILLAN: A bill (H. R. 6546) to provide for the establishment of a United States Coast Guard life-saving station on Hunting Island, S. C.; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. LLOYD: A bill (H. R. 6547) authorizing the appointment of a Commissioner for the United States Court for China and defining his duties; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. McGEHEE: Resolution (H. Res. 156) to investigate the administration of the Virgin Islands; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. SMITH of Virginia: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 202) to provide for the printing with illustrations and binding in cloth of 110,000 copies of the Special Report on the Diseases of the Horse; to the Committee on Printing.

Also, joint resolution (H. J. Res. 203) to provide for the printing, with illustrations and binding in cloth of 110,000 copies of the Special Report on the Diseases of Cattle; to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 204) authorizing the erection of a memorial to the late Jean Jules Jusserand; to the Committee on the

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of North Dakota, regarding the participation of the Bank of North Dakota in the facilities of the United States Treasury for the issuance of currency in the name of the Bank of North Dakota; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of New Mexico, memorializing Congress for consent to tax interstate sales of goods for use or consumption within the State; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of New Mexico, regarding the construction of a Federal highway from Santa Fe to Las Vegas; to the Committee on Roads.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BURCH: A bill (H. R. 6548) to provide for a review by the Department of War of the case of the late the State of New Mexico; to the Committee on the Judiciary. | Capt. Bartlett James; to the Committee on Military Affairs,

By Mr. EAGLE: A bill (H. R. 6549) for the relief of Horton & Horton; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HARTER: A bill (H. R. 6550) for the relief of Ida M. Almstaedt; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6551) granting a pension to Sarah Penberthy; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 6552) granting a pension to Erma Petty; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LARRABEE: A bill (H. R. 6553) granting an increase of pension to Sarah Conrad; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6554) granting an increase of pension to Martha E. McLellen; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6555) for the relief of Arthur Witte; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6556) for the relief of Harrison Simpson; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6557) for the relief of Templeton Livingston: to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6558) for the relief of Thomas A. Ryland, also known as "Thomas Ryland"; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6559) for the relief of John E. Gill; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6560) for the relief of Charles G. Keiser; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6561) granting a pension to Martha Willoughby; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6562) for the relief of Charley H. Caldwell; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6563) granting a pension to Mary Roberts; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6564) granting a pension to Hattie E.

Shobe; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6565) granting a pension to Elizabeth

Rice; to the Committee on Invalid Pension.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6566) granting a pension to John L. Richman; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6567) granting a pension to John E. Mann; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6568) granting a pension to Charles H. Mattingly; to the Committee on Pensions.

Mattingly; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6569) granting a pension to Anna Barton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6570) granting a pension to Mary A. Hart; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6571) granting an increase of pension to Mary Ellen Oliver; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6572) granting an increase of pension to Bruce Winklepleck; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McGEHEE: A bill (H. R. 6573) for the relief of the estate of Aaron Z. Duggan, deceased; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6574) for the relief of the dependents of

Also, a bill (H. R. 6574) for the relief of the dependents of Max Grady Sullivan, deceased; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6575) for the relief of Maj. Omer A. Newhouse; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MAAS: A bill (H. R. 6576) to authorize the presentation of a Distinguished Flying Cross to Maj. Francis T. Evans, United States Marine Corps; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MASSINGALE: A bill (H. R. 6577) for the relief of Mrs. W. B. Nix and Mrs. J. A. Nix; to the Committeee on Claims

By Mr. MERRITT of New York: A bill (H. R. 6578) for the relief of Joseph A. Therry; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ROMJUE: A bill (H. R. 6579) authorizing a preliminary examination of the dam at the northern end of Gray Island, in Clark County, Mo., with a view to the control of floods; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. RYAN: A bill (H. R. 6580) granting a pension to Della M. C. Rudolph; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SOMERS of New York: A bill (H. R. 6581) to authorize the appointment of Paul Burns, former second lieutenant, Field Artillery, United States Army, to such rank on the active list, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. THOMPSON: A bill (H. R. 6582) granting a pension to Helen R. Pitney; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions

By Mr. TINKHAM: A bill (H. R. 6583) authorizing the President of the United States to appoint Wallace F. Safford to the position and rank of captain in the Army of the United States and immediately retire him with the rank and pay of a captain; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 6584) for the relief of Bartholomew Moynahan; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. TOLAN: A bill (H. R. 6585) for the relief of Robert W. Miller; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WILCOX: A bill (H. R. 6586) for the relief of W. R. McLeod; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WOLVERTON: A bill (H. R. 6587) for the relief of certain purchasers of land in the Borough of Brooklawn, State of New Jersey; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ZIMMERMAN: A bill (H. R. 6588) for the relief of Myrtle Anderson; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

3228. By Mr. ANDREWS of New York: Twenty petitions containing approximately 300 names of residents of the Fortieth Congressional District of New York, protesting against the enactment of House bill 5423; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3229. By Mr. BEITER: Petition of the Buffalo Master Bakers' Association, Buffalo, N. Y., urging the repeal of the processing tax on ingredients that go into the manufacture of bread; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3230. By Mr. BLAND: Petition of four citizens of Clopton, Va., urging that Congress pass a uniform Federal old-agepension law that must be adopted by the States before any Federal aid or relief is available; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3231. By Mr. BOYLAN: Petition signed by William G. Henry, and other residents of the Fifteenth Congressional District of New York City, vigorously opposing the Wheeler-Rayburn public-utility bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3232. Also, petition signed by Miss Dorothy S. Brambaugh and other residents of the Fifteenth Congressional District of New York City, opposing the passage of the Wheeler-Rayburn public-utility bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3233. By Mr. BUCK: Memorial of the California State Legislature, relative to accepting amendments from the Government of the United States for the construction of approach roads and toll areas over certain rights-of-way leading to the Golden Gate Bridge in the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation, and relating to the retrocession by the Congress of the United States of jurisdiction over said rights-of-way and toll areas as relocated; to the Committee on Roads.

3234. By Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota: Petition of Simon Ellefson and Martin Swanson, of Lancaster, Minn., in behalf of members of Post No. 214 of the American Legion, Department of Minnesota, members of the Lancaster Civic and Community Club, and business and professional men of the community and vicinity, favoring the immediate cash payment of the soldiers' adjusted-service certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3235. Also, petition of M. L. Myhre, president, Wolverton, Minn., in behalf of the Business Mens' Association of Wolverton, Minn., favoring the Vinson bill (H. R. 3896) to make the immediate cash payment of the soldiers' adjusted-service certificates; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3236. By Mr. DUFFEY of Ohio: Petition of 136 citizens of Toledo, Ohio, urging passage of the Townsend old-age revolving pension plan to be financed by a Nation-wide Federal sales tax; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3237. By Mr. FOCHT: Petition of E. W. Thomas, of Burnham, and numerous other citizens of Lewistown, Mifflin County, a part of the Eighteenth Congressional District of Pennsylvania, opposing House bill 5423 and Senate bill 1725, the public-utility bills; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3238. Also, petition of Frank K. Metzaer, Burnham, and various other residents of Burnham and Lewistown, a part of the Eighteenth Congressional District of Pennsylvania, opposing House bill 5423 and Senate bill 1725, the public-utility bills; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3239. By Mr. HAINES; Petitions signed by 83 of his constituents of the Twenty-second Pennsylvania District, protesting against the public-utility bills; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3240. By Mr. HART: Memorial of the House of Assembly of the State of New Jersey (the senate concurring), requesting that the Congress of the United States enact an amendment to the United States Internal Revenue Act of 1934, preventing the imposition of a tax upon any State or Territory of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any political subdivision, agency, or district thereof; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3241. Also, memorial of the House of Assembly of the State of New Jersey (the senate concurring), requesting that the Congress of the United States enact the Frazier-Lemke bill without further delay; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3242. By Mr. HEALEY: Petitions of certain employers and employees of Cambridge, Mass., concerning the Black-Connery bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3243. By Mr. HOEPPEL: Petition of the Los Angeles County Council of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, urging the passage of the Patman bill (H. R. 1), providing for immediate payment of the bonus; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3244. Also, resolutions of the citizen taxpayers of the northeastern part of South Dakota at Webster, S. Dak., February 9, 1935, commending and endorsing the Townsend plan of old-age revolving pensions, and urging its enactment into law, with the additional provision that a considerable portion of the necessary funds be raised by taxing big fortunes with a large inheritance tax and big incomes by large graduated income tax proportioned according to the ability of the taxpayer to pay, and according to the protection and benefits which he is deriving from our Government; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3245. By Mr. LESINSKI: Petition signed by groups 53, 2341, 460, 1427, 1277, and 170 of the Polish National Alliance of the United States of America, directing the President of the United States to proclaim October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3246. Also, resolution 13006 of the Common Council of the City of Dearborn, Mich., asking that October 11 of each year be set aside as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3247. Also, resolution of the City Council of Wyandotte, and the Common Council for the City of Ecorse, Mich., memorializing the Congress to proclaim October 11 of each year General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3248. By Mr. MEAD: Petition of the Buffalo Lumber Exchange, Buffalo, N. Y., requesting Congress to remove or suspend the duty on rough lumber from contiguous countries; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3249. Also, petition of the Polish National Alliance, Group 890, Buffalo, N. Y., memorializing Congress to proclaim October 11 General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3250. By Mr. MERRITT of New York: Petition of Helen Clifton, of 132 East Forty-fifth Street, New York City, N. Y., and approximately 50 members of the Central Club for Nurses, urging Congress to defeat the Wheeler-Rayburn bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3251. Also, petition of Theodore G. Steinway and some 50 income taxpayers of New York City, urging Congress to repeal the publicity feature of section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3252. Also, petition of May Robb, of 415 East Thirteenth Street, New York City, and approximately 20 additional signers of residents in that vicinity, urging Congress to defeat the Wheeler-Rayburn public-utility bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3253. Also, petition of Grace N. Hickey, of 140 East Twenty-eighth Street, New York City, and approximately 40 other signatures of residents of New York City, urging Congress to defeat the Wheeler-Rayburn bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3254. Also, petition of Austin P. Canfield, secretary, and several hundred members of International Union of Operating Engineers of Local Union No. 184, New York City, urging Congress to support the amendment introduced by Senator McCarran, providing for the payment of prevailing rate of wage, etc.; to the Committee on Appropriations.

3255. Also, petition of Charles Auth, of 422-430 East Fifty-third Street, New York City, and other citizens and tax-payers, urging Congress to defeat the Wheeler-Rayburn bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3256. Also, petition of John Howard Hanway and other residents of Pelham Manor, N. Y., urging Congress to defeat the Wheeler-Rayburn bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3257. Also, petition of Charlie Meyer, 39-12 Main Street, Flushing, N. Y., and other residents of Flushing, Elmhurst, College Point, and vicinity, urging Congress to defeat the Wheeler-Rayburn bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3258. Also, petition of Stella Casale, 664 Eighteenth Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., and several hundred additional signers, calling upon Congress to defeat the Wagner Economic Security Act; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3259. Also, petition of I. B. Katz, of 1624 Tenth Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., and approximately 62 residents of Brooklyn and vicinity, urging Congress to defeat the Black bill (S. 87) and the Connery bill (H. R. 2746); to the Committee on Labor.

3260. By Mr. O'MALLEY: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging the Congress of the United States to embody in a national relief program the following provisions: (1) Making available to the unemployed sufficient work at a wage scale enabling the maintenance of a reasonable and decent standard of living; (2) work for those unemployed not dependent upon relief but in need of aid to make possible the payment of taxes and interest on their homes; (3) adequate Federal employment, thus making unnecessary added obligations, indebtedness, and increased taxes by local units of government already overburdened; (4) reimbursement to various counties and municipalities of the State the sum of $6,000,000, representing the amount contributed by them during the year 1935 as their share of unemployment relief; to the Committee on Appropriations.

3261. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging the Congress of the United States to enact legislation providing work for those home owners who, due to unemployment, are unable to meet the required payments on the principal or interest, or both, and, further, that such work be provided for under public-works projects through local, State, or Federal Governments; to the Committee on Appropriations.

3262. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging the Congress of the United States to provide for public power development and more particularly rural electrification in the upper Mississippi Valley as provided in the essential features of measures relative thereto now pending in the Congress of the United States; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

3263. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging the Congress of the United States to take immediate steps to amend the Constitution of the United States providing that the Congress of the United States submit to the people of the Nation an opportunity to declare themselves in favor of the declaration of war by a popular referendum vote except in the event of a war to repel an invasion of this country when such referendum shall not be deemed necessary; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3264. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, protesting to the President and Congress of the United States against further reciprocal tariff or trade agreements by which the best interests of American farmers are sacrificed: to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3265. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging the Congress of the United States to pass immediately the legislation necessary to empower and direct the Government of the United States to monopolize the manufacture and sale of war munitions; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

3266. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging the Congress of the United States to reduce the excise tax on intoxicating liquors and beer, and other fermented malt beverages; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3267. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging the Congress of the United States to enact legislation to provide for a code of fair competition for the farmer, to establish the cost of production to farmers, and to provide for a reasonable profit on their investments; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3268. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging the Congress of the United States to pass uniform laws regulating motor vehicles in interstate service; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3269. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging the Congress of the United States to enact the pending Frazier-Lemke Finance Mortgage Act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3270. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging the Congress of the United States to enact legislation providing for Federal aid to high schools; to the Committee on Education.

3271. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Fur Dressers' & Fur Dyers' Association, Inc., New York City, urging repeal of the 10-percent excise tax on furs wholesaling at $75 and over; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3272. Also, petition of the Bush Terminal Co., New York, concerning the Black-Connery bills (S. 87 and H. R. 2746); to the Committee on Labor.

3273. Also, petition of the Aerovox Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning the 30-hour-week bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3274. Also, telegram of the Finnigan Post, No. 242, American Legion, Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning the Vinson bonus bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3275. By Mr. POLK: Petition of John D. Morehead, recording secretary, and the entire membership of Tate Council, No. 400, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, urging the passage of House Joint Resolution No. 69, creating in the Department of Justice a Bureau of Alien Deportation; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

3276. By Mr. RICH: Petition of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Williamsport, Pa., protesting against House bill 5423 and Senate bill 1725, known as the "utilities bill"; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3277. Also, petitions of citizens of Bradford, Pa., protesting against House bill 5423 and Senate bill 1725; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3278. By Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts: Petition of the City Council of Woburn, Mass., endorsing the resolution of the senior Senator from Massachusetts in which he directs the attention of the Secretary of Labor to the necessity for creating appointments for young men and women between the ages of 18 and 30; to the Committee on Labor.

3279. By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Petition of Joseph Edge and numerous other citizens of Niceville, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3280. Also, petition of D. G. Harper and numerous other citizens of Ponce De Leon, Fort Walton, and De Funiak Springs, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means 3281. Also, petition of Jake Hendricks and numerous other citizens of Winnfield, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3282. Also, petition of Butler Gipson and numerous other citizens of Arcadia, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3283. Also, petition of George Forster and numerous other citizens of Darrow and Union, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3284. Also, petition of Rev. G. B. Hill and numerous other citizens of Amite, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3285. Also, petition of James Overstreet and numerous other citizens of Lakeland, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3286. Also, petition of Richard A. Baddie and numerous other citizens of Florence, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3287. Also, petition of George Hill and numerous other citizens of Aliceville and Tuscaloosa, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3288. Also, petition of Edward Crawford and numerous other citizens of Quinton and Dora, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the committee on Ways and Means.

3289. Also, petition of A. G. Johnson and numerous other citizens of Sylacauga, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3290. Also, petition of W. L. Vintson and numerous other citizens of Dora, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-agepensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3291. Also, petition of Arthur Hamilton and numerous other citizens of Brewton, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3292. Also, petition of L. Hall and numerous other citizens of Hamilton, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3293. Also, petition of Joe Carter and numerous other citizens of Hamilton, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3294. Also, petition of Paul Hill and numerous other citizens of Ohatchee and Lincoln, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3295. Also, petition of Evan White and numerous other citizens of Paducah, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3296. Also, petition of M. B. Kidwell and numerous other citizens of Kansas City, Cleveland, and Avondale, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3297. Also, petition of Andrew Suggs and numerous other citizens of Duncan, Alligator, and Hillhouse, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3298. Also, petition of Dave Ross and numerous other citizens of Union Church and Crystal Springs, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3299. Also, petition of Will Brown and numerous other citizens of Duck Hill and Grenada, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3300. Also, petition of Frank Reed and numerous other citizens of Pace, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3301. Also, petition of Aron Robinson and numerous other citizens of Sidon, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3302. Also, petition of Z. E. Bowman and numerous other citizens of Anderson, S. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3303. Also, petition of Harvey Buckman and numerous other citizens of Quincy, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3304. Also, petition of Russell Wyatt and numerous other citizens of White Hall and Patterson, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3305. Also, petition of Charles Von and numerous other citizens of Oakdale, Nashville, and Addieville, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3306. Also, petition of James S. Gilliland and numerous other citizens of Pocahontas, Edwardsville, and Vandalia, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3307. Also, petition of Horace Robinson and numerous other citizens of Newark, N. J., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3308. Also, petition of R. E. Hayden and numerous other citizens of Bassett, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3309. Also, petition of A. S. Forehand and numerous other citizens of Earl, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3310. Also, petition of Lewis William and numerous other citizens of Round Pond, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3311. Also, petition of Henry Parks and numerous other citizens of Madison, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3312. Also, petition of Allen B. Layfield and numerous other citizens of Macon, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3313. Also, petition of Ray Suddath and numerous other citizens of Brownsville, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3314. Also, petition of W. A. Collins, Jr., and numerous other citizens of Sparta, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3315. Also, petition of J. W. Hoover and numerous other citizens of Nashville, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3316. Also, petition of Dick Sydnor and numerous other citizens of McKenzie, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3317. Also, petition of Frank Bland and numerous other citizens of Wyatt, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3318. Also, petition of L. Ramsey and numerous other citizens of Gadsden and Halls, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3319. Also, petition of J. J. Williams and numerous other citizens of Fulton, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3320. Also, petition of Damacio Cordova and numerous other citizens of Truchas, N. Mex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3321. Also, petition of John H. Stone and numerous other citizens of Lebanon and Eldridge, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3322. Also, petition of Samuel Henry Ritter and numerous other citizens of Greeley and Bunker, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3323. Also, petition of Charles Harper and numerous other citizens of Fagus, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3324. Also, petition of J. H. Dishner and numerous other citizens of Princeton and Rock, W. Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocks, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3325. Also, petition of A. C. Miller and numerous other citizens of Killarney, W. Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3326. Also, petition of W. T. Granger and numerous other citizens of Old Dock, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3327. Also, petition of J. M. Breeden and numerous other citizens of Lumberton, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3328. Also, petition of J. E. Garrison and numerous other citizens of Pennington Gap and Dryden, Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3329. Also, petition of R. L. Mullens and numerous other citizens of Clintwood, Georges Fork, and Millard, Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3330. Also, petition of James McKinley and numerous other citizens of Jefferson County, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3331. Also, petition of A. J. Rigney and numerous other citizens of Sunnybrook, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3332. Also, petition of Bob Boatright and numerous other citizens of Mayfield, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rocers, the Pope plan for direct Federal oldage pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3333. Also, petition of J. P. Gibson and numerous other citizens of Heller and Lookout, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3334. Also, petition of Spurgeon Foster and numerous other citizens of Collirene, Benton, and Gordonsville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3335. Also, petition of J. O. Hathaway and numerous other citizens of Black, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3336. Also, petition of S. T. Grove and numerous other citizens of Scottsboro, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3337. Also Petition of Joe Cole and numerous other citizens of Collinsville and Henagar, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman Will Rogers, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3338. By Mr. RUDD: Petition of J. F. Bragg, Long Island City, N. Y., concerning section 55B of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3339. Also, petition of the West Disinfecting Co., Long Island City, N. Y., concerning section 55B of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3340. Also, petition of B. Schwanda & Sons, New York City, concerning section 55B of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3341. Also, petition of R. J. Atkinson (hardware), Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning section 55B of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3342. Also, petition of Steinway & Sons' employees, New York City, regarding section 55B of the Revenue Act of 1934; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3343. Also, petition of Grand Lodge Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Cleveland, Ohio, concerning the McCarran amendment to the work-relief bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3344. Also, petition of Charles Auth and seven other citizens of Greater New York, concerning the Rayburn-Wheeler public utility holding companies legislation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3345. By Mr. SADOWSKI: Petition of the Forty and Over Club, of North Detroit, Mich., endorsing House bill 2827; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3346. Also, petition of International W. O. Br. 2012, endorsing House bill 2827; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3347. Also, petition of group no. 1758 of the Polish National Alliance, asking that October 11 of each year be set aside as General Pulaski Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3348. Also, petition of group no. 848 of the Polish National Alliance, asking that October 11 of each year be set aside as General Pulaski Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3349. By Mr. SAUTHOFF: Joint resolution of the State of Wisconsin, memorializing the Congress of the United States to enact the pending Frazier-Lemke finance mortgage bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3350. Also, joint resolution of the State of Wisconsin memorializing the Congress of the United States to reduce the excise tax on intoxicating liquors and beer and other fermented malt beverages; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3351. Also, joint resolution of the State of Wisconsin, relating to a code of fair dealing, and to establishing of the cost of production to farmers and a reasonable profit on their investments; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3352. Also, joint resolution of the State of Wisconsin, memorializing the Congress of the United States to enact legislation providing for Federal aid to high schools; to the Committee on Education.

3353. By Mr. SCHAEFER: Petition of Council No. 1169, Polish National Alliance, East St. Louis, Ill., urging Congress to designate October 11 of each year as General Pulaski's Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3354. Also, petition of the Illinois Women's Auxiliary of Progressive Miners of America, Marissa, Ill., urging limitations of individual annual incomes to $50,000 and urging a redistribution of the Nation's wealth through work with adequate wages; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3355. Also, petition of the Illinois Women's Auxiliary of Progressive Miners of America, Marissa, Ill., urging congress to pass an old-age pension measure during the present session; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3356. Also, petition of the Illinois Women's Auxiliary of Progressive Miners of America, Marissa, Ill., urging Congress to accept the Lundeen measure on social unemployment insurance (H. R. 2827); to the Committee on Labor.

3357. Also, petition of General Assembly, State of Illinois, urging the United States Government to take action to curb the use of a certain, vicious, habit-forming narcotic, commonly known as "marijuana", which has become alarmingly prevalent among a large proportion of the adolescents of that State; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3358. By Mr. TRUAX: Petition of H. T. Blosser and other citizens of Fostoria, Ohio, requesting the passage of the Patman bonus bill (H. R. 1); to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3359. Also, petition of the National Restaurant Association, Chicago, Ill., by their president, Charles A. Laube, condemning Government restaurants and urging its members throughout the Nation to stand in opposition to any Government official who defends this form of competition, because the operation of restaurants and cafeterias on a rent-free and tax-free basis in Government buildings has been a serious source of unfair competition to legitimate restaurants, and the Federal Government has received recommendations for an abatement of this practice from a congressional investigating committee headed by Congressman Joseph B. Shannon, but has continued this business; to the Committee on Labor.

3360. Also, petition of Lucas County Unemployed League, of Toledo, Ohio, by their president, Paul Kolinski, urging that Congress adopt the amendment of the prevailing wage scale on all work-relief projects in the public-works bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3361. Also, petition of United Automobile Workers, Local 18463, Cleveland, Ohio, by their secretary, R. E. Reisinger, endorsing the Lundeen bill (H. R. 2827); to the Committee on Labor.

3362. Also, petition of board of control of the Summit County Democratic Executive Committee, Akron, Ohio, by their secretary, Forrest D. Myers, demanding of all our elected and appointed officials in National, State, county, and city administrations of which they have control an immediate dismissal of all Republicans wherever possible and to replace them with worthy Democrats, because it has been customary for elected Democrats to give jobs to members of the Republican Party; to the Committee on Patronage.

3363. By Mr. WITHROW: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, memorializing the Congress of the United States to reduce the excise tax on intoxicating liquors and beer and other fermented malt beverages; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3364. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, relating to a code of fair dealing and to the establishing of the cost of production to farmers and a reasonable profit on their investment; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3365. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, memorializing the Congress of the United States to enact legislation providing for Federal aid to high schools; to the Committee on Education.

3366. Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, memorializing the Congress of the United States to enact the pending Frazier-Lemke finance mortgage bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3367. By Mr. WOLCOTT: Petition of H. A. Ramsey, of St. Clair, Mich., and 120 other members and supporters of the Farmers Unions in St. Clair County, Mich., urging the prompt enactment of the Frazier-Lemke refinancing bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3368. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the City Council of the City of Omaha, Nebr.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3369. Also, petition of the city of Long Beach, Calif.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3370. Also, petition of the Common Council of the City of Rochester, Minn.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3371. Also, petition of the city of Minneapolis, Minn.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3372. Also, petition of the Miami Lions Club; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3373. Also, petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Greenlee County, Ariz.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3374. Also, petition of the Common Council of the City of Trinidad, Colo.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3375. Also, petition of the city of Perth Amboy, N. J.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3376. Also, petition of the Ecorse Village Council, Michigan; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3377. Also, petition of the Common Council of Nutley, N. J.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

SATURDAY, MARCH 9, 1935

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, Thou dost call us unto Thee: in Thy tabernacle is the mercy seat; here we tarry. We are not exempt from the great lot of mankind. We cannot read life's mysteries; do Thou grant that it may be good for us to hold that suffering, the tragedy, and the loss of human life, and the blight of hope are all working out the highest and holiest good. Strong Son of God, we thank Thee that in the defiles of doubt and in the valley of despondency, there is an unwavering light that forever beats against the throne of the Lamb and His glory. Let it fall and send us dreams that shame realities. O Master, let it shine on street, mart, and alley and upon all those who are cast out of human sympathy. We bear to Thee a prayer for good health, happiness, and heavenly joy to bless our homes. Regard our Speaker and all Members in divine favor. Bless all schools and all churches and let their influences be augmented a thousandfold. In Thy holy name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Thorne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 5913. An act making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes.

SUPREME COURT JUSTICES RETIREMENT BILL

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for a few minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, an interpretation which seems to have been placed upon statements made during the debate on the Supreme Court Justices retirement bill puts the members of the Supreme Court in a false attitude I think before the country. I rise to place a clarifying statement of facts in the Record which I think every Member of the House will approve.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will permit, the press improperly reported my colleague as stating that he had conferred with a member of the Supreme Court and that that member had suggested this bill. I think that placed my colleague in a false attitude. He did not make that statement and I do not think he intended to make it. Is not that correct?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is correct. As to the responsibility for originating the bill, I originated it. Mine is the entire responsibility. I sought to work out an arrangement under which Justices of the Supreme Court who reach the retirement age and length of service which we have provided by law for district and circuit court judges, may also retire instead of resigning, thus leaving themselves subject to assignment to lighter duties instead of doing nothing, just as district judges and circuit judges who have retired are now eligible to assignment to lighter duties.

Before introducing the bill, I discussed its workability with one of the Justices of the Supreme Court, because he was in a position to know, just as I would have discussed, with someone in a position to know, any bill, before introducing it, affecting the machinery of any other branch or department of the Government. I was not solicited to introduce this bill by anybody connected with either the judicial or the executive branch of the Government.

These judges of the Supreme Court are not asking anything from Congress. Congress cannot give them anything or take anything from them. These judges come to the Supreme Court under a contract with the people for lifetime employment at a salary which Congress cannot take from them or reduce, which contract is imbedded in the Constitution in this language.

The Constitution provides that:

The judges, both of the Supreme and Inferior Courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services, a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

These provisions have an interesting background. formerly controlled the judgment of courts. When William and Anne came to the throne it was sought to free the judiciary of this control by providing in the Acts of Settlement, 1700, that judges should hold office during good behavior and have a fixed compensation. The tenure of these judges even after the Acts of Settlement was held to end with the death of the King. By the first act of George III, some 28 years before the writing of our Constitution, this defect was cured and death of the King thereafterward had no effect upon the tenure of the judges. Blackstone, quoting from the Journal of Commons, 1761, I believe, says that "he, King George, looked upon the independence and uprightness of the judges as essential to the impartial administration of justice as one of the best securities of the rights and liberties of his subjects and is conducive to the honor of the Crown."

When we came to write our Constitution there were many propositions advanced with reference to the appointment of judges of the Supreme Court. Mr. Randolph submitted the first plan, which was that Congress should appoint. It was also suggested that the President should appoint; that the Senate should appoint; and that the Senate should nominate and the President appoint; and finally the plan which was adopted; but each of these plans carried the provision that the judges should hold office during good behavior and have a fixed compensation. The provisions in our Constitution as to tenure and security of pay are the ones which had been worked out and incorporated in the British Constitution, which were a tenure of office for life, with the salary fixed beyond the reach of the Executive or the Congress during the lifetime of the judge.

Looking to our own history, since the adoption of the Constitution, until the act of April 10, 1869, there was no provision for the resignation of Federal judges. The debates in Congress on that act show that it was deemed necessary because, with no arrangement for resignation, judges did not resign. On March 29, 1869, Congressman Bingham, of Ohio, who was in charge of the bill, made the following statement on the floor of the House (Congressional Globe, vol. 87, Appendix, p. 337):

It is well known that at least two of the present Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, although they may live for years, will not long be able, by reason of the infirmities of age, to take their places upon the Supreme bench. It is well known that one of the most eminent members of that bench is not able today to reach the bench without being borne to it by the hands of others. It is but fit and proper that such a man should be given the opportunity to retire upon his salary, carrying with him his honors of office and holding his commission until the day of his death.

Senator Charles Sumner, of Massachusetts, on April 7, 1869 (id., p. 574), stated on the floor of the Senate:

I take it our object is to accomplish both; to give to judges who have earned an honorable retreat what they have earned, and to secure complete efficiency to the courts. If we can accomplish these two results, we shall do much.

Under the provisions of that act Federal judges may resign on full pay.

The next act was that of 1919, which provides that Federal judges, other than Supreme Court Judges, instead of resigning as provided by the act of 1869, may retire and be subject to assignment to lighter duties, thus giving the Government an opportunity for the same money then paid resigned judges to procure this additional service and at the same time have an opportunity to assign more vigorous men to the general duties of the courts. This act of 1919 removed the element of uncertainty calculated to deter a judge from surrendering his guaranteed life salary fixed by the Constitution in his contract with the people when he went on the Supreme Court

The bill introduced by myself raises the question whether in view of the fact that the Constitution gives to Supreme Court Justices this life tenure and fixes their salary for life beyond the power of the legislative or executive branches of the Government to reduce, it would not be wise when the Supreme Court Justices reach the same retirement age and length of service approved by Congress and by experience with reference to other Federal judges, that the same provisions of the act of 1919 be extended to these judges of the Supreme Court with reference to retirement which is extended to all other Federal judges, so that they, too, may be allowed to retire and be privileged to perform lighter duties in exchange for what the Federal Government is bound, anyway, to pay them under the Constitution during their life.

BONUS LEGISLATION

Mr. HAINES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may insert in the RECORD at this point a copy of Resolution 52, passed by the General Assembly of the State of Pennsylvania, calling on Congress to enact legislation for the immediate cash payment of the adjusted-service certificates.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD and to include therein the resolution referred to. Is there objection?

There was no objection. The resolution follows:

Resolution 52

Whereas the immediate cash payment of the adjusted-service certificates will increase tremendously the purchasing power of millions of the consuming public distributed uniformly throughout the Nation and will provide relief for the holders thereof who are in dire need and distress because of the present unfortunate eco-nomic conditions, and will lighten immeasurably the burden which citles, counties, and States are now required to carry for relief; and cities, counties, and States are now required to carry for relief; and Whereas the payment of said certificates will not create any additional debt but will discharge and retire an acknowledged contract obligation of the Government: Now, therefore, be it Resolved (if the senate concur), That since the Government of the United States is now definitely committed to the policy of spending additional sums of money for the purpose of hastening recovery from the present economic crisis, the General Assembly of the Commonwealth recommends and urges the immediate cash payment at face value of the adjusted-service certificates with cancelation of interest accrued and refund of interest paid, as a most effective means to that end; and be it further effective means to that end; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution, properly attested by the chief clerk of the senate and the chief clerk of the house of representatives, be forwarded by the chief clerk of the house of representatives to the Senate and the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States and to each Senator and Representative from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania therein.

The foregoing is a true and correct copy of the resolution adopted by the house of representatives the 20th day of February 1935, and concurred in by the senate the 6th day of March, 1935.

Wilson G. Sarig,

Speaker House of Representatives. W. P. Gallagher, Chief Clerk House of Representatives.

JOHN E. McHirdy,

Chief Clerk Senate.

H. O. L. C. DISCRIMINATION

Mr. DUNN of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on H. R. 6021, the home owners' loan bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DUNN of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, in the consideration of H. R. 6021, which contains amendments to the Federal Home Loan Bank Act of 1933 and the National Housing Act, I desire to make a few observations which I believe to be fundamental.

I recognize the fact that the H. O. L. C. has been a great alleviating process to our people in the matter of saving their homes, but at the same time I further realize that the various acts deal with so many generalities until the original intent of the Congress has been miserably and hurtfully misinterpreted to a certain class of bona fide citizens.

I trust my colleagues will understand that I am sincerely and whole-heartedly in favor of the pending bill, which, in fact, is really a bill of amendments to the original bill. The home owners' loan bank law and the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 are both fruitful in the matter of national emergency insofar as the original intent of Congress is concerned; but I have had some experience, not professionally but from a standpoint of charity, in seeing the actual misinterpretation of the intent of the Congress in the matter of granting loans to home owners. These misinterpretations, in my judgment, result from the administrative policies of the Home Loan Board, who are, after all, the powers that be when it comes to the proposition of who is entitled to a loan and who is not.

I am a great believer in nondiscrimination when it comes to the question of seeing that our American citizens are entitled to full accord on such matters, regardless of political favoritism. In this wise I wish to call attention to the Congress of several cases in my district where widowed wives and husbands were not granted loans on their homes for the reason that they did not physically occupy these homes, but were entering into the twilight of life, which necessitated their residing with either sons or daughters who could be there to personally care for and look after their afflictions and infirmities.

The cases I have referred to are cases where the parties, one in particular, owned a home, all of her earthly belongings, and which was about to be lost under a foreclosure proceeding, a sweet old lady some 70 years of age, living with kinsmen who cared for her at a moment when she was entitled to the same affection and care of her children as your mother or my mother. This good woman and citizen made application to the Board for a loan. She told them that her home would be lost unless the loan was made. Her home was situated in the city of Meridian, Miss. The Board replied that the loan could not be made, apparently because this good woman and citizen told the truth; that is to say, that she did not physically occupy the house.

